Cornelius N. Bliss, Walter P. Bliss, Henry W. de Forest, Robert Goelet, J. Horace Harding, Charles W. Harkness, Henry E. Huntington, James N. Jarvie, Leonce F. Loree, Eric P.
4 Swenson, and James N. Wallace, are each residents of New York City, New York, and directors of the Southern Pacific Company.

The said William Sproule, as president and as a director, and the said Julius Kruttschnitt, as chairman of the executive committee and as a director, and the other directors above named, as such, being all of the directors of the Southern Pacific Company, control and direct the policies and acts of both the Southern Pacific Company and the Central Pacific Railway Company, and are responsible for the continuance of the hereinafter-described combinations and monopolizations in restraint of interstate and foreign trade and commerce, effected by said Southern Pacific Company through its domination, control, and operation of the Central Pacific Railway Company, and are likewise responsible for the violation by said companies of the laws herein referred to as the Pacific railroad laws.

II.

Southern Pacific Company owns and operates the "Sunset Route," joint rail-and-water service which moves traffic between New York ty and Pacific coast terminals in California and Oregon. This ute is composed of the fleet of the Southern Pacific Company own as the "Atlantic Steamship Lines," whose vessels ply regularly between New York and the Gulf ports of New Orleans, Louisiana, and Galveston, Texas, and of railroads forming an unbroken line between these Gulf ports and San Francisco, alifornia, and Portland, Oregon. These railroads are owned by rporations which have leased them to the Southern Pacific Company, the latter also controlling such lessee corporations through ock ownership. The names of the controlled companies and the ations of this through railroad line owned by them, respectively, are:

(1) Morgan's Louisiana and Texas Railroad and Steamship Company, a Louisiana corporation, which owns the line from New Orleans to Lafayette, Louisiana, together with branch lines.

(2) Louisiana Western Railroad Company, a Louisiana corporation, which owns the line from Lafayette, Louisiana, to Sabine River, Texas, together with branch lines.

(3) Texas and New Orleans Railroad Company, a Texas corporation, which owns the line from Sabine River to Houston, Texas, together with branch lines.

(4) Galveston, Harrisburg and San Antonio Railroad Company, a Texas corporation, which owns the line from Houston and from Galveston, Texas, to Rio Grande, New Mexico, together with branch lines.

(5) Southern Pacific Railroad Company, a California corporation, which owns the line from Rio Grande, New Mexico, via Yuma, Arizona, to Los Angeles, California, and two routes thence to San Francisco, California—the "Coast Line" via Santa Barbara and the "San Joaquin Valley Line" via Fresno.

The Southern Pacific Railroad Company also owns a line from San Francisco to Tehama, California, and another from the northern boundary of California to Portland, Oregon, and controls through stock ownership various other corporations which own railroads in California, Arizona, and New Mexico.

The Southern Pacific Company also owns a majority of the capital stock of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, which operates a line of steamships from San Francisco to Hawaii and the Philippine Islands, China, Japan, and other Oriental points. It likewise owns or controls a line of steamships from San Francisco to Panama, which, in connection with the Panama Railroad crossing the Isthmus and ships running in connection therewith, constitutes a through line from San Francisco to New Orleans and New York City. It also owns and operates a line of steamships from New Orleans to Havana, Cuba.

The Central Pacific Railway Company was formed July 20, 1899. It owns the following railroads:

(1) A line from near Ogden, Utah, to San Francisco, California.

(2) A line extending north from Roseville, California, via Marysville, Tehama, and Weed, to the northern boundary of California.

7 (3) A line running from the northern boundary of California to Kirk, Oregon, and a short line from Oakridge to Natron, Oregon.

(4) A line from Lathrop, California, extending in a southerly direction to Goshen Junction, California.

(5) A line from Oakland to San Jose, California, and a line from Niles to Redwood, California.

(6) A line about five hundred miles long, extending from Hazen, Nevada, in a southerly direction, to Mojave, California.

(7) Important branch lines in Nevada and California.

It also owns about four hundred locomotive engines and about ten thousand cars—including passenger, baggage, postal, dining, observation, refrigerator, and freight cars—and depots, station houses, telegraph lines, wharves, piers, car and repair shops, together with appurtenances, tools, and other equipment used in the maintenance and operation of its railroad.

The Central Pacific Railway Company is successor to the Central Pacific Railroad Company, all of whose properties it purchased in 1899. The last-named company had been formed in 1870, by successive consolidations, under the laws of California, of the following corporations:

The Central Pacific Railroad Company of California, the 8 Western Pacific Railroad Company, the San Francisco, Oakland and Alameda Railroad Company, the San Joaquin Valley Railroad Company, and the California and Oregon Railroad Company, all California corporations.

The said Central Pacific Railroad Company of California is the same railroad company mentioned in the act of Congress approved July 1, 1862 (12 Stat., 489), and in the various acts amendatory and supplemental thereto. The Western Pacific Railroad Company is the same corporation mentioned in the act of Congress of March 3, 1865, and May 25, 1866, amending said act of July 1, 1862 (13 Stat. 504; 14 Stat., 356).

Said Southern Pacific Company owns the capital stock of the Central Pacific Railway Company and, since April 1, 1885, has controlled and operated under certain leases its several properties.

On August 1, 1899, the Southern Pacific Company executed an instrument known and hereinafter referred to as the "Southern Pacific Company's four per cent mortgage (Central Pacific Company's stock collateral)", to secure $36,818,500 of four per cent bonds, secured by pledge with the Union Trust Company of New York of practically the entire stock of the Central Pacific Railway Company—$67,275,000 common and $17,400,000 preferred—which stock this trust company holds as collateral security for the satisfaction of said indebtedness.

III.

California was the first portion of the Pacific slope to be exploited by American enterprise. It was cut off from the settled regions of the country by a wilderness. From the time of its acquisition proposals, inspired by various motives, some military or political, and others commercial, were repeatedly made to Congress to connect it with the trans-Mississippi States by a railroad either owned or aided by the Government. Domestic and foreign complications gave further impetus to this movement, which culminated in the Pacific railroad act of 1862 (12 Stat., 489). This act chartered the Union Pacific Railroad Company, whose powers and duties were prescribed therein and in amendatory acts. It further provided for the construction in sections of a transcontinental line, and for the issue of land patents and interest-bearing bonds of the United States to the said Union Pacific Railroad Company and to associated enterprises, including the above-mentioned Central Pacific Railroad Company of California and Western Pacific Railroad Company, as successive sections of their several railroads should be completed. Of the various routes that had been suggested Congress selected what was known as the "Northern Route", extending from a point on the Missouri River opposite Council Bluffs, Iowa, to the California coast via Ogden, Utah. It was under this act, as subsequently amended and supplemented, that the Union Pacific Railroad Company built that section of this through line between the Missouri River and Ogden, and the Central Pacific Railroad Company of California and the Western Pacific Railroad Company together completed the line to San Francisco. The line from a point about five miles west of Ogden to San Francisco is about seven hundred and thirty-seven miles in length.

The general purposes of the act of 1862 are indicated by its title, already quoted. In section 18 the purposes of the act are thus stated:

"And the better to accomplish the object of this act, namely, to promote the public interest and welfare by the construction of said railroad and telegraph line and keeping the same in working order, and to secure to the Government at all times (but particularly in time of war) the use and benefits of the same for postal, military, and other purposes, Congress may at any time, having due regard for the rights of said companies named herein, add to, alter, amend, or repeal this act."

The far-reaching plans of Congress are thus plainly disclosed. It was intended that the road, although built by different companies, should be run as one connected, continuous through line. Section 12 of the act of 1862 (12 Stat., 489) contains the following requirement, which is substantially repeated in section 15 of the act of 1864, cited below:

"The track upon the entire railroad and branches shall be 11 of uniform width, to be determined by the President of the United States, so that, when completed, cars can be run from the Missouri River to the Pacific coast * * *; the whole line of said railroad and branches and telegraph line shall be operated and used for all purposes of communication, travel, and transportation, so far as the public and Government are concerned, as one connected, continuous line."

Notwithstanding the liberal provisions of the act of 1862, work on the transcontinental line did not progress rapidly. This led to the amendatory act of July 2, 1864 (13 Stat., 356), which doubled the land grants, accepted on behalf of the Government a second, in lieu of a first, mortgage, and provided that only one-half of the compensation for services rendered for the Government by said companies should be required to be applied to the payment of bonds issued by the Government in aid of the construction of said road.

This legislation required that the railroads so constructed should afford and secure to each equal advantages and facilities as to rates, time, and transportation, without any discrimination of any kind in favor of the road or business of any or either of the others. (13 Stat., 356, sec. 15.)

The act approved June 30, 1874 (18 Stat., 111), made it an offense for any officer or agent of the companies authorized to construct the railroads composing this transcontinental line, or who engages in their operation, to refuse or fail so to use or operate the same.

IV.

The "Sunset Route" of the Southern Pacific Company is a natural competitor of all other carriers operating between points on the Atlantic coast and in the Middle West on the one hand and points on the Pacific coast and in the Orient on the other.

With the line of the Union Pacific Railroad Company extending from Ogden to Council Bluffs, and its various connections running to the Atlantic seaboard, the line of the Central Pacific Railway Company is and, since its construction, has been a constituent part of a through all-rail transcontinental route for the movement of interstate and foreign traffic between points on the Atlantic seaboard and in the Middle West on the one hand, and all points on the Pacific coast of the United States, as well as points in the Orient, on the other.

The Central Pacific Railway Company, in conjunction with its aforesaid connections, is, and for many years has been, a natural competitor of the Southern Pacific Company in the transportation of traffic between the points above named. The volume of traffic for which said lines are natural competitors is large and important.

The lines of the Central Pacific Railway Company connect at or near Fresno, California, with those of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railway Company, and form, with other connections of the last-named company, a route which is in natural competition with the Southern Pacific Company and its connections for traffic between Tehama, Marysville, Sacramento, Oakland, San Francisco, San Jose, and many other points in central and northern California, on the one hand, and points in Arizona, New Mexico, Texas, and Louisiana, including Phoenix, El Paso, San Antonio, Houston, Galveston, and New Orleans, on the other.

The lines of the Central Pacific Railway Company connect at San Francisco Bay with various steamship lines engaged in coastwise and foreign trade (including lines operating between Pacific and Atlantic ports via the Isthmuses of Panama and Tehuantepec), to and from ports in Alaska, Hawaii, the Philippines, and Asia; and the through routes so formed are natural competitors of the Southern Pacific Company and its water-line connections hereinabove described.

The Central Pacific Railway Company is now constructing a railroad from Weed, California, to Natron, Oregon, where it will connect with lines of the Southern Pacific Company leading to Portland, about one hundred miles to the north. If independent of the Southern Pacific Company, the Central Pacific Railway Company, at moderate cost, could extend its line from Natron to Portland. or, in consideration of trackage rights granted to the Southern Pacific Company between Tehama and the northern boundary of California, the Central Pacific Railway Company could obtain similar 14 trackage rights over the Southern Pacific line between Natron and Portland. This accomplished, there would be in place of the present single railroad two competitive railroads between San Francisco and Portland. Petitioner alleges on information and belief that if the Central Pacific were thus free to act in its own interests the existence of two such competitive railroads would in the near future become an assured fact.

The lines now owned by the Central Pacific Railway Company, in so far as then existing, were operated prior to 1885 in connection with the lines of the Union Pacific Railroad Company as a continuous connecting route between San Francisco and the Missouri River, with connections eastward to the Atlantic Ocean, and were in competition with the lines now operated by the Southern Pacific Company in interstate and foreign transportation.

V.

By an instrument dated February 17, 1885, all railroads, equipment, and other properties owned by the Central Pacific Railroad Company, predecessor of the Central Pacific Railway Company, were leased to the Southern Pacific Company for a term of ninety-nine years, and all leases of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company's properties held by said Central Pacific Railroad Company were by the same instrument transferred to said Southern Pacific Company. Under that and subsequent leases and amendments 15 the Southern Pacific Company has ever since controlled and operated said properties and the additions thereto. One of such subsequent leases, dated December 7, 1893, by article 5, expressly abrogated the lease of February 17, 1885. Copies of these several instruments are hereto attached, marked "Exhibit A", and made a part hereof.

On February 29, 1912, the Central Pacific Railway Company purchased numerous short railroad lines, aggregating about seven hundred miles, in California and Oregon, composing for the most part the line hereinbefore described as extending from Hazen, Nevada, to Mojave, California, and between Weed, California, and Natron, Oregon. On March 1, 1912, these lines were leased to the Southern Pacific Company, which has since operated and controlled them.

Shortly after the organization of the Central Pacific Railway Company, in 1899, and its acquisition of the properties of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, the Southern Pacific Company purchased all of its capital stock, and has since continued to be the owner thereof.

Both the Southern Pacific Company and the Central Pacific Railway Company are directed and controlled by a single management—that of the Southern Pacific Company; the officers and directors of the Southern Pacific Company exercise similar functions in the control, management, and operation of the Central Pacific Railway Company; the maintenance of both lines is under the direct supervision and control of the chairman of the executive committee of the Southern Pacific Company, whose headquarters are in New York City. All of the mileage and business of the Central Pacific Railway Company are thus under the direct, single, and complete control of the Southern Pacific Company, both as to rates and the routing of passengers and freight.

The Southern Pacific Company acquired the capital stock of the Central Pacific Railway Company and leased the properties of that company with the purpose and effect of preventing competition between the lines of the said Central Pacific Railway Company and its connections and the lines of the Southern Pacific Company in the transportation of passengers and freight in interstate and foreign commerce.

Also, the control of the Central Pacific Railway Company by the Southern Pacific Company prevents the establishment of a competitive route between San Francisco and Portland as aforesaid.

Again, that portion of the line of the Central Pacific Railway Company, hereinbefore described as extending from Hazen, Nevada, to Mojave, California, connects at the latter point with lines of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railway Company, and with connections of the last-named company forms a route which, with joint traffic or prorating arrangements between the two companies, would be in natural competition with the Southern Pacific Company and its connections for traffic between points on the Central Pacific Railway Company and tributary territory and points in Arizona, New Mexico, Texas, and other Southern States; but through the control of the Central Pacific Railway Company by the Southern Pacific Company the establishment of such joint traffic or prorating arrangements between the former and the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railway Company is prevented.

The ownership by the Southern Pacific Company of the capital stock of the Central Pacific Railway Company, and its leases of the properties of that company, and its domination, management, and control thereof, as hereinabove set forth, constitute a combination in restraint of interstate and foreign trade and commerce and a monopolization thereof in violation of the act of July 2, 1890 (26 Stat., 209).

VI.

As aforesaid, one of the objects of the Pacific railroad laws was to aid the construction of a transcontinental route for the movement of interstate and foreign traffic. It was further intended that such route should be controlled, managed, and operated as one continuous, connected line without discrimination against or adverse to the interests of any of its constituent parts.

In respect of traffic carried over the "Sunset Route" between points on the Atlantic and Pacific coasts and tributary terri-18 tory, the Southern Pacific Company secures the entire haul and, consequently, the entire revenue. In respect, however, of traffic carried between such points via the lines of the Central Pacific Railway Company through the Ogden gateway, the Southern Pacific Company secures the haul only from San Francisco to Ogden—less than eight hundred miles out of a total of about three thousand two hundred miles; and consequently receives but about twenty-five per cent of the revenue. Therefore, it is in the interest of the Southern Pacific Company to carry, and by reason of its control of the Central Pacific Railway Company it has the power to and does carry, as much of such traffic as possible via its "Sunset Route", sending through the Ogden gateway only such portion thereof as it is unable to control for the "Sunset Route", thereby discriminating against the Central Pacific Railway Company.

By reason of its greater interest in the "Sunset Route", the Southern Pacific Company, in its operation of the line of the Central Pacific Railway Company from San Francisco to Ogden as a part of a continuous connected line from the Missouri River to the Pacific Ocean, does not give to such line equal advantages and facilities, as required by the Pacific railroad laws, but discriminates against both the Central Pacific and Union Pacific lines and in favor of its "Sunset Route" by forwarding via the latter traffic originating or ending on the lines of the Central Pacific Railway Company or in territory tributary thereto.

19 Through its control of the Central Pacific Railway Company the Southern Pacific Company prevents joint traffic or prorating arrangements between the former and the Union Pacific Railroad Company, naturally its most important transcontinental and interstate connection.

The Southern Pacific Company so adjusts its freight rates and passenger fares on traffic originating in the Central Pacific territory north of San Francisco as to discriminate against transportation eastward over the joint transcontinental route of the Central Pacific and Union Pacific railroads and other eastern connections, thereby preventing competition and denying equal advantages and facilities as to rates, time, and transportation.

Maintenance by the Southern Pacific Company of Central Pacific Company's properties, moreover, compared with that of the "Sunset Route", is so inefficient as to discourage eastern travel and transportation via the Ogden route, and does not afford and secure thereto equal advantages and facilities as to time and transportation.

The Southern Pacific Company has heretofore, and does now, control, maintain, and operate said Central Pacific Railway Company in the interest of its "Sunset Route" and adverse to the interest of the Central and Union Pacific companies, and has not and does not afford or secure to said Central and Union Pacific companies equal advantages and facilities as to rates, time, and transportation, all in violation of the Pacific railroad laws.

VII.

Prayer.

Wherefore petitioner prays:

(1) That writs of subpœna issue directed to the several defendants herein, commanding them and each of them, to appear herein and answer, but not under oath (that being expressly waived), the foregoing allegations, and to abide by and perform such orders or decrees as the court may make.

(2) That the court adjudge and decree that the lines of railway and transportation known and herein described as the "Sunset Route", operated by the Southern Pacific Company, and those of the Central Pacific Railway Company, constitute competitive systems, and that the ownership by the defendant Southern Pacific Company of all or a controlling interest in the capital stock of the Central Pacific Railway Company, and its lease, control, and operation of the lines thereof, constitutes a combination in restraint of interstate and foreign trade and commerce, and an attempt to monopolize and a monopolization of a part of the same within the first and second sections of the act of Congress of July 2, 1890, entitled "An act to protect trade and commerce against unlawful restraints and monopolies"; and that said Southern Pacific Company be required to dispose of such capital stock, and cancel and relinquish its lease, control, management, and operation of the lines thereof, under the supervision and direction of the court, to persons not its stockholders or agents, nor otherwise under its control or influence; and that, pending such disposition and release, it be enjoined from voting such stock, and from receiving dividends in respect of any part thereof, and from receiving any profits, emoluments, reward, or advantage in any way arising from the lease, control, management, and operation of the lines of said Central Pacific Railway Company.

(3) That the defendant Central Pacific Railway Company, its stockholders, officers, directors, agents, and servants, and each of them, be perpetually enjoined from in any manner recognizing or accepting the Southern Pacific Company, or any person or corporation acting in its interest, as the owner or holder of any of the shares of its capital stock, and from permitting said Southern Pacific Company, or any person or corporation acting for it, or in its interest, to vote such stock (whether by proxy or otherwise), and that it be enjoined from paying dividends upon such stock to said Southern Pacific Company, or to any person or corporation acting for it, or to any assigns of such company, unless authorized by the court, and from recognizing as valid any transfer, mortgage, pledge, or assignment of such stock by said Southern Pacific Company, or by any person or corporation in its interest, unless authorized by the court.

22 (4) That the control of the Central Pacific Railway Company by the Southern Pacific Company be decreed to be in violation of the aforesaid act of Congress of July 1, 1862, entitled "An act to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Missouri River to the Pacific Ocean, and to secure to the Government the use of the same for postal, military, and other purposes", and the acts amendatory thereof and supplemental thereto; and that said Southern Pacific Company, and its officers, directors, stockholders, agents, and servants, and each of them, be perpetually enjoined from doing any act which will continue or tend to continue the domination, control, and operation of the Central Pacific Railway Company by the Southern Pacific Company, or by any person or corporation in its interest.

(5) That petitioner have such other further and general relief as the nature of the case may require and the court deem just.

EXHIBIT A.

Lease—Central Pacific Railroad Company to Southern Pacific Company.

This agreement, made and entered into this seventeenth (17) day of February, 1885, between the Southern Pacific Company, a corporation duly organized and existing under the laws of the State of Kentucky, and now doing business in the State of California, and the Central Pacific Railroad Company, a corporation duly formed and existing under the laws of the State of California and the United States,

Witnesseth:

That whereas part of the through business heretofore done by the Central Pacific Railroad Company's line from Ogden to the waters of the Pacific has been diverted by the Northern Pacific, Atlantic and Pacific, and Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railroads;

And whereas the Union Pacific Railroad Company has secured the control of the road known as the Oregon Short Line, and thereby secured an outlet to the Pacific other than over the Central Pacific Railroad, and thus in that respect placed itself in opposition to the interests of the Central Pacific;

And whereas it now appears that the through business hitherto done by the Central Pacific Railroad will thereby be further diverted; and that it is not only to the best interests of, but absolutely necessary that, the Central Pacific Railroad Company, in order to maintain itself against these diversions, should be operated in connection with a friendly through line to the waters of the Atlantic;

And whereas the said Southern Pacific Company has a line of railroad under its control, for a period of ninety-nine years, extending continuously from the Pacific Ocean to the Atlantic Ocean;

94 And whereas the lines of each company are doing a large local traffic, and it is important to both that the same should be conducted in harmony;

And whereas the said Southern Pacific Company is willing to enter into an agreement with the Central Pacific Railroad Company whereby its line and the line of the said Southern Pacific Company shall be operated so as to secure their just rights to each without the one gaining any benefit or advantage at the expense of the other, and whereby the Central Pacific Railroad Company may for a long term of years be assured of protection against the diversion of its traffic and be relieved of the disadvantages flowing from lack of harmonious connections;

And whereas by reason of the facts before recited it is mutually advantageous to the Southern Pacific Company and the Central Pacific Railroad Company to make such agreement;

And whereas both companies contract in the knowledge that the future development of the country may change materially the relations of the companies to each other in respect to railroad traffic, and may in the future render any agreement now made, however fair in its terms in view of existing conditions, advantageous to one at the expense of the other, and thereby defeat the purposes which said companies desire and intend to accomplish by making this agreement;

And whereas it is intended that such shall never be the effect of this agreement, therefore all the promises and covenants herein shall be construed in the light of the conditions now existing, and the arbitrators hereinafter named, in adjusting the terms and provisions of this agreement to a changed state of affairs, if such change should ever take place, must keep in view the main purpose of the parties to this agreement, to wit: That it is for the mutual advantage of both parties, and that neither is to be benefited at the expense of the other;

Now, therefore, to accomplish the purposes aforesaid, in consideration of the premises and of the mutual promises herein, the said Central Pacific Railroad Company hereby leases to the said Southern Pacific Company, for the term of ninety-nine years, from the first day of April, A. D. 1885, the whole of its railroad situated in the Territory of Utah and States of Nevada and California, and known and designated as the Central Pacific Railroad, together with all the branches thereof, together with all the rolling stock, telegraph lines, steamboats, wharves, piers, depots, workshops, and all other property, real and personal, now owned, held, and possessed by the said Central Pacific Railroad Company and used upon or in connection with said railroad and telegraph lines, together with all the appurtenances thereunto belonging, with the right to possess, maintain, use, operate, and enjoy the said property, and to receive the rents, issues, and profits thereof.

And the said Central Pacific Railroad Company hereby assigns to the said Southern Pacific Company all the leases which it now holds of railroads and other property situated in said State of California, and lying and being north of the town of Goshen, in the county of Tulare, with the right to take, hold, operate, maintain, and enjoy said railroads and other property in the same manner as the said Central Pacific Railroad Company holds, operates, enjoys, and maintains the same under the said leases, and with the right to receive the rents, issues, and profits thereof.

And the said Central Pacific Railroad Company hereby releases the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, a corporation formed and existing under the laws of the United States and of the State of California, and the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, a corporation formed and existing under the laws of the Territory of Arizona, and the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, a corporation formed and existing under the laws of the Territory of New Mexico, and each of them, from all and every obligation under or by virtue of any and every lease made by said three last-mentioned railroad companies, or either of them, to the said Central Pacific Railroad Company, and transfers and surrenders unto the said Southern Pacific Company the possession of all the property in said leases, or any of them mentioned or described, with the right to receive the rents, issues, and profits thereof free from all claim of the said Central Pacific Railroad Company to the same or any part thereof.

96 The said Southern Pacific Company agrees to and with the said Central Pacific Railroad Company that it will keep and maintain the property hereby leased in good order, condition, and repair; operate, maintain, add to, and better the same at its own expense; pay all taxes legally assessed against or levied thereon, and will at the termination of this lease return the same to the said Central Pacific Railroad Company or to its successors or assigns (with additions and betterments) in as good condition and repair as the same was at the date hereof.

And the said Southern Pacific Company hereby agrees to and with the said Central Pacific Railroad Company that it hereby assumes and will discharge all the liabilities and obligations of every kind (including its obligations on leases now held by it) of the said railroad company, except the obligation to pay the principal of said railroad company's indebtedness known as its "floating debt", and except the obligation to pay the principal of the indebtedness of said railroad company known as its "bonded indebtedness", now outstanding and secured by mortgage or deed of trust, or which may be hereafter incurred under the provisions of any existing mortgage or deed of trust, or of any mortgage or deed of trust hereafter made with the consent of the Southern Pacific Company; and except the principal of all indebtedness, the payment of which has heretofore been guaranteed by the Central Pacific Railroad Company; and except the principal of the indebtedness of the said Central Pacific Railroad Company evidenced by bonds of the United States heretofore by the Government thereof loaned to the said Central Pacific Railroad Company. That as to such excepted indebtedness the said Southern Pacific Company will pay off and discharge at maturity the interest upon the same, except the interest upon the bonds of the United States loaned as aforesaid; and that, as to such bonds and the interest thereon, the said Southern Pacific Company will discharge the annual obligations imposed upon the said Central Pacific Railroad Company by existing acts of Congress, and will during the continuance of this agreement fully comply with the terms of, perform all the duties prescribed in, and discharge 27 all the obligations imposed upon said Central Pacific Railroad Company by the act of Congress commonly known as the Thurman Act.

And the said Southern Pacific Company hereby agrees to and with the said Central Pacific Railroad Company that it will well and truly perform all the duties and obligations of said railroad company to the United States and the Government thereof under existing acts of Congress relating to the maintenance and operation of its railroad and to transportation for said Government over the same as fully and faithfully as said railroad company is bound to do, except as otherwise hereinbefore provided.

And the said Southern Pacific Company agrees to and with the said Central Pacific Railroad Company that it will keep true and faithful accounts of all the earnings of the said Central Pacific Railroad, including the earnings of the railroads now held by said Central Pacific Railroad Company under leases and situated north of Goshen, together with true and faithful accounts of all expenditures, payments, and disbursements of every kind made by the said Southern Pacific Company in operating, maintaining, adding to, and bettering the same, and of all expenditures, payments, and disbursements made by the said Southern Pacific Company for taxes, rentals, interest, or in discharge of obligations incurred by said Southern Pacific Company under the provisions of this agreement hereinbefore contained: Provided, however, That any payments made by the said Southern Pacific Company to either of the said Southern Pacific railroads hereinbefore mentioned for rentals under the terms of existing leases in favor of the said Central Pacific Railroad Company, and now assigned to the Southern Pacific Company, shall never be included in or made part of any charge against the said Central Pacific Railroad Company or the earnings of its said railroads.

And the said Southern Pacific Company hereby agrees with the said Central Pacific Railroad Company that during the continuance of this lease it will annually, on the first Monday in May, pay to the said Central Pacific Railroad Company, as guaranteed rental for said Central Pacific Railroad and other leased property for the year ending on the thirty-first day of December next preceding that date, the sum of one million two hundred thousand dollars 28 ($1,200,000). And the said Southern Pacific Company hereby further in this behalf agrees with the said Central Pacific Railroad Company that if the earnings of the said Central Pacific Railroad, and of the railroads situated north of Goshen now held by the said Central Pacific Railroad Company under leases, shall in any year during the continuance of this agreement exceed all expenditures, payments, and disbursements of every kind made by the said Southern Pacific Company for such year in operating, maintaining, adding to, and bettering the same, and of all expenditures, payments, disbursements made by the said Southern Pacific Company for taxes, rentals, interest, and in discharge of any of the obligations by said Southern Pacific Company incurred under this agreement, as heretofore provided, including the said sum of one million two hundred thousand dollars, then such excess for any such year not exceeding the sum of two million four hundred thousand dollars shall, on the first Monday in May, as aforesaid, be paid to the said Central Pacific Railroad Company as additional rental for such year.

And it is further agreed between said Southern Pacific Company and the said Central Pacific Railroad Company that if at any time it appears that by the operation of this agreement either party is being benefited at the expense of the other, then this agreement shall be revised and changed, so that such will not be the operation thereof, and if the parties hereto can not agree upon the changes necessary to that end, then each party shall appoint one arbitrator, disinterested, but skilled in relation to the subject matter, and the award and decision of such arbitrators, in writing, shall be binding upon the parties hereto, and this agreement shall be revised and changed in accordance with such award and decision, and as revised and changed shall be duly executed in writing by the parties hereto.

And it is further agreed that if the arbitrators so chosen cannot agree upon an award and decision, then that the two shall choose a third impartial and skilled arbitrator, and that the award or decision of two of said three arbitrators shall have the same force and effect between the parties hereto and shall be executed in like manner as hereinbefore provided for the award and decision of the two arbitrators first chosen.

And it is further agreed between the said Southern Pacific Company and the said Central Pacific Railroad Company that if any legislation or governmental action hereafter be had which, in the opinion of the said Southern Pacific Company, is in hostility to the said Central Pacific Railroad Company, its rights, or the property hereby leased, the said Southern Pacific Company may, on notice to the said Central Pacific Railroad Company, terminate this agreement, or may submit to arbitrators in the manner and with the effect hereinbefore provided for, changes, and revisions.

And it is further agreed between the Southern Pacific Company and the Central Pacific Railroad Company that, upon the execution of this agreement, the said Southern Pacific Company may enter upon, take possession of, and hold during the continuance of this agreement all the property, real and personal, hereby leased by the said Central Pacific Railroad Company to the said Southern Pacific Company, and that duplicate lists of all the rolling stock and other personal and movable property so leased, showing its condition at the time of the execution of this agreement, shall be made and certified by the secretary of each of said companies, and that one of said lists shall be kept by each of said companies.

And it is further agreed between the Southern Pacific Company and the Central Pacific Railroad Company that if at any time any of the rolling stock or other personal property hereby leased to the said Southern Pacific Company by said Central Pacific Railroad Company be used upon any roads other than the Central Pacific Railroad or the leased roads north of Goshen, then the said Southern Pacific Company shall credit to the said Central Pacific Railroad Company the usual and customary sums paid by one railroad company to another for the use of the like property, and that the amounts so credited shall be deemed and taken to be a part of the earnings of said Central Pacific Railroad Company.

And it is further agreed that if, in the operation of said Central Pacific Railroad and leased roads north of Goshen, it become necessary to use any of the rolling stock or other personal property of the Southern Pacific Company, not leased from the Central Pacific Railroad Company, upon the said Central Pacific Railroad or leased roads north of Goshen, that the usual and customary sums paid by one railroad company to another for the use of like property, shall be allowed as, and constitute a charge against, the receipts of the said Central Pacific Railroad and said leased lines, and be so considered in the accounting hereinbefore provided for.

In testimony whereof the said Southern Pacific Company and the said Central Pacific Railroad Company have caused these presents to be signed by their respective presidents, countersigned by their secretaries, and their corporate seals to be hereunto affixed, suant to orders of their respective boards of directors, the day year first herein written.

Amendment to lease between Central Pacific Railroad Company and Southern Pacific Company.

This indenture, made and entered into this seventh day of December, eighteen hundred and ninety-three, by and between the Central Pacific Railroad Company of the first part and the Southern Pacific Company of the second part.

Whereas heretofore and under date of the 17th day of February, 1885, an agreement of lease was made and entered into by and between the parties hereto, which agreement of lease was afterwards modified by agreement between the same parties bearing date the first day of January, 1888; and

Whereas the operation of the demised properties under such lease has resulted in very considerable losses to the said Southern Pacific Company, and it thereby appears that by the operation of said agreement the said Central Pacific Railroad Company has been and is being benefited at the expense of the Southern Pacific Company, and a necessity has therefore arisen for a revision and change of such lease so that neither party thereto shall be benefited at the expense of the other;

Now, therefore, this instrument witnesseth:

That in consideration of the premises such agreement of lease has been and is hereby revised and changed by the parties hereto by substituting on and after the first day of January, 1894, for the existing provisions of such lease, as so modified as aforesaid, the terms, provisions, and conditions hereinafter provided and expressed, that is to say:

First. The party of the first part hereby leases to the party of the second part, for the period of ninety years from and including the first day of January next, the railroads of the party of the first part, together with its branches and leased lines, and all depots and station houses, equipments, and appurtenances of every kind and nature whatsoever to the said railroads, branches, and leased lines respectively belonging or appertaining.

Second. The party of the second part will pay to the party of the first a fixed yearly rental for the premises so leased, amounting to the sum of ten thousand dollars per annum, which rental shall be paid in four equal installments of twenty-five hundred dollars each on the first days of January, April, July, and October of each year during the pendency of this lease (excepting only the first day of January, eighteen hundred and ninety-four), it being understood and agreed that the amount of such rental, so far as requisite, shall be appropriated and applied by the party of the first part to the expenses of maintaining and keeping up its corporate organization.

Third. The party of the second part is to operate the said railroads, branches, and leased lines hereinbefore referred to. The said lessee shall apply the earnings and income derived therefrom to paying all operating expenses thereof and the incidental expenses connected therewith, including the sums payable for rentals of leased lines, and, according to their lawful priorities, to the payment of the current interest and sinking fund contributions or other payments from time to time becoming due and payable from the said Central Pacific Railroad Company, whether to the United States of America or to bondholders or others, during the existence of this lease.

And it is further provided and agreed by and between the parties hereto that on the first day of April in each year during the continuance of this lease the party of the second part shall pay to the party of the first part such balance, if any, of the net earnings or income received by the party of the second part from the said leased premises, with the appurtenances, for the year ending on the 31st day of December then next preceding, as shall remain in its hands after all the payments hereinbefore provided for or agreed or directed are made: Provided, however, That if at the time, viz: such 1st day of April, when such balance of such income or rental is provided to be paid to the party of the first part, there shall be any sum due or owing from the party of the first part to the party of the second part for or in respect of advances or payments theretofore made by the party of the second part to or for or upon the request of the party of the first part for new additions or improvements to the demised premises, or any part thereof, or for expenses of keeping up the corporate organization of the party of the first part, or maintaining agencies for the transfer of its stock and bonds, or for any expenses of its business or affairs other than such as fall within the payments before provided to be made by the lessee out of the earnings or income, or for or in respect of any other sums which may have been lawfully advanced or paid by the lessee to or for the party of the first part, the party of the second part shall be entitled to retain and pay to itself whatever may be owing to it from the party of the first part for or in respect of any of the causes or matters or considerations aforesaid, including any interest which may be due or owing from the party of the first part to the party of the second part thereon.

And provided further, That if such balance of net earnings or income received by the party of the second part from the said leased premises, with the appurtenances, for any year, and which by the foregoing provisions hereof would be and became payable by said party of the second part to said party of the first part, shall exceed the amount of six per cent per annum upon the par value of the then existing capital stock of the party of the first part, then and in that event the said party of the second part shall be entitled to and shall retain to itself for its own use one-half part of any and all excess of such balance of net earnings and income over and above the amount of six per cent per annum upon the par value of the then existing capital stock of the party of the first part.

Fourth. If and so far as the party of the second part shall make any advances for payments for account of the party of the first part, the party of the second part shall be entitled to receive interest upon all such advances at the rate of six per cent per annum from the making until the reimbursement thereof, and the party of the second part shall have a lien for such advances, and the interest thereon, upon the said demised premises and the income thereof until such advances are reimbursed, with interest, and the party of the second part shall be entitled at any time and from time to time to refund to itself such advances and interest out of any net earnings or income of the demised premises which may be in its hands, unless it shall have been expressly agreed between the parties hereto to the contrary, in writing, at or before the making of such advances.

Fifth. The agreements between the same parties, dated February 7, 1885, and January 1, 1888, respectively, are hereby canceled, except so far as they relate to operation of said demised premises prior to January 1, 1894, and adjustment of accounts in respect to such operation thereof.

Sixth. This indenture may be at any time modified in any of its terms or provisions or canceled by agreement of the parties thereto.

In witness whereof the parties hereto have hereunto respectively affixed their corporate seals and caused these presents to be signed by their respective presidents and attested by their respective secretaries the day and year first above written.

Between Central Pacific Railroad Company and Southern Pacific Company—Agreement.

Indenture, made and entered into this twenty-second day of March, 1894, by and between Central Pacific Railroad Company, of the first part, and the Southern Pacific Company, of the second part.

Whereas, heretofore and under date of the 7th day of December, 1893, an indenture was made and entered into by and between the parties hereto, revising and changing the then existing agreement of lease between said parties, as by said indenture, dated the 7th day of December, 1893, by reference thereto will fully and at large appear; and

Whereas, it has been suggested, on behalf of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, that such last-mentioned indenture should be modified as hereinafter provided, and the Southern Pacific Company has assented to such proposed modification thereof;

Now, therefore, this indenture witnesseth:

That in consideration of the premises the parties hereto have 37 undertaken, covenanted, and agreed, and do hereby undertake, covenant, and agree, to and with each other as follows, viz:

First. The said indenture, dated the 7th day of December, 1893, is hereby modified by substituting in lieu of article fourth of said indenture the following article, that is to say:

Fourth. If and so far as the party of the second part shall make any advances for payments for account of the party of the first part, the party of the second part shall be entitled to receive lawful interest upon all such advances from the making until the reimbursement thereof, and the party of the second part shall be entitled at any time and from time to time to refund to itself such advances and interest out of any net earnings or income of the demised premises which may be in its hands, unless it shall have been expressly agreed between the parties hereto to the contrary in writing at or before the making of such advances.

And it is further agreed between said Central Pacific Railroad Company and said Southern Pacific Company that if at any time it appears that by the operation of this agreement either party is being benefited at the expense of the other, then this agreement shall be revised and changed so that such will not be the operation thereof, and if the parties hereto can not agree upon the changes necessary to that end, then each party shall appoint one arbitrator, disinterested but skilled in relation to the subject matter, and the award and decision of such arbitrators in writing shall be binding upon the parties hereto, and this agreement shall be revised and changed in accordance with such award and decision, and, as revised and changed, shall be duly executed in writing by the parties hereto.

And it is further agreed that if the arbitrators so chosen can not agree upon an award and decision, then that the two shall choose a third impartial and skilled arbitrator, and that the award and decision of two of said three arbitrators shall have the same force and effect between the parties hereto, and shall be executed in like manner as hereinbefore provided for the award and decision of the two arbitrators first chosen.

Second. The said indenture, dated the 7th day of December, 1893, as so modified by the first article hereof, is hereby in all respects ratified, approved, and confirmed.

In witness whereof, the parties hereto have hereunto respectively affixed their corporate seals and caused these presents to be signed by their respective presidents and attested by their respective secretaries the day and year first above written.

This agreement, made and entered into this 15th day of April, A. D. 1897, by and between the Central Pacific Railroad Company, of the first part, and the Southern Pacific Company, of the second part,

Witnesseth:

That whereas, under existing arrangements between the parties hereto, it has been the practice that on the first day of April in each year while operating the railroad of the party of the first part, the party of the second part should pay to the party of the first part such balance of income or earnings of the railroad, with the appurtenances, received by the party of the second part for the year ending on the 31st day of December, then next preceding, as should remain in the hands of the party of the second part after the deduction of certain charges and expenses.

And whereas, it is to the convenience of both of said parties to change the dates of said accountings and settlements so as to conform to the reports required by the Interstate Commerce Commission and other governmental bodies and officers, by adopting as the basis therefor a fiscal year ending June 30th of each year, instead of December 31st:

Now, therefore, it is hereby agreed by and between the parties hereto, that hereafter all said balances shall be paid on the first day of November of each year, and shall be for and on account of the year ending on the 30th day of June then next preceding, except that in the first settlement which shall be made under this agreement, to wit, that of November 1st, 1897, such settlement shall be made upon an accounting for the whole period from January 1st, 1896, to June 30th, 1897, both days inclusive.

In witness whereof, the said parties have caused these presents to be signed by their respective presidents or vice presidents, and secretaries, under their several corporate seals, the day and year first above written.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, PETITIONER,

vs.

SOUTHERN PACIFIC COMPANY, CENTRAL PACIFIC RAILway Company, Union Trust Company of New York, William Sproule, Julius Kruttschnitt, Robert Goelet, Cornelius N. Bliss, Walter P. Bliss, Henry W. de Forest, J. Horace Harding, Charles W. Harkness, Henry E. Huntington, James N. Jarvie, Leonor F. Loree, Lewis J. Spence, Eric P. Swenson, James N. Wallace, and Ogden Mills, Defendants. | In Equity, No. 420.

Answer of Defendants.

Southern Pacific Company, Central Pacific Railway Company, William Sproule, Julius Kruttschnitt, Robert Goelet, Cornelius N. Bliss, Walter P. Bliss, Henry W. de Forest, J. Horace Harding, Charles W. Harkness, Henry E. Huntington, James N. Jarvie, Leonor F. Loree, Lewis J. Spence, Eric P. Swenson, James N. Wallace, and Ogden Mills.

These defendants reserving all manner of exceptions that may be had to the uncertainties and imperfections of the petition, come and answer thereto, or to so much thereof as they are advised is material to be answered, and say:

Defendants above named deny that they, or any of them, are restraining, or attempting to monopolize or are monopolizing, trade and commerce in respect to the transportation of persons and property between the points, or any of them, mentioned in said petition, in violation of the act of Congress approved July 2, 1890, entitled "An act to protect trade and commerce against unlawful restraints and monopolies".

Said defendants further deny that they, or any of them, are violating the provisions of the acts of Congress mentioned in the bill and described as the Pacific railroad laws.

I.

Said defendants deny that Lewis J. Spence is traffic manager of the Central Pacific Railway Company.

Said defendants further deny that they, or any of them, are responsible for the continuance of any combination or monopolization in restraint of interstate and foreign trade and commerce effected by said Southern Pacific Company by its domination, control, and operation of the Central Pacific Railway Company, or otherwise, or that they, or any of them, are responsible for the violation by said companies of the said Pacific Railroad laws, or that said companies, or either of them, in any way violate the said Pacific Railroad laws or any portion thereof.

II.

Defendants deny that the Southern Pacific Company operates under lease or otherwise either the Morgan's Louisiana and Texas Railroad and Steamship Company, or the Louisiana Western Railroad Company, or the Texas and New Orleans Railroad Company, or the Galveston, Harrisburg and San Antonio Railway Company (incorrectly styled in the petition Railroad Company), and aver that said named corporations operate themselves through their own officers, the control exercised by the Southern Pacific Company being through stock ownership.

They further show that while the "coast line" of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company runs into San Francisco, the other of the two routes referred to in the petition terminates at the east end of Oakland Mole, where its tracks connect with the tracks of the Central Pacific Railway Company; and that the Southern Pacific Railroad Company does not own a line of railroad from the northern boundary of California to Portland, Oregon, the railroad referred to or intended to be referred to in the petition being the Oregon and California Railroad Company, which is under lease to the Southern Pacific Company.

Defendants deny that the Southern Pacific Company owns or controls a line of steamships from San Francisco to Panama, which, in connection with the Panama Railroad across the Isthmus and ships running in connection therewith, constitutes a through line from San Francisco to New Orleans and New York City.

It does, however, own a majority of the capital stock of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, which operates a line of steamships from San Francisco to Panama, connecting there with the Panama Railroad across the Isthmus, and which thus performs part of transportation service from San Francisco to New York City; but defendants aver that on or before July 1, 1914, and before the 3 opening of the Panama Canal, either the said Pacific Mail Steamship Company will have ceased to operate said steamships in said business and will not be engaged in any business in competition with any line of railroad owned or controlled by the Southern Pacific Company, or the last-named company will have disposed of its said stock and will not have any interest in or control over, directly or indirectly, the said Pacific Mail Steamship Company.

They further show that the railroad of the Central Pacific Railway Company runs from Ogden, Utah, to Oakland, California, via Niles, California, and not to San Francisco, the connection between Oakland and San Francisco being by boats and barges, and that subsection 5 of paragraph II of the petition should read to be correct, a line from Niles to San Jose, California, instead of "a line from Oakland to San Jose, California".

III.

Said defendants deny that it was intended by Congress that the Central Pacific and Union Pacific lines, although built by different companies, should be run as one connected, continuous through line except as the intent of Congress is expressed in the said Pacific railroad laws.

IV.

Said defendants deny that the Sunset Route of the Southern Pacific Company is a natural competitor of all other carriers operating between points on the Atlantic coast and the Middle West on the one hand, and points on the Pacific coast and in the Orient on the other hand.

Defendants further deny that the Central Pacific Railway Company, in conjunction with its connections, or otherwise, is, or has been, the natural competitor of the Southern Pacific Company in the transportation of traffic between the points above named.

Said defendants deny that the lines of the Central Pacific Railway Company connecting with those of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railway Company, at or near Fresno, form, with other connections of the last-named company, a route which is in natural competition with the Southern Pacific Company and its connections for traffic between Tehama, Marysville, Sacramento, Oakland, San Francisco, San Jose, and other points in central and northern California, on the one hand, and points in Arizona, New Mexico, Texas, and Louisiana, including Phoenix, El Paso, San Antonio, Houston, Galveston, and New Orleans on the other.

Said defendants deny that the lines of the Central Pacific Railway Company, in connection with the various steamship lines engaged in coastwise and foreign trade, as forming through routes, or otherwise, are natural competitors of the Southern Pacific Company and its water line connections described in the petition.

Said defendants deny that the Central Pacific Railway Company, could, at moderate cost, extend its line from Natron to Portland.

Said defendants further deny that if the Central Pacific Railway Company were free to act in its own interest the existence of two competitive lines between San Francisco and Portland would, in the near future or at all, become an assured fact.

Said defendants deny that the line owned by the Central Pacific Railroad Company, as operated prior to 1885, in connection with the line of the Union Pacific Railroad Company, was in competition with the lines now operated by the Southern Pacific Company in interstate and foreign transportation, except that both prior and subsequent to 1885 the through route or routes formed by the line of the Central Pacific Railway Company from San Francisco to Ogden in conjunction with connecting railroads, including the Union Pacific Railroad Company, and their eastern connections, have carried traffic in competition with the said Sunset Route and with other transcontinental lines; but they deny that the common control of the Central Pacific Railway Company and the said Sunset Route, which has always existed and under which the said Southern Pacific System of lines (always included therein being the line of the Central Pacific Railway Company) were originally constructed and have subsequently grown and developed by usual and normal means, as hereinafter more fully stated, has prevented or created the power to prevent competition between said through routes or constitutes a restraint of trade or a monopoly or an attempt to monopolize trade, within the prohibition of the said act of July 2, 1890, or otherwise.

V.

Said defendants deny that the lease or instrument dated December 7, 1893, copy of which is attached to the petition, expressly, or at all, abrogated the lease of February 17, 1885, copy of which is attached to said petition; on the contrary, defendants allege that the tenure of said lease of February 17, 1885, has never been interrupted or broken, and that the sole purpose of the instrument dated December 7, 1893, with the subsequent instrument of March 22, 1894, thereto, was to modify or change the terms and conditions of the original lease to meet new conditions and to make a fair adjustment as between the lessor and the lessee in view of existing conditions, and as so modified and changed the original lease of February 17, 1885, was continued and has continued with other modifications and changes subsequently made (as appears from Exhibit A attached to the petition) until the present time.

Said defendants deny that the Southern Pacific Company acquired the capital stock of the Central Pacific Railway Company or the lease of the properties of that company with the purpose or effect of preventing competition between the lines of said Central Pacific Railway Company and its connections and the lines of the Southern Pacific Company in the transportation of passengers and freight in interstate or foreign commerce.

Said defendants also deny that the control of the Central Pacific Railway Company by the Southern Pacific Company prevents the establishment of a competitive route between San Francisco and Portland.

Said defendants further deny that the Central Pacific Railway Company line from Hazen, Nevada, to Mojave, California, in connection with the line of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railway Company, forms a route which would be in natural competition with the Southern Pacific Company and its connections for traffic between points on the Central Pacific Railway Company and its tributary territory and points in Arizona, New Mexico, Texas, and other Southern States; or that through the control of the Central Pacific Railway Company by the Southern Pacific Company the establishment of such joint traffic or prorating arrangements between the former and the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railway Company is prevented.

The defendants further deny that the ownership by the Southern Pacific Company of the capital stock of the Central Pacific Railway Company, or its lease of the properties of that company, or its domination, management, or control thereof, as set forth in the bill, constitutes a combination in restraint of trade or monopolization thereof in violation of the act of July 2, 1890.

VI.

Said defendants deny that any object or intent of the Pacific railroad laws was as alleged in Paragraph VI of the petition herein except to the extent that the objects and intent of said Pacific railroad laws are expressed in said laws themselves, to which these defendants make reference.

Said defendants deny that by reason of any alleged interest of the Southern Pacific Company to carry traffic via its Sunset Route, or to and through the Ogden gateway only such proportion thereof as it is unable to control for said Sunset Route it thereby, or otherwise, discriminates against said Central Pacific Railway Company.

Said defendants deny that through its control of the Central Pacific Railway Company the Southern Pacific Company in any way discriminates against the Central Pacific Railway Company; on the contrary, the defendants allege that the lines of said Central Pacific Railway Company are so interconnected with other lines leased by the Southern Pacific Company that there is no natural competition between such lines; that all of said lines form a unified system, developed to meet the needs of the territory served by them; that it would be against the interest of the Southern Pacific Company as lessee of all these lines and the actual owner of the Central Pacific Railway Company to discriminate in any way against the lines of that company; on the contrary, it is to the interest of the Southern Pacific Company that such lines should receive their full development and their full share of the traffic.

Said defendants deny that in its operation of the line of the Central Pacific Railway Company from San Francisco to Ogden it does not give to such line equal advantages and facilities as required by the Pacific railroad laws, but discriminates against both the Central Pacific and the Union Pacific lines and in favor of its Sunset Route by forwarding via the latter traffic originating or ending on the lines of the Central Pacific Railway Company, or in territory tributary thereto; on the contrary, defendants allege that the Southern Pacific Company gives to both the Central Pacific and Union Pacific lines every advantage and facility required by said Pacific railroad laws and that the Union Pacific line has always been made by the Southern Pacific Company its most favored connection at Ogden, Utah.

Said defendants further deny that through its control of the Central Pacific Railway Company, or at all, the Southern Pacific Company prevents joint traffic or prorating arrangements between the former and the Union Pacific Railroad Company, or that the Southern Pacific Company so adjusts its freight rates and passenger fares on traffic originating in the Central Pacific territory west of San Francisco as to discriminate against transportation eastward over the joint transcontinental route of the Central Pacific and Union Pacific Railroads and other eastern connections, or that thereby, or at all, the Southern Pacific Company prevents competition or denies equal advantages and facilities as to rates, time, and transportation to said Union Pacific Railroad Company.

Said defendants deny that Southern Pacific Company so adjusts its freight rates and passenger fares on traffic originating in Central Pacific territory north of San Francisco as to discriminate against transportation eastward over the joint transcontinental route of the Central Pacific and Union Pacific Railroad and other eastern connections, or that thereby, or at all, it prevents com-7 petition or denies equal advantages or facilities as to rates, time, and transportation.

Said defendants further deny that the maintenance by the Southern Pacific Company of the Central Pacific Railway Company properties, compared with that of the Sunset Route, is so inefficient as to discourage eastern travel and transportation via the Ogden route and does not afford and secure thereto equal advantages and facilities; on the contrary, the defendants allege that the lines of the Central Pacific Railway Company have always been maintained by the Southern Pacific Company to as high, if not a higher, standard of efficiency as that maintained on the lines of the Sunset Route.

Said defendants further deny that the Southern Pacific Company has heretofore, or does now, control, maintain, or operate said Central Pacific Railway Company in the interest of its Sunset Route or adversely to the interests of the Central Pacific and Union Pacific companies, in violation of the Pacific railroad acts or of any other acts of Congress, or that it does not afford or secure to the Central Pacific and Union Pacific companies equal advantages and facilities as to rates, time, or transportation, or that said Southern Pacific Company is in any way, or at all, violating any of the provisions of the Pacific railroad laws; on the contrary, defendants allege that from the year 1901 to the year 1913 the Union Pacific Railroad Company, through its purchase and ownership of the controlling interest in the capital stock of the Southern Pacific Company, acquired and exercised full and complete domination and control over said Southern Pacific Company and through said Southern Pacific Company over the Central Pacific Railway Company, and that during the said time the Union Pacific Railroad Company had full power to make any joint traffic or prorating arrangements or rate adjustments which were necessary to give the Union Pacific the advantages and facilities as to rates, time, and transportation to which they were entitled. The defendants allege that the joint traffic and prorating arrangements which were sanctioned and enforced during the time of said Union Pacific control have continued since the termination of said control and are now in existence.

VII.

The said defendants, for further defense herein, allege that the lines of the Central Pacific Railroad Company and of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, operated since February 17, 1885, by the Southern Pacific Company, as lessee, constitute the pioneer railroad development of the country west of Ogden, Utah, and El Paso, Texas, and south of Portland, Oregon.

The construction of the main Central Pacific line from Sacramento east to Ogden began in January, 1863, and was completed May 10, 1869.

The construction of the Central Pacific line from Sacramento, via Stockton and Niles, to San Francisco and San Jose was completed in the year 1869.

The construction of the Central Pacific line from Roseville north to the Oregon boundary was begun in October, 1867.

At the Oregon boundary it joined the Oregon and California Railroad, which gave a through line to Portland, Oregon, the operation of which began in December, 1887.

The construction of the Central Pacific line from Lathrop to Goshen was begun November 8, 1870, and completed August 1, 1872.

Because of the large indebtedness of the Central Pacific Railroad Company to the United States Government and others, it was difficult to procure funds upon the credit of that company for the construction of the line southward from Goshen.

It became necessary, therefore, in order to procure such funds to organize a new company, and, accordingly, the Southern Pacific Railroad Company was organized, by consolidation, on October 12, 1870, the capital stock of which, or more than three-fourths thereof, was subscribed for and owned by the stockholders of the Central Pacific Railroad Company.

The said Southern Pacific Railroad Company thereafter continued the construction of the line southward from Goshen, making through connection with Los Angeles in September, 1876, and with Yuma, Arizona, October 22, 1877.

Because of the failure of the Texas and Pacific Railroad Company to construct the road contemplated by the act of Congress of March 3, 1871, and the supplementary act of May 2, 1872, the stockholders of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company of California caused to be incorporated the Southern Pacific Railroad Company of Arizona, which continued the construction of said line from Yuma, Arizona, to the eastern boundary thereof; and also caused to be incorporated the Southern Pacific Railroad Company of New Mexico, which continued the construction of said line eastward through New Mexico to El Paso, Texas.

Said line was opened as a through line between El Paso, Texas, and points in California in May, 1881.

Thereafter the stockholders of said Southern Pacific Railroad Company of California, through corporations organized and controlled by them, secured a line of railroad from El Paso, Texas, to New Orleans, Louisiana, which line of railroad formed an operating connection with the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railway Company at Deming, in March, 1881, and with the Texas and Pacific Railroad Company at Sierra Blanca, January 1, 1882.

Said line of railroad was opened as a through line of railroad between New Orleans, Louisiana, and points in California, in February, 1883.

At all times prior to April 1, 1885, the Central Pacific Railroad Company operated its lines of railroad above described, and as rapidly as the main line from Goshen southward to New Orleans, Louisiana, or any part thereof, was opened for operation, this line was leased to the Central Pacific Railroad Company, and that company at all times prior to April 1, 1885, operated said lines in connection with its lines, as lessee.

As stated in the petition, by an instrument dated February 17, 1885, all railroads, equipment, and other properties owned by the Central Pacific Railroad Company, predecessor of the Central Pacific Railway Company, were leased to the Southern Pacific Company for a term of ninety-nine years from April 1, 1885, and all leases of the Southern Pacific Company's properties held by said Central Pacific Railroad were by the same instrument transferred to said Southern Pacific Company.

The Southern Pacific Company at this time became the owner of the entire capital stock of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company of California, of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company of Arizona, and of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company of New Mexico, and also acquired the controlling ownership of the corporations owning the line of railroad between El Paso, Texas, and New Orleans, Louisiana, as above stated.

At all times prior to the date of the lease of the Central Pacific lines and of the Southern Pacific lines to the Southern Pacific Company, the corporations owning said lines were by stock ownership and directorates under a common control and were never in independent or separate ownership; nor were these lines of railroad, or any of them, ever operated in opposition or in competition with any other of said lines; on the contrary, these lines of railroad were built veloped, and operated as a unified system of railroads to answer e needs of the communities served, the companies owning the contituent parts of said lines being controlled by the same stockholders nd directorates, to the same degree as if all of said lines had been uilt and always owned and operated by one company.

Prior to the lease to the Southern Pacific Company all of these ines were operated by the Central Pacific Railroad Company as wner and lessee, as above stated, and since that time all of these ines have been operated by the Southern Pacific Company, as lessee.

Because these lines were in one ownership and management, they were developed as one property, and little heed given as o which corporation should hold the title to terminal properties and ranch lines.

Accordingly, branch lines from points on the Central Pacific were uilt and were owned by the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, hese branch lines having no connection with the main line of the outhern Pacific Railroad Company except through Central Pacific ines.

At important points, such as Sacramento, California, most of the ntire title to valuable terminal properties was taken and held in the ame of the Central Pacific Railroad Company.

This is also substantially true at Oakland, California; while in an Francisco, California, the Central Pacific Railroad Company as no terminal property.

In the joint operation of these lines through trains have been run y the most direct or convenient line without reference to the owner-hip of these lines; as, for example, instead of detouring through assenger trains between Ogden and San Francisco, over the Cen-al Pacific line between Sacramento and San Francisco, via Niles, uch trains have been operated over the direct line between Sacraento and San Francisco known as the Benicia Cut-Off, owned by he Southern Pacific Railroad Company.

Through trains between Los Angeles and San Francisco have been perated over the Southern Pacific lines from San Francisco to racy, over the Central Pacific line from Tracy to Goshen, and over he Southern Pacific lines from Goshen to Los Angeles.

Any separation of the Central Pacific lines from Southern Pacific ines cannot now be had except with great detriment and injury to ach of these companies; and in order that these lines should now e operated as separate properties there must be expended very large ums of money to secure separate terminals to complete these properies for operation on a basis independent of each other.

Besides, such separation would necessarily impair public service, through, direct routes could not be used as efficiently or economically for operation of trains by one company as under present conditions.

The joint ownership, control, and operation of the Central Pacific line under the conditions hereinbefore stated does not in any sense restrain or monopolize trade and commerce in respect to the transportation of persons and property in violation of the act of Congress approved July 2, 1890; nor does such joint ownership, control, and operation in any way violate the provisions of the Pacific railroad laws. On the contrary, the Government of the United 11 States has frequently recognized, as will be hereinafter shown, that such joint ownership, control, and operation was and is in entire harmony with the laws above mentioned, and in no sense a violation thereof.

VIII.

Said defendants further allege that at all times the Central Pacific lines and the Southern Pacific lines have been built, extended, controlled, and operated as one property. Such joint ownership, control, and operation existed, therefore, long before the act of July 2, 1890.

By such joint ownership, control, and operation there was never any restraint of trade or commerce between or affecting such lines.

The Central Pacific Railway Company and its predecessor, the Central Pacific Railroad Company, have always fully complied with the provisions of the Pacific railroad laws.

The said Central Pacific line and the Union Pacific line have always been operated as one continuous line, and neither the Central Pacific Railroad Company nor the Central Pacific Railway Company or their officers have refused to operate said line, so far as the public and the Government were concerned, as one continuous line, or have ever refused in such operation or use to afford and give to the Union Pacific Railroad Company equal advantages and facilities as to rates, terms, and transportation without any discrimination of any kind against the said Union Pacific Railroad Company or its business.

IX.

Said defendants further say that the Government of the United States is estopped by its conduct and is barred by its laches and acquiescence from asserting that the joint ownership and control of the said lines of railroad composing the Southern Pacific system and the operation of the said Central Pacific Railway Company as a part thereof is contrary to its public policy or in violation of the said Pacific railroad acts or the said act of July 2, 1890, and in support of said defenses they show:

Under the said act of July 1, 1862, as amended by the act of July 2, 1864, a subsidy in the form of currency bonds of the United States was granted in aid of the construction of said railroads of the Central Pacific Railroad Company and of the Western Pacific Railroad Company, which bonds bore six per cent interest, payable semi-annually, and matured thirty years after date, and were to be issued upon the completion of sections of twenty miles of railroad and for amounts per mile as stated in the acts.

It was further provided by the act of 1862 that the re-payment of said bonds with all interest thereon which might be paid by the United States, should be secured by a first mortgage lien on the railroad and telegraph line, together with the rolling stock, fixtures, etc., in consideration of which the same were issued.

By the act of 1864 the railroad company receiving such aid was permitted to issue first mortgage bonds equal in amount to the subsidy debt, and such first mortgage bonds were given priority of lien over the Government mortgage.

In 1869 the Central Pacific Railroad Company of California completed the construction of its said railroad from Sacramento to a connection with the Union Pacific Railroad at a point five miles west of Ogden, in the State of Utah, being the road it was authorized by the aforesaid act of Congress to construct.

The length of the railroad from Sacramento to the meeting point with the Union Pacific Railroad was seven hundred thirty-seven and fifty one-hundredths miles, and the subsidy bonds received in consideration thereof from the United States amounted to twenty-five million eight hundred eighty-five thousand one hundred twenty dollars.

In 1869, or prior thereto, the Western Pacific Railroad Company completed the construction of its railroad between Sacramento and San Jose, the length of the bond-aided road being one hundred and twenty-three and sixteen one-hundredths miles, and the subsidy bonds received in consideration thereof amounting to one million, nine hundred seventy thousand five hundred and sixty dollars.

The total length of the bond-aided lines was eight hundred and fifty and sixty-six one-hundredths miles, and the aggregate amount of the bonds of the United States received in aid thereof was twenty-seven million eight hundred and fifty-five thousand six hundred and eighty dollars.

These bonds were issued from time to time during the construction of the railroad, and there were issued at about the same time by the Central Pacific Railroad Company of California and by the Western Pacific Railroad Company first mortgage bonds in amount equal to the said subsidy bonds with a superior lien as aforesaid on the said railroad properties.

The average date of the maturity of both sets of bonds was in 1898.

On June 22, 1870, the said Central Pacific Railroad Company of California and the Western Pacific Railroad Company, being both California corporations, were consolidated and merged under the laws of said State into the Central Pacific Railroad Company.

Subsequently, on August 20, 1870, the Central Pacific
13 Railroad was consolidated and merged under the laws of the State of California with the California and Oregon Railroad Company, the San Francisco, Oakland and Alameda Railroad, and the San Joaquin Valley Railroad Company, under the name of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, which was the company that in 1899 was reorganized into the present Central Pacific Railway Company.

Said constituent railroads had constructed and were the owners of the branch lines of railroad from Roseville to the boundary line between California and Oregon; from San Francisco, via Oakland to Niles, and from Lathrop to Goshen, including a branch mileage of about four hundred sixty-seven miles, which branch lines by said consolidation became the property of the Central Pacific Railroad Company.

The said Central Pacific Railroad Company was unable or failed to pay the interest on said subsidy bonds of the United States, as it matured, and the same was paid by the United States; and the amount of said interest and principal due to the United States, as hereinafter more fully set forth, amounted to $58,812,000.00.

Experience having demonstrated the inadequacy of the provisions contained in the acts of Congress of 1862 and 1864 for the payment of said bonds and interest, Congress adopted the act of May 7, 1878, known as the Thurman Act (20 Stat., 56), which required the reservation of the whole compensation due for services rendered the Government, the creation of a sinking fund, the payment annually of certain sums by the Central Pacific Railroad Company, etc. The requirements of this act were performed by the Central Pacific Railroad Company, but the act failed to accomplish its intended purpose.

The Central Pacific Railroad Company was unable to pay the interest on said subsidy bonds, and it became increasingly evident that it would not be able to pay the interest or principal at the maturity of the debt. Consequently, for several years prior to said maturity, from time to time, the matter was made the subject of inquiry and investigation by both Houses of Congress through the Committees on Pacific Railroads and through special committees appointed for the purpose. The investigation by such committees covered the history of the incorporation and construction of said railroad company and of its different parts, its relations to the Southern Pacific Company and lines of railroad which, with the said Co-

Pacific Railroad Company, composed the Southern Pacific system, the ability of the company to pay said indebtedness, the adequacy of the security which the Government had therefor, and the question whether an extension for the performance of said company's obligations to the Government should be granted, and if so, upon what terms and conditions.

The reports of said committees disclosed fully the relations of the Central Pacific Railroad Company to the Southern Pacific Company, the joint control, ownership, and management which had always existed between the Central Pacific Railroad Company and the other railroads composing said system, as well as the lease of the Central Pacific Railroad Company by the Southern Pacific Company of date February 17, 1885, and the various modifications thereof.

The reports also concurred in the statements that the bond-aided line of the Central Pacific Railroad Company did not reach San Francisco, terminating at Sacramento and San Jose, and did not include the line from Roseville to the Oregon boundary, or from Lathrop to Goshen, or the other lines added by consolidation resulting from extensions made without Government aid; and that the security for the Government debt was totally inadequate, and that the only hope of ultimate payment was to extend the time of payment for a long term of years at reduced rates of interest, with provision for periodical payments of such amounts as might be paid from the earnings of the Central Pacific Railroad Company and leave enough for proper maintenance and operation.

Finally, in 1896, the matter of an adjustment of the said indebtedness of the Central Pacific Railroad Company having been referred by the House and Senate to their respective Committees on Pacific Railroads, said committees made their separate reports, that of the House committee being dated April 25, 1896, and that of the Senate committee bearing date May 1, 1896. Both reports were substantially of the same substance and tenor as previous reports, as set forth in preceding paragraph, and both recommended that the Southern Pacific Company be required to participate in the settlement and guarantee the discharge of the Central Pacific Railroad Company's obligations to the Government.

Each committee reported a bill for the extension and ultimate payment of the debt, the bills being practically identical in terms, the fundamental principles of which, in addition to the requirements aforesaid to be made of the Southern Pacific Company, were that the security for the debt should be extended to the nonaided lines and the terminals, and that the Central Pacific Railroad Company should pay fixed sums at prescribed "dates" to reduce the debt as rapidly as possible, these payments and rate of interest being made as large as, in the opinion of each committee, could be met by the reasonably anticipated earnings of the property.

15 The extensions and payments so provided were that, in addition to interest payments, the company was to pay $365,000.00 per annum on account of principal for ten years from 1898 to 1908; $550,000 per annum for ten years, from 1908 to 1918, and $750,000 per annum each year thereafter until the entire debt should be extinguished, which involved an extension of the debt for a period of fifty years or more.

These bills were fully discussed before each House of Congress and failed of passage, and thereafter the Congress of the United States, by an act approved July 7, 1898, passed as an amendment to the general deficiency bill of that session, provided: "That the Secretary of the Treasury, the Secretary of the Interior, and the Attorney General, and their successors in office, be, and they are hereby appointed a commission with full power to settle the indebtedness to the Government growing out of the issue of bonds in aid of the construction of the Central Pacific and Western Pacific bond-aided railroads, upon such terms and in such manner as may be agreed upon by them, or by a majority of them, and the owners of said railroads; provided, that any and all settlements thus made shall be submitted in writing to the President for his approval or disapproval, and unless approved by him shall not be binding."

Said act further provided that such commission should not agree to accept a less sum in settlement of the amount due the United States than the full amount of the principal and interest and all amounts necessary to reimburse the United States for moneys paid for interest or otherwise; and provided further that in any settlement that might be made the final payment and full discharge of said indebtedness should not be postponed to exceed ten years, and the whole amount, principal and interest, should be paid in equal semi-annual instalments within the period so limited.

At this time all the material matters and things complained of in the petition as constituting either a violation of the Pacific Railroad laws or of the antitrust act of July 2, 1890, the lease of the Central Pacific Railroad Company to the Southern Pacific Company, the operation of the former as a part of the Southern Pacific system, and the relative location of the lines of railroad composing said system, had long been a matter of public notoriety and of general public knowledge, and had been brought directly within the knowledge of the United States, and especially of the legislative and executive departments thereof, through the reports of said congressional committees and the public debates thereon, as well as by reason of the relations of said railroads to the Government in connection with said indebtedness as mail carriers and otherwise.

It was well understood by the Congress at the time of the passage of this law that the said indebtedness of the Central Pacific Railroad Company to the United States Government amounted to at least $58,000,000, and according, therefore, to the terms of said law the Central Pacific Railroad Company was required to pay during each of the ten years allowed for the payment of said debt the sum of $5,800,000 per annum.

This sum exceeded many times over any possible net earnings of the Central Pacific Railroad Company that could be applied to the payment of this debt, and it cannot be questioned that the Congress intended and understood that this debt could only be paid by the employment of the credit and resources of the Southern Pacific Company, and that compliance with the prescribed terms of settlement necessarily involved participation therein by the Southern Pacific Company, and the only motive or consideration which could induce the said Southern Pacific Company to participate in the payment of the Central Pacific Railroad Company's debt to the Government was the existence of the aforesaid relations between it and that company and its desire to continue such relations and to make permanent its control of that part of its system.

The defendants, therefore, allege that the Congress at the time it enacted said law of July 7, 1898, contemplated and expected such participation by the Southern Pacific Company in the settlement provided for and had this end in view when it appointed said commission with full power to arrange for such security for the payment of said indebtedness as to the said commission might seem expedient.

The commission under the authority above stated entered into an agreement dated February 1, 1899, with the Central Pacific Railroad Company and Messrs. Speyer & Company, bankers of the city of New York; said Speyer & Company representing certain bondholders and stockholders of said Central Pacific Railroad Company in the negotiations leading to the readjustment and payment of the indebtedness of the Central Pacific Railroad Company to the Government, which agreement is annexed hereto and made part hereof, marked Exhibit A.

At the time of the making of this agreement the Central Pacific Railroad Company was insolvent, and without the undertaking of the Southern Pacific Company, hereinafter stated, it would have been impossible for the Central Pacific Railroad Company to have paid its indebtedness to the Government at the times and in the manner specified in the aforesaid agreement.

17 In order to provide the funds necessary to pay said indebtedness upon the basis of the agreement above stated with the Government, a plan of readjustment was agreed upon by and between the shareholders and bondholders of the Central Pacific Railroad Company and Messrs. Speyer & Company, the readjustment managers, and the Southern Pacific Company.

A memorandum stating such plan of readjustment is attached hereto and made part hereof, marked Exhibit B.

Said settlement agreement with the Government and the above-mentioned readjustment agreements made with the said stockholders and bondholders and the reorganization of the Central Pacific Railroad Company were all parts of one transaction, were interdependent, and had for their common object the carrying out of the said agreement with the Government and the settlement of said indebtedness to the Government.

In accordance with said agreement with the United States Government and said plan of readjustment, said indebtedness of the Central Pacific Railroad Company to the United States Government was fully paid, Southern Pacific Company furnishing the money to pay said indebtedness; and also, as a part of the plan of readjustment, it purchased and became the owner of the entire capital stock of the Central Pacific Railroad Company and also of its successor, the Central Pacific Railway Company, a new company organized in accordance with the agreement with the United States Government and said plan of readjustment.

The members of said commission and the President of the United States were fully advised of all the terms and conditions of said plan of readjustment.

Copies of the agreements upon which said plan of readjustment was based and of said memorandum, Exhibit B, were furnished to the members of said commission and to the President of the United States, and the whole transaction was given the widest publicity in the leading newspapers and financial journals of the United States, so that not only were the private individuals interested in the transaction fully advised, but also the officials of the United States Government, including the members of the Congress of the United States, all of which had full information of the terms and conditions of such readjustment and of the fact that by such plan of readjustment the Southern Pacific Company was to acquire the ownership of the entire capital stock of the Central Pacific Railway Company.

Defendants further allege that the President of the United States and the members of said commission for the settlement of the Central Pacific Railroad Company's aforesaid indebtedness knew, at the time the terms of said settlement agreement were entered into, of the relations between the Central Pacific Railroad Company and the Southern Pacific Railroad Company and the Southern Pa-

18 cific Company, of the lease of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, of the operation of the Central Pacific lines as a part of the Southern Pacific System, and generally of all the material matters and things now complained of as constituting a violation of either the antitrust act of July 2, 1890, or of the said Pacific railroad laws.

They also knew at the time that the Central Pacific Railroad Company could not, without the aid of the Southern Pacific Company, comply with the terms of said agreement, and they expected, contemplated, and relied upon the participation of the Southern Pacific Company therein and the use of its resources and credit, as was done, to secure compliance with the requirements of said agreement and the ultimate payment of said indebtedness, well knowing that the only inducement or consideration which would move the Southern Pacific Company to so aid in said settlement was its lease of the Central Pacific Railroad Company and its desire to maintain and complete its control of said company as a part of its system of railroads.

By reason of the aforesaid transaction with the United States Government and its duly authorized officials the Southern Pacific Company had the right to believe and rely upon the fact that its relations with the Central Pacific Railroad Company, its lease of the lines and property of said company and its acquisition of the stock of said company were not nor were any of them in violation of the laws or public policy of the United States Government.

In consequence of said acts of the United States Government and the said just expectation and belief on the part of the Southern Pacific Company relating thereto and induced thereby, the Southern Pacific Company incurred the said obligation of the guarantee of the $100,000,000 of the 1st refunding 4% mortgage bonds of the Central Pacific Railway Company, which are now outstanding; and, in acquiring the $12,000,000 preferred stock of the Central Pacific Railway Company, subsequently increased to $17,400,000, and the $67,-875,500 of the common stock of Central Pacific Railway Company, the Southern Pacific Company expended in cash or its equivalent the full par value of said preferred stock and issued in exchange for said common stock an equal amount of its own capital stock and, in addition, $16,819,000 of its said 4% gold bonds, which stock and bonds are now outstanding; and on the other hand the United States received payment of the said indebtedness of $58,812,715.48, which would not otherwise have been paid.

As showing the knowledge of Congress of the matters above stated, defendants refer to the provision contained in the act of Congress of March 3, 1899 (vol. 30, United States Statutes at Large, page 1245), which reads as follows:

19 "And authority is hereby granted to the Secretary of the Treasury, in his discretion, to dispose of, without commission, at not less than par and accrued interest, any notes or other evidence in his possession touching the indebtedness of the Central Pacific Railroad Company to the United States."

As further showing the knowledge of Congress of the matters above stated, defendants refer to the provision contained in the act of Congress of March 3, 1901 (vol. 31, United States Statutes at Large, page 1023), reading as follows:

"That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and directed to make settlement of the claims growing out of Government transportation over nonbond-aided lines of the Southern Pacific Company and Central Pacific Railroad Company by crediting against the notes of the Central Pacific Railroad Company held in the Treasury of the United States interest on all of said judgment and allowed claims at four per centum per annum, as set forth in his letter to the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations of the Senate, dated May twelfth, nineteen hundred."

A copy of said letter of the Secretary of the Treasury as printed by order of Congress, Document No. 227, 56th Congress, 2d session, is annexed hereto and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit C.

Said Southern Pacific Company, relying on the expectation and belief created and induced by the Government, as aforesaid, has, since said settlement agreement, incurred heavy financial obligations for the benefit of the Central Pacific Railway Company, which it would not otherwise have incurred, and in the construction of extensions and additions to its system of railroads it has done so in such a manner as to greatly increase the losses and the injury to the efficiency and value of its system which will result from the separation therefrom of the lines of railroad standing in the name of the Central Pacific Railway Company, which it would not otherwise have done.

For instance, on March 1, 1911, it unconditionally guaranteed an issue of bonds of the Central Pacific Railway Company, known as that company's 4% thirty-five year European loan of 1911, aggregating 250,000,000 francs, a loan made for the benefit of the Central Pacific Railway Company, and it furnished out of its own treasury the collateral of stocks and bonds by which said loan is secured, and, among other onerous conditions, it agreed that the loan should mature and become exigible if it disposed of the stock of said Central Pacific Railway Company or if its lease thereof be terminated.

20 And said defendants further allege that by reason of the foregoing facts and circumstances the complainant is estopped from asserting or claiming that the said lease of the Central Pacific Railway Company to the Southern Pacific Company and the latter's ownership of the stock of the former company, or the control of the one over the other resulting therefrom is in violation either of the Pacific railroad laws or the antitrust act of July 2, 1890, or otherwise contrary to its public policy, and that all objections which could ever have been made by the United States Government to any of said matters have been waived, and that the said United States Government has fully assented thereto and acquiesced therein.

The said defendants for a further and separate defense herein allege as follows:

On February 1, 1908, the United States of America, as complainant, filed its petition in the United States Circuit Court for the District of Utah, against the Union Pacific Railroad Company, the Southern Pacific Company, and others, in which, among other things, it alleged that the Union Pacific Railroad Company had, in the year 1901, acquired sufficient of the capital stock of the Southern Pacific Company to give it control of that company, and that thereafter, in all respects, the said lines of railway controlled by said corporations, respectively, had been operated as one single entire system.

The aforesaid petition of the Government also stated that the Southern Pacific Company was the owner of the capital stock of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, and that by virtue of said ownership the Southern Pacific Company, in all respects, controlled the operation and management of the affairs and business of said Central Pacific Railroad Company.

It also appeared from said petition that the Central Pacific Railroad Company owned the line of railroad from Sacramento, California to Ogden, Utah.

The principal relief sought by said petition was to free the Central Pacific-Union Pacific transcontinental line and the Southern Pacific "Sunset" line from all restraint of trade and commerce which, it was alleged, had been created by the said defendants or any of them.

While a special prayer for relief was made as against the control of the Southern Pacific Company by the Union Pacific Railroad Company, the Government also in said petition prayed for such other and further relief as the nature of the case might require and to the court seem proper in the premises.

The fact that the Southern Pacific Company exercised complete domination and control over the Central Pacific Railway Company appeared in said petition and the necessary parties against whom an effective decree could have been entered terminating such control were before the court; but after joinder of issue and the full taking of testimony as to all these things the trial court entered its decree dismissing the petition and denying the Government any relief whatever.

The Supreme Court of the United States, on appeal, reversed said decree only upon the point that the control of the Southern Pacific Company by the Union Pacific Railroad Company was illegal and in violation of the act of July 2, 1890; but as to all other matters the Supreme Court of the United States said: "We find no reason to disturb the action of the court below", and as to such matters the final decree was against the Government and in favor of the defendants.

And these defendants further allege and say that the decree of the Supreme Court of the United States hereinabove referred to, in connection with the proceedings and action in the court below and in the Supreme Court, was and is a conclusive judgment of the matters in respect to which issue is tendered by the petition herein, and that said decree finally determines by judgment and record estoppel the validity of the aforesaid ownership by the Southern Pacific Company of the said capital stock of the Central Pacific Railway Company.

XI.

And for another, further, separate, and distinct defense these defendants allege that by the long delay in the assertion of the alleged rights set forth in the petition herein, and by the long forbearance of the petitioner to sue, it was and has been and is guilty of negligence, and the rights of the petitioner and its alleged cause or causes of action set forth in its petition are barred thereby; and the defendants furthermore allege that there was and has been unreasonable delay and laches in the bringing of action for the relief demanded in the petition, and the petitioner's cause or causes of action set forth in its petition are barred thereby.

XII.

And further answering, these defendants say that by reason of the premises the right to maintain this suit and all right of action or prosecution by the Government of the United States for or on account of the matters and things alleged in the petition 22 accrued, if at all, more than three years and more than five years next before the commencement of this suit, and is, therefore, barred by the statutes of the United States in such cases made and provided, and the right of the petitioner herein is barred by said statutes.

Having thus made full answer to all the matters and things contained in the petition, these defendants pray to be hence dismissed with their costs in this behalf expended.

EXHIBIT A.

Central Pacific Railroad Company readjustment.

Agreement between the United States of America, the Central Pacific Railroad Company, and Messrs. Speyer & Co., dated February 1, 1899.

Agreement made and entered into the first day of February, 1899, by and between the United States of America, acting by Honorable Lyman J. Gage, Secretary of the Treasury; Honorable Cornelius N. Bliss, Secretary of the Interior, and Honorable John W. Griggs, Attorney General, appointed by act of Congress approved July 7, 1898, a commission with full power to settle the indebtedness to the United States growing out of the issue of bonds in aid of the construction of the Central Pacific and Western Pacific bond-aided railroads, of the first part; the Central Pacific Railroad Company, a corporation created, organized, and existing under the laws of the State of California and of the United States of America, of the second part; and Messrs. Speyer & Company, bankers, of the city of New York, of the third part.

Whereas the Central Pacific Railroad Company, as now existing, was formed by the successive consolidations hereinafter mentioned, that is to say:

(a) Consolidation of the Central Pacific Railroad Company of California and the Western Pacific Railroad Company into a corporation named the Central Pacific Railroad Company, under articles of association and consolidation dated June 22, 1870.

(b) Consolidation of the last-mentioned Central Pacific Railroad Company, the California & Oregon Railroad Company, the San Francisco, Oakland & Alameda Railroad Company, and the San Joaquin Valley Railroad Company into a corporation named the Central Pacific Railroad Company, under articles of association and consolidation dated August 20, 1870.

And whereas the said Central Pacific Railroad Company, party of the second part hereto, is the owner of the following lines of railroad, with their appurtenances, which are known as and called the "Bond-aided lines", viz:

A. The line of railroad (about 737 50/100 miles in length), from a point about five miles west of Ogden to Sacramento, to aid in the construction of which bonds were from time to time issued by the United States to the Central Pacific Railroad Company of California to the amount in the aggregate of twenty-five million eight hundred and eighty-five thousand one hundred and twenty dollars ($25,885,120) under and in pursuance of the provisions of the act of Congress of the United States, entitled "An act to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Missouri River to the Pacific Ocean, and to secure to the Government the use of the same for postal, military, and other purposes", approved July 1, 1862, the act to amend the last-mentioned act, approved July 2, 1864, and the act to amend the above-mentioned acts, approved March 3, 1865.

B. The line of railroad (about 123 14/100 miles in length) from Sacramento to San José, to aid in the construction of which bonds were from time to time issued by the United States to the Western Pacific Railroad Company to the amount in the aggregate of one million nine hundred and seventy thousand five hundred and sixty dollars ($1,970,560) under and in pursuance of the provisions of the same acts of Congress under which bonds were issued to the Central Pacific Railroad Company of California, as above stated.

And whereas the said Central Pacific Railroad Company is also the owner of the following lines of railroad in the State of California with their appurtenances, which are known as and called the "non-bond-aided lines", viz:

C. The line of railroad (about 24 31/100 miles in length) from Oakland to Niles.

D. The line of railroad (about 146 8/100 miles in length) from Lathrop to Goshen.

E. The line of railroad (about 296 50/100 miles in length) from Roseville to the Oregon boundary;

And whereas the said "bond-aided lines" of railroad are covered by the following mortgages and liens, viz:

First. The bond-aided line from Sacramento to the eastern boundary of California by the first mortgage of the Central Pacific Railroad Company of California to D. O. Mills and William E. Barron, trustees, dated July 25, 1865, under which bonds are now outstanding to the amount at their face value of six million three hundred and seventy-eight thousand dollars ($6,378,000), of which bonds to the amount of three million and seven thousand dollars ($3,007,000) are now overdue, and bonds to the amount of three million three hundred and seventy-one thousand dollars ($3,371,000) will mature December 1, 1899.

Second. The bond-aided line from the eastern boundary of California to a point about five miles west of Ogden by the first mortgage of the Central Pacific Railroad Company of California to D. O. Mills and William E. Barron, trustees, dated January 1, 1867, under which bonds are now outstanding to the amount at their face value of nineteen million five hundred and three thousand dollars ($19,-503,000), of which bonds to the amount of eighty thousand dollars ($80,000) are now overdue, and bonds to the amount of three million nine hundred and eighty-eight thousand dollars ($3,988,000) will mature June 1, 1900, and bonds to the amount of fifteen million four hundred and thirty-five thousand dollars ($15,435,000) will mature June 1, 1901.

Third. The bond-aided line from Sacramento to San José by the first mortgage of the Western Pacific Railroad Company to D. O. Mills and William E. Barron, trustees, dated October 28, 1869, under which bonds are now outstanding to the amount at their face value of one million nine hundred and seventy thousand dollars ($1,-970,000), and will mature July 1, 1899.

Fourth. The bond-aided line from a point about five miles west of Ogden to Sacramento by the statutory lien in favor of the United States under the acts of Congress, approved July 1, 1862, July 2, 1864, and March 3, 1865, above-mentioned, securing the balance of the indebtedness to the United States (amounting as of the date of this agreement, to the sum of $53,389,052.74), resulting from the issue of bonds to the Central Pacific Railroad Company of California as aforesaid to aid in the construction of said bond-aided line, such statutory lien being by said acts subordinate to the liens of the first mortgages of the Central Pacific Railroad Company of California, described in the preceding subdivisions First and Second of this recital.

Fifth. The bond-aided line from Sacramento to San José by the statutory lien in favor of the United States under the acts of Congress approved July 1, 1862, July 2, 1864, and March 3, 1865, above mentioned, securing the balance of the indebtedness to the United States (amounting as of the date of this agreement, to the sum of $1,423,662.74), resulting from the issue of bonds to the Western Pacific Railroad Company as aforesaid to aid in the construction of said bond-aided line, such statutory lien being by said act subordinate to the lien of the first mortgage of the Western Pacific Railroad Company described in the preceding subdivision Third of this recital.

And whereas the said nonbond-aided lines of railroad are covered by the following mortgages and liens, viz:

First. The nonbond-aided line from Oakland to Niles by first mortgage from the Western Pacific Railroad Company to D. O. Mills and William E. Barron, trustees, dated October 28, 1869, under which bonds are now outstanding to the amount at their face value of seven hundred and sixty-five thousand dollars ($765,000), and will mature July 1, 1899.

Second. The nonbond-aided line from Lathrop to Goshen by first mortgage from the Central Pacific Railroad Company to D. O. Mills and W. C. Ralston, trustees, dated October 1, 1870, under which bonds are now outstanding to the amount at their face value of six million and eighty thousand dollars ($6,080,000), and will mature October 1, 1900.

Third. The nonbond-aided line from Roseville to the Oregon boundary by first mortgage from the California and Oregon Railroad Company to David S. Dodge and Eugene Kelly, trustees, dated January 1, 1868, and the supplemental mortgage from the Central Pacific Railroad Company as successor of the California and Oregon Railroad Company (by consolidation as aforesaid) to Eugene Kelly and Philo C. Calhoun, trustees, dated January 1, 1872, under which last-mentioned mortgages bonds are now outstanding to the amount at their face value of ten million three hundred and forty thousand dollars ($10,340,000), the date of maturity of such last-mentioned bonds having been extended to January 1, 1918, by virtue of extension agreements dated September 27, 1887, and September 25, 1891, respectively.

And whereas all the said bond-aided and nonbond-aided lines above referred to are further covered by mortgage from the Central Pacific Railroad Company to the Metropolitan Trust Company of the City of New York, trustee, dated April 1, 1889, under which there are now outstanding fifty-year five per cent bonds
26 of said Central Pacific Railroad Company maturing April 1, 1939, to the amount at their face value of twelve million two hundred and eighty-three thousand dollars ($12,283,000), of which bonds to the amount at their face value of $2,038,000 are now held by the Metropolitan Trust Company of the City of New York as security for the outstanding land bonds hereinafter mentioned;

And whereas it is claimed by the United States, but not conceded by the other parties hereto, that under and by virtue of the provisions of an act entitled: "An act to alter and amend the act entitled 'An act to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Missouri River to the Pacific Ocean, and to secure to the Government the use of the same for postal, military, and other pur-approved July first, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, and also alter and amend the act of Congress approved July second, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, in amendment of said first-named approved May 7, 1878, the balances of indebtedness to the United States hereinbefore referred to amounting in the aggregate as of the date of this agreement to the sum of $58,812,715.48 are also secured by lien declared in said last-mentioned act upon all the railroad lines above mentioned whether aid or nonaided;

And whereas the lands granted to the Central Pacific Railroad Company of California, by the act of Congress of July 1, 1862, above mentioned, and the lands granted to the California and Oregon Railroad Company by act of Congress approved July 25, 1866, with the exceptions and reservations mentioned in the mortgage hereinafter mentioned, were mortgaged by the Central Pacific Railroad Company to Charles Crocker and Silas W. Sanderson, by mortgage dated October 1, 1870, to secure an issue of land bonds of the Central Pacific Railroad Company which matured October 1, 1890, a part of which were by extension agreement dated September 4, 1890, extended to October 1, 1900, and of which there are now outstanding bonds to the amount at their face value of $2,134,000;

And whereas by act of Congress entitled "An act making appropriations to supply deficiencies in the appropriations for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and ninety-eight, and for prior years, and for other purposes", approved July 7, 1898, it was among other things provided as follows, viz: "That the Secretary of the Treasury, the Secretary of the Interior, and the Attorney General, and their successors in office, be, and they are hereby, appointed a commission with full power to settle the indebtedness to the Government growing out of the issue of bonds in aid of the construction of the Central Pacific and Western Pacific bond-aided railroads, upon such terms and in such manner as may be agreed upon by them, or by a majority of them, and the owners of said railroads: Provided, That any and all settlements thus made shall be submitted in writing to the President for his approval or disapproval, and unless approved by him shall not be binding."

"That said commission shall not agree to accept a less sum in settlement of the amount due the United States than the full amount of the principal and interest and all amounts necessary to reimburse the United States for moneys paid for interest or otherwise: And also provided, That said commission are hereby empowered to grant such time or times of payment by installment, and at such rates of interest, to be not less than three per centum per annum, payable semiannually, and with such security as to said commission may seem expedient: Provided, however, That in any settlement that may be made the final payment and full discharge of said indebtedness shall not be postponed to exceed ten years, and the whole amount, principal and interest, shall be paid in equal semiannual installments within the period so limited, and in any settlement made it shall be provided that if default shall be made in any payment of either principal or interest or any part thereof then the whole sum and all installments, principal and interest, shall immediately become due and payable, notwithstanding any other stipulation of said settlement: Provided further, That unless the settlement herein authorized be perfected within one year after the passage of this act, the President of the United States shall at once proceed to foreclose all liens now held by the United States against said railroad companies and to collect the indebtedness herein sought to be settled, and nothing in this act contained shall be held to waive or release any right, lien, or cause of action already held by the United States.

"That there is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of twenty thousand dollars to defray the expenses of said commission in making the said settlement."

And whereas it has been agreed by and between the commission appointed by said act and the owners of the railroads above described, that the indebtedness to the United States growing out of the issue of bonds in aid of the construction of the Central Pacific and Western Pacific bond-aided railroads should be settled upon the terms and in the manner hereinafter agreed to, subject to the approval of the President of the United States as provided in said last-mentioned act;

And whereas Messrs. Speyer & Company, from time to time negotiated the sale of large amounts of the bonds secured by mortgage upon the railroads of the Central Pacific Railroad Company above mentioned, and are desirous of cooperating in a settlement of all matters relating to or affecting the indebtedness of said company and the adjustment of its affairs;

And whereas of the first mortgage bonds of the Central Pacific Railroad Company of California secured upon the bond-aided lines above mentioned, and amounting in the aggregate, at their face value to twenty-five million eight hundred and eighty-one thousand dollars ($25,881,000), there have been already deposited and still remain on deposit, subject to the order of Messrs. Speyer & Company, bonds to the amount at their face value of twenty-five million six hundred and thirteen thousand dollars ($25,613,000) under a bondholders agreement, dated August 14, 1897, a copy whereof has been furnished to the party of the first part hereto;

And whereas of the Central Pacific Railroad Company's fifty-year five per cent bonds, issued under the mortgage to the Metropolitan Trust Company of the city of New York, dated April 1, 1889, above mentioned, amounting in the aggregate (after deducting said bonds so, as aforesaid, held as security for the said land bonds), to the sum of ten million two hundred and forty-five thousand dollars ($10,245,000), there have been deposited and still remain on deposit, subject to the order of Messrs. Speyer & Company, bonds to the amount, at their face value, of eight million six hundred and eighty-six thousand dollars ($8,686,000) under a bondholders agreement, dated October 1, 1897, a copy whereof has been furnished to the party of the first part hereto;

And whereas the owners of the bonds deposited under each of the aforesaid agreements of August 14, 1897, and October 1, 1897, have thereby authorized Messrs. Speyer & Company, in their behalf, to negotiate with any other committees or representatives of holders of other securities of said railroad company, or with the Government of the United States, or otherwise, for participation in respect of the deposited bonds in any plan of readjustment or reorganization, or otherwise;

And whereas there have been deposited with committees consisting of F. G. Banbury, M. P., John B. Akroyd, Lord Alwyne Compton, M. P., Daniel Marks, and Joseph Price, in London, and August Belmont, Hon. John G. Carlisle, and George Coppell, in New York, under agreements, copies of which have been furnished to the party of the first part, certificates of the capital stock of the Central Pacific Railroad Company to the amount, at their face value, of at least thirty-eight million four hundred and one thousand eight hundred dollars ($38,401,800) out of a total outstanding capital stock of said company amounting, at its par value, to sixty-seven million two hundred and seventy-five thousand five hundred dollars ($67,275,500), and the said committees have authorized and requested the said Speyer & Company to negotiate, on their behalf, with the commission appointed by the act of Congress of July 7, 1898, above referred to, the basis of a settlement, under and in pursuance of the said act, of the indebtedness to the United States growing out of the issue of bonds in aid of the construction of said Central Pacific and Western Pacific bond-aided railroads above mentioned:

Now, therefore, this agreement witnesseth, That in consideration of the premises the parties hereto have undertaken, covenanted, and agreed, and do hereby undertake, covenant, and agree, to and with each other as follows, that is to say:

That the indebtedness to the United States growing out of the issue of bonds in aid of the construction of the Central Pacific and Western Pacific bond-aided railroads shall be, and it hereby is, settled upon the terms and in the manner following, that is to say:

First.

The amount due the United States, being the full amount of the principal and interest, and all amounts necessary to reimburse the United States for moneys paid for interest or otherwise, is hereby found and agreed to be, on the day of the date of this agreement, the sum of fifty-eight million eight hundred and twelve thousand seven hundred and fifteen dollars and forty-eight cents ($58,812,715.48).

Second.

Within thirty days after this settlement shall become binding by the submission thereof in writing to the President and his 29 approval thereof, the Central Pacific Railroad Company shall deliver to the Treasurer of the United States its twenty promissory notes, bearing even date herewith, payable respectively on or before the expiration of each successive six month for ten years, counting from the date of this agreement, each note being for one-twentieth of the foregoing sum of $58,812,715.48, and bearing interest at the rate of three per cent per annum, payable semiannually.

Provided, however, that if default shall be made in any payment of either principal or interest of any of said notes or any part thereof, then all of said notes then outstanding, principal and interest, shall immediately become due and payable, notwithstanding any other stipulation of this agreement of settlement.

Each of the said notes shall be in the following form, viz:

$2,940,635.78.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., February 1, 1899

On or before ---------- the Central Pacific Railroad Company will pay to the order of the United States of America two million nine hundred and forty thousand six hundred and thirty-five 78/100 dollars, with interest meantime at the rate of three per cent per annum, payable semiannually, for value received.

This is one of a series of twenty notes given by said railroad company to the United States of America, each for the same principal sum, and bearing interest at the same rate but maturing at different dates—that is to say, on or before the expiration of each successive six months for ten years counting from the date hereof. If default shall be made in any payment of either principal or interest of any of said notes or any part thereof, then all of said notes then out-tanding, principal and interest, shall immediately become due and ayable.

Third.

The payment of the principal and interest of the said notes and f the indebtedness represented thereby, shall be secured by the pledge f $58,820,000, face value, first refunding mortgage four per cent old bonds issued by the Central Pacific Railroad Company, or its ccessor company having title to the aforesaid railroads, such bonds be part of an issue hereinafter described not exceeding $100,000,000 all, one-twentieth part of such pledged bonds to be held as security r each of said notes.

Fourth.

The said refunding bonds so to be pledged as security for the pay- nt of the said notes and interest shall be delivered to the Treasurer the United States within a reasonable time after this settlement comes binding, for obtaining the deposit of securities, the assent security owners, and the carrying out of such plan of reorgani- tion or readjustment as may be necessary to enable the Central cific Railroad Company or its successor company to issue said funding bonds and make the mortgage to secure the same a valid n upon the railroads aforesaid in accordance with the requirements rein expressed. A period of ten months from the delivery of said notes is hereby declared to be prima facie such reasonable time, but the Central Pacific Railroad Company agrees to use its best efforts to perfect such mortgage and deliver such bonds fore the expiration of that time; and, on the other hand, should h reorganization or readjustment be delayed by the pendency of icial proceedings for the purpose of enabling the company which o make the new mortgage to execute and deliver refunding bonds ured as provided herein or be delayed by adverse litigation, such iod is to be correspondingly extended; provided, however, that h period shall not be extended for any cause whatever for more n three years from the date of this agreement except with the ritten approval of the President of the United States.

f default shall be made in the delivery of the said bonds so to be ged within the period hereinabove prescribed for such delivery reof, including any extension which there may have been under foregoing provisions, then the whole amount of the said notes outstanding, principal and interest, shall immediately become and payable.

he said first refunding mortgage four per cent gold bonds re- d to in article third and this article of this agreement are to run for at least forty-five years and to bear interest at the rate of four per cent per annum, payable semiannually, and are to be payable, principal and interest, in gold coin of the United States, and are to be a part of an issue not exceeding one hundred million dollars face value secured by mortgage upon all the railroads, equipment, and terminals now owned by the Central Pacific Railroad Company. Such mortgage shall be the first lien upon the said railroads, equipment, and terminals, or shall be secured by deposit as collateral security therefor of at least ninety per cent of the now outstanding first-mortgage bonds of the Central Pacific Railroad Company of California and Western Pacific Railroad Company referred to in paragraphs first, second, and third in the recitals to this agreement describing the mortgages and liens on "bond-aided lines", and of at least seventy-five per cent of the aggregate of all now outstanding bonds of the Central Pacific Railroad Company and of all now outstanding bonds of the divisional companies by the consolidation whereof it was formed, including such first-mortgage bonds of the Central Pacific Railroad Company of California and Western Pacific Railroad Company. In making such computation as to the amount of deposited bonds, it is agreed that the $2,038,000 fifty-year five per cent bonds held as security for the outstanding land bonds, as above stated, shall not be counted as outstanding bonds. If any of the mortgages now securing any of the outstanding bonds aforesaid (other than the mortgage securing the land bonds, dated October 1, 1870, above referred to) shall be satisfied and discharged, such satisfaction and discharge thereof shall be deemed to be the equivalent of the deposit of all outstanding bonds now secured thereby as security for the said refunding bonds. The satisfaction and discharge of the said mortgage securing the land bonds, dated October 1, 1870, shall be deemed to be the equivalent of the deposit as security for said refunding bonds of all bonds now secured by that mortgage; provided, that the $2,038,000 fifty-year five per cent bonds held as security for such land bonds shall either be canceled or deposited as security for such refunding bonds.

31 The mortgage securing such refunding bonds shall be prior in lien to any lease of the railroads of said Central Pacific Railroad Company or their appurtenances or any portion thereof, and shall be in the form agreed upon by the parties hereto, and now identified by the signature of the Attorney General of the United States, unless the form thereof should be hereafter modified with the consent of the Attorney General of the United States and the party of the second part, or its successor company, and the party of the third part hereto.

Upon the satisfaction of record of any existing mortgage any securities or funds held in any sinking fund created or existing by or under any such mortgage shall be surrendered to the railroad company or its successor company.

The lands granted to the Central Pacific Railroad Company of California and to the California and Oregon Railroad Company, as above stated, are not to be covered by the mortgage securing such refunding bonds. Until the delivery to the Treasurer of the United States of the refunding bonds to be pledged to it under article third hereof, secured as aforesaid, all rights of the United States in respect to said granted lands shall remain in full force and effect, but shall not be enforced unless the Central Pacific Railroad Company, or its successor company, shall make default under this agreement; and upon such delivery of said refunding bonds, secured as aforesaid, all rights, interest, and claims of the United States in, to, and in respect to, such lands shall cease and determine.

From time to time, as the principal or any part of the principal of said notes shall be paid, the United States or other holders of said notes shall return to said railroad company or its successors an equal amount at their face value of the said refunding bonds with all unmatured coupons appertaining thereto; and, as interest shall be paid upon said notes, the United States or other holders of said notes shall detach and return to said railroad company or its successors the coupons appertaining to said bonds representing interest thereon to the date to which interest shall have been paid upon said notes, which coupons shall thereupon be forthwith canceled.

Fifth.

Until the refunding bonds hereinbefore provided for, secured as aforesaid, shall have been delivered to the Treasurer of the United States as security for the said notes, the lien in favor of the United States, reserved in the acts of Congress above mentioned to secure the repayment to the United States of the above-mentioned indebtedness, as such lien now exists, shall remain in full force and effect to the extent of such indebtedness as security for the notes representing such indebtedness; and nothing herein contained shall be deemed to prevent the United States from intervening for the protection of its said lien in any legal proceedings brought to foreclose any lien on said railroads or any part thereof or otherwise.

When the Central Pacific Railroad Company or its successor company shall have delivered to the Treasurer of the United States said refunding bonds, secured as aforesaid then the lien in favor of the United States above referred to, as then existing, shall be immediately vest in, and it is hereby, upon the happening of that event, transferred, to the trustee of the mortgage securing such refunding bonds as security for the entire issue of such bonds.

Sixth.

Until the notes to be given by the Central Pacific Railroad Company under article second of this agreement shall have been paid in full, principal and interest, all amounts due to the Central Pacific Railroad Company, or its successor company, from the United States subsequent to the date of this agreement in respect of services to the United States, upon the bond-aided lines from a point about five miles west of Ogden to Sacramento and from Sacramento to San Jose, above referred to, shall, as audited and allowed, be applied by the United States pro rata on account of the amounts remaining unpaid on such of said notes as shall not have been purchased by Messrs. Speyer & Co. hereunder, such application being first made to the payment of accrued interest thereon and thereafter on account of the principal thereof.

Seventh.

Messrs. Speyer & Company, within one month after the delivery to the United States of the notes referred to in article second hereof, will, against delivery to them of the four earliest maturing notes, endorsed to their order by the Secretary of the Treasury on behalf of the United States without recourse to it, pay to the United States the face value of such notes, viz: Eleven million seven hundred and sixty-two thousand five hundred and forty-three dollars and twelve cents ($11,762,543.12), with accrued interest thereon to date of payment. From and after the time when such payment shall have been made by Messrs. Speyer & Company they shall, until the delivery of such refunding bonds, be entitled to share pro rata with the United States in the lien and all proceeds of the lien in favor of the United States to secure the indebtedness above referred to. Upon delivery of the said refunding bonds, Messrs. Speyer & Company shall be entitled to receive such bonds to the amount, at their face value, of the principal of said notes then remaining unpaid which are then held by said Speyer & Company.

Within ten days after the maturity of each of said notes held by Messrs. Speyer & Company, the said Speyer & Company shall notify the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States whether such matured note and the matured interest on all the notes held by them have been paid to them or not.

Until the refunding bonds hereinbefore provided for secured as aforesaid shall have been delivered to the Treasurer of the United States as security for the said notes, all rights of the United States in or to or in respect of the said lien, and in or to or in respect of the lands granted as aforesaid, shall remain unaffected by the transfor of the said notes to Speyer and Company, and all right and title of the United States in the said lien, and in respect of the said bonds, shall be deemed to continue in the United States as fully as if the said notes remained in its possession and ownership, save only that the said right and title shall be deemed to be held by the United States for the pro rata benefit of itself and said Speyer and Company, and the United States may bring and maintain any and all actions, suits, and proceedings which it might have brought or maintained, and may do any and all acts and things which it might have done had all the said notes remained in its possession and ownership, provided that all recoveries, benefits, and advantages derived or obtained through or by means of such actions, suits, proceedings, and acts for the enforcement of such lien and rights, shall inure to the pro rata benefit of the United States and said Speyer and Company. In case of any default in payment of the principal or interest of any of said notes, the United States will thereupon proceed for the enforcement of the said lien.

In witness whereof this agreement has been executed on behalf of the United States of America by Honorable Lyman J. Gage, Secretary of the Treasury, Honorable Cornelius N. Bliss, Secretary of the Interior, and Honorable John W. Griggs, Attorney General, appointed by the act of Congress a commission as hereabove stated; by the Central Pacific Railroad Company by its president and under its corporate seal attested by its secretary; and by Messrs. Speyer & Company under their hands the day and year first above written. Executed in triplicate.

34 EXHIBIT B.

Central Pacific Railroad Company plan of readjustment.

Conditions of participation.

Participation under this plan of readjustment in any respect whatsoever is dependent upon the deposit of securities with Speyer & Co., of New York, the depositary named in the readjustment agreement, either at their office, No. 30 Broad Street, in the city of New York, or at the offices of Speyer Brothers, London; Laz. Speyer Ellissen, Frankfort o/Main; Teixeira de Mattos Brothers, Amsterdam, and the Deutsche Bank, Berlin, acting as agents for the depositary under this plan. The plan will embrace only securities so deposited within such time as may be fixed by notice. No securities will be received on deposit unless in negotiable form, and bonds must carry all coupons maturing after February 1, 1899. The word securities whenever used in this plan shall include stocks as well as bonds and coupons.

Pursuant to the offer of the syndicate hereinafter mentioned, holders of the common stock of the Central Pacific Railroad Company may purchase from the syndicate the new common stock, or become entitled to receive the other benefits accruing to depositors of the present common stock under the plan, by depositing their old stock with Messrs. Speyer & Co. or the firms acting as their agents in Europe for that purpose on the following terms: As consideration for shares of the new company, or such other securities and benefits as may be provided in lieu thereof, the depositors of common stock must pay $2.00 per share deposited, and will thereupon be entitled, on the completion of the readjustment, to receive $100 in new common stock or such other securities and benefits as may be provided in lieu thereof.

The payments by depositors of such common stock must be made for account of the syndicate at the offices of Speyer & Co., in New York, or the firms acting as their agents in Europe for that purpose, when and as called for by advertisement published at least twice a week for two successive weeks in at least two of the daily newspapers of general circulation published in the cities of New York, London, Frankfort o/Main, Amsterdam, and Berlin, respectively. All payments must be receipted for by or on behalf of the depositary on the certificates of deposit. Failure to make such payment when and as payable will subject the deposited stock and all rights therein, or in respect thereof, to forfeiture to the syndicate as provided in the readjustment agreement.

The depositary will issue proper receipts or certificates of deposit for all securities deposited. Deposited securities will be placed with the Central Trust Company of New York, or its agents in Europe, as custodian.

The following bonds and stock may be deposited on the terms hereinafter provided:

Central Pacific Railroad Company of California first mortgage bonds, series A, B, C, D, E, F, G, H, and I.

Western Pacific Railroad Company first mortgage bonds, series A and B.

California and Oregon Railroad Company and Central Pacific Railroad Company, successor, first mortgage bonds, series A and B.

Central Pacific Railroad Company land bonds.

Central Pacific Railroad Company fifty-year six per cent bonds.

Central Pacific Railroad Company fifty-year five per cent bonds.

Central Pacific Railroad Company common stock.

New railroad company.

Unless the readjustment managers shall decide to proceed without foreclosure or sale, the various properties will be sold under foreclosure of one or more of the existing mortgages, or otherwise dealt with, and a successor company or companies will be organized. The term "new company", as hereinafter used, is intended to mean either the existing company or the new proprietary company or companies which may be organized.

Deposited securities.

The securities deposited hereunder will be held by the depositary subject to the order and control of the readjustment managers as provided in the readjustment agreement.

All securities deposited under the plan are to be kept alive so long as deemed necessary by the readjustment managers for the purposes of readjustment or the protection of the new company or its security holders.

Interest from the respective due dates of the last matured coupons prior to February 1, 1899, at the same rates, will be paid in cash, upon the completion of the readjustment, on all deposited bonds up to August 1, 1899.

The readjustment managers may collect from the railroad company any interest on deposited bonds, and at their option may pay over the amounts so collected, or any part thereof, to the holders of the certificates of deposit for such bonds. In case such payments are made, the certificates of deposit will be stamped accordingly.

The syndicate has agreed to purchase for cash, when and so soon as the plan is declared operative, all of the following existing bonds at the prices stated:

At the price of par and accrued interest in New York:
Central Pacific Railroad Company, of California, first mortgage bonds, series A, B, C, D, E, F, G, H, and I	$25,881,000

Holders of above bonds who prefer to accept cash rather than to take the new securities provided in the plan must signify their election to take cash when depositing their securities, within such time as may be fixed by notice, by having their certificates of deposit stamped accordingly by the depositary or any of the firms acting as their agents in Europe, above mentioned, and will thereupon be entitled to receive the said cash payment therefor at the time that the plan is declared operative, and upon surrender of the certificates of deposit so stamped.

Settlement with United States Government.

The company has entered into an agreement, dated February 1, 1899, with the United States Government and with Messrs. Speyer & Co. which provides in substance as follows:

The balance of the indebtedness due to the United States as of February 1, 1899, amounted, principal and interest, to $58,812,715.48. The agreement provides for the payment by the railroad company or its successor of the whole of this indebtedness within ten years in equal semi-annual installments, with interest meanwhile at the rate of three per cent per annum, payable semi-annually. These payments are to be evidenced by twenty notes of the railroad company, falling due, one every six months beginning August 1, 1899, which are to be delivered within thirty days after said agreement of settlement becomes effective, and are to be secured by an equal amount at face value of the new first refunding mortgage four per cent gold bonds hereinafter described, which bonds are to be delivered to

United States, as provided in said agreement, as soon as practicable after delivery of said notes. In case of default in payment of interest or principal of any of said notes, or of failure to deliver the first refunding mortgage four per cent gold bonds within the time limited in said agreement of settlement, the whole amount of said notes then outstanding will become immediately due and payable. Messrs. Speyer & Co. have agreed to purchase the $11,762,543.12 of said notes earliest maturing, so that the amount of said first refunding mortgage four per cent gold bonds to be retained as collateral by the United States will be $47,056,000, par value, thereof.

New stocks and bonds.

The new company is to authorize the following securities:

First.

$100,000,000 first refunding mortgage four per cent gold bonds, to run not less than forty-five years.

These bonds will bear interest from August 1, 1899, free of taxes, and are to be secured by a mortgage upon all the railroads, terminals, and equipment (see Table A, page 10) now owned by the Central Pacific Railroad Company, covering about 1,349 miles of first track and about 365 miles of second track and sidings, or shall be secured by deposit as collateral security therefor of at least ninety per cent of the present outstanding first mortgage bonds of the Central Pacific Railroad Company of California, and the Western Pacific Railroad Company above mentioned, and of at least seventy-five per cent of the aggregate of all the now outstanding bonds of the Central Pacific Railroad Company and of all now outstanding bonds of the divisional companies by the consolidation whereof it was formed, including such first mortgage bonds of the Central Pacific Railroad Company of California and Western Pacific Railroad Company. In computing the amount of deposited bonds, the $2,038,000 fifty-year six per cent bonds held as security for the outstanding land bonds shall not be counted as outstanding bonds. If any of the mortgages now securing any of the outstanding bonds aforesaid (other than the first mortgage securing the land bonds dated October 1, 1870, above referred to) shall be satisfied and discharged, such satisfaction and discharge thereof shall be deemed to be the equivalent of the deposit, as security for the said refunding bonds, of all outstanding bonds now secured by the mortgage so satisfied and discharged. The satisfaction and discharge of the said mortgage securing the land bonds, dated October 1, 1870, shall be deemed to be the equivalent of the deposit as security for said refunding bonds of all bonds now secured by that mortgage, provided that the $2,038,000 fifty-year five per cent bonds held as security for such land bonds shall either be canceled or deposited as security for such refunding bonds.

$47,056,000 of these bonds will be retained by the United States Government as collateral security for the $47,050,172.48 of the 3 per cent notes of the Central Pacific Railroad Company above mentioned remaining in its possession. As these notes are paid, an equivalent amount of these bonds will be returned to the railroad company, and the mortgage will provide that they may then be reissued at the same or a lower rate of interest if the railroad company shall deem it expedient. In no event is the total amount of bonds outstanding at any one time under this mortgage to exceed $100,000,000, and a sufficient amount of bonds will be reserved to take up underlying bonds as provided in this plan, page 7.

The first refunding mortgage bonds are to be applied as follows:

To be retained by the United States Government as collateral for three per cent notes	$47,056,000
In partial exchange for existing bonds (see page 7)	51,253,500
Purchased by syndicate to provide cash requirements of plan (see page 8)	1,690,500
	$100,000,000

38 Second.

$25,000,000 three and one-half per cent mortgage gold bonds, to run thirty years.

These bonds will bear interest from August 1, 1899, free of taxes, and are to be secured by a mortgage upon all the railroads and properties covered by the first refunding mortgage above mentioned (subject, however, to the prior lien of such first refunding mortgage), and also by deposit with the trustee under such mortgage, as acquired, of all securities and moneys now or hereafter held in any sinking fund created or existing by or under any now existing mortgage of the present Central Pacific Railroad Company or any divisional railroad company by the consolidation whereof it was formed (see Table B, page 11); and to be also secured by a trust deed upon all the lands now covered by the mortgage, securing the land bonds of the present Central Pacific Railroad Company, dated October 1, 1870 (except in so far as the same shall be released from the lien of said last-mentioned mortgage in accordance with its provisions before such mortgage is satisfied and discharged); and also upon all notes given in payment for lands covered by such mortgage securing said land bonds which shall be outstanding at the time when such last-mentioned mortgage is satisfied and discharged (see Table C, page 12). All income derived from said sinking fund securities from said lands is to be applied primarily to the payment of the current interest on said three and one-half per cent mortgage gold bonds, and after such current interest shall have been paid or provided for, to the payment of any fixed charges of the railroad company which may be secured by lien, prior to the lien of said three and one-half per cent mortgage, upon its properties or any of them (including interest on the said three per cent notes in favor of the United States above mentioned); but the railroad company, at its discretion, so long as no default exists in respect to principal or interest on said three and one-half per cent mortgage gold bonds, may at any time, or from time to time, sell such securities or lands and apply the proceeds thereof, or any moneys held as security for such three and one-half per cent gold bonds (other than the income above referred to), to the purchase and cancellation of said three and one-half per cent mortgage gold bonds while the same shall be purchasable at not above par and accrued interest; otherwise, to the purchase and cancellation, at the discretion of the railroad company, either of the three and one-half per cent mortgage gold bonds or of the first refunding mortgage four per cent gold bonds or of bonds secured by prior liens upon its properties. All proceeds of or collections from notes given in payment for lands covered by the mortgage securing the land bonds of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, dated October 1, 1870, which may remain unpaid at the time of the satisfaction or discharge of said mortgage securing said land bonds, are to be applied in the same manner as above provided in respect to the proceeds of sinking-fund securities and lands. Suitable provision will be made that no other new mortgage (except to refund such first refunding mortgage four per cent gold bonds or said three and one-half per cent mortgage gold bonds) is to be made upon the properties covered by the mortgage securing said first refunding mortgage four per cent gold bonds, or said three and one-half per cent mortgage gold bonds, so long as any of such bonds of either class or any of the four per cent gold bonds of the Southern Pacific Company, hereinafter referred to, are outstanding; and that no other new mortgage is to be made by the railroad company upon said properties except with the assent of the holders of seventy-five per cent of the preferred stock and a majority of the common stock at the time outstanding.

The three and one-half per cent mortgage gold bonds are to be applied as follows:

In partial exchange for existing bonds (see page 7)	$13,695,000
Purchased by syndicate to provide cash requirements of plan (see page 8)	11,305,000
	$25,000,000

$20,000,000 four per cent cumulative preferred stock.

This stock will be entitled to cumulative dividends up to 4 per cent per annum, gold, payable semiannually, beginning from August 1, 1899, before payment of any dividend on the common stock. Thereafter dividends up to 4 per cent per annum to be paid on the common stock and the balance of dividends to be paid pro rata upon preferred and common stock. The preferred stock will be preferred as to capital towards the common stock on any liquidation or dissolution of the company.

Suitable provision is to be made that no additional mortgage shall be put upon the property to be acquired by the new company hereunder and that no increase in the amount of the preferred stock authorized under this plan shall be made except in each instance after obtaining the consent of the holders of 75 per cent of the whole amount of preferred stock and a majority of the whole amount of common stock at the time outstanding.

This preferred stock will be applied as follows:

To Southern Pacific Company in consideration of the issue of an equal amount at par value of the Southern Pacific Company's four per cent gold bonds hereinafter mentioned, such bonds, after providing for requirements of the readjustment, to be applied only to betterments and additions to the railroad company's properties	$12,000,000
To Southern Pacific Company in consideration of the issue of an equal amount at par value of its said four per cent gold bonds, to be used to provide additional funds, if required, for the payment of said three per cent notes to the United States, and thereafter to be applied only for betterments and additions to the railroad company's properties	3,000,000
Reserved to be issued from time to time to an equal amount at par value in consideration of the issue of $5,000,000 of said Southern Pacific Company's four per cent gold bonds for betterments and additions to the railroad company's properties (such bonds to be issued at the rate of not exceeding $200,000 par value thereof per annum)	5,000,000

40 Fourth.

$67,275,500 common stock.

This stock will be applied as follows:

Pursuant to an agreement made between the Central Pacific R.R. Co., London shareholders' committee, the readjustment managers the Southern Pacific Company, that company has offered to pur-re for share, and also twenty-five per cent of the par value of ir stock in the new four per cent gold bonds of the Southern cific Company, to be secured by a collateral trust mortgage as e Southern Pacific Company as the purchase price thereof.

Copies of the said agreement with the Southern Pacific Company ay be obtained at the office of the depositary or any of the managers.

Agreement and guarantees of the Southern Pacific Company.

Under the said agreement the Southern Pacific Company agrees at it will, at the time and in the manner therein provided, issue its ur per cent gold bonds (aggregating $36,819,000 face value) as llows:

Such four per cent gold bonds shall bear interest at the rate of ur per cent per annum from August 1, 1899, free of taxes, and ve fifty years to run (but subject to redemption at any time, at the option of the Southern Pacific Company, at par and ac-41 crued interest, upon six months' notice by publication). Such bonds shall be issued only to the following amounts:

In part payment of the purchase price under the plan of the common stock of the railroad company, being one-fourth of the par value thereof	$16,819,60
In consideration of the issue of the new preferred stock of the railroad company as above stated	15,000,00
Reserve to be issued only for betterments or additions to the railroad company's properties at the rate of not exceeding $200,000 par value thereof per annum, against the issue of an equal amount at par value of the new preferred stock	5,000,00
	$36,819,60

The said four per cent gold bonds are to be secured by a collateral trust mortgage covering the $12,000,000 of new preferred stock presently issued, and the additional $8,000,000 of such preferred stock as and when the same shall be issued and delivered; and, also, all the common stock of the railroad company, purchased by the Southern Pacific Company. Said collateral trust mortgage shall contain suitable provisions for the protection of the holders of bonds secured thereby, and shall authorize the trustee under said mortgage to sell the stocks of the railroad company covered thereby in case of six months' default in payment of the principal or interest of said four per cent bonds of the Southern Pacific Company. Suitable provisions will also be made that so long as any of said four per cent gold bonds of the Southern Pacific Company remain outstanding neither the preferred nor common stock of the railroad company shall be increased beyond the amounts hereinbefore mentioned respectively, unless arrangements have been made for depositing under said collateral trust mortgage the same proportionate part of such increase of each class of stock as the stock of such class theretofore covered by such mortgage was of the whole outstanding stock of such class as the same existed before such increase; and also that the said railroad company shall not be merged or consolidated with any other railroad company without the consent of the holders of the majority in amount of such four per cent gold bonds of the Southern Pacific Company then outstanding.

The Southern Pacific Company further agrees that upon delivery to it of said $12,000,000 of new preferred stock, and at least 377,194 shares of the common stock of the railroad company, it will simultaneously, by appropriate written instruments endorsed thereon, guarantee unconditionally the payment of the principal and interest, as they shall severally mature, of the first refunding mortgage four per cent gold bonds at the rate of four per cent per annum, and of the three and one-half per cent mortgage gold bonds at the rate of three and one-half per cent per annum, payable in gold, free of taxes, beginning from August 1, 1899.

Application of new securities.

It is contemplated that, as a consideration for the property and securities to be conveyed and delivered to the new company, or which it shall acquire pursuant to the plan, it shall deliver the new bonds and stock, excepting such final amounts as shall be reserved for the future use of the new company and such amounts as are deliverable directly to the United States Government as hereinbefore provided. The requisite deliveries of the new securities to depositors and subscribers under the plan will thus be provided for.

The following details show the disposition to be made under the plan of the securities of the new company:

Syndicate.

A syndicate has been formed by Messrs. Speyer & Co., of Ne York, Messrs. Speyer Brothers, of London, Mr. Laz. Speyer Ellisse of Frankfort o/M., Messrs. Teixeira de Mattos Brothers, of Amste dam, and the Deutsche Bank, of Berlin, which will be conducted b the first named firm as syndicate managers, and which agrees:

(1) To purchase $11,762,543.12 of the Central Pacific Railroa Company's 3% notes to be given in settlement of claim of Unite States as above stated.

(2) To purchase $67,275,500 of the new common stock, and to offe the same for sale to depositing holders of the present common stoc of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, as stated on page 1.

(3) To purchase $1,690,500 of the first refunding mortgage fo per cent gold bonds, $11,305,000 of the three and one-half per ce mortgage gold bonds, and $12,000,000 of the new Southern Paci four per cent gold bonds.

(4) To buy the outstanding bonds of holders who assent to t plan, and while depositing their securities prefer to take cash rath than the new securities, as stated on page 2.

(5) To make advances and perform other obligations essential f the purposes of the plan.

Position of the new company.

The annual fixed charges after readjustment and after the payment of all the notes given to the United States Government as proposed, it is estimated, will be not over	$4,875,000.

44 The average net earnings, after payment of taxes, rentals, and all other expenses, for the 10½ years ending June 30, 1898, were, including miscellaneous income (see Table D, page 13) $4,893,259.17

...nd present annual income from sinking fund securities (as reported by the company, see Table B, page 11)	$689,680.00
		$5,582,989.17

It thus appears that the fixed charges of the new company on completion of the readjustment will be well within the past net income of the property.

The above statement of fixed charges does not take into account the saving in annual interest during the ten years ending August 1, 1909, during which time the company will only have to pay three per cent interest on the balance of the notes given for its debt to the United States Government and remaining unpaid from time to time, while the first refunding mortgage bonds deposited as security therefor carry interest at four per cent.

It is estimated that under the readjustment upwards of $4,500,000 cash will be provided, which will be immediately available for improvements on the properties of the railroad company.

EXHIBIT C.

Senate Document No. 227, 56th Congress, 2d Session.

Interest upon certain allowed claims.

March 2, 1901.—Ordered to be printed.

Mr. Stewart presented the following letter, signed L. J. Gage, Secretary, relating to the question of interest upon certain allowed claims for transportation services rendered to the Government over the nonbonded lines of the Central Pacific Railroad Company and Southern Pacific Company, and transmitting a statement as to the dates when the claims were settled and allowed by the accounting officers, and also as to such claims as were embraced in the judgments rendered in favor of the companies.

MAY 12, 1900.

SIR: The department is in receipt of your communication of the 9th ultimo, inclosing copy of an amendment offered to the sundry civil bill now pending before your committee, relating to the que tion of interest upon certain allowed claims for transportation se vices rendered to the Government over the nonbonded lines of th Central Pacific Railroad Company and Southern Pacific Compan The amendment proposed provides for interest at the rate of 4 p cent per annum upon amounts which became due from the Unite States to the Central Pacific Railroad Company and the Southe Pacific Company for transportation services rendered to the Gover ment over the lines of these companies for which no subsidy bon were issued by the United States in aid of their construction.

Replying to your request to be furnished with a statement in much detail as practicable as to the dates when these claims were se tled and allowed by the accounting officers, and also as to such clai as were embraced in the judgments rendered in favor of the co panies, I have the honor to state that under the Pacific railroad ac of 1862 and 1864 one-half of the earnings from Government tra portation over the bond-aided roads was required to be applied the payment of the principal and interest of the subsidy bonds issu by the Government in aid of their construction, and by the act May 7, 1878, commonly known as the Thurman Act, the other ha of Government transportation earnings over the bond-aided lines w to be withheld and applied to the sinking fund created by said a Neither of these acts related to the transportation earnings over t nonbonded lines, which, under certain decisions of the Supre Court, were required to be paid in cash.

The services for which payment was withheld were rendered most part during the years 1883 to 1896, inclusive. Under vario rulings of the accounting officers, payments for these services bei withheld, suit was commenced by the Central Pacific Railroad Co pany in the Court of Claims in November, 1885, for recovery amounts then due and for further amounts accruing for sim 49 lar services. This case was decided in favor of the compa and, on appeal by the Government, was affirmed by t Supreme Court.

After the spring of 1885 the transportation services for the Gover ment over the nonaided lines of the Central Pacific Railroad C pany were rendered by the Southern Pacific Company as lessee these lines, and as compensation for such services was also withhe suit was commenced by the Southern Pacific Company in the Co of Claims therefor, and judgment was rendered in favor of company in January, 1893, for $1,824,336.44. The question as withholding payment having already been decided by the Supre Court, as above stated, no appeal was taken by the Government.

The Second Comptroller, in a decision rendered in August, 1885, says:

"With reference to the order of the late Secretary of the Treasury of January 12, 1884 (directing that all balances ascertained by the accounting officers to be due for these services should be certified without suggestion as to the mode of payment, but should be held in abeyance for the future disposition of Congress), it is difficult to see how it can longer be upheld. It was evidently intended only to be temporary in its operation and to anticipate that some explanatory or remedial legislation by Congress would be had; but two sessions have since passed, and that body had manifested no disposition to further legislate upon the subject. Under this order an approximate estimate shows that over $900,000 are now held in suspenso, having been neither paid to the company or credited to them under the Thurman Act. It is clear that the Government can not properly refuse to act at all in the matter. It should either pay this money over to the company or else it should be covered into the Treasury and invested and applied, as required by the act of 1878."

The following is a summary of the amounts of interest on the various allowed claims computed at 4 per cent:

1. Interest on claims embraced in judgments of the Court of Claims for the periods from the respective dates of rendition of such judgments to the respective dates of payment thereof	$640,041.89
2. Balance of interest, exclusive of amount stated in foregoing, on all claims from the respective dates of certifications by the accounting officers to the respective dates of payment thereof	856,048.52
Total amount of interest	1,496,090.41

Credit for these claims and judgments amounting to $1,162,939.48 was allowed in settlement agreement entered into with the company by the United States February 1, 1899, but in the absence of express authority of law the amounts of interest as herein stated were not allowed.

I inclose herewith a statement showing somewhat in detail the amounts of interest on claims embraced in each judgment and the interest on allowed claims separately. These judgments and claims are all reported in Senate Document No. 34, Fifty-fourth Congress, second session, and Senate Document No. 36, Fifty-fourth Congress, first session.

I have also had prepared a statement showing by date, number, and amount each allowed claim, and the date, number, and amount of each judgment, with the interest computed at 4 per cent thereon from the respective dates of settlement by the accounting officers to the dates of payment thereof, which I will take pleasure in forwarding to the committee should it so desire.

Respectfully,

L. J. GAGE,
Secretary.

Hon. W. B. ALLISON,
Chairman Committee on Appropriations,
United States Senate.

District Court of the United States for the District of Utah.

United States of America, petitioner, vs. Southern Pacific Company, Central Pacific Railway Company, Union Trust Company of New York, William Sproule, Julius Kruttschnitt, Robert Goelet, Cornelius H. Bliss, Walter P. Bliss, Henry W. de Forest, Horace Harding, Charles W. Harkness, Henry E. Huntington, James N. Jarvie, Lemuel F. Loree, Lewis J. Spence, Eric P. Swenson, James N. Wallace, and Ogden Mills, defendants.	In Equity. No. 420.

Answer of defendant Union Trust Company of New York to the petition of the United States of America herein.

This defendant denies that it is restraining, or attempting to monopolize, or is monopolizing, trade or commerce in respect of the transportation of persons or property between the states mentioned in the petition, or any of them, in violation of the act of Congress approved July 2, 1890, entitled "An act to protect trade and commerce against unlawful restraints and monopolies." This defendant denies that it is violating the provisions of the act of Congress approved July 1, 1862, and the amendments and supplements thereto, described in said petition as the "Pacific railroad acts."

So far as the allegations of the petition hereinabove denied as to relate to the other defendants, the defendant Union Trust Company of New York is without knowledge.

I.

This defendant admits that Southern Pacific Company is a Kentucky corporation with offices in New York City.

This defendant admits that Central Pacific Railway Company is a California corporation.

This defendant admits that Union Trust Company of New York is a New York corporation with its principal offices in New York City, and that it, as trustee of a certain mortgage made to it by the Southern Pacific Company and dated August 1st, 1899, holds certain of the capital stock of the Central Pacific Railway as hereinafter set forth; but it denies that it holds said capital stock as trustee for the Southern Pacific Company, and alleges that it holds the said stock as the trustee for, and for the protection of, the owners of the bonds secured by the aforesaid mortgage.

3 Except as to the allegations hereinabove specifically admitted or denied this defendant is without knowledge as to the allegations contained in the first article of the petition.

II.

This defendant admits that Southern Pacific Company owns and operates the "Sunset Route", a joint rail-and-water service which moves traffic between New York City and Pacific coast terminals in California and Oregon.

This defendant admits that on August 1, 1899, the Southern Pacific Company executed an instrument known as the "Southern Pacific Company's Four Per Cent Mortgage (Central Pacific stock collateral)" (not "Central Pacific Company's stock collateral") to secure $36,819,000 (not $36,818,500) of 4% bonds secured by pledge with the Union Trust Company of New York of practically the entire stock of the Central Pacific Railway Company—672,742 shares of the common stock of the Central Pacific Railway Company of the par value of $67,274,200 (not $67,275,000), and 174,000 shares of the preferred stock of the Central Pacific Railway Company of the par value of $17,400,000, which stock is now held by this defendant as collateral security under said mortgage.

Except as to the allegations hereinabove specifically admitted or denied this defendant is without knowledge as to the allegations contained in the second article of the petition.

III.

4 This defendant is without knowledge as to the allegation contained in the third article of the petition that it was intended that the road or roads therein referred to although built by different companies should be run as one connected, continuous through line.

IV.

This defendant is without knowledge as to the allegations contained in the fourth article of the petition.

V.

This defendant admits that the Southern Pacific Company, prior to August 1, 1899, became the owner of all or nearly all of the stock of the Central Pacific Railway Company, which stock is now deposited with this defendant as collateral security as set forth in the second article of this answer.

Except as hereinabove specifically admitted this defendant is without knowledge as to the allegations contained in the fifth article of the petition.

VI.

This defendant is without knowledge as to the allegations contained in the sixth article of the petition.

VII.

Further answering the petition herein the defendant Union Trust Company of New York alleges that on August 1st, 1899, a certain mortgage or deed of trust was made by and between the defendant Southern Pacific Company and the defendant Union Trust Company of New York by the terms of which the defendant Southern Pacific Company agreed to pledge and deposit with the defendant Union Trust Company of New York certificates of the preferred stock of the Central Pacific Railway Company to the amount at its face value of $12,000,000, and certificates of the common stock of said company to the amount at its face value of $67,274,200, the said certificates to be assigned in blank with irrevocable powers to transfer the same; and it was further provided and agreed that the certificates so pledged and deposited should be held by the defendant Union Trust Company of New York upon the terms and conditions expressed in said instrument, upon trust for the benefit of the persons who should become holders of the bonds to be issued under said mortgage, to secure to such holders the punctual payment of the said bonds and the interest thereon as it should become due; and it was further provided and agreed that additional preferred stock of said Central Pacific Railway Company, not exceeding in the aggregate $8,000,000, should be deposited in a similar manner, and upon the same terms, conditions, and trusts with the defendant Union Trust Company of New York when delivered to the said Southern Pacific Company.

That pursuant to the terms of said instrument the said Southern Pacific Company has deposited with the defendant Union Trust Company of New York, as trustee as aforesaid, certificates of preferred stock to the amount at its face value of $17,400,000, and certificates of common stock to the amount at its face value of $67,274,200 of the said Central Pacific Railway Company, the said certificates being endorsed in blank with irrevocable power to transfer the same; and that bonds secured by the said mortgage have been issued to the amount of $34,218,500. This defendant alleges, upon information and belief, that the said bonds were issued for value and are now held by many investors whose names are to it unknown, and that the said bonds do not become due until August 1st, 1949.

Wherefore the defendant Union Trust Company of New York prays that the petition herein may be dismissed with costs to this defendant, or that if the court shall grant to the petitioner any relief to which it shall seem to the court that said petitioner is entitled, that then and in that event this court will make a decree which will not in any way affect the lien of the mortgage to this defendant or in any way depreciate the value of the shares of stock of the Central Pacific Railway Company deposited with it as collateral to said mortgage.

The above-entitled cause being at issue on petition and answers filed,

On motion of counsel for petitioner, and with the consent of counsel for the defendants,

It is ordered that Frank R. Hanna, Esq., of New York, N. Y., be and he is hereby designated and appointed special examiner herein, to fix and hold hearings for the taking of such evidence as either party may desire to adduce before him, whether within or without the district of Utah, and he is hereby empowered to cause to be summoned for such hearings all witnesses and to administer to each the proper oath as such, and it shall be his duty to take and report to this court all evidence thus adduced and offered by the petitioner and the defendants, respectively, together with such objections as may be offered thereto. He shall at once give notice by mail to counsel for the respective parties of his appointment herein attaching a copy of this order.

The date of the commencement of taking testimony herein is hereby fixed at July 20th, 1914, at 11 o'clock a. m. The examiner shall, as soon as may be, give reasonable notice of all subsequent hearings, either personally or by mail, telegraph, or by an order entered at any regular hearing, to at least one counsel for the petitioner, and to one counsel for each of the defendants which have filed separate answers, viz, for the petitioner, James W. Also the respective parties may from time to time agree as to the time and place of taking testimony. The examiner shall report to this court the testimony as completed and all proceedings had before him, by filing with the clerk of this court a duly certified typewritten or printed copy thereof.

On representation of counsel for the parties hereto, that the character and volume of testimony to be taken in this case, and the residence of the witnesses in different parts of the country, beyond the reach of subpœna, make it impossible to complete the taking of testimony within the time limits prescribed by the rules of court, it is Further ordered that extensions of time in which parties may take testimony be and they are hereby granted and fixed, viz: The petitioner shall have until February 1st, 1915, in which to complete taking its opening testimony, the right, however, being reserved to petitioner to apply for further extensions of time therefor; defendants shall have until August 10th, 1915, in which to complete taking their testimony in chief, with right reserved to apply for further extensions of time so to do; the fixing of the period of time for taking rebuttal testimony being reserved until the completion of the testimony in chief by both sides. Provided, That if the petitioner shall finish taking its opening testimony before the date herein fixed, then it shall give written notice thereof to defendants, and the time for taking defendants' testimony shall begin twenty days from receipt of such notice and end six months thereafter, and if defendants shall complete taking their testimony before the time so fixed they shall so notify petitioner, and the time for taking rebuttal testimony shall then be fixed by the court. The right is reserved to each party hereto to apply to the court for further extensions of time for the taking of testimony.

The said examiner, if at any time unable, for any reason, to perform the services required of him hereunder, may designate some suitable, competent person, to act in his place and stead, with full powers as herein stated, subject, however, to the approval of the counsel for the petitioner and for the defendants.

4 Witnesses shall not be required to sign their testimony unless special request so to do is made to the examiner by counsel for either side within 24 hours from the time the witness was excused.

By agreement of counsel the hours for the taking of testimony on any given date shall rest in the discretion of the examiner.

The compensation of the examiner for services herein contemplated is fixed as follows:

For acting as examiner and for reporting, and making the transcript of testimony, proceedings, and exhibits in this case he shall be allowed and paid at the rate of twelve and one-half cents (12½ cts.) per page of 22 lines for the original transcript and for each of 4 additional copies neostyle, of which copies he shall deliver daily the morning after the evidence is taken two to each the petitioner and the defendants herein, to be paid for by them, respectively. For additional copies he shall receive 5c. per page of 22 lines. The party at whose instance the witness is called shall pay for the original transcript. The examiner shall also be paid by the party at whose instance the testimony is taken, when away from New York upon duties connected with this case, his actual and necessary expenses of lodging and subsistence not to exceed $5.00 per day, his actual and necessary expenses of transportation also $5.00 per day when so absent from New York and no testimony is taken.

ROOM 720, CUSTOM HOUSE,
New York City, Sept. 21, 1914.

The above-entitled cause came on for hearing before Special Examiner Frank R. Hanna, Esq., at eleven o'clock a. m.

APPEARANCES.

On behalf of the United States: James W. Orr, Esq., Edward P McClennen, Esq., and Edward E. Gann, Esq., special assistants t the Attorney General.

2 On behalf of the defendants: W. F. Herrin, Esq., J. P
Blair, Esq., and P. F. Dunne, Esq., for the Southern Pacif Company, the Central Pacific Railway Company, and the individua defendants named in the petition; Perry D. Trafford, Esq., for th Union Trust Company of New York.

3 The EXAMINER. We will proceed with the hearing, gentl men.

Mr. BLAIR. Before any evidence is offered we desire to interpo the following objection:

The Southern Pacific Company, the Central Pacific Railway Com pany, and the individual defendants, having made the pleas i bar and estoppel set forth in paragraphs IX and X of their answ herein, and desiring and intending to insist upon said pleas, an desiring and intending further to rely upon the said record, pr ceedings, and decree referred to in paragraph X of the answer an the argument of counsel as conclusive proof of the existence, prio to the merger in 1901 between the Union Pacific Company and th Southern Pacific Company, of competition between the two com panies and the want of power in the Southern Pacific Company t prevent such competition, now formally object to any evidence i support of the issues covered by said pleas or the further matte in respect to which the said prior proceedings and record a claimed to be conclusive, and state that any cross-examination the may make is made without waiver, but with full reservation of a their said pleas and contentions. And to save useless repetitio they ask that this objection and reservation be considered as ma to all the testimony about to be taken in this cause, and they gi notice that said objection and reservation are so made.

4 Mr. MCCLENNEN. The petitioner offers as Exhibit No.
this map of the United States. I take it that defendants wi not object or require any formal proof of this.

Mr. BLAIR. Not so far as it is a map of the United States; b so far as it may show the location and situation of the lines of ra road, we have not seen it and do not know whether it is correct not.

(The map referred to was marked by the examiner "Petitioner Exhibit No. 1, September 21, 1914", and will be found in the volum of petitioner's exhibits.)

Mr. McCLENNEN. The petitioner offers as Exhibit No. 2, 12th U. S. Statutes at Large, page 489, chapter 120, the act of July 1, 1862, which reads as follows. I take it that I need not read it. It may simply be copied into the record.

Mr. BLAIR. We should be willing to make the agreement that all the acts of Congress relating to the Union Pacific Railroad Company may be considered in evidence without being formally offered.

Mr. McCLENNEN. I think it is going to be convenient to have them right in the record, anyway.

Mr. BLAIR. Are you going to have them copied right into the record?

Mr. McCLENNEN. Yes; these Pacific railroad acts. I think it will be convenient to have them copied in, so we can refer to the copies in the record.

Mr. BLAIR. Mr. McClennen, I do not want to make a captious objection, but those acts need not be offered in evidence. They are matters of which we take notice of by the courts, and I do not think we should be put to the expense, or that anybody should be put to the expense, of having the acts of Congress copied in the transcript of the testimony.

Mr. McCLENNEN. It is not going to be a very serious expense.

Mr. BLAIR. They are very long acts.

Mr. McCLENNEN. There will be constant reference to them, and it will be very convenient to have them all together in the record.

Mr. HERRIN. I never heard of the introduction in evidence of a public act of Congress. It is a matter which may be referred to at any time.

Mr. McCLENNEN. We want it more for the convenience of having the acts all together for easy reference, without having to turn to the volumes of the statutes every time we refer to the acts.

(The act referred to was thereupon marked "Petitioner's Exhibit No. 2, September 21, 1914", and will be found in the volume of petitioner's exhibits.)

Mr. McCLENNEN. The petitioner offers as petitioner's Exhibit No. 3, 13th Statutes at Large, page 356, chapter 216, the act of July 2, 1864.

Mr. BLAIR. The same objection to the incorporation of that in the record.

(The act referred to was thereupon marked "Petitioner's Exhibit No. 3, September 21, 1914", and will be found in the volume of petitioner's exhibits.)

Mr. McCLENNEN. The petitioner offers as Exhibit No. 4, 13th Statutes at Large, page 504, chapter 88, the act of March 3, 1865.

(The act referred to was thereupon marked "Petitioner's Exhibit No. 4, September 21, 1914", and will be found in the volume of petitioner's exhibits.)

7 Mr. McCLENNEN. The petitioner offers as Exhibit No. 5, 14th Statutes at Large, page 79, chapter 159, the act of July 3, 1866.

(The act referred to was thereupon marked "Petitioner's Exhibit No. 5, September 21, 1914", and will be found in the volume of petitioner's exhibits.)

Mr. McCLENNEN. The petitioner offers as Exhibit No. 6, 14th Statutes at Large, page 292, chapter 278, the act of July 27, 1866.

(The act referred to was thereupon marked "Petitioner's Exhibit No. 6, September 21, 1914", and will be found in the volume of petitioner's exhibits.)

Mr. McCLENNEN. The petitioner offers as Exhibit No. 7, 15th Statutes at Large, page 79, chapter 77, the act of June 25, 1868.

(The act referred to was thereupon marked "Petitioner's Exhibit No. 7, September 21, 1914", and will be found in the volume of petitioner's exhibits.)

Mr. McCLENNEN. The petitioner offers as Exhibit No. 8, 16th Statutes at Large, page 56, joint resolution No. 19, of April 10, 1869.

8 (The resolution referred to was thereupon marked "Petitioner's Exhibit No. 8, September 21, 1914", and will be found in the volume of petitioner's exhibits.)

Mr. McCLENNEN. The petitioner offers as Exhibit No. 9, 16th Statutes at Large, page 573, chapter 122, the act of March 3, 1871.

(The act referred to was thereupon marked "Petitioner's Exhibit No. 9, September 21, 1914", and will be found in the volume of petitioner's exhibits.)

Mr. McCLENNEN. The petitioner offers as Exhibit No. 10, 18th Statutes at Large, page 111, chapter 331, the act of June 20, 1874.

(The act referred to was thereupon marked "Petitioner's Exhibit No. 10, September 21, 1914", and will be found in the volume of petitioner's exhibits.)

Mr. McCLENNEN. The petitioner offers as Exhibit No. 11, 20 Statutes at Large, page 169, chapter 316, the act of June 19, 1878.

(The act referred to was thereupon marked "Petitioner's Exhibit No. 11, September 21, 1914", and will be found in the volume of petitioner's exhibits.)

9 Mr. McCLENNEN. The petitioner puts in evidence as Exhibit 12 a statement entitled "Outline history of corporate organization of the Central Pacific Railroad Company", prepared under the supervision of counsel for the defendants and tendered by them as believed to be accurate, this offer being made under the agreement that either party is to have the right, which is hereby reserved, to offer additional, explanatory, or corrective evidence on the same subject.

(The statement referred to was thereupon marked "Petitioner's Exhibit No. 12, September 21, 1914", and will be found in the volume of petitioner's exhibits.)

Mr. McCLENNEN. The petitioner puts in evidence as Exhibit 13 a statement entitled "Outline history of corporate organization of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company", prepared under the supervision of counsel for the defendants and tendered by them as believed to be accurate, this offer being made under the agreement that either party is to have the right, which is hereby reserved, to offer additional, explanatory, or corrective evidence on the same subject.

(The statement referred to was thereupon marked "Petitioner's Exhibit No. 13, September 21, 1914", and will be found in the volume of petitioner's exhibits.)

Mr. McCLENNEN. The petitioner puts in evidence as Exhibit 14 stipulation of September 17, 1914, as to the officers and directors from time to time of the Central Pacific Railway Company, Southern Pacific Railroad Company, and Southern Pacific Company, including the lists attached thereto.

(The stipulation referred to was thereupon marked "Petitioner's Exhibit No. 14, September 21, 1914", and will be found in the volume of petitioner's exhibits.)

Mr. McCLENNEN. The petitioner puts in evidence as Exhibit 15 the copies certified by the Secretary of the Interior under date of August 31, 1914, of the reports filed by the Central Pacific Railroad Company, beginning with the year 1864 and ending with the year 1877, to the extent only that those reports set forth the list of stockholders in the company.

(The papers referred to were thereupon marked "Petitioner's Exhibit No. 15, September 21, 1914", and will be found in the volume of petitioner's exhibits.)

Mr. HERRIN. Are these photographs of the originals on file?

Mr. McCLENNEN. As I understand; yes.

Mr. BLAIR. We have no objection, provided the right be reserved to us to offer any part of those reports which we may consider relevant.

Mr. McCLENNEN. There is no objection to your so doing, of course, reserving our right to object to them as to relevancy, and with the understanding that none of them will be offered unless in some way they are called to our attention specifically before the close of your testimony.

The petitioner puts in evidence as Exhibit 16 the copies certified by the Secretary of the Interior under date of August 31, 1914, of the reports of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, filed in the office of the Secretary of the Interior for the years from 1868 to 1877, inclusive, so far only as these reports give the names of the stockholders.

Mr. DUNNE. To the same extent and for the same purpose as Exhibit 15?

Mr. MCCLENNEN. Yes.

Mr. BLAIR. And with the same reservation?

Mr. MCCLENNEN. Yes, and the same agreement.

(The papers referred to were thereupon marked "Petitioner's Exhibit No. 16, September 21, 1914", and will be found in the volume of petitioner's exhibits.)

Mr. MCCLENNEN. The petitioner puts in evidence as Ex-12 hibit 17 the certified copy by W. M. Thompson, Secretary of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, of the minutes of the meeting of April 12, 1898, of that company.

Mr. BLAIR. We object to this as irrelevant, immaterial, incompetent, and without foundation, and on the ground that there is no proof whatever of the signature or authority of the officer purporting to give the certificate.

(The paper referred to was thereupon marked "Petitioner's Exhibit No. 17, September 21, 1914", and will be found in the volume of petitioner's exhibits.)

JOHN MUIR was called as a witness on behalf of the petitioner, and being duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. What is your residence?

A. New York City.

Q. And your address?

A. 74 Broadway.

Q. I show you what purports to be a print of an agreement of the Transcontinental Association dated September 28, 1883. Can you tell me whether that agreement was executed by you?

A. Yes.

13 Q. And in what capacity did you execute it?

A. I was superintendent of traffic of the Northern Pacific Railroad Company.

Q. Was the agreement executed by the Southern Pacific Company?

A. Yes.

Q. Entitled "Southern Pacific Railway Company"?

A. Yes.

Q. And by whom for that company was it executed?

A. By Mr. A. N. Towne.

Q. What was Mr. Towne at that time?

A. General manager.

Q. Have you any knowledge of where the original agreement now is?

A. I do not know.

Q. What was the last that you knew of it?

A. I have no recollection now of it except of the time when it was executed.

Q. Where was that?

A. It was executed in the Palace Hotel in San Francisco, the first one; and there was a subsequent one, I think, confirmatory of it, with some changes, in Topeka, Kansas.

Q. Now, is the subsequent one to which you refer, this one that I show you, headed "Topeka, Kansas, November 8, 1883"?

A. Yes.

Q. Was that signed by you?

A. Yes.

Q. And was it signed by the Southern Pacific Railroad Company?

A. Yes; the same parties as to that first agreement.

Q. By Mr. Towne as general manager of that company?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you recognize those two as being copies of the original agreements?

A. As well as I can. I have glanced over them, but after thirty years, of course, my recollection of the details is not quite as clear as it might be; but as well as I can remember these are the copies of the agreements which were then executed.

Q. I understand you that you have no knowledge of the whereabouts of either?

A. At that time there was a copy or copies delivered to each of the roads that signed the agreement.

Q. And who kept the original?

A. I can not recall one as being an original. I should think they would all be signed by the different parties, and each one be furnished with a copy.

Q. Each one having a signed one?

A. That is what I recall.

Q. What was the last that you knew of your copies of the originals?

A. I would naturally have taken that and delivered it to probably the auditor of the Northern Pacific Railway Company in St. Paul. That was the headquarters of the Northern Pacific Railway Company—to the proper custodian, whoever he might have been at that time.

Q. Do you remember in whose hands the copies belonging to the Southern Pacific Railroad Company were left at your meeting?

A. All I recall is that the two principal parties in connection with that agreement on behalf of those two roads were A. N. Towne, who signed it, and Mr. J. C. Stubbs, who had a great deal to do with framing it. He had probably the most of any of the parties to say as to its form.

Q. Do you know whether any of the originals were left with the Transcontinental Association?

16–17 A. I do not know, as a matter of fact, but I believe they were, as it would be the natural thing to do.

Mr. BLAIR. Counsel objects to that answer on the ground that——

The WITNESS (interrupting). I do not know.

Mr. BLAIR. The witness says he does not know, and counsel objects to any other part of the answer except the statement by the witness that he does not know.

18 Q. Where were the headquarters of the Transcontinental Association at the time of the agreement?

A. The Transcontinental Association was then just formed, and I think the headquarters were fixed at first at San Francisco and subsequently at Chicago.

Q. The Transcontinental Association was finally dissolved, was it not?

A. Long after my severance from the Northern Pacific road.

Q. Are you able to give the date?

A. No, sir.

Q. You severed your connection with the Northern Pacific at what time?

A. I think in the following year, 1884, at the time of the Villard collapse.

Mr. MCCLENNEN. The petitioner offers as Exhibit No. 18 the agreement of September 28th, 1883, just refered to by the witness, and the petitioner offers as Exhibit No. 19 the agreement of November 8, 1883, just referred to by the witness.

Mr. BLAIR. Counsel objects, first, on the ground that the ex-
19 ecution of the documents has not been sufficiently proved, nor has it been sufficiently proved that the documents are correct copies of the originals; and, further, on the ground that the foundation has not been laid for the offer of a copy in lieu of the originals; and, finally, in the alternative on the ground that the originals would be irrelevant, immaterial, and incompetent evidence to any issues in this case.

Mr. MCCLENNEN. It is agreed by counsel that the prints themselves need not be marked, but that the transcription of the documents in the record shall have equal force with the prints.

Mr. BLAIR. They may be copied in the transcript.

(Copies of the papers referred to were marked, respectively, "Petitioner's Exhibit No. 18, September 21, 1914", and "Petitioner's Exhibit No. 19, September 21, 1914", and will be found in the volume of petitioner's exhibits.)

Mr. BLAIR. No questions, Mr. Muir.

(Witness excused.)

HUGH NEILL was called as a witness on behalf of the petitioner and, being duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. What is your full name?

A. Hugh Neill.

Q. What is your residence?

A. New York City.

Q. And what is your address?

A. No. 121 West 11th Street.

Q. Are you the secretary of the Southern Pacific Company?

A. I am.

Q. And you have been how long?

A. Since January 31, 1913.

Q. Do you hold any official position in the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, the Central Pacific Railroad Company, or the Central Pacific Railway Company?

A. I hold the position of assistant secretary, I believe, of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company and of the Central Pacific Railway Company. That is my recollection. I do not think I am an officer of the Central Pacific Railroad. I would have to verify that by looking at the record. I did not know what I would be asked.

Q. What is the general scope of the duties which you perform as secretary?

A. Of what company; of the Southern Pacific Company?

Q. Of the Southern Pacific Company?

A. I attend all meetings of the board of directors and of the executive committee of the board of directors, and have general charge of the minutes, and under the by-laws perform such other duties as are assigned to me by the board of directors, the executive committee, or the chairman.

Q. Do you have the custody of any of the records or documents of any of these companies?

A. I have the custody of many—not all—of the original agreements entered into between the Southern Pacific Company and the other companies. I do not know just what you mean by "documents". I have custody of the official minutes of the Southern Pacific Company.

Q. Do you have the custody of the minutes or contracts of any of the other three companies just mentioned?

22 A. I have not the custody of the minutes—the official minutes—of either the Central Pacific Railway Company, the Central Pacific Railroad Company, or the Southern Pacific Railroad Company. So far as I recall, I have not the custody of any agreements or other documents—original documents—of those companies, except perhaps some agreements in which the Southern Pacific Company is a party.

Q. Some of the records and documents of these companies were destroyed in the San Francisco fire of 1906, were they not?

A. Practically all of the records then in storage at San Francisco were destroyed in that fire.

Q. Were there any records in New York destroyed by fire?

A. Well, there was a fire in New York in January, 1912, known as the Equitable Building fire. I was not then secretary of the company. I know, as a matter of general information, that a great many office records were destroyed in that fire.

Q. Do you know whether any of these four companies have any of the original minutes of the meetings of stockholders and the meetings of directors and the meetings of executive committees occurring prior to 1906?

23 A. I could not state as to the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, the Central Pacific Railroad Company and the Central Pacific Railway Company because, as I stated before, I have not the custody of the original records of those companies; and for the Southern Pacific Company, the records—by which I understand you mean the minutes—prior to 1906 are destroyed—are not in existence.

Q. Do you know, as matter of general information in your office, whether the same is true of the other three companies?

A. My understanding is that they were destroyed in the San Francisco fire.

Q. And does that apply as well to the original contracts of these four companies?

A. I can not answer as to that, because I do not know who had the custody of the contracts at that time. I can not testify of my own knowledge after January 31, 1913.

Q. The main offices—the head offices—of these four companies in 1906 were in San Francisco, were they not?

A. I can not state as to that. I do not know what you mean by "main offices".

Q. The offices where the principal transactions would be kept of record in ordinary course of business.

Mr. ORR. The offices of the president.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. (Continuing.) Where the offices of the president and chief officials were?

A. As matter of general information I could state that my belief is that the main offices of the Southern Pacific Company in 1906 were located in New York City; that is to say, that the president of the company had his headquarters located in New York City. Without reference to data or office records I could not say as to the other companies. I do not recall, at the moment, who were presidents of the companies at that time; that is, of the three subsidiary companies.

Q. Were the San Francisco offices of the four companies all together?

A. My belief is that they were located in the same building.

Q. And were the offices of the four companies in New York all together?

A. I can not answer that question categorically, for the reason I have stated; I had no official connection with either one of the four companies in 1906, though I was an employe of the Southern Pacific Company.

Q. Did the Southern Pacific Company, as a large stockholder in any of these other companies, have in its possession any of the records, minutes, or documents of any of the other three companies?

A. At what time do you mean?

Q. At the time of these respective fires.

A. I could answer only as a matter of general belief. As I stated, I had no custody of the records at that time.

Q. And that would be what?

A. That there were probably in the offices of the Southern Pacific Company copies of various documents and records of the other three companies mentioned. As to the custody of the original records, I can give no answer.

Q. Have you seen the seal, or papers bearing the seal, of the Central Pacific Railroad Company from time to time?

A. I have seen the impression of the seal.

Q. I refer to petitioner's Exhibit 17. Is that the impression of the seal of the Central Pacific Railway Company?

A. (After examination.) Without further opportunity for investigation and study I could not answer.

Q. Have you any recollection whatever of the characteristics of the seal of the Central Pacific Railway Company?

A. I have none.

Q. None whatever?

A. No.

27 Q. Have you in your possession or control any papers containing any impression of the seal of the Central Pacific Railway Company?

A. I think it possible that I have.

Q. Would you be willing to investigate and bring one this afternoon, if you can find one?

A. Yes; assuming that counsel advise me that it is entirely right and proper. It is a matter that I should follow their advice upon.

Mr. McCLENNEN. Counsel for the Government will advise you that it is entirely proper.

(Whereupon, at 12.35 o'clock p. m., a recess was taken until 1.45 o'clock p. m.)

28 AFTER RECESS.

Mr. BLAIR. Counsel for the defendants withdraw their objection to the authenticity of the seal and the signature of Secretary Thompson to Exhibit No. 17.

HUGH NEILL, the witness on the stand at the taking of recess, resumed the stand for further direct examination.

By Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. I show you, Mr. Neill, what purports to be a printed copy of an agreement dated February 8, 1913, between the Union Pacific Railroad Company, the Southern Pacific Company, the Central Pacific Railway Company, the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, and the Oregon Short Line Railroad Company. Can you tell me whether you witnessed the execution of such an agreement?

A. I witnessed the execution of an agreement between the parties named on the date mentioned as secretary of the Southern Pacific Company.

Q. Is the original agreement in your possession?

A. One indenture of the original agreement is in my custody.

29 Mr. McCLENNEN. Mr. Blair, may we use this copy to the same extent as we might use the original?

Mr. BLAIR. No objection, reserving the right to correct any difference which may appear upon comparison of the copy with the original.

By Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. That agreement was signed by Robert S. Lovett as chairman of the executive committee of the Union Pacific Railroad Company?

A. Yes; it was.

Q. And was signed by the Southern Pacific Company by J. Kruttschnitt, chairman of the executive committee of the Southern Pacific Company?

A. Yes.

Q. It was signed by the Central Pacific Railway Company by William F. Herrin, president?

A. Yes.

Q. It was signed by the Southern Pacific Railroad Company by William Sproule, president?

A. Yes.

Q. And it was signed by the Oregon Short Line Railroad Company by Robert S. Lovett as chairman of the executive committee?

A. It was.

Q. And it bore the seals of those several companies?

A. Yes, sir; it did.

Q. And was attested by the secretaries of those several companies?

A. In some cases, by the secretaries; in other cases, by the assistant secretaries, as the agreement itself will show.

Mr. McCLENNEN. In accordance with the above agreement the petitioner puts in evidence as Exhibit 20 this printed copy of the agreement as for the original.

Mr. BLAIR. In order that we may determine intelligently whether we have any objections I would like to ask the purpose for which the offer is made.

Mr. McCLENNEN. The agreement is offered for all the purposes for which it may be relevant in this case, one of which is to show the practical feasibility of operating the Central Pacific Railroad, separated from the control of the Southern Pacific Company, and the practicability of overcoming any obstacles to a separation.

Mr. BLAIR. Counsel objects to the document offered on the ground that the same is irrelevant, immaterial and incompetent testimony with respect to any of the issues in this case.

(The paper referred to was thereupon marked "Petitioner's Exhibit No. 20, September 21, 1914", and will be found in the volume of petitioner's exhibits.)

Mr. McCLENNEN. The petitioner puts in evidence as Exhibit 21 certificate of P. Thompson, registrar of Joint Stock Company, Somerset House, London, England, of copies of extracts from the documents on file in his office, of the Central Pacific Railroad Shareholding Company, namely, summary of the capital and shares, list of shareholders, extract from minutes of meeting of June 22, 1899, relative to the winding up of the company, extracts from the articles of association of the company, and return of final winding up meeting.

Mr. BLAIR. Defendants' counsel waive the proof of the official character and signature of the officer certifying to the paper, but object to the offer as tending to adduce irrelevant and immaterial testimony.

32 Mr. MCCLENNEN. The petitioner puts in evidence as Exhibit 22 the United States executive documents, first session, 50th Congress, 1887–1888, volumes 2 to 6, inclusive, containing volumes 1 to 9 of the report of the United States Pacific Railway Commission, containing a message from the President of the United States, Grover Cleveland, January 17th, 1888, transmitting the report of the Pacific Railway Commission; also containing that report; also containing the evidence and exhibits referred to in that report; and the petitioner calls attention to the following parts, on which the petitioner relies, from those reports and evidence:

Page 4 from the report of the commission: "We submit herewith the respective reports of these gentlemen, with the tables, statistics, and exhibits thereto appertaining, which will be found in volume 8 of the evidence and proceedings herewith submitted."

Mr. BLAIR. Counsel objects, so far as it includes any testimony taken before said commission, or any document, as irrelevant and incompetent and res inter alios acta, not binding upon these defendants, and that said documents do not prove themselves. We do not object to the report or the message of the President, although we do not consider that it is necessary to offer them in evidence.

Mr. MCCLENNEN. In view of the objection the petitioner
33 calls attention to the fact that the reports and evidence are not offered as evidence of the facts narrated therein, but as evidence of what was communicated to the Congress.

Mr. BLAIR. It is agreed that the message of the President and the report of the Pacific Railway Commission of 1887, and the documents and testimony covered by the above offer need not be copied into the transcript, but may be referred to in the official printed volumes with the same effect as if embodied in the transcript, and that in the event of appeal they need not be copied into the record, but may be referred to in like manner on appeal to the Supreme Court.

(The document referred to was thereupon marked "Petitioner's Exhibit No. 22, September 21, 1914".)

34 Mr. BLAIR. I understand you have offered all of that, have you not?

Mr. McCLENNEN. We have offered the whole thing in the way I ve stated it. Now, the parts to which the petitioner calls attention will indicate by page, or I will read, whichever is more convenent for you. There is not a great amount of it.

I read as follows from page 4: "We submit herewith the respec- e reports of these companies, with the tables, statistics, and ex- ibits thereto appertaining, which will be found in volume 8 of the idence and proceedings herewith submitted."

From page 2572, from the statement of J. C. Stubbs, I read as llows:

"The through rates of fare for business between California and ints in the eastern States are regulated by competition."

From page 2598 I read as follows: "There are now eight trans- ntinental railroad lines in addition to the original Union and Cen- al Pacific line—that is to say, there are eight other lines, each of hich competes in whole or in part with the original Union and ntral Pacific line for the traffic interchanged between the Pacific coast and the territory of the United States and Canada east of the Rocky Mountains. They are as follows:

(1) The original Union and Central Pacific line, opened for rough traffic in May, 1869.

(2) The thirty-second parallel route, or Atchison, Topeka and nta Fe and Southern Pacific line, via Deming, opened in March, 81.

(3) The thirty-second parallel route, or Southern Pacific and mas and Pacific line, via El Paso, Tex., opened in January, 1882.

(4) The thirty-second parallel route, or Galveston, Harrisburg nd San Antonio Railway and Southern Pacific, via El Paso, Tex., ened in February, 1883.

(5) The Burlington and Missouri River Railroad and Denver and o Grande in connection with Central Pacific, opened in May, 1883.

(6) The Northern Pacific Railroad, opened in September, 1883.

(7) The Atlantic and Pacific in connection with the Southern Pa- ic, opened in October, 1883.

(8) The Oregon Short Line, the date of whose opening for busi- ss I am unable to give.

(9) The Canadian Pacific, opened for business in July or August, 86."

This is from the statement of J. C. Stubbs of July, 1887.

From page 2599, from an exhibit to Mr. Stubbs' statement, I read as follows:

"Exhibit A. Comparative statement showing freight tonnage and harges on through traffic and percentage of same done by each route r periods as noted."

It is not necessary for me to read the detail of that statement. You are familiar with it. I am constructively reading through page 2600.

Mr. BLAIR. Very well.

Mr. MCCLENNEN. From page 2656, from the testimony of Leland Stanford, I read as follows:

"Q. You began paying dividends in 1873. How long after that was it before the stock began to be bought and sold?—A. We could not get it on the market until, I think, about 1880 or 1881. I think it was 1880. Then we sold, I think, five millions to a syndicate in New York and they put it on the market. They were better manipulators than we were. They put that stock on the market, and after that time it had a regular quotable value. I do not think it ever got below 60 cents on that market for several years, though we could not sell much of it. After that I believe it went down as low as 26. I think that was the lowest."

37 "Q. What is your present interest in the Central Pacific Company?—A. I do not know how it stands on the books, because my stock was sent east and was put in shape there to be transferred. I do not care much generally about telling my private business, but in this case I have no particular objection. I think I have about equal in value to thirty-two thousand, which would make $3,200,000.

"Q. Thirty-two thousand shares of stock?—A. I think that would be about thirty-two thousand. I remember it rather according to its par value than otherwise.

"Q. And that is your present interest which you own in your own right?—A. Yes."

The date of this is July 29, 1887.

From page 2737, from the testimony of Leland Stanford of August 2, 1887, I read as follows:

"Still we were doing well up to 1881, and we thought that we would be able to meet our obligations at maturity. We passed resolutions for the establishment of a sinking fund to meet the obligations due the Government. But when the Thurman bill was passed it took the matter out of our hands, and the Government took it upon itself to look after this sinking fund. We had nothing to say about it. We were not satisfied, though we had no objection to the whatever we thought was fair. We could charge whatever we ght best. When the other road was built, however, business was ided and the rates cut down. Whenever any new road was built, business fell off very perceptibly and the percentages fell off the way through. On the Central Pacific, the falling off in the ugh business has been so great that now it commands but about per cent.

Some people have thought that we helped to divert this business onstructing the Southern Pacific road. This is not so, however. construction of the Southern Pacific road was provided for by of Congress, and its management went into the hands of people than those who controlled the Central Pacific. It soon became rent that the best interests of the Central Pacific required that the control of the Southern Pacific should be in the same hands, and that that road should work in perfect harmony with the Central Pacific. It became a necessity, therefore, that hould control the Southern Pacific, and when opportunity offered vailed ourselves of it and purchased the controlling interest in road. Since then the roads have worked in entire harmony, with the advantages of a pooling arrangement, and the advantages lting from our system of leases."

From page 2803, from the testimony of Leland Stanford of gust 3, 1887, I read as follows:

"The Southern Pacific, as perhaps you may have noticed, was or- ized under an act of Congress, and authority was given to people connected with the Central Pacific to build the road. We early that if that line of railroad was completed—if it crossed the ra Nevada Mountains—all the valleys of the State would be to it and it would be a very serious competitor of the Central ific. So we tried to control it, and we have succeeded in con- ling it; and the consequence is that it has never been operated to prejudice of the Central Pacific."

From page 2829, from the testimony of Leland Stanford of gust 3, 1887, I read as follows:

"Q. What effect had the construction of the Southern Pacific upon the Union Pacific?—A. So far as it diverted business, of course it was injurious; but we got on pretty well bout cutting rates. There was no chance for the Southern Pacific touch the Union Pacific at all, until the Atchison and Santa Fe ched it, and that immediately formed a new line; but before that Southern Pacific went off by way of Fort Yuma and down into na, and it did not affect the Union Pacific business by as much a penny or a pound of freight. There was no place where they ld come into competition, but the moment that the Atchison and Santa Fe touched the Southern Pacific and formed a through line for all the business of the interior as well as the Atlantic coast, the both the Union and the Central became affected.

"Q. What percentage of a year's business after the connection o these roads was affected or diverted?—A. I think you have it here I think that year it had the immediate effect of diverting 23 per cen of the whole through business.

"Q. So that the income of the business of the Union Pacific, by reason of the construction of the Southern Pacific, was affected to the extent of 23 per cent?—A. Yes, sir. I may be mistaken a 41 to it being immediately in that year, but I think the account show that. I was going to say this: Neither we ourselves, individually, nor any of the Central Pacific people are in any manner responsible for the building of the Southern Pacific line. I mean to say they had nothing to do with procuring the Government aid for the Southern Pacific. They had no interest in the Southern Pacific until long afterwards. Mr. Anderson spoke yesterday about the Northern Pacific being provided for the same year that we were. That is a mistake. We organized and commenced work under the act of 1862, and our company accepted its terms. So that the provision for the building of the Northern Pacific was made two years after the commencement of the construction of the Central Pacific."

From page 3310, from the testimony of J. C. Stubbs of August 19 1887, I read as follows:

"Commissioner LITTLER. What Congress will want to know is whether the Central Pacific and Union Pacific occupy such relation to the traffic of the Pacific coast that they can compete successfully with any other road from here to New York.

"The WITNESS. It does it and has done it.

"Commissioner LITTLER. That is one of the important questions to be considered in any further legislation that may take place in relation to this matter.
42 "The WITNESS. It is the shortest route and, in my judgment with proper management, it is the best route, and always will be."

From page 3717, volume 5, from a letter of December 10, 1874 from C. P. Huntington, president, to Honorable Thos. A. Scott president Texas Railway Company, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, I read as follows:

"My great interest, of course, is with the Central Pacific, which will not be benefited by the construction of this road; but the parties who control the Southern Pacific are very anxious to have this southern line completed at an early day. And so long as I am acting as the president of the company I shall do all that I can to carry out their wishes."

From page 3738, from a letter to Mr. Colton of April 26, 1876, I d as follows:

"Scott has several parties that I think do nothing else but write icles against the Central Pacific and its managers, then get them lished in such papers as he can get to publish them at small cost, sends the papers everywhere; and there is no doubt that he has done much to turn public sentiment against us. If it was known that the C. P. did not control the S. P. I think we could beat him all the time, although he had about the same ntage over us in Washington that we would have over him in

From page 3751, from a letter of May 15, 1877, to Mr. Colton, I d as follows:

"Scott is working everywhere for his open highway, but I think can beat him; but it will cost money and harder work to beat with money under the plan of some of my associates, viz: having derstood that the C. P. and S. P. are, as it were, one property.
it would be without money if the public could know the facts—that is, that the S. P. is a separate and distinct property."

Mr. McCLENNEN. In the same way, with the same limitations, the petitioner puts in evidence as Exhibit No. 23 the rt of Mr. Morgan from the Committee on Pacific Railroads, ch 29, 1897, in the Senate of the United States, 55th Congress, session, Minority Report No. 20, part 2, together with the endix thereto, being Senate Report No. 778, part 2, 54th Congress, session, April 21, 1896, the same matter as appears in the appenalso being printed as "Pacific Railroad Debt" and other Senate uments, 1896, in the 54th Congress, first session, Document No.
, entitled "Government debt of the Pacific railroads; notes of rings before the Senate on Pacific Railroads of the Senate of the ted States on the subject of the indebtedness of the Pacific rail-ds to the Government." Ordered printed June 9, 1896.

Mr. BLAIR. The same objection is made as was made to the offer of Pacific Railroad Commission report and testimony, and the same ement to obviate the necessity of copying this report into the rd.

The minority report was thereupon marked "Petitioner's Exhibit 23-A, September 21, 1914", and the appendix was thereupon marked "Petitioner's Exhibit No. 23-B, September 21, 1914".)

Mr. McCLENNEN. The parts to which the petitioner calls
y of Collis P. Huntington, February 17, 1896:

Senator MORGAN. Did you have any in the Central Pacific?

Mr. HUNTINGTON. Yes.

Senator MORGAN. Did you transfer that stock?

"Mr. HUNTINGTON. No.

"Senator MORGAN. Have you got it yet?

"Mr. HUNTINGTON. Yes.

"Senator MORGAN. How much?

"Mr. HUNTINGTON. Not a great many shares. I suppose I have got four or five thousand shares.

"Senator MORGAN. How much money would that represent on the face value?

"Mr. HUNTINGTON. One thousand shares represent $100,000.

"Senator MORGAN. And you have got four or five thousand shares, about $500,000?

"Mr. HUNTINGTON. Yes."

Mr. MCCLENNEN. Also original hearing page 139, appendix page 77, the same day; testimony of Collis P. Huntington:

46 "Senator MORGAN. You say the stock of the Central Pacific has been taken up by this Kentucky company?

"Mr. HUNTINGTON. Excuse me. The Southern Pacific Company has no stock in the Central Pacific.

"Senator MORGAN. None at all?

"Mr. HUNTINGTON. No.

"Senator MORGAN. No stockholder of the Central Pacific has ever exchanged his stock with the Southern Pacific?

"Mr. HUNTINGTON. No; I am sure of it. No stockholder of the Central Pacific was ever asked to exchange it.

"Senator MORGAN. You never would permit that?

"Mr. HUNTINGTON. We would not ask it to be done."

Mr. MCCLENNEN. Also Appendix, page 108, original hearing, page 170, from the testimony of Collis P. Huntington, February 18, 1896:

"Senator MORGAN. The Southern Pacific was not built as a feeder to the Central Pacific?

Mr. MCCLENNEN. Appendix, page 136, original hearing, page 199, testimony of Collis P. Huntington, on the same day:

"Senator MORGAN. I will read to you a portion of the statement made by you before the Senate Committee on Pacific

47 Railroads on the 6th of February, 1894:

"'Senator MORGAN. Who owns the Central Pacific now?

"'Mr. HUNTINGTON. It belongs to a great number of shareholders; there are so many of them that I do not know who they are; I suppose there are 25,000 of them altogether.'"

Mr. MCCLENNEN. Also Appendix, page 141, original hearing, page 203, from the same testimony on the same day:

"Senator MORGAN. You had stock in the Southern Pacific (the Kentucky company) to the amount of probably $10,000,000?

"Mr. HUNTINGTON. No; I do not know how much I had.
"Senator MORGAN. And in the Central Pacific you had none at all?
"Mr. HUNTINGTON. Oh, yes; I had some. I always had stock in e Central Pacific.
"Senator MORGAN. How much?
"Mr. HUNTINGTON. Four or five thousand shares."
Mr. McCLENNEN. Also Appendix, page 143, original hearing, page 6, testimony of Mr. Huntington the same day:
"Mr. HUNTINGTON. Yes. It competes with it like all the other es, but not to the same extent. The great through tonnage which is picked up is west of the Alleghanies."

Mr. McCLENNEN. Also Appendix, page 146, original hearing, page 208, testimony of Collis P. Huntington, February 1896:
"I will ask you, preliminarily, Mr. Huntington, to state as nearly you can the exact amount of stock which you now own in the Cenal Pacific Railroad.
"Mr. HUNTINGTON. I stated, I think, that I owned over 6,000 ares.
"Senator MORGAN. Representing in face value over $600,000?
"Mr. HUNTINGTON. Yes.
"Senator MORGAN. What is the largest amount of stock in that ilroad which you have ever owned?
"Mr. HUNTINGTON. I do not know that I have ever owned more an that. I had an interest in the Contract and Finance Company.
"Senator MORGAN. You do not think that you have ever personally wned more than $600,000 of this stock?
"Mr. HUNTINGTON. I never had more than that standing in my wn name. I am not prepared to say that I had ever so much as hat.
"Senator MORGAN. What was the largest amount you owned at any time, or that you had a right to, as a member of the Contract and Finance Company?
"Mr. HUNTINGTON. I do not know. Mr. Hopkins kept all hese accounts; he was the bookkeeper of the concern, and whatever e said always went with me. I never saw the books of the Conract and Finance Company.
"Senator MORGAN. Were all the memoranda of the ownership of he stock and the distribution of the stock of each stockholder in he Contract and Finance Company kept on the books of that ompany?
"Mr. HUNTINGTON. I think so. The Central Pacific stock was old largely, and the debts of the Contract and Finance Company were paid out of the proceeds of the sale, so that it did not really come into my hands.

"Senator MORGAN. Was there ever any distribution of the assets of the Contract and Finance Company?

"Mr. HUNTINGTON. Yes.

"Senator MORGAN. When was that made?

"Mr. HUNTINGTON. I do not recollect the date. I should say along in the seventies.

"Senator MORGAN. Did that include a distribution of the bonds and stock of the Central Pacific Company?

"Mr. HUNTINGTON. There was no distribution. They were 50 sold to pay the debts of the Contract and Finance Company, which debts were incurred, according to my recollection, by the building of the Central Pacific road.

"Senator MORGAN. And out of their sale the Contract and Finance Company paid its debts?

"Mr. HUNTINGTON. Yes."

Mr. MCCLENNEN. Also appendix, page 155, original hearing, page 217, testimony of Mr. Huntington on the same day:

"Senator MORGAN. At the time of the completion of the Central Pacific road in the manner you have described, how much did the Contract and Finance Company owe?

"Mr. HUNTINGTON. I do not know.

"Senator MORGAN. About how much?

"Mr. HUNTINGTON. I do not know how much, but it was in the millions.

"Senator MORGAN. Two or three or four millions?

"Mr. HUNTINGTON. A good deal more than that.

"Senator MORGAN. Five or six or seven or eight millions?

"Mr. HUNTINGTON. I can not say. My impression is that the Contract and Finance Company owed considerably more than $10,000,000.

"Senator MORGAN. Has that all been paid?

"Mr. HUNTINGTON. It has been all paid.
51 "Senator MORGAN. How?

"Mr. HUNTINGTON. By selling what we had to sell; but mostly shares of the Central Pacific."

Mr. MCCLENNEN. Also appendix, page 159, original hearing, page 221, Mr. Huntington's testimony on the same day:

"Senator MORGAN. So that we will commence now in 1870 when the road was in full operation. What was the stock of the Central Pacific worth in 1870?

"Mr. HUNTINGTON. I do not know. The stock could have been sold for 10 cents, I know, in 1869.

"Senator MORGAN. It then had not gone into operation?

"Mr. HUNTINGTON. Yes; it went into operation on the 10th of May, 1869.

"Senator MORGAN. Between 1870 and 1880 was there not a rapid increase in the value of the stock?

"Mr. HUNTINGTON. Yes.

"Senator MORGAN. How did it go?

"Mr. HUNTINGTON. I think between 70 and 80. I think I sold some at 85."

Mr. McCLENNEN. Also appendix, page 232, original hearing, page 94, the testimony of Mr. Huntington, March 6, 1896:

"Senator MORGAN. There was only about sixty millions of stock of the Central Pacific issued in all?

"Mr. HUNTINGTON. That was all at that time.

"Senator MORGAN. And you had all of that except a little margin—a little fringe—you four?

"Mr. HUNTINGTON. We had a very large majority of the stock. I mean the Contract and Finance Company.

"Senator MORGAN. These shares commenced to appreciate, and appreciated rapidly while the dividends were being paid, did they not?

"Mr. HUNTINGTON. They appreciated. That would be the natural effect.

"Senator MORGAN. You say, 'We carried the shares until they began to appreciate, and then we commenced selling them'?

"Mr. HUNTINGTON. Yes.

"Senator MORGAN. Why did you commence selling shares when they began to appreciate and when they were paying such heavy dividends?

"Mr. HUNTINGTON. Because we were owing money."

Mr. McCLENNEN. Also appendix, page 277, original hearing, page 139, testimony of Mr. Huntington, March 7, 1896:

"Senator MORGAN. I thought you made the most of it by paying your debts. What is the largest amount of stock that you ever owned in the Central Pacific at any time?

"Mr. HUNTINGTON. I never owned very much. I owned some stock in the Contract and Finance Company.

"Senator MORGAN. I am talking about the Central Pacific Company.

"Mr. HUNTINGTON. I would not be positive that I ever had more than a couple of thousand shares.

"Senator MORGAN. You have 6,000 shares now.

"Mr. HUNTINGTON. I was thinking about old times.

"Senator MORGAN. Two thousand shares is about all you owned?

"Mr. HUNTINGTON. Until a long time after.

"Senator MORGAN. When did you become the owner of 6,000 shares?

"Mr. HUNTINGTON. I do not know. It may have been that the Contract and Finance Company may have distributed the shares of the Central Pacific that it owned. The Contract and Finance Company got money and paid all its debts, and it may have distributed some shares.

"Senator MORGAN. Did you say that the 6,000 shares which you now own were distributed to you by the Contract and Finance Company?

"Mr. HUNTINGTON. They may have been.

"Senator MORGAN. Have you ever bought any of the Central Pacific in the market?

"Mr. HUNTINGTON. I do not believe I have."

54 JAMES C. LINCOLN was called as a witness on behalf of the petitioner, and being duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. ORR:

Q. Just state on the record your name, place of residence, and occupation.

A. My name is James C. Lincoln; residence, New York City; occupation, manager of the traffic bureau of the Merchants' Association of New York.

Q. How long have you been manager of that?

A. Since 1912.

Q. What railroad experience have you had, and in what departments of service?

A. I have had a somewhat extended railroad experience in practically all of the departments.

Q. Commencing at what time, and give in a general way what your experience has been, and what positions you have occupied.

A. I entered the railway service in September, 1876, with what was then known as the St. Joseph & Denver City Railroad. My first service was somewhat of a general utility boy around the gen-55 eral office. I was connected with the car-service department and from that went into the transportation department; was chief clerk in the general freight and passenger department, and at the time I left the service of the St. Joseph & Grand Island, as it was then known, in 1888, I was the chief clerk in the general freight and passenger department of that line.

In September, 1888, I went to Atchison, Kansas, as commercial agent of the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, in charge of the central branch and the western extension divisions. In the fall of 1889—as I recall it, it was in November, 1889—I was called to the headquarters of the Missouri Pacific in St. Louis, and on the 1st of January, 1890, I was made assistant general freight agent. I remained with that company from 1890 to 1905, occupying the positions, respectively, of assistant general freight agent, first assistant general freight agent, general freight agent, and at the time I left as assistant freight traffic manager.

Q. Then where did you go?

A. When I left the Missouri Pacific I went with the Merchants' Exchange of St. Louis as commissioner in charge of its traffic bureau. I remained with that organization from May, 1905, until May 1912, when I came to New York to take charge of the traffic bureau here.

Q. In a general way, what are your duties in your present position?

A. My duties in my present position are to look after the question of rates, rules, and regulations as applied to the shipping public by the carriers, and to look after particularly and see that New York is not discriminated against in the matter of rates, and to see that no unjust burdens are placed upon the shippers of this community in the way of rules and regulations. The position is largely that of—well, a "go-between" between the railroads and the shipping public, and to bring about the best of feeling, so that they may better understand each other.

Q. Are you acquainted with the system of railroads managed or controlled by the Southern Pacific Company—the general plan?

A. Why, no—in a very general sort of way. The railroads of the West, yes. I would not say now that I could recall with particular reference to the change from "railroad" to "railway" and the different organizations.

Q. I did not mean the different constituent lines; I meant the general plan.

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know especially where the Central Pacific Railway operates its lines?

A. From Ogden to San Francisco, Sacramento and San Francisco.

Q. Are you acquainted with the transportation line known as the "Sunset"?

A. Yes.

Q. Where does that operate?

A. What is known as the "Sunset Route" operates from New Orleans to San Francisco.

Q. Does it do so in connection with any water line—water service?

A. The Morgan Line, owned by the Southern Pacific Company, enjoys what is known as the "Sunset Route" out of New York to San Francisco and Pacific coast points.

Q. Does the "Sunset" have an all-rail line from San Francisco to New Orleans?

A. What is known or what I would designate as the Southern Pacific has an all-rail line from New Orleans and Galveston to Pacific coast points.

Q. It handles transcontinental traffic, does it, by rail and water?

58 A. From New York and seaboard territory, and it handles business by water to New Orleans and thence by rail to the Pacific coast.

Q. Could you make some statement as to the length of time the Southern Pacific Company, to your knowledge, has operated that transcontinental line, rail and water line?

A. I could not go back and establish a definite date. It has been a very long time that the Morgan Line and the Southern Pacific Company have engaged in transcontinental business.

Q. Has the Southern Pacific Company also a rail connection to New York from New Orleans?

A. It has no rail connection that it owns. Of course, there are rail lines operated from New York to New Orleans. They can operate in connection with them.

Q. It makes a through route that way?

A. There are through routes from New York via New Orleans to the Pacific coast. The Southern Railway and its connections, the L. & N. and the Atlantic Coast Line and connections; they are practical routes.

Q. I will get you to state whether there is a possible all-rail transcontinental line over the Central Pacific and the Union Pacific and eastern connections from San Francisco to the Atlantic seaboard.

59 A. The more direct route from New York to San Francisco would be through the Chicago and Mississippi River gateway, through trunk lines from New York, such as the Pennsylvania and the New York Central lines, those two lines in particular. Also the Wabash line serving Chicago and St. Louis and thence west over the lines operated from Chicago to the Missouri River, and the Union Pacific from Omaha or Kansas City through Ogden to San Francisco.

Q. The Union Pacific from Omaha or Kansas City would operate in connection with what line from Ogden west?

A. They would operate to San Francisco with the Central Pacific.

Q. I will get you to state, in your opinion, from the experience you have had and your acquaintance with railroads and with transcontinental lines, whether the Southern Pacific Company, as you have described it, and the Central Pacific Railway Company with its eastern connections, are competitive systems for transcontinental business.

A. They are competitive systems. The degree of competition, of course, is dependent upon the territory of origin of the business.

Q. Take a shipment of wool from the west coast to the east coast. How could that naturally and practicably be transported?

A. California wool could move by the Sunset route, or it could move—speaking now of the Southern Pacific lines—from Ogden to the Missouri River gateway through Omaha and Kansas City. The Pacific coast wool, I would not say would move to any great extent by water routes; it would go through the northern gateways.

Q. What are the wool markets on the Atlantic coast or near the Atlantic coast?

A. Boston, in New England, is the great wool market.

Q. How about the movement of hops from the west coast, transcontinental?

A. The California hops move largely by rail. They move in part by rail and water.

Q. Are you acquainted with what has been known—as a traffic man—as the dead line running north and south, say east of Buffalo and Pittsburgh and Toronto and as far south as the Ohio River?

A. I do not believe I comprehend that term as applied to transcontinental business. I do not believe I understand the term.

Q. What is the Atlantic seaboard territory that is handled or influenced or controlled by the Southern Pacific Company as applied to transcontinental business?

Mr. BLAIR. He did not say there was any Atlantic seaboard territory influenced or controlled by the Southern Pacific Company as applied to transcontinental business.

Mr. ORR. I am just going to ask him to say so.

Mr. DUNNE. Then we will object to the form of the question as incompetent and calling for a conclusion of the witness and without foundation. I think you ought to reframe it.

Mr. ORR. Well, I may later; but I will let him answer this one.

The WITNESS. The Atlantic seaboard territory, as applied to transcontinental business, is the territory which lies east of Buffalo, Pittsburgh, and Cleveland, and north of the Ohio and Potomac Rivers. It is in that territory that through rates apply from and to Pacific coast points, the rates being the same by Chicago, St. Louis, and the Missouri River gateways, and the same by the Gulf ports. It is in that territory that the Morgan Line operates traffic through the port of New York; that is, they can reach as far south as Pittsburgh and draw the business into New York, and then going on to the Pacific coast by the Gulf ports, and that is the territory of competi-62 tion between the all-rail lines and the rail and water lines on Pacific coast traffic.

By Mr. ORR:

Q. On tonnage originating within the territory you have just described, to be transported to the Pacific coast, we will say, by the Southern Pacific Company, what becomes of the local rate from the point of shipment to New York?

A. The local rate from point of shipment to New York is absorbed in the through rate. I want to qualify that statement by saying that there are some rates which are made from New York to Pacific coast terminals that only apply from the port of New York.

Q. That is on the higher classes?

A. On the very low classes, the very low rated commodities.

Q. To your knowledge and from your experience, what transportation company dominates and controls the traffic originating in the territory you have described for transcontinental shipment?

Mr. BLAIR. He has not said that he knows, and he has not said that any company dominates it, so I object to the form of the question as leading, improper in form, and suggestive.

Mr. ORR. After the word "what" add "if any."

63 Mr. DUNNE. I would like to have the reporter read that question now.

(The reporter read the question as amended, as follows:)

"To your knowledge and from your experience, what, if any, transportation company dominates and controls the traffic originating in the territory you have described for transcontinental shipment?"

Mr. BLAIR. Counsel has added the words "if any", and it was not in the same form as when the objection was made. It makes it appear that the question was as now read.

Mr. DUNNE. I think the record ought to show. There is no foundation in this record, or any knowledge on the part of this witness, as to the percentage of tonnage originating in seaboard territory which goes by any particular carrier, whether all-rail or rail and water, and the proper way to examine him would be to ascertain if he has any knowledge of the respective percentages originating in that territory tributary to the different carriers, served by the different carriers.

(The question was again read by the reporter.)

The WITNESS. If you are speaking of the present time, I would not say that any particular company could dominate the situation 64 as to rates to the Pacific coast. Of course the Southern Pacific Company, by reason of its extensive lines in California, would and should receive consideration at the other hands in the adjustment d rates. A very different situation exists today from what existed prior even to 1910.

Q. Take the condition as it was; are you acquainted with the conditions as they existed prior to 1901?

A. Yes; I am——

Q. I mean on this rate situation—this traffic situation—in the territory you have described on transcontinental traffic?

A. It is my recollection that it was about 1901, or possibly 1902, that the Union Pacific influence over the Southern Pacific came into existence. As to the time prior to 1901, that, by reason of my official connection with the Missouri Pacific, I was quite familiar with at that time.

Q. What was the situation at that time, if you know, as to what influence or what companies dominated—controlled—the traffic in the territory you have described?

Mr. BLAIR. Counsel objects to the form of the question as leading and suggestive. The witness has not testified that any company dominated or controlled the traffic referred to.

By Mr. ORR:

Q. Go ahead.

A. Prior to 1901 the Southern Pacific Company was the dominating factor in adjusting rates to the Pacific coast. That is very logical and very probable by reason of the territory covered by their rails.

Mr. DUNNE. We move to strike the answer out as not responsive to the question.

By Mr. ORR:

Q. I will ask you to state whether you have knowledge of the conditions prevailing prior to 1901 as to what particular company or transportation company practically controlled the rate?

Mr. BLAIR. Counsel objects and protests against the form of the question as leading and suggestive, the question embodying or implying a statement of conditions about which the witness has not testified.

Mr. ORR. I have asked him the question whether he has knowledge of it.

Mr. BLAIR. He has not stated that any railroad dominated the situation.

Mr. ORR. The question, Judge, if you will listen to it, makes that inquiry. It is answerable yes or no.

Mr. BLAIR. So is every suggestive and leading question answerable by yes or no.

(The pending question was read by the stenographer.)

67 By Mr. ORR:

Q. The question is, have you a knowledge as to what company did control it. That could be answered by yes or no.

A. I have knowledge; yes, sir.

Q. You may state what company it was, or what companies, if more than one, that controlled that rate.

A. At that time the rates to California were controlled by the Southern Pacific and the Santa Fe Companies.

Q. Have you knowledge of the manner in which the tonnage was solicited by the Southern Pacific Company and its soliciting agents for transcontinental traffic, both from the west coast to the East and from the East to the West, prior to 1901?

A. Prior to 1901 California traffic from the seaboard territory was solicited by the Gulf route—water line to New Orleans or Galveston, and the Southern Pacific beyond.

Q. Is that what you have referred to at times as the Sunset Route?

A. Yes; what was known as the Sunset Route.

Q. In taking that route would any part of the traffic pass over the Union Pacific and Central Pacific Railroads?

A. It would not.

68 Q. Do you know the conditions prevailing in respect of transcontinental traffic from the territory you have described from 1901 to 1913, or any part of that period?

A. Oh, a changed condition was brought about after the close relations between the Union and Central and Southern Pacific lines in the Union and Southern Pacific systems, and from the territory in the Middle West which is called the C. F. A. territory, and from a part of the trunk line territory, business moved more freely, and through the Omaha gateway, than was true prior to 1901.

Q. Since the "unmerging", as we will call it, of the Southern Pacific and Union Pacific Companies, have you knowledge of the conditions in respect of which you have just testified?

A. Do you mean the last change that was made?

Q. Yes.

A. I would not desire to speak authoritatively on that point. I have not been in the railway business, have not been looking after the business of the coast, since about 1912.

69 Q. Within your knowledge and experience, within your experience and knowledge of the situation, as far as you are able to state as to the conditions of traffic as it proceeds, we will say, westward from the Atlantic coast, what territory is covered by the Southern Pacific competition—active solicitation?

A. I could not answer that question with authority as to to-day. I can answer it as to the time when I was in the railroad business.

Q. Yes.

A. And when I was soliciting business and trying to get business for the Missouri Pacific Company.

Mr. DUNNE. What years do you have in mind?

The WITNESS. Well, up to 1906—1905—and prior to 1900 or 1901, along in that period of time the Southern Pacific Company was more or less active in the solicitation of California business in the territory—well, with the Central in Missouri and to some extent at points on the Ohio River, points in Ohio and Indiana. That I know, because in my official capacity with the Missouri Pacific I would come in contact with the competition in that territory. The Missouri Pacific, you understand, was trying to get business by way of Denver, or by way of Pueblo, I should state, and Ogden, and the Central Pacific, or by way of Texarkana and El Paso, and we had the competition of the Southern Pacific in the territory of St. Louis and east thereof, and in Ohio and Indiana and in what is known as trunk-line territory.

By Mr. ORR:

Q. Business solicited by the agents of the Southern Pacific Company in the territories you have just mentioned, if the Southern Pacific Company secured the business, which way was it routed and sent?

A. Well, part of it went over the Illinois Central into New Orleans and thence west.

Q. Over the Sunset Route?

A. Over the Sunset line.

Q. Over the Southern Pacific, you mean?

A. The Southern Pacific. A part of it would move over the M. K. & T., and in that territory, and thence over the Southern Pacific; some of it by way of the Cotton Belt and thence over the Southern Pacific; or, in other words, the Southern Pacific lines solicited absolutely the business by way of New Orleans; in territory south of the Ohio River and along the Ohio River they solicited business by way of Memphis and the New Orleans gateway. From points north of the Ohio River and from points in what is known as Central Freight Association territory and east of the Mississippi River, the New Orleans route being longer, they would operate by other gateways, and they undertook to solicit the business for the more direct route, and worked with the lines that might have an edge on the business in that territory in which it originated. They even worked with the Iron Mountain, so far as that is concerned.

Q. Would any part of it be sent by way of the Union Pacific and Central Pacific?

A. Southern Pacific solicitors would not be soliciting business to go by way of Omaha and the Ogden gateway; that is, prior to 1901.

Q. Yes. Now, you say it would go by way of New Orleans. Why did they send it that way?

A. It is a long haul.

Q. They got the longest haul out of it by sending it by way of New Orleans?

A. By way of New Orleans.

Q. They could have sent some of it by the Rock Island to El Paso, could they not?

A. Yes; they could have sent some of it that way, or they could have moved it by other lines to El Paso—the Iron Mountain 72 and T. P.

Q. Are you familiar with the route from Kansas City by the Orient to Alpine, Texas?

A. No; I am not. It has been constructed since I left that territory.

Q. I believe you testified to the conditions up to 1901.

A. Yes.

Q. What, if any, change was there, or what changes were there, in the situation from 1901 to 1906, to your knowledge?

A. When the solicitation of California business for the Missouri Pacific System and the D. & R. G. began we found there was a tendency on the part of the Southern to give the business to the Union Pacific, so as to get the long haul from California to Omaha or to Kansas City. It made necessary a very active solicitation of business in California to secure the routing by Omaha, D. & R. G. and Union Pacific, and at no time were our routings cancelled through the Alpine gateway on California business.

Q. During the period extending from 1901 to the spring or the early part of 1913 had you ever known of solicitors of the Southern Pacific, or solicitors for the Southern Pacific, soliciting trans-
73 continental freight, or freight destined to the Pacific coast to go over the Central Pacific?

A. After the consolidation, as I call it, of the Union Pacific——

Q. No; the question is except during the period from 1901 to 1913.

Mr. BLAIR. He has testified that he did not know anything about the conditions since 1912, so that the question goes further forward than his information extends.

By Mr. ORR:

Q. Let me ask that question again. I do not think you understood it.

I say, except during the period from 1901 to 1913, except during that period, have you ever known of the Southern Pacific being solicitors of Pacific freight over the Central Pacific?

A. No. That means the territory prior to 1901.

Mr. BLAIR. What is that answer?

(The stenographer read the last answer of the witness, as follows:)

"A. No. That means the territory prior to 1901."

The WITNESS. That means the time prior to 1901, I mean. He has brought it up to the present date—1913.

By Mr. ORR:

Q. The Southern Pacific Company, you say, operates a part of its transcontinental line by steamboats. Are you acquainted with the storage arrangements in New York City which that company has or have for the accommodation of shippers?

A. On their business from California, brought into New York my recollection is that they allow about fourteen days' free time for delivery, storage period. That is easy to be found by an examination of the tariffs.

Q. That is an arrangement for free storage for a period of fourteen days, is it?

A. They give the shippers fourteen days to remove their freight from the pier on California business.

Q. Whether a man wants to reconsign his freight, or whatever disposition he wants to make of it makes no difference; is that right?

A. That is my understanding; he has fourteen days to move it.

Q. Is there any transcontinental all-rail route which has any such free-storage arrangement in New York City?

A. There is not.

Q. You may state whether or not, in your opinion, the free-storage arrangement of the Southern Pacific, fourteen days' free time, is an inducement, or an added inducement, for shippers to use that route?

A. It would be for some.

Q. Yes.

A. For some who wish to avail themselves of the opportunity of shipping.

Q. What are the requirements about removing shipments from there—from cars? How much free time is allowed?

Mr. BLAIR. Counsel objects to the evident attempt to prove by the witness the conditions and terms which appear in the written tariffs, and must appear in the written tariffs of the railroad companies parties thereto, on the ground that the best evidence is the tariffs themselves.

By Mr. ORR:

Q. You may answer.

A. The rule in New York City on shipments arriving by the all-rail routes from the west is that the property shall be removed—this is on package freight—from the pier or station within 72 hours. In the case of carload freight, which is tendered for delivery on private tracks, within 48 hours thereafter demurrage will begin to accrue. In case of boat delivery stations it is sent to the public warehouse at the end of 72 hours.

76 A different rule prevails on business arriving by the boat lines. That is not confined exclusively to Pacific business. A different arrangement prevails on goods arriving by boat lines.

Mr. BLAIR. These rules are all in the printed tariffs, are they not?

The WITNESS. They should be in the printed tariffs.

Mr. BLAIR. They are of no force if they are not?

The WITNESS. I assume not.

By Mr. ORR:

Q. Are you acquainted with the effects of closing any of these particular gateways that you have mentioned or have not mentioned? Did you describe what the general effect would be; for instance, the closing of the Ogden gateway by the Union Pacific, what is the effect of that?

A. If the Ogden gateway were closed?

Q. Yes.

A. By the Union Pacific?

Q. Yes.

A. I don't believe I understand.

Q. What traffic does it influence or control?

A. You are speaking of the Union Pacific on transcontinental business?

77 Q. On transcontinental business.

A. As controlling the Central Pacific?

Q. No; as to the effect of its closing the gateway. You speak of closing a gateway. What does that mean?

A. Well, Ogden is the gateway from the East to the Pacific coast.

Q. Yes.

A. And the Central Pacific Railroad was the connection of the Union Pacific and the Rio Grande Western, serving that territory. If the Central Pacific were to cancel out its through rates and percentage arrangement with the Rio Grande Western Railroad, in railway parlance that would be termed as closing a gateway; or, as has been done in the case of handling lumber to the Northwest, the Great Northern through routes and joint rates had prevailed by certain junction points in the interior, and with the cancellation of such joint rates that went out and closed that gateway. There are various through rates in effect by Newport News, by Savannah, and by Norfolk. They are all supposed to be gateway points. If the through rate is cancelled by one of those routes, and the through and through route that previously had been in effect was cancelled, that gateway would be closed.

Q. Would that mean that the rate would be quoted only to that gateway?

A. It could only move then on the combination of locals to and that gateway, and ordinarily the closing of a gateway precludes moving of business through that gateway.

Q. That would apply to the closing of any other gateway?

A. It would cancel out the through rate and divisions through one junction point by one road, and permit such through routes joint rates and divisions to operate through another route. Of course, as to one line, the gateway is closed to it.

Mr. ORR. You may cross-examine, if you desire to.

(Thereupon, at 4.30 o'clock p. m., an adjournment was taken until to-morrow, September 22, 1914, at 10.30 o'clock a. m.)

SECOND DAY.

ROOM 720, CUSTOM HOUSE,
New York City, September 22, 1914.

Before Special Examiner Frank R. Hanna.

Present on behalf of the United States: Mr. Orr, Mr. McClennen, and Mr. Gann.

Present on behalf of the defendants: Mr. Herrin, Mr. Blair, and Mr. Dunne for the Southern Pacific Company, et al., and Mr. Trafford, for the Union Trust Company of New York.

JAMES C. LINCOLN, the witness under examination at the taking of adjournment, resumed the stand for further examination.

Cross-examination by Mr. BLAIR:

Q. Mr. Lincoln, I want to direct your attention to the transcontinental lines and traffic conditions existing at the time of the merger, and just before the time of the merger, in 1901, of the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific. If a man at that time had goods that he wished to ship, say, from points in northern and central California to the Atlantic seaboard, what different routes or through lines were open to him? Name, say, the all-rail lines.

A. You mean——

Q. (Interposing.) I mean, say, northeast of the Tehachapi Mountains or north of a line drawn through Mojave and Santa Barbara.

A. They had, at that time, in going to this eastern territory——

Q. (Interposing.) To the Atlantic seaboard.

A. To the Atlantic seaboard we had the lines of the Central Pacific to Ogden and thence from Ogden to Omaha over the Union Pacific or to Kansas City over the Union Pacific or from Ogden over the Rio Grande Western and D. & R. G. to Pueblo, Denver, or Colorado Springs, there connecting with the C., B. & Q., the C., R. I. & P., the Missouri Pacific——

Q. We know what is meant by those initials, but probably the court which reads your testimony would not know.

A. Connecting at the Colorado common points with the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy; the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific; the Missouri Pacific; and the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe; at Omaha and Kansas City the connections of the Ogden gateway were the various lines operating between Omaha and Chicago, Kansas City and Chicago, or Omaha and St. Louis or Kansas City and St. Louis, 81 or Mississippi River crossings. Do you want me to enumerate those lines?

Q. No; I suppose the Chicago & North Western——

A. (Interposing.) The Rock Island, North Western, Chicago & Great Western, and numerous other lines.

Q. They reached as far as St. Louis and Chicago?

A. Then from Chicago and St. Louis eastward the principal lines were the Pennsylvania, the New York Central, the Baltimore & Ohio and other connections. Of course, there were many other routes—the Wabash in connection with the Grand Trunk or the Clover Leaf in connection with the Lake Shore and various connections. In addition to that there were the routes operating through the Atlantic ports as far south as Newport News or possibly Savannah.

Q. Now, we have had the through route—what we would call the Ogden route—formed by the Central Pacific, the Union Pacific and their eastern connections, and then we have the route via the Denver & Rio Grande, formed by the Central Pacific, the Denver & Rio Grande, and its eastern connections?

A. Yes.

Q. What others?

A. Of course, operating through the Ogden gateway there were various joint through routes, like the M., K. & T., operating in connection with the Union Pacific through Junction 82 City; the St. Louis & San Francisco, operating in connection with the Union Pacific through Ellsworth, Kansas; and the Frisco also had connections with the Santa Fe at the junction point in Kansas. But there were a host of lines that could be made up intermediate with the gateways or beyond the gateways.

Then there was the line—speaking now of the Southern Pacific connections——

83 Q. I asked you as to all the lines that were available to a man who wanted to ship goods from northern and central California points to the Atlantic seaboard.

A. There was the Southern Pacific Line, then, coming through from California territory, operating through Galveston and New Orleans, giving them their long haul, and thence via the Morgan or Mallory Lines. The Southern Pacific also operated in connection with the Texas Pacific via El Paso; it operated in connection with the Rock Island Railroad—I would not say as to just what date the Rock Island was able to reach that territory; they did not get to El Paso, I think, until later than 1901; but the Southern Pacific had connections with the M., K. & T. through—I think the interchange was made through Dennison; I am not positive of that point; I mean the M., K. & T. came down to Dennison, connecting with the Southern Pacific.

In addition, there was the Santa Fe route from California, with its lines through to Kansas City and even through to Chicago.

Q. It reached San Francisco?

A. It reached San Francisco; yes.

Q. And had a through line to Kansas City?

A. And had a through line to Kansas City and Chicago.

Q. Did they not also form a line to Galveston and thence by the Mallory Steamship Line to New York?

A. They also had a line through Galveston and the Mallory. I believe they also operated in connection with the Morgan——

Q. But principally with the Mallory?

A. Principally with the Mallory, naturally.

Then, from that California territory there is the other gateway, through Portland and the northern route to reach the eastern seaboard territory. I am referring to connection with the Great Northern and Northern Pacific.

Q. All these lines or routes which you have mentioned were open to a shipper of goods between the territories I have mentioned?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The rates were practically the same by all?

A. They were the same by all; the tariff rates were the same by all; yes.

Q. Now, the traffic passing between Atlantic seaboard territory and points in northern and central California were large and important at that time, were they not?

A. Very large.

Q. It was actively and vigorously sought after by these different lines?

A. The seaboard California business was actively sought after by all the lines.

Q. Did the eastern connections of the Union Pacific, forming part of this Ogden route, maintain soliciting agents on the coast at that time?

A. As to the trunk lines operating out of New York, I do not know that they all had soliciting agents on the coast at that time.

Q. The New York Central had, had they not?

A. You are going back now fourteen years; I can not recall with definiteness as to representations. The lines operating from Chicago and the Mississippi River westward had representation.

Q. Such as the Chicago & Northwestern?

A. The Chicago and Northwestern. I am inclined to believe that the principal lines, like the Pennsylvania and the New York 86 Central, had agents. I know there was a very large soliciting force in California representing the different lines.

Q. The Union Pacific had soliciting agents on the coast?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. And the Denver and Rio Grande?

A. Yes.

Q. And the Santa Fe?

A. Yes.

Q. And the Missouri Pacific?

A. Part of the time separately and part of the time with the Denver and Rio Grande.

Q. Over what route did the Union Pacific and its eastern connections solicit the routing of freight?

A. The Union Pacific solicited the routing of business via Ogden.

Q. And so did its eastern connections?

A. Its eastern connections, in working with the Union Pacific road would solicit for the movement by Omaha or Kansas City. Of course the eastern connections were also cooperating, working with other routes, from the Missouri River.

87 Q. Were there not eastern connections which were closely affiliated and in sympathy with the Union Pacific line?

A. I would say that during that period, as representing the Missouri Pacific, that certain lines were more closely affiliated to the Union Pacific than to the Missouri Pacific.

Q. Working for the Missouri Pacific you worked for the Denver and Rio Grande?

A. I worked for the Denver and Rio Grande business to Ogden.

Q. And its eastern connections, more closely connected with the Union Pacific Company, worked for the Ogden route?

A. Well, we felt that some of them were a little more loyal to the Union Pacific at that time than the Missouri Pacific. Of course there were connections with the Missouri Pacific, such as the Rock Island.

Q. How did they show that sympathy?

A. We felt there was a larger proportion of business going through the Omaha gateway, through the influence of the old tripartite, the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific, the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul and the Chicago & Northwestern. We felt those lines were operating more strongly with the Union Pacific than they did with the Missouri Pacific, although the Missouri Pacific was also 88 a connection of those lines.

Q. So that the agents of these different through lines, for the traffic to which I have referred, were striving at that time each to secure the traffic for its own through line?

A. The representatives of each line tried to get the business for its own line.

Q. So, when the agents of the Southern Pacific were seeking to secure the traffic I have mentioned for the Sunset Route the agents of the other lines were trying to get it for their lines?

A. They certainly were.

Q. Which was the strongest of those all-rail lines at that time?

A. From what territory?

Q. Northern and central California points to the Atlantic seaboard.

A. The Southern Pacific was the strongest.

Q. I asked which was the strongest of the all-rail lines?

A. The Central Pacific, Southern Pacific, and Union Pacific I would consider the strongest rail line operated to and from 89 California points on business all rail to and from the Central Freight Association and Trunk Line territory.

Q. The Central Freight Association includes what territory?

A. The Central Freight Association included the territory west of Pittsburgh, Cleveland, and Buffalo, and east of Chicago and St. Louis, north of the Ohio River.

Q. By strongest, I suppose you mean it was the most powerful bidder for that traffic?

A. It was the most direct line.

Q. And it secured the most of the traffic?

A. To San Francisco, yes. I would not say that it was as strong at Los Angeles as the lines operating through the El Paso gateway.

Q. Los Angeles would not be included in northern and central California.

A. I know that.

Q. I asked you to qualify it as to northern and central California.

A. Very well.

Q. So that as to northern and central California, in this scramble for the traffic I have mentioned, the Ogden route was the most successful bidder?

90 A. Of the all-rail roads?

Q. Of the all-rail roads.

A. Yes.

Q. Have you ever made up any percentages of the entire volume of traffic passing between the territories I have mentioned, so as to be able to know what percentage passed by any of these different routes?

A. I cannot recall any figures. We had those percentages in the earlier days of the business moving into California by the different gateways and different lines.

Q. At that time the American-Hawaiian Line, which now operates through the Isthmus of Tehuantepec, was not in existence?

A. No; prior to 1901 it was not in existence.

Q. I am informed that very recently the American-Hawaiian Line goes through the Panama Canal.

A. It has now diverted its route to operate through the Panama Canal.

Q. Prior to the opening of the Panama Canal it operated through Tehauntepec?

A. Through Tehauntepec. I do not know the date of that opening.

91 Q. It was not in existence in the period we are talking about, 1901 and prior thereto?

A. It is my impression it was not.

Q. In your direct examination yesterday you were asked this question, and you answered, at page 59, as follows:

"I will get you to state, in your opinion, from the experience you have had and your acquaintance with railroads and with transcontinental lines, whether the Southern Pacific Company, as you have described it, and the Central Pacific Railway Company with its eastern connections, are competitive systems for transcontinental business?

"A. They are competitive systems. The degree of competition, of course, is dependent upon the territory of origin of the business."

Do you mean any more by your answer than this, that the through line formed by the Central Pacific and the Union Pacific and their eastern connections, form an alternative or competitive route with the through line formed by the Southern Pacific lines to Galveston or New Orleans and thence by the Morgan Line to New York?

A. Answering the question there, I would say that the two routes are competitive with each other.

Q. That is what you meant by your answer yesterday?

92 A. I meant that by my answer yesterday, but the question of yesterday was much broader than the question of to-day. Yesterday it was with reference to the entire California traffic, whereas your questions so far have referred to the upper California traffic.

Q. Well, then, your answer yesterday means that as to all through transcontinental business which might pass over and reach its destination either by the through route formed by the Central Pacific and the Union Pacific and its eastern connections or by the route known as the Sunset-California route; that is, with respect to all such traffic those two routes form alternative or competitive routes?

93 A. They do.

Q. That is what you meant by saying that the Central Pacific Railway Company's system and its eastern connections was competitive with the Southern Pacific system?

A. It is competitive.

Q. Do you mean to say that those two through routes were simply theoretically competitive, or were they actually competitive?

A. Actually competitive.

Q. In your testimony yesterday you spoke of an allowance of fourteen days free storage by the Sunset-Gulf Route. Is it not a fact that the all-rail lines allow ten days free storage on the Jersey side and three days on the New York side, and do not count the day of arrival and delivery?

A. On carload business there is ten days allowed on the Jersey side for disposition and reconsignment instruction, delivery not yet having been tendered; held there free for orders. But after it is placed at pier or freight station for unloading, the time is set at two hours for removal of the property from the pier or station.

Q. Then they do get ten plus three days?

A. Yes.

Q. Without counting the day of arrival?

94 A. Without counting the day of arrival, on carload freight that is not consigned direct to a delivery point, and has not been suspended while in course of transportation.

Redirect examination by Mr. Orr:

Q. In your cross-examination you described certain or several transcontinental routes handling the business, and you were asked whether each and all of those routes were actively, through the time you have described, competing for that business, soliciting the business. Do you know whether the Central Pacific had any such solicitors, independently, at that time?

A. I could not answer that definitely. I have understood that the Southern Pacific representatives represented the whole line. I do not recall that there were separate representatives for the Central Pacific and for the Sunset Route.

Q. The Southern Pacific had very active solicitors for such business, had it?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know which way they solicited the business to be routed?

A. Why, out of New York seaboard territory, as would 95 be very natural, they solicited the business by the Morgan line, Sunset Route.

Q. And not by the Central Pacific?

A. No. Well, I would like to qualify that to a certain extent; just as it is with all the lines, that their first effort is to secure the business by the route over a line giving the longest haul. If they can not control the business for that line, they may, and frequently do, join with other lines in securing the business so as to get a haul out of it, regardless of distance.

Q. And in that way they always endeavor, if they can not get the best haul, the longest haul, to get the next best and the next longest haul?

A. Those are natural qualifications of a solicitor.

Q. And either the next best, or even the next best after that, would not include a Central Pacific route from Atlantic seaboard territory?

A. Well, I would say that on the seaboard territory practically two routes only are open in the solicitation of business. One would be by Gulf ports, in connection with their water line, and the other would be by Ogden. I am speaking now of upper California; except as to low-class freight, where time is not very much of a feature, it 96 would be my judgment that the Southern Pacific is jeopardizing their general business by undertaking to get a long rail haul to New Orleans and thence by rail to the seaboard; that is, as to northern California business.

Q. If they did that they would get a longer haul than by going through the Ogden gateway?

A. They would get a longer haul than by going through the Ogden gateway.

Q. And a larger revenue?

A. And a larger revenue.

Q. You spoke of their natural solicitation of business by the water and rail route passing through New Orleans or Galveston. What percentage of the revenue would they get if sent that way?

A. By all-rail through New Orleans?

Q. No; by water to New Orleans and rail to California.

A. If they used the Morgan Line to the Gulf and their rail line beyond, they would get 100 per cent.

Q. Can you estimate the percentage of revenue they would get if sent by Ogden?

A. I could not. I would not undertake to deal with those divisions of rates at this time.

Q. The Union Pacific solicitors naturally sought business of the territory you have described over the Central Pacific and Union Pacific, did they, at that time?

A. If they wanted to participate in the traffic, that is the only way they could solicit—over the Union Pacific by Kansas City and Ogden, or Omaha and Ogden.

Q. And the bulk of the business that went that way came from that solicitation, over that route?

A. No; I would not say that it came through the Union Pacific solicitation entirely.

Q. How would you say it did come?

A. Well, the lines operating from seaboard territory, all-rail, or from Central Freight Association territory to the Mississippi and Missouri Rivers, were soliciting business in competition with the route operating south over the Sunset Route.

Q. You did not understand my question.

(The last three questions and answers were read by the reporter.)

Q. (Continuing.) The point I wanted to make was, or to call your attention to was, the business that went through the Ogden gateway which you have described as moving that way came principally through the Union Pacific solicitation, and not through that of the Central Pacific?

A. The business through the Ogden gateway came through the Union Pacific solicitation, or solicitation of the lines east of the Missouri and Mississippi Rivers.

Recross-examination by Mr. BLAIR:

Q. Do you know, generally, what the conditions now are in regard to the movement of this same class of traffic from northern and central California to the Atlantic seaboard?

A. Oh, I could only speak of that in a mere general superficial way. I am not in the railroad business, but in touch with the movement of traffic.

Q. Do you know enough to answer this question, whether or not the competition for that traffic by the different lines is not as strong now as it was prior to 1901?

A. I do not think it is as strong as it was in 1901 from seaboard territory.

Q. What makes you think that? I am speaking of since the unmerger of the Southern Pacific with the Union Pacific.

A. Well, I only express an opinion based upon a very general knowledge of the situation. I do not feel or believe that the trunk lines are as active in the solicitation of transcontinental business through the Chicago and Mississippi River gateways as they were prior to 1906, or even prior to 1901. There were different conditions existing at that time than those which exist to-day. I think that quite a large volume of business moves from this seaboard territory to Pacific coast points on the solicitation of the Southern Pacific and on the solicitation that is secured by service; so that it moves by way of the Morgan line and the Southern Pacific by reason of the better service. Service is the solicitor nowadays, and it moves by reason of better service than can be rendered by the all-rail routes to Chicago and the Mississippi River.

Q. According to that, if that theory were correct, the proportion carried by the Sunset-Gulf route now would be greater than the proportion carried in 1901, if your theory were correct?

100 A. From the near-by seaboard territory; that is what I was referring to, yes. I do not feel that to-day the Southern Pacific are going as far away from the seaboard territory in securing business against the all-rail lines as they did at that time; but we have to take into account a different condition existing today from that which existed in 1901.

Q. What are those different conditions?

A. One of the principal differences in condition is rebates. There are no rebates to-day.

Q. So that prevents an indirect all-rail line from getting business as successfully as under the régime of rebates?

A. It certainly does. It prevents them from getting business that they did get in the former days.

Q. So that, say, in 1901, or prior to that time, a railroad going south and then north through the Middle West territory, say, might compete with a direct all-rail line from the coast to the Middle West territory through not observing strictly their tariff?

A. Through accommodations given by way of rebates and otherwise, they secured business that they were really not entitled to.

101 Q. And in the present days of the observance of tariff rates they do not try to get this business by indirect routes?

A. They can not.

Q. But as to the main lines—the Santa Fe, the Ogden route, the Western Pacific, which has come in on the scene since 1901, in connection with the Denver and Rio Grande and the Rock Island combination—they compete as actively now as they did in 1901, do they not?

A. The main lines compete very actively now. They are restricted, as I say—some of the main lines in the territory of competition—by reason of natural conditions and by reason of service. A fair illustration of the competition that existed in 1901 and the competition that exists to-day is this: At one time there was considerable traffic moving through Central Freight Association territory—not from Chicago proper, but Central Freight Association territory, Ohio and Indiana points—down by way of New Orleans to California points, and I do not believe there is very much of that business moving to-day, because it is too long a line. To-day that business will move for San Francisco through the Missouri River gateways, very largely, and to southern California through the southwestern gateways.

Q. So that you would naturally expect that if, in the early days, the Southern Pacific tried to secure the routing of that traffic via New Orleans, it would now try to secure the routing of the traffic, if it were to participate in it at all, via Ogden?

A. Unless there is some very exceptional business upon which service cuts no figure, they would certainly solicit the business via Ogden. At least that is the only way that is left to them, I think. They have to please the public to-day in service more than in those days.

Q. The public to-day control the routing of traffic; that is, if the shipper gives routing directions, they have to be followed?

A. There is where different conditions prevail to-day from what they did in 1901. The shipper can designate the way his property shall go. In 1901 he could not.

Q. Mr. Lincoln, eliminating this question of rebates and its effect, and the right of the shipper to route, is there anything which would justify you in saying that competition is less vigorous between these transcontinental lines now than it was in 1901?

A. Well, I could not answer that as to the actual solicitation of business for the transcontinental lines now as compared with then, because I am not in the railroad service; but I can answer the question broadly as to railway traffic as a whole, that there is not as active solicitation of the business now as there was in 1901 or prior to 1906.

Q. Is that due to the more close observance of the tariff rates and regulations?

A. In large part it is due to that and in large part it is due to service, which an irregular route can not compete with.

Q. An irregular route?

A. I am speaking of the general question. I feel that it is also in large part due to the community of interest between railroads. They are allowing business to take its natural routes more than they did in the past. There has been an evolution in railroading since 1910—quite an evolution.

Q. The change in respect to giving up the rebates has a tendency to make traffic seek the best routes—the direct route?

A. It has.

Q. And eliminates the competition by indirect, roundabout routes; is that it?

103 A. It certainly does.

Mr. BLAIR. That is all.

By Mr. ORR:

Q. I believe you stated, did you not, Mr. Lincoln, that the Central Pacific and the Union Pacific was the most direct route?

A. To San Franciso and upper California from seaboard territory and C. F. A. territory.

Q. Do you wish to be understood as saying that if, in the days prior to 1901, the Southern Pacific Company practically controlled the traffic between the territories you have described, it was done by indirect methods?

Mr. BLAIR. Counsel objects to the form of the question as attributing to the witness a statement which I do not think he has made. The witness has never said the Southern Pacific practically controlled the traffic in question.

Mr. ORR. I am afraid you are mistaken about that.

Mr. BLAIR. You do not have to be afraid about it.

Mr. ORR. He did say that, I think. He said that the South-

104 ern Pacific dominated and practically controlled certain territory.

Mr. BLAIR. Will you find that in his testimony? You put that in your question and we objected to it.

Mr. ORR. I know you did, and he answered it. (Reading from page 62 of the stenographic transcript:)

"Q. To your knowledge and from your experience, what transportation company dominates and controls the traffic originating in the territory you have described for transcontinental shipment?"

That was objected to, and there is a good deal of objection in the record at this point.

Then I read from page 63 of the record, near the bottom:

"The WITNESS. If you are speaking of the present time, I would not say that any particular company could dominate the situation as to rates to the Pacific coast. Of course, the Southern Pacific Company, by reason of its extensive lines in California, would and should receive consideration at the other hands in the adjustment of rates. A very different situation exists to-day from what existed prior even to 1910.

"Q. Take the condition as it was. Are you acquainted with the conditions as they existed prior to 1901?

105 "A. Yes, I am——

"Q. I mean on this rate situation—this traffic situation—in the territory you have described, on transcontinental traffic?

"A. It is my recollection that it was about 1901 or possibly 1902 hat the Union Pacific influence over the Southern Pacific came into istence. As to the time prior to 1901, that, by reason of my official nnection with the Missouri Pacific, I was quite familiar with at at time.

"Q. What was the situation at that time, if you know, as to what fluence or what companies dominated—controlled—the traffic in e territory you have described?

"Mr. BLAIR. Counsel objects, etc.

"Q. Go ahead.

"A. Prior to 1901 the Southern Pacific Company was the dominat- g factor in adjusting rates to the Pacific coast. That is very logical d very probable by reason of the territory covered by their rails."

Mr. BLAIR. Now read the next question and you will get to the point.

"Q. I will ask you to state whether you have knowledge of the conditions prevailing prior to 1901 as to what particular mpany or transportation company practically controlled the rate?"

And then more objections.

I continue to read, at the top of page 67.

"Q. The question is, Have you a knowledge as to what company d control it? That could be answered yes or no.

"A. I have knowledge; yes, sir.

"Q. You may state what company it was, or what companies if ore than one, that controlled that rate?

"A. At that time the rates to California were controlled by the outhern Pacific and the Santa Fe Companies."

(By request the stenographer read the pending question, as fol- ws:)

"Q. Do you wish to be understood as saying that if, in the days ior to 1901, the Southern Pacific Company practically controlled e traffic between the territories you have described it was done by direct methods?"

Mr. ORR. Now, what is the objection, Mr. Blair?

Mr. BLAIR. That the witness has never testified that the Southern Pacific controlled the traffic passing between, say northern and central California points and the Atlantic sea- oard.

By Mr. ORR:

Q. You may answer, if you understand the question.

A. I understood, and believed, that the Southern Pacific was the ominating line in the matter of rates to and from California, for e reason that it occupied that territory with its rails; it was the istributing line for a large part of the business from San Francisco, Sacramento, and Los Angeles. Its occupation of the territory naturally made it the dominating line in the question of rates to and from California.

Q. Now, the question; If it did so dominate and control that traffic, do you mean to be understood as saying that it did so through the means you have described as being indirect?

A. No; I do not mean that.

Q. If there is any change in this control of that traffic, you do not mean to say that it is because of the change in conditions you have described?

A. There is a change in conditions not only as to rebates——

Q. I mean, rebating——

108 A. I say there is a change in conditions not only as to rebating but also a change in conditions as to the control of the local territory in California.

Mr. ORR. I believe that is all.

Mr. BLAIR. That is all.

FRANK H. DAVIS was called as a witness on behalf of the petitioner and, being duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. What is your name?

A. Frank H. Davis.

Q. And your residence?

A. Elizabeth, New Jersey.

Q. And your address?

A. 25 Broad Street, New York.

Q. Were you ever connected in any way with Mr. Collis P. Huntington?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did that begin?

109 A. I entered his service February 1, 1881.

Q. And it continued up to what time?

A. Until July 1, 1901.

Q. When you first entered his service in what capacity was it?

A. As clerk.

Q. Through what different capacities did the service extend?

A. I remained a clerk for several years and was then appointed an officer of the different companies. When I left the Southern Pacific I was assistant treasurer in New York.

Q. During all that twenty years were you in the New York office?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was the Southern Pacific office and Mr. Huntington's own office at the same place?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In your position as clerk were you brought into acquaintance with the properties which he held, his investments?

A. To some extent.

Q. Was there a time when you received definite information as to what his investments were?

A. I had a record of his investments on the books which I kept for some years.

Q. That you kept for him?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did that bookkeeping begin?

A. It was very imperfect at the start. I cannot tell you just when a definite set of books was opened for Mr. Huntington.

Q. Can you fix it within certain years?

A. I should say it was before 1885.

Q. When those books were opened up did you enter up on them the different investments that he then had?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. At that time did he have any stock in the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. My recollection does not go back as far as that. I could not tell you.

Q. Do you remember whether he had any considerable amount of such stock, if he had any?

A. I can not recall. That is thirty-odd years ago. I can not recall any detail from the books.

Q. Do you know what has become of those books?

A. I do not.

Q. At this period was there any stock of the Central Pacific Railroad Company standing in your name?

A. I can only tell that by reference to the stock transfer books. I do not recall it.

Q. You mean you do not recall——

A. (Interposing.) Whether any stock was in my name or not. The stock transfer books would show that if there was.

Q. Do you remember whether at any time, during the period of your being a clerk, stock stood in your name?

A. Yes; there was such a time.

Q. Was that stock your own property?

A. It was not.

Q. Do you know who the owners of it were?

A. I could not say that. The stock was the property of different parties who were interested in the Central Pacific; it might have been one or it might have been another whose stock was in my name.

Q. Did you have any general knowledge of how many stockholders there were in the Central Pacific in, say, 1885?

A. I could not tell you.

Q. Did you know whether the number was small or large?

A. I could not tell you that.

Q. Did you know at that time whether there were any stockholders in Europe?

A. From general information. I was not the transfer clerk.

Q. Were the transfer books of the Central Pacific Railroad Company kept in that same office?

A. They were kept on the same floor, in a different office.

Q. You remember the fact of there being a lease made by the Central Pacific Railroad Company to the Southern Pacific Company?

A. From general information. I do not remember seeing the lease.

Q. You knew at the time that it was reported that a lease had been made, as current information?

113 A. Yes.

Q. At that time do you know whether there were European stockholders in the Central Pacific?

A. I am not able to tell that definitely. I assume there were. There had been before that time.

Q. There had been before that time?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know about when the sales to the European stockholders began and ended?

A. I could not tell you when they began or when they ended. When I went there, in the company's employ, stock was being sold.

Q. That is, in 1881?

A. Yes; but when it began and when it ceased I am not able to tell you, because I could not remember.

Q. Through what house were those sales made?

A. Speyer & Company.

Q. Do you know for what account the sales were made—whether it was for Mr. Huntington's personal account or for any joint account?

A. It was for the account of the various individuals who owned the stock.

Q. What individuals?

114 A. Mr. Stanford, Mr. Huntington, Mr. Hopkins, and Mr. Crocker.

Q. Were the sales made on joint account of the four?

A. I could not say. The stocks were sold, and they were credited with the proportion that they had contributed to the number of shares.

Q. Do you know, in 1881, when you went there, how long the sales had been going on?

A. I do not.

Q. Do you recall, then, whether Mr. Huntington had left any considerable amount of the Central Pacific stock?

A. I am unable to state.

Q. We had a conversation about this matter a few days ago, did we?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember the subject matter of the opening up of the books being discussed by us at that time?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you now recall whether or not, when you opened up a definite set of books, there was any considerable number of shares of Central Pacific stock among the shares that Mr. Huntington then held?

A. I do not remember.

115 Q. You had a belief on that subject when we talked the other day?

A. That he had not very many, as I recall; but as to how many, it is impossible for me to remember.

Q. You have the recollection that there were not very many when those books were opened up?

A. Yes.

Q. But how many, of course, you can not recall?

A. No.

Q. And you do not know where those books are now, at this time?

A. No, sir.

Q. And that opening up you place somewhere between 1881 and 1885?

A. I should say before 1885.

Q. You have spoken of stock standing in your own name not belonging to you; can you tell me whether such was the case with any of the other employees?

A. That did not belong to them?

Q. Yes.

A. I should say so. There might have been some instances where a man might have had a hundred or two hundred shares belonging to him, but the greater part did not.

116 Q. Did that stock remain in the name of those employees after the stock itself had been sold abroad?

A. It was delivered in those names. Parties, of course, having the right to send it back for transfer at any time.

Q. Did a considerable part of that stock continue in those names without being sent back for transfer for some length of time?

A. A considerable part.

Q. Do you remember a visit to this country of Sir Rivers Wilson?

A. I do.

Q. Do you remember whether that was in the early nineties?

A. I can not tell you the date, sir.

Q. Do you remember whether any of the English shareholders had transferred their stock prior to the arrival of Sir Rivers?

A. I could not tell you.

Mr. McCLENNEN. That is all.

Mr. BLAIR. We have no questions.

117 THOMAS H. ROSSBOTTOM was called as a witness on behalf of the petitioner, and being duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. What is your full name?

A. Thomas H. Rossbottom.

Q. And your residence?

A. Sound Beach, Conn.

Q. And your address?

A. My business address is 24 State Street, New York.

Q. What is your occupation?

A. I am secretary of the Panama Railroad Company.

Q. How long have you occupied that position?

A. I can not say exactly how long I have been secretary. I should think it is about seven or eight years.

Q. Have you with you certain contracts made with that railroad company?

A. I have here some contracts between the Panama Railroad Company and the Pacific Mail Steamship Company.

Q. Have you an agreement with you dated October 1, 1872?

A. No, I have not.

118 (At this point counsel placed a book before the witness.)

A. (Continuing.) That was not between the Panama Railroad Company and the Pacific Mail Steamship Company. That was a copy of an agreement between the Pacific Mail Steamship Company and a number of transcontinental railroads, that we had in our files. It was not the original agreement.

Q. You had a copy?

A. We only had a copy of that.

Q. And you testified in the case of the United States against the Union Pacific Railroad Company, did you?

A. I just offered that in evidence.

Q. Was that copy which you there offered a correct copy of the original?

A. I do not know. I explained at that time that I did not know ything about it; that I had just found it in our files.
Q. You do not know where the original is?
A. No, I do not.
Mr. DUNNE. He does not know that there is an original.
The WITNESS. I know nothing about it except that I found what purports to be a copy in our files.

By Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. Was the copy in your files of this agreement of October 1872, a printed copy?
A. No; a typewritten copy.
Q. Was it in the files of your company where contracts pertaining to the affairs of the company were kept?
A. No; it was not.
Q. Where was it?
A. It was in our file called "Transcontinental matters."
Q. Where did you keep other contracts relating to transcontinental matters?
A. We kept those in the safe.
Q. In the safe?
A. Yes.
Q. Those were originals that were kept in the safe?
A. Originals were kept in the safe.
Q. Did you have in this same file with this copy of October 1, 72, copies of others, the originals of which were in the safe?
A. No.
Q. You have no copies of those?
A. No.
Q. Did the copy which you found there bear date October 1, 1872?
A. Well, I can not recollect that it did, but from the fact that it as offered as a copy of a supposed agreement of October 1, 1872, must have borne that date at that time.
Q. And was this copy that was introduced in the merger record copy of the one that you then furnished?
A. No; I offered at that time the only copy we had.
Q. You left that with them?
A. I left that with Mr. Severance.
Q. And Mr. Severance was one of the counsel for the Government in that case?
A. I think he was.
Q. You haven't seen that copy since?

A. Well, I would not like to state that, because that would indicate that Mr. Severance had not returned it, but I could not find it.

Q. You have looked?

A. I have looked for it.

Q. In an effort to get it?

A. I only heard of this hearing a half an hour ago, and I 121 looked through my papers in that short interval trying to find it, but I have not been able to find it.

By Mr. GANN:

Q. That was due to the fact that you were away from the office, was it not, Mr. Rossbottom?

A. Yes.

Mr. MCCLENNEN. Petitioner offers as Exhibit 24 the copy from the record in the case of the United States against the Union Pacific Railroad Company just referred to in the cross-examination of the witness.

(The copy referred to was thereupon marked "Petitioner's Exhibit No. 24, September 22, 1914", and will be found in the volume of petitioner's exhibits.)

Mr. BLAIR. Counsel object to the offer on the ground that the exhibit offered does not prove itself, and there is no proof whatever that there ever was any such contract. There is no proof that the exhibit is a true copy of that contract, and, in the alternative, the copy, if it existed and if the exhibit is a true copy thereof, is irrelevant, incompetent, and immaterial evidence.

Mr. DUNNE. And we have not even evidence that the printed copy shown the witness is a copy of the alleged contract to which the question referred.

Mr. MCCLENNEN. I wish you would waive that particular 122 objection, so as to relieve us of the necessity of proving that it is really a correct copy, as it is very evident that it is.

Mr. BLAIR. We have no objection to saying, subject to correction, that we shall not dispute that the printed transcript of the Union Pacific merger case is a correct transcript of the evidence educed in that case, this statement being made to apply to this particular matter.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. Have you with you the original contract between the Panama Railroad Company and the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, dated December 16, 1895?

A. I have.

Mr. MCCLENNEN. This contract the petitioner offers as Exhibit 25. Will you inspect it and then permit us to return it without keeping it as part of the records?

Mr. BLAIR. Have you a copy of this?

Mr. MCCLENNEN. That is in the merger record at page 3293.

Mr. BLAIR. Objected to as irrelevant, incompetent, and immaterial testimony.

Mr. MCCLENNEN. Saving your objection, may I substitute for the original the copy that is in the merger record at page 3293?

Mr. BLAIR. As you have the original there, he is going to copy it anyway, is he?

Mr. MCCLENNEN. Yes.

Mr. BLAIR. Just let him copy the original.

Mr. MCCLENNEN. The original, then, may be returned to the witness?

Mr. BLAIR. Yes.

(The contract referred to was thereupon marked "Petitioner's Exhibit No. 25, September 22, 1914", and will be found in the volume of petitioner's exhibits.)

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. Have you also the contract between the Panama Railroad Company and the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, dated June 11, 1902, and a supplemental contract between the same parties bearing the same date?

A. I have.

Mr. MCCLENNEN. The petitioner offers in evidence as Exhibit 26 the original contract just referred to, and as Exhibit 27 the supplemental contract just referred to.

Mr. BLAIR. We make the same objection as to those.

Mr. MCCLENNEN. And with the same agreement as to the use of the copies?

Mr. BLAIR. Yes.

(The original contract referred to was thereupon marked "Petitioner's Exhibit No. 26, September 22, 1914", and the supplemental contract "Petitioner's Exhibit No. 27, September 22, 1914", and will be found in the volume of petitioner's exhibits.)

By Mr. ORR:

Q. When did this agreement of December 16, 1895, go out of existence?

A. I will have to look at the contract itself. I think in 1902. The contract states when it terminated.

Q. Are you certain it continued until 1902?

A. Well, I can tell you exactly. In 1900 it terminated.

Q. It terminated in 1900?

A. December, 1900.

Q. When did the 1902 agreement terminate?

A. That terminated on July 12, 1905. This agreement of 1902 provided that when the United States Government secured control of the Panama Railroad then we had the right to terminate the 125 agreement upon giving six months' notice, and we gave the steamship company six months' notice on January 12, 1905, so that it terminated six months after that.

Cross-examination by Mr. DUNNE:

Q. Was there any intermediate contract between the expiration in 1900 and the resumption of contractual relations in 1902?

A. Yes; there was a charter agreement between the steamship company and the Panama Railroad by which we chartered their steamers on the Atlantic side.

Q. On the Atlantic side?

A. Yes; at a rate per month.

Q. And that was the only agreement?

A. That was the only agreement.

(Whereupon a recess was taken until two o'clock p. m.)

126 AFTER RECESS.

EDWIN S. ALLEN was called as a witness on behalf of the petitioner, and being duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. GANN:

Q. What is your occupation?

A. I am vice president of the National Railway Publication Company.

Q. And how long have you been vice president of that company?

A. Six months.

Q. How long have you been connected with the company in other capacities?

A. Since 1881.

Q. Does the National Railway Publication Company publish a book known as the "Official Guide"?

A. It does.

Q. How long has that company published such a book?

A. I think it was 1868 it was started.

Q. It has been published for a great many years?

A. Yes.

127 Q. What, generally speaking, is the matter that is published in the Official Guide?

A. It publishes time tables and maps, lists of through sleeping cars, the officers of railroads and connections, index of stations, and so on.

Q. Has it a wide circulation?

A. Yes, it has a wide circulation.
Q. Is it distributed generally among railroad men?
A. Yes.
Q. Have you from your files brought a copy of the Official Guide?
A. I have.
Q. What is the date of the volume which you have produced?
A. June, 1885.
Q. What are the sources from which the information published in that guide is secured?
A. It comes from the officers of the railway companies.
Q. And is it paid for in the same manner as advertising matter?
A. Well, some of it is; some of it is published gratuitously and some of it is paid for.
Q. You carry in that magazine, or publication, editorial matter, do you not?
A. Yes.
Q. That is not paid for, is it?
A. No.
Q. Will you turn to page 223 of the Guide and state what that page covers, generally speaking?
A. It covers a list of the officers of the Southern Pacific Company.
Q. Who held office in June, 1885, or about that date?
A. Yes.
Q. And give the names of the officers?
A. Yes.
Q. Does it also show the division of the Southern Pacific Company's lines as to operating divisions?
A. I can not say as to operating. It says, "Atlantic system, east of El Paso" and "Pacific system, west of Ogden and El Paso." I do not know whether that represents the operating or traffic.
Q. Who furnished you the information upon which that was published?

Mr. BLAIR. Were you in charge in 1885?

The WITNESS. I was not in charge; no sir. I was working on the editorial force.

Mr. GANN. He says since 1881.

Mr. BLAIR. He may have been connected with it without having any knowledge of the sources from which that information is derived. I object to the question until the witness is shown to have personal knowledge of the matter about which he is interrogated.

By Mr. GANN:

Q. You stated that you were an officer and vice president of the company?
A. Yes.

Q. At the present time?

A. Yes.

Mr. BLAIR. Six months.

The WITNESS. Yes.

By Mr. GANN:

Q. And since that time you have been in service—since 1881?

A. Yes.

Q. And, owing to the multiplicity of things that are sent to the office by railroad companies, could you have personal knowledge of each and every order that was sent to the office of the National Railway Publication Company?

130 A. No, sir; I could not.

Q. Have you in your possession, or the possession of the National Railway Publication Company, at this time, the original order or orders upon which the information published on page 223 was published?

A. I have not.

Q. Have they been destroyed?

A. They have been destroyed.

131 Q. I will read from the deposition that was given by Mr. R. H. Pratt in San Francisco on Tuesday, July 14, 1914, at the instance of the defendants in this case. On page 22 there is this language, and I will ask you to compare the language shown on page 223 of the Official Guide for June, 1885, with it, and say if it agrees with the words shown in this deposition:

"The general traffic manager, under the direction of the general manager of the Pacific system, will be charged with the handling of all through business of the company and that interchanged by or which may be competitive as between the Pacific and the Atlantic systems"——

The WITNESS. "And the Atlantic system."

Q. Does that language coincide?

A. It coincides with the notice appearing about the middle of this page.

Q. Does the page also show that Mr. John C. Stubbs was at that time general traffic manager of the Southern Pacific Company?

A. J. C. Stubbs.

Q. Does that page show that the line from El Paso to New Orleans, designated a part of the Atlantic system, appears anywhere as a part of the Pacific system?

132 A. I can not say as to that.

Q. The constituent lines making up the Atlantic system and the Pacific system are shown, are they not?

A. I do not understand that they are divided here.
(Counsel indicates on page 223.)
A. (Continuing.) That does not apply; it does not show that those are the eastern Atlantic system.
Q. Is there a description on page 223 of the Atlantic system which says "east of El Paso"?
A. Those words are used.
Q. Are the words "west of Ogden and El Paso" attributed to the Pacific system?
A. Yes.
Mr. GANN. The petitioner offers in evidence as Exhibit 28, page 223, of the Official Guide, dated June, 1885.
Mr. BLAIR. Before making objection, I desire to ask the witness a question which is the basis of the objection.

By Mr. BLAIR:

Q. Do you of your own personal knowledge know that that information was obtained from any report made by the Southern Pacific Company?

A. I do not.

Mr. BLAIR. Counsel objects to the evidence offered on the ground that it is not the best evidence, that no foundation has been laid for introducing secondary evidence, and the matter appearing on the page offered has not been traced to any of the defendants in this case, and, furthermore, generally on the ground that the evidence is immaterial, incompetent, and irrelevant.
(Page 223 of the Official Guide, June, 1885, was thereupon marked "Petitioner's Exhibit No. 28, September 22, 1914", and will be found in the volume of petitioner's exhibits.)
(No cross-examination.)

THOMAS M. SCHUMACHER was called as a witness on behalf of the petitioner and, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. Your residence?
A. New York.
Q. And your address?
A. 21 East 82nd Street.
Q. Will you please state your connection with the railroad business, giving the different capacities in which you have acted, the roads for which, and the times in which, chronologically, as nearly as you can?
A. That is quite a long story. I can give you the detail of it; I can file it with you; I have a copy of it in my office, but it is a very long story. I have made a good many changes. However, I will go through with it, if you desire.

Q. If you will, I think it will be very convenient to have it.

A. Shall I go back to the time I started in the railroad business?

Q. I think so; yes. We want indirectly to find out how old you are in that way, without asking the question.

A. I started in at 16 as a telegraph operator on the Erie Railroad; from there to the old Bee Line, which is now part of the Big Four, as freight clerk.

Q. You started when?

A. When I was sixteen.

By Mr. ORR:

Q. What year?

135 A. I was born in 1862. I can not make all these figures for you here. From the old Bee line, I railroaded there for two or three years, as a clerk and trainman, brakeman and fireman, and yard conductor. From there to St. Louis, I went with the Burlington, I think it was, as clerk; from there to the Missouri Pacific. I am going over this hurriedly and not giving you all the details, but I will later—that is, after I get a little further along I will give you a little more detail. I was with the Missouri Pacific, I think, four or five years, and from there to the Big Four again as cashier at East St. Louis. Then with the Union Pacific in 1887 as chief clerk in the general agent's office at St. Louis, October 1st, 1887. I was in that position until April 1st, 1891, when I went to Omaha as chief clerk in the general freight office of the Union Pacific. I was in that position until November 1st, 1894, and then I went to San Francisco as general agent in charge of the freight business of the Union Pacific in California. I was in that position four years. I left and was made to go with the Continental Freight Express as general manager and vice president, with headquarters in San Francisco. I was there two years and returned to the Union Pacific as general agent in

136 San Francisco, and was there about a year, and was sent from there to Salt Lake City in charge of the traffic of the Oregon Short Line, a part of the Union Pacific system. I was in that position four years. From there I came to New York as general manager of the United Fruit Company's Steamship Line. I was in that position for one year. From there I went with the El Paso & Southwestern as general traffic manager, with headquarters at Chicago four years. From there as vice president in charge of traffic of the Denver & Rio Grande and Western Pacific, six months. From there I returned to the Union Pacific and was assistant director of traffic of the Union and Southern Pacific systems for six months; thence to the American Smelting and Refining Company, in charge of their traffic, for two years. From there I returned to the El Paso & Southwestern as vice president, and there I have been since, and last November I was made chairman of the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railway board. I think that is pretty close to correct.

137 By Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. In those positions have you had a general knowledge of transcontinental freight matters for a number of years?

A. Since 1887.

Q. What, in railroading, is described as transcontinental freight?

A. Freight that has its origin or destination east of the 97th meridian, I believe, which passes through Freemont, Nebraska. I may not be correct as to the number of the meridian, but that is the line—freight having its origin or destination east of that meridian and picked up or laid down on the Pacific coast, west of the Sierra Nevadas.

Q. That definition has been true for many years past?

A. I do not know of any other definition.

Q. There is a territory, is there not, known as the "Seaboard freight territory" or "Atlantic seaboard territory"?

A. Yes.

Q. What is that territory?

A. I do not believe I could answer that question accurately as to how far from the seaboard west is considered seaboard territory. I do not believe I can answer that question.

138 Q. Can you state how far south it extends?

A. My understanding is that seaboard means "seaboard"—on the seaboard. When you go west of the seaboard you get in so-called trunk-line territory.

Q. In the movement of freight from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and the reverse, is there a certain territory, not immediately on the water line on the Atlantic, which is, nevertheless, rated as seaboard territory?

A. Yes.

Q. And is there any exactly defined western boundary line to that territory?

A. I do not know of any.

Q. Is there a territory on the Atlantic seaboard from which freight is drawn to the seaboard for shipment around to the Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And in the ordinary operations, about how far west does that territory run?

A. Well, I think that varies largely with the rates and the commodities involved. On some commodities the rates are low and the seaboard lines can go farther west than they can on some other commodities. I do not believe there is any definite line—I 139 never understood that there was any definite line. They go as far as they feel they can, and take care of the locals. That is my understanding.

Q. When you say "take care of the locals", am I right in understanding you to mean that the lines running by water from New York will carry to California at the New York rate, bearing themselves the charge from the interior to New York?

A. I believe they still do that. I know they did years ago; when I was in the transcontinental business they did that, and I suppose they do yet.

Q. Is that what is called "absorbing the rate"?

A. Absorbing the locals to the seaboard.

Q. Is there a territory known as Central Freight Association territory?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And, roughly, what are the boundaries of that?

A. The eastern boundary is an imaginary line from Buffalo to Pittsburgh, thence following the Ohio River, I think, north of the Ohio River and as far west as the Mississippi River. The Mississippi River is the western boundary line, and the imaginary line through Buffalo and Pittsburgh is the eastern boundary line and the Great Lakes the northern boundary and the Ohio River the southern boundary.

140 Q. Is there any hiatus between the eastern boundary line of the Central Freight Association territory and the Atlantic seaboard territory?

A. I do not know of any.

Q. Is there a territory known among railroad men as the "Western trunk line territory"?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And about what territory is that?

A. The Western trunk line has its eastern boundary at Chicago and Chicago junction points and the western boundary line is the Missouri River.

Q. Is there a territory known among railroad men as the Trans-Missouri territory?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What, roughly, are the boundaries of that?

A. I am not as positive of that. I believe the eastern boundary is the Mississippi River and the western boundary is—well, it runs up to the Colorado junctions; in fact, it takes in the intermountain country; the trans-Missouri freight bureau publishes or promulgates all tariffs, naming rates between the Mississippi River on the East, Kansas, Nebraska, Colorado and Utah on the west.

Q. And that includes as well the Inter-Mountain——

141 A. Yes; not beyond Ogden.

Q. Then is there a rough general description for the rest of the territory west?

A. Yes.

Q. What do you call that?

A. The territory comprising Arizona, Nevada, eastern Oregon, and western Idaho. I do not know of any specific name for that territory. The rates are published both by the Trans-Missouri bureau and by the Transcontinental bureau. I think both bureaus handle those tariffs. The dividing line on the Oregon Short Line between Trans-Missouri and Transcontinental is Kuna, Idaho; Ogden on the Central and Union; and Albuquerque on the Santa Fe.

Q. Going back, now, to your railroading at the time of 1881, was there any means of getting into California and Nevada and the western slope generally by rail other than through the Ogden gateway and the Central Pacific Railroad?

A. No; not all-rail.

Q. What was the next gateway that was made into California?

A. I do not believe I can answer that question from memory.

142 Q. It appears that in 1883, in February, the Sunset Route was in operation through El Paso. Up to that time was there any other gateway than Ogden and El Paso into that Pacific slope territory?

A. I do not know. The Santa Fe and—the Atlantic & Pacific was built before that, I know—I am not prepared to answer that question.

Q. At the present time are there any means of getting into California with any reasonable directness by rail other than through the Ogden gateway, through El Paso, and, third, over the Santa Fe?

A. Yes.

Q. What other means?

A. There is the San Pedro Line, Salt Lake & San Pedro, from Salt Lake to Los Angeles—a very direct line.

Q. That connects with the Union Pacific at Salt Lake?

A. And the Denver & Rio Grande also.

Q. And that connection was made about when?

A. 1905; July 7th it was opened for business.

Q. Is there any other?

A. Of course, the northern lines all take business for California.

Q. And by the "northern lines" you mean what?

A. The Northern Pacific and the Great Northern. They 143 handle California business by the way of Portland.

Q. Does the Canadian Pacific——

A. I do not believe they are in the business now. They went out of the business some time ago.

Q. Is the business for California which goes over the Northern Pacific or the Great Northern of a substantial amount, comparatively?

A. No; I should not say so.

Q. What means of access did the Missouri Pacific have to California during the periods when you were connected with that road?

A. With the Western Pacific? You say "that road."

Q. Were you not connected with the Missouri Pacific?

A. No; I was with the Western Pacific.

Q. I beg your pardon.

A. Oh, when I was a clerk for the Missouri Pacific, you mean?

Q. Yes; away back.

A. I think we had a line in connection with the M., K. & T. through El Paso.

Q. And the M., K. & T. is what?

144 A. The M., K. & T. at that time was a part of the Missouri Pacific system.

Q. But I mean, for the court's purposes, will you not give the full name?

A. The Missouri, Kansas & Texas was a part of the Missouri Pacific as well as the Iron Mountain; and some other freight went via the Iron Mountain and the Missouri, Kansas & Texas to Texarkana or Dennison, and thence by the Texas & Pacific to El Paso.

Q. And from El Paso over what?

A. Over the Southern Pacific; and also through the Missouri Pacific to Kansas City, and thence over the Union Pacific to Ogden or the Santa Fe direct. The Union Pacific traffic, of course, went over the Central Pacific.

Q. The Western Pacific that you have mentioned runs from where to where?

A. Salt Lake to San Francisco—to Oakland.

Q. Does it pass through Ogden?

A. No, sir.

Q. That was opened about June, 1910, was it?

A. In 1910, I think.

145 Q. At the present time are there any other ways than these that you have just described of reaching California from the eastern half of the country by rail?

A. I think we have mentioned them all.

Q. What is the method by which the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul reaches California?

A. Yes; we omitted that one. They have their own rails, of course, to the Pacific coast—Seattle. I believe they have a traffic arrange-with some of the lines, the O.-W. R. & N., that lets them down Oregon, and with the Southern Pacific into California. I am rtain of that, however. Of course, they take business to Coun- Bluffs and there turn it over to the Union Pacific. That is their California line.

Q. What is the course of the Burlington with freight for the cific?

A. Their longest haul is to Billings, Montana. They also have a to Denver, where they connect with the Denver and Rio Grande, another line to Cheyenne, where they connect with the Union cific. I think the Cheyenne line has been closed recently, so that r routes to California would be, first, through Billings, and, sec- ond, through Denver—earnings considered.

Q. Disregarding questions of intercorporate relations, what would be the ordinary course which freight would take, if not anced otherwise, from and to northern and central California, say th of Fresno, and from Nevada to and from the Central Freight ociation territory and territory east of that and north, say, of line of the Norfolk & Western near the southern boundary of ginia?

A. It would move through Ogden.

Q. And, moving through Ogden, would take it over what line to th Ogden?

A. From California?

Q. From California.

A. Either the Central Pacific or the Western Pacific. They are allel lines.

Q. And before 1910?

A. The Central Pacific only.

Q. When you were connected with the Union Pacific, in charge at Francisco, from November, 1894, for the ensuing four years, was Southern Pacific engaged in seeking traffic from northern and tral California to the east and the reverse?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In what way was that traffic sought?

A. Well, it depended on how far east the destination or point of origin might be. If it was east of Toledo, Detroit, In- apolis, Cincinnati—take that line, say; on and east of that line; r influence was directed to the Sunset line, their long haul, and of that line through Ogden.

Q. By the Sunset line you are describing the lines through El so to Galveston or New Orleans and thence by water to New York; you?

A. No.

Q. What?

A. I mean by their Sunset line to the territory mentioned—th is, the middle west territory that would move all rail via New O leans in connection with the Illinois Central, the L. & N., the Sout ern Railway, the Queen & Crescent. If destined to Atlantic s board points then they would work it by water from Galveston
New Orleans in connection with the Morgan Steamship Line.

Q. During that period was the Sunset line competitive with th lines composed physically of the Central Pacific and the Union P cific, using "competitive" in the sense of both lines havin 148 the facilities to take the business and the Sunset line seekin to get it by the Sunset line?

A. Were they competitors?

Q. Yes.

A. Very much so.

Q. What was your strongest competitor during that period wh you were representing the Union Pacific?

A. The Southern Pacific—to that particular territory?

Mr. DUNNE. To which particular territory?

The WITNESS. East of the line that I spoke of.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. At that period did the Union-Central line have any other i portant competitor?

A. They had the Atchison.

Q. Do you remember about when the Atchison got into California

A. Well, they were into Mojave—I do not know the date; I cou not give you the date.

Q. But it was considerably before that, was it not?

A. Oh, yes; but into San Francisco, I should say, along in 18 or 1897.

148a Q. That was over the tracks of the Southern Pacific, und some trackage arrangement, was it?

A. Yes; by using the Southern Pacific tracks from Mojave Bakersfield, 65 miles, and buying the San Joaquin Valley Railroa
I believe.

Q. Do you remember whether or not possibly the actual gettin into San Francisco by the Atchison over its own line was in Ma 1899?

A. Possibly as late as that; I thought a little earlier than th
That may be correct.

Q. And do you remember about when the Atchison got to Ch cago, at the other end?

A. They built into Chicago, I should say, in 1899 or 1900, or abo there. That is a guess, however, I am not positive of that.

Q. Do you know to what extent—of course not stating it in tons or in dollars, but in general—the Sunset Line was taking the freight of central and northern California to the Atlantic seaboard, as compared with that moved over the Central through Ogden?

A. Well, for any particular time?

Q. Take it during the time you were in San Francisco, from 1894 to 1898.

A. I do not believe I could give any figures; I can not give any figures as to that; but the Ogden lines got very little of that business. The strong line was the Sunset line, through the Gulf ports.

Q. What were the circumstances that led to the success of the Sunset line in that competition? That is, what did that line have to offer that succeeded in controlling such traffic as it did control?

A. Well, they had their local organization in San Francisco, which has always been very strong. They could do a great many things locally for shippers that a foreign line could not do; I mean legitimate things. Their service was better.

Mr. BLAIR. You are speaking of what time?

The WITNESS. From 1894 to 1898.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. In general were the rates the same of both lines?

A. Yes.

Q. Where rates are the same, what are the elements of competition? What can railroads offer to induce traffic one way or the other—legitimately?

A. Principally service.

Q. And by "service" you cover how much?

A. I do not quite understand your question.

Q. Do you mean time in transportation?

A. Transportation schedules; yes.

Q. Ability to keep to schedules?

A. Yes.

Q. Settling claims promptly also, I suppose?

A. Yes; the manner in which they take care of the business, in every way.

Q. Do you remember the occurrence, which was, in fact, in 1901, when the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific came under a common organization to some extent?

A. Yes.

Q. Commonly called "the merger"?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you notice the effect which that had upon the attempts to influence business by the Sunset line in preference to the Central Pacific, as compared to what it had been before?

A. I will answer that in this way: That merger had the effect of moving the eastern terminus of the Central Pacific, you might say, to Omaha, stretching their haul a thousand miles and increasing their earnings proportionately. The line over which they solicited freight was moved east accordingly; instead of passing through Detroit, Toledo, Indianapolis, and those cities, they moved into Pittsburgh, we will say. That business moved through Omaha; not entirely so, however, but the earnings being much more favorable through Omaha than they had been before, that line was favored.

Q. The reason for favoring the Sunset Line was what? That is the reason for the Southern Pacific's favoring the Sunset Line was what?

A. Because their haul was longer and their earnings were greater.

Q. And even after this so-called junction, we will say, between the Central and the Union, as I understand you, they still sought the seaboard business by the Sunset Route?

A. Yes.

152 Q. Including in that business that which was east, say, of Pittsburgh and Buffalo?

A. Not so accurately, I do not believe; that is, around Pittsburg territory. The Atlantic seaboard was solicited by the Sunset Route I think, we will say, as to Pittsburgh territory they were rather neutral as between Omaha and Sunset. It depended somewhat on the commodity.

Q. After that 1901 merger what was the condition in the Central Freight Association Territory? Did they reverse things and seek by the Union-Central, or did they let it take its own course as between that way and New Orleans?

A. I do not believe I could answer that question; I did not come in contact with that particular traffic at that time.

Q. Take Chicago business before 1901. Was the Southern Pacific making an effort to get it by New Orleans?

A. Well, very little, if any.

Q. How was it after 1901?

A. Exclusively through Omaha.

Q. Take another point: Cincinnati. How was that before 1901 and after?

153 A. Before 1901, Sunset. I think after the merger they favored the Ogden route or the Omaha route.

Q. Was there in the growth of the country, or in business conditions, or in any other way any reason for the change in the lines over which the traffic moved other than the change in the manner or extent of the solicitation?

A. I do not believe I quite understand your question.

Q. Without putting it down on the record again—you have indicated a change in 1901.

A. Yes.

Q. I am asking you whether there was anything other than the change in the soliciting efforts to account for that change?

A. I may be dense on this, but I don't get that question.

Q. Undoubtedly the denseness is mine. I am perfectly willing to assume it. I am right in understanding you, am I not, that after 1901 the proportion of the traffic moving through Ogden from this central territory was greater than it had been before 1901?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, I asked you whether there was any reason for that change in proportion, other than the change in the effort of the Southern Pacific organization, which before, as you say, had been very vigorously directed towards the Sunset line?

A. Well, the reason for more traffic moving through Omaha is because the Southern Pacific helped to put it that way rather than through New Orleans.

Q. Did you have an opportunity to observe the effect of the merger of 1901 on the traffic over the Central Pacific through Ogden which theretofore had passed over the Denver & Rio Grande and Missouri Pacific?

A. Yes.

Q. What was the effect?

A. Well, after the merger the Denver & Rio Grande takings were very materially reduced.

Q. Am I right in saying that it was because it moved over the Union Pacific more exclusively rather than over the two lines?

A. Yes; that is what built the Western Pacific.

Q. The Western Pacific was built as an ally of the Denver & Rio Grande and Missouri Pacific?

A. Can you tell me, of the commodities which moved from this northern California and perhaps Oregon region, and perhaps Nevada, over the Sunset Route which, as a matter of normal traffic, would go over the Central Pacific and Union Pacific and Missouri Pacific if it was not diverted the other way?

A. To what eastern territory?

Q. To the Atlantic seaboard.

A. Of the principal commodities moving through southern Oregon and northern California for the Atlantic seaboard the principal commodity is hops, I believe. They move generally by the Sunset Route. They had for many years, and I suppose they do yet. Some canned goods move from there; wool from Nevada. I guess those are about all.

Q. I call your attention to copper. What knowledge have you about that?

A. There is a large copper smelter in the Shasta Mountains north of Redding. There were two there, but I think one is closed down, the Balacallelo. I do not know just what their output is, but they are quite an important shipper of copper, which all moves to the Atlantic seaboard by the Sunset.

156 Q. You spoke of wool from Nevada. Do I understand you mean that eastbound wool is carried west over the Central Pacific to the Southern Pacific by the Sunset Route?

A. It is moved that way if it is possible. I could not speak accurately of the last few years.

Q. In large or small quantities?

A. There is quite a considerable quantity of wool produced there, and a great deal of it moves over the Sunset line; not all of it, however; some over the Ogden line.

Q. How far east in Nevada was wool taken around by this long haul going west and then east?

A. I do not know whether the Southern Pacific did come east of Winnemucca or not; I don't think so.

Q. Do you know whether they have taken it that way around from as far east as Corrinne?

A. Yes; shipments have moved that way, but not in considerable quantity. Kelton was quite a shipping point in my days out there they moved from there, too, but not very much.

Q. In your experience with this general railroad situation prior to 1901, had you ever known of any effort being exerted by the Southern Pacific to get any transcontinental freight over the 157 Central Pacific except that freight which they were unable to control for the Sunset Route?

A. Sunset first, always, to that territory.

Mr. BLAIR. To which territory?

The WITNESS. East of what we used to call the "dead line"; I don't know just what the description is, but Sunset preferred always.

By Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. This is the first time you have used that expression "dead line"; what do you mean by the words?

A. I do not believe I can describe that now; I did have it at one time; but approximately Detroit, Toledo, Indianapolis, Cincinnati on and east of that line, I should say; that may not be quite correct but approximately so.

Q. After the merger, so called, in 1901 were considerable sums spent in the upkeep and improvement of the Central Pacific Line?

A. Yes.

Q. What was the condition of that line up to 1901?

A. Physical condition?

Q. Physical condition.

158 A. Well, it was a fairly good—what we call a dirt railroad; very little ballast except over the mountains on their heavy grades, laid with 60 and 70 pound rails and kept up just fair.

Q. How would it compare for efficiency and comfort with that same road now?

A. About 50 per cent, I should say.

Q. Was any effort made by the Southern Pacific to get transcontinental passenger traffic over the Sunset?

A. Yes.

Q. What was done in that regard?

A. Well, they favored the Sunset Line on passenger business very largely. I believe they were the first to put on a high-class train that stayed on. The Union Pacific put on a so-called limited train, the Golden Gate Limited, I think it was called, or Golden Gate Special—the Golden Gate Limited, I guess, probably in 1889 or 1890. That train was put on and operated for part of one season and discontinued; it was not a popular train. Two or three years later the Southern Pacific put on the Sunset Limited, and I think ran it once a week, and it has been on ever since; in fact, it is a daily train now.

Q. You say that the Union Pacific was not a popular train. What do you mean, with the traveling public?

159 Q. They made a lump charge, which included transportation, sleeping-car accommodations, and meals, and it was not a popular train, I think, on that account very largely. The charge was rather excessive compared with the rates made by other limited trains. Do you know the reason for that high charge?

A. Well, that was by agreement between all the lines interested—the Northwestern and the Union Pacific and the Central Pacific. It was an experiment; it was the first train of the kind to be put on.

Q. What have you observed as to freight schedules over the line of the Central-Union and the line of the Sunset and as to the regularity with which the schedules were kept prior to 1901?

A. I think they were equally good both ways.

Q. About what was the normal length of time of freight hauled from San Francisco to New York over the Central-Union and the eastern connections and over the Sunset Route?

A. That time varied a great deal from year to year and at different times in the year; all the way from ten days to twenty-five or thirty days by rail, all rail, and the Sunset time was probably 17 or 18 days.

160 Q. It was what?

A. Oh, 17 to 20 days.

Q. Prior to the time that the Atchison got into San Francisco what were the possibilities, as a practical matter, of the other railroads making rates to California or establishing any particular through service against the objection of the Southern Pacific?

A. We usually did as they wanted us to do.

Q. And why was that?

A. We could not get in in any other way. Mr. Stubbs was the boss.

Q. That is, Mr. J. C. Stubbs?

A. Yes.

Q. What position did he occupy in the Southern Pacific?

A. He was vice president, in charge of traffic. That meant a great deal more than it does nowadays, though.

Q. What is the comparative effect upon the routing of traffic of the initial carrier and the intermediate carrier or the delivering carrier?

161 A. As to where it is controlled, you mean?

Q. As to how it is routed? I mean if the shipper does not exercise his present rights, what is the comparative opportunity and power of the Southern Pacific and the Union Pacific, and, say, the Northwestern, over traffic originating in Southern Pacific territory?

A. And simply routed Southern Pacific?

Q. No other route specified.

A. No other route specified?

Q. No other route.

A. They would take their long haul; every railroad would do that.

Q. Would it be accurate to say that in the majority of cases of the actual shipment of freight the wishes of the initial carrier determine the route that it will follow?

A. Yes.

Q. About how long has it been that shippers have done much about making their own through routing? I do not refer to the actual time when the law was passed, but how long has it been, as a practical matter, that shippers have done much themselves about insisting upon the through routing since the date named?

A. They have been active in that way ever since I have been in the business.

162 Q. After June, 1910, when the Hepburn Act was passed, have they had much success about it?

A. Yes; I should say so.

Q. Did you know about the orange routing situation in California?

A. Yes.

Q. What was the situation there, say, from 1899 to 1910?

A. Prior to the law being passed?

Q. Yes.

A. The initial lines did most of the routing by reason of the fact that they had arrangements made for icing this freight that had to be iced in transit, and they did not have icing arrangements by all the lines, so that the freight necessarily had to move over the lines with which they had icing arrangements.

Q. Do you know whether they actually reserved the right in their tariff to do their routing?

A. Yes; I think they did.

Q. You have spoken of the influence of the Southern Pacific as the initial carrier in California; what is the influence of the 163 Southern Pacific as the initial carrier in New York?

A. Well, it is not as strong as it is in California. Their line out of here is a water line, and they do not serve an immense big State like they do in California nor originate the business that they do in California, and naturally they have not the influence.

Q. Do they maintain active soliciting agents in New York?

A. Yes, sir; very active.

Q. Do you know how high the percentage of the New York-San Francisco business has moved over the Sunset Route at times?

A. At any time?

Q. Yes; take the apex.

A. Well, I think if you would go back into the eighties, they probably took as much as 90 per cent of the New York-San Francisco business over their Sunset Line. That has decreased, however, gradually since that time. I do not know what percentage they take now, but I would not say as much as 50 per cent.

164 Q. If it is not taxing your memory too much, can you tell me what division of the joint rate was made between the lines west of Ogden and the Union Pacific and the trunk lines?

A. The division of the rate between New York and San Francisco?

Q. Yes.

A. I think I could give you that. Without the bay transfer and the Missouri River bridge the rates divide in this way:

First, take out 25 per cent for the lines east of Chicago; of the remainder, take 15 per cent for the line between Chicago and the Missouri River; from that result, the proportion accruing to the lines between the Missouri River and San Francisco would divide: 54 per cent to the Union Pacific and 46 per cent to the Central Pacific.

That is not exactly correct, because there are some bridge and bay transfers deducted and added back, but they will not change it materially. That is the old basis and, as far as I know, it is still in effect and never has been changed.

165 Q. As you have observed it in actual railroading, if a line such as from San Francisco to Ogden is in control of a company whose only means of moving the traffic is over that line, a company which wants that traffic, is the public likely to get better, worse, or the same accommodations that it would get if that line was in control of a company that had another line, say, through El Paso and New Orleans, over which it wanted to move all of the business that it could?

Mr. BLAIR. I object to that as not calling for any facts or for any expert testimony, but for a mere opinion of the witness.

The WITNESS. Let me see if I understand you correctly. If I understand you correctly, if one ownership owns both lines?

(At the request of counsel for the petitioner the reporter repeated the pending question.)

The WITNESS. Does not your question contradict itself there? You say that this company owns a line between San Francisco and Ogden, that it has no other way of handling this traffic, and then you say it owns another line around by the way of El Paso?

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. That is the comparison I made. I put two situations
166 to you: One, this railroad from San Francisco to Ogden, owned by one company that owns no other road, but simply has its connection with other roads for a through line; that is one situation. Then I put you another case, of that road being in the control of a company which also has another line from San Francisco by El Paso and New Orleans to the terminal points, and ask you whether in the first case assumed or in the second case assumed, as you have observed railroading, the public is likely to get the better accommodations over the San Francisco-Ogden line. Or, put shortly, if a company's attention is devoted exclusively to getting traffic over the one line, San Francisco-Ogden, will the public be apt to get better service over that line or will it not, than if that company's attention is directed to getting the traffic as far as possible over another line?

A. I understand your question, I think, and I will answer it in this way: The more competition the better service the public will get.

Q. And, as a practical matter in railroading, does the control of the two lines by one company operate, by so much, as a restraint upon the competition?

A. To some extent I should say so; yes.

167 Q. I am not sure whether I have asked you in terms yet whether, in your opinion, the Sunset line is a competing line with the Central Pacific-Union Pacific line for the eastern territory that you have described.

A. Yes, sir; it is.

Q. Has enough time elapsed since the "unmerging", I will call it, of the Union and the Southern, in 1913, to be able to judge yet of what the effect has been in the way of assisting toward restoring competition of the union which had existed before 1901?

A. I do not believe I can answer that. I have not been with those lines since, and I am not familiar with it. I do not know the facts.

Q. After shippers have become habituated to sending traffic in a given way that they have been induced to follow, are they apt to keep on doing that for some time, even if the inducement ceases?

A. I have found them very changeable.

Q. Are shippers generally influenced to any considerable extent by the solicitation of freight solicitors?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. If the Central Pacific Railroad was separated from the 168 Southern so that the intermediate central lines, conspicuously the Union Pacific, had open opportunity to determine rates and matters of through freight without any influences of those interested in developing the Sunset line, what, in your opinion, would be the effect upon the traffic over the Central line?

A. Well, so far as fixing rates is concerned, it would not have any effect.

Q. And how with respect to the volume of traffic and service accommodations, getting cars, and such matters?

A. I doubt if it would have very much effect. Other lines make the competition.

Q. You mean by "other lines", which lines?

A. The Santa Fe and the San Pedro, the northern lines—there are so many lines that fix the competition. The competition is not just between two lines. All lines enter into it.

Q. What would be the effect as to the volume of traffic passing over the Central?

A. If they had their own organization in San Francisco—local?

Q. Yes.

A. Ownership there?

Q. Yes.

169 A. I think it would help.

Q. What are the means of water communication from San Francisco to the Orient at the present time?

A. The steamship lines?

Q. Yes.

A. From San Francisco to the Orient I think there are three lines: The Pacific Mail, the Nippon Yusen Kaisha, and the third line is the Toyo Kisen Kaisha. There are three lines, as I recollect.

Q. It appears that the Pacific Mail is a company controlled by the Southern Pacific. Do you know about the other companies?

A. I think the others are independent lines.

Q. There was an Oriental & Occidental Line, was there not?

A. Yes. That no longer exists.

Q. When did that go on and when did it go off? Do you remember?

A. I do not believe I could give you those dates, in and out; but soon after Mr. Harriman had control of both properties I think the O. & O. was eliminated from the service.

170 Q. By Mr. Harriman getting control you refer to what we have been calling the merger of 1901?

A. Yes; but the Jap line was substituted at that time, as I remember.

Q. Did you know of the fact of the closing of the Roseville gateway during the period of the merger?

A. For what particular traffic?

Q. For traffic in Oregon north of Ashland and destined to points on the Atlantic seaboard and east of the Mississippi River.

A. I am not certain about that. Of course, the line never amounted to much; it never was very wide open; so the closing—we would not make much of a note of it.

Q. By "wide open" you mean jocularly to intimate that there was not a great deal of traffic moving there?

A. It never was a natural line for any of that traffic.

Q. What constitutes the opening and closing of a gateway?

A. Well, taking the rates out or putting them in.

Q. That is, it does not mean that traffic can not move through that junction?

A. Yes; it does. If there are no rates through a certain 171 junction, the traffic can not move that way; it would be overcharged, because the one line would charge its local up to the junction and the other line would charge its local beyond, which might be fifty per cent higher than the through rate, so that traffic can not move without the through rates applying.

Q. That is, opening a gateway is putting in a tariff, a joint rate, through that gateway?

A. Applying through that gateway.

Q. And closing it is taking that joint rate off?

A. Yes. Of course, the physical connection must be there.

Q. Did you know anything about the existence of the transcontinental agreements between the Southern Pacific and various other roads relative to through business?

A. No; I am not familiar with those.

Q. What is a differential, Mr. Schumacher?

A. I do not know that I can give you a Webster definition of a differential, but I will explain it to you in this way: One line may charge a certain rate, say, a hundred per cent rate, for the reason that it is the shortest and best line. Another line may make a rate five or ten per cent less, because it is an inferior line, so it is termed a differential line.

172 Q. Has the Southern Pacific at any time attempted to get differentials for the Sunset line?

A. I think they have tried to make it a differential line, but they have never succeeded.

Q. Why was that?

A. For the reason that it has always been considered as good a line as any between the two coasts.

Q. And when you say they have tried, I understand you to mean that they have tried to persuade the competing railroads that their line was in such a condition that they ought to have a differential?

A. Yes.

Q. Without its being regarded as a rate war?

A. Yes; largely for the reason that it is part water.

Q. That leads me to ask you: are there some kinds of freight that will not move part water and part rail?

A. Oh, there are a few commodities, but we find they are very few.

Q. Do you know whether any fruits move by the Sunset line from southern California?

A. Well, by the rail lines, a great deal of it.

Q. That is, coming through El Paso; and how far over the Southern Pacific?

173 A. Well, via the El Paso route and by the different gateways in Texas, several different gateways, they move California fruits of all kinds; for instance, citrus fruits going into the Southern States they move to New Orleans, and deciduous fruits may move that way, too.

Q. Does the time of the year or the temperature affect at all the possibility or feasibility of shipping fruits by the Southern line?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Prior to the opening of the Western Pacific, was the Union Pacific absolutely dependent on the Central Pacific for getting into California?

A. Oh, they could get in there by the way of Portland and water.

Q. That is, by going up over the Oregon Short Line to Portland and then down by water?

A. Yes; but it is not a very desirable route, and not worked very strong at any time. The more they worked it the worse they were off.

Q. If I am not borrowing, was it a "practicable" route?

A. No; I never regarded it so, because I tried to get the business that way.

174 Mr. BLAIR. We might interpose the objection of estoppel, as the Government contended exactly the contrary in the Union Pacific merger case, and the Government counsel in their brief, and the Supreme Court agreed.

The WITNESS. That it was a practicable route?

Mr. BLAIR. Yes.

The WITNESS. If they had to solicit business like I did, they would not have thought so.

Mr. BLAIR. It shows the ingenuity of Government counsel.

Mr. MCCLENNEN. I am afraid my esteemed friends are paraphrasing the Supreme Court rather freely in the description they give of what the Supreme Court said.

That is all, Mr. Schumacher.

Cross-examination by Mr. BLAIR:

Q. Mr. Schumacher, will you name the principal now existing through all-rail lines for transcontinental traffic between the Atlantic seaboard and, say, northern and central California points? Probably you might best describe them by their western connections.

A. You mean the western connections of the lines going into Chicago and St. Louis?

175 Q. I mean to suggest that you could probably more definitely describe them by beginning with the——

A. (Interposing.) California lines?

Q. Yes.

A. And radiate from California?

Q. Yes.

A. I do not know how accurately I can give that. I am a little rusty on those things. However, I will try. The Southern Pacific Sunset Route and its connections—shall I name the different gateways?

Q. Yes; you might name the different gateways.

A. Its connections at Tucson, El Paso, Alpine, San Antonio, Houston, New Orleans; there is an intermediate point there where they connect, I think, with the Kansas City Southern; I do not recall the junction.

Q. And they connect at El Paso with the Texas & Pacific?

A. Oh, yes; Texas & Pacific. There are two connections there at El Paso; and Beaumont for the Kansas City Southern. I may have omitted the Frisco junction. I know they have a connection there, but I do not know the name of the junction.

Q. That is one set of all-rail transcontinental lines?

A. Yes.

176 Q. Now, what other set?

A. We will take the Atchison next. They have a connection with the Colorado & Southern through Pueblo, the El Paso & Southwestern at Vaughn, New Mexico; the Frisco at Medora, Kansas, I believe. Then they connect with the Mallory Line at Galveston, and at the Missouri River with all the Missouri River lines.

Q. Have they not a line from San Francisco to Chicago?

A. Yes.

Q. A direct line?

A. A line direct from San Francisco and all California points, practically all of them, to Chicago, where they connect with all the eastern lines.

Q. What others?

A. Then we have the so-called San Pedro route from Los Angeles to Salt Lake. It there connects with the D. & R. G., the Oregon Short Line, Union Pacific, and all of its connections—all of the connections of those lines east.

Q. That are controlled by the Union Pacific?

A. Or the D. & R. G.; they connect with both.

Q. It is controlled by them with the Union Pacific?

A. Yes; they are equal owners, I think. Then we come north 177 to the Central Pacific. They connect at Ogden with the Union and the Denver & Rio Grande; and, of course, through those lines, have access to all of their eastern connections, which practically means every railroad east of the Missouri River.

Q. You have the Western Pacific?

A. And then the Western Pacific, which connects at Salt Lake with the D. & R. G.; and they also have an arrangement to work with the Union Pacific through the Oregon Short Line and the Union Pacific. Their connection is practically the same as the Central Pacific.

Q. It might be said that the Central Pacific, the Union Pacific, and its connections make one line, and the Western Pacific and Denver & Rio Grande are a closely affiliated line, are they not?

A. The Western and the D. & R. G.?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes; one ownership.

Q. You have modestly omitted your own line.

A. The Rock Island? The Southern Pacific does not connect directly with the Rock Island at El Paso. They connect with the El Paso & Southwestern, and we connect them with the Rock Island on the north.

Q. So that makes another line?

178 A. Yes.

Q. And the Rock Island reaches Chicago in that way?

A. Yes.

Q. Through——

A. (Interposing.) Chicago, St. Louis, and Memphis are our principal eastern points.

Q. Would it not be correct to say that the main line, the more direct line, that runs from northern and central California points to the Atlantic seaboard territory is the line made by the Central Pacific, the Union Pacific and its eastern connections, the Western Pacific, the Denver & Rio Grande and its eastern connections, the Santa Fe running through to Chicago, and the Southern Pacific and Rock Island reaching to Chicago?

A. Yes.

Q. They are the more direct, the principal lines for the traffic that I am referring to?

A. Yes.

Q. Which of those lines were not in existence in 1901? Was the Western Pacific and Denver & Rio Grande combination in existence? I know the Denver & Rio Grande was, but was the Western Pacific?

A. The Western Pacific was not.

179 Q. The Rock Island had not been completed in 1901?

A. No. Well, the Rock Island connection into El Paso had not been completed.

Q. Are there not now two mixed rail and water lines which offer alternative routes for the movement of traffic between the points I have named?

A. By the Gulf ports?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes.

Q. One of these is the Sunset-Gulf route we have heard so much about?

A. Yes.

Q. What is the other?

A. The other water line?

Q. Mixed rail and water line. What does the Santa Fe do?

A. The Santa Fe have a connection with the Mallory Line. The T. & P. also have a connection with the Mallory Line.

Q. The T. & P. does not reach San Francisco?

A. It connects with the Sunset at El Paso, and from there goes on to New Orleans, and has a service with the boat line; that 180 is, with the Morgan Line; but they can reach the Mallory Line through Galveston, by way of the I. & G. N.

Q. That furnishes a mixed rail and water line?

A. Yes.

Q. And the Santa Fe from San Francisco, in connection with its affiliated lines in Texas, reaches the Mallory Line at the Gulf, and has a close working arrangement with them for a through mixed rail and water line from California to the Atlantic seaboard territory?

A. Yes.

Q. Are there not some other lines, known as the Isthmian lines, which furnish alternative routes for traffic between northern and central California and the Atlantic seaboard?

A. Yes.

Q. Which are those two?

A. Well, the Pacific Mail—I suppose they are still in the business—in connection with the Panama Railroad and Panama steamships.

Q. I am not speaking of the events in the last two or three months.

A. No. Well, then, this Pacific Mail, in connection with the Panama Railroad and the Panama Railroad steamships on the east side; the Pacific Mail on the west coast. That makes a through line by the way of Panama.

181 Q. And which is the more powerful of the water lines that have come into existence in recent years?

A. The American-Hawaiian.

Q. And where is its route?

A. It has been by way of the Tehuantepec Railroad across the Isthmus of Mexico, but recently they have started through the canal.

Q. The American-Hawaiian Line was not in existence through the Isthmus of Tehuantepec or through the Panama Canal in 1901 or prior thereto?

A. No.

Q. So that since 1901 there have been additional transcontinental lines for the movement of traffic between northern and central California and the Atlantic seaboard territory?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, the traffic passing between those territories, I suppose, is large and valuable in amount?

A. Yes.

Q. And increasing, is it not?

A. Yes.

Q. Is it not contested for by these different through lines that you have mentioned, you and I together?

189 A. Yes.

Q. Is the contest vigorous or sluggish?

A. Vigorous.

Q. And active?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, take the Central Pacific-Union Pacific lines, whatever of that traffic it now secures it gets in competition with the other railroad lines, and as a general rule in competition with the Isthmian lines and the mixed rail and water lines?

A. Yes.

Q. Is it able to strive successfully for a portion of this traffic?

A. The Union and Central Pacific?

Q. Yes; now?

A. Yes.

Q. Would it not be true to say that it is the strongest competitor for that traffic now?

A. You mean to San Francisco?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes.

Q. By strongest you mean the most successful?

A. Yes.

183 Q. Notwithstanding all this competition?

A. Are you speaking of the Atlantic seaboard business?

Q. I am speaking of the Atlantic seaboard business, but not exclusively from the city of New York.

A. I will change my answer on that. I do not consider the Union and the Central Pacific strongest from the Atlantic seaboard. I think the Sunset is.

Q. Is it the strongest of the all-rail lines?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you any figures which would enable you to say with any degree of confidence that, taking the Atlantic seaboard territory as a whole and not confining your attention exclusively to the city of New York or the port of New York, that the Sunset-Gulf route now carries more of that traffic than passes over the Central Pacific-Union Pacific line?

A. Well, I do not know; I could not answer that accurately; but my thought is that the Sunset carries more than any one line; not more than all the all-rail lines, but more than any one.

Q. Is it a more powerful competitor for that class of business than the American-Hawaiian Line?

A. Well, since the American-Hawaiian Line is operating 184 through the canal I should say that they are the strongest now.

Q. They are the strongest line now?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, is there not some of this traffic which, either by reason of its character or by reason of its packing, does not admit of transhipment, and the competition therefor is limited to the all-rail lines?

A. Oh, there are a few commodities.

Q. There are a few commodities, but are they not important in volume?

A. Well, some of them are important. Take the fruit; the green fruit, of course, does not move through the Gulf ports, and that is a very important commodity.

Q. It is very important both in amount and in value?

A. Yes.

Q. That would include perishable fruit, which requires refrigeration or ventilation?

A. Yes.

Q. That is a kind of traffic that is very desirable?

A. Yes.

Q. And vigorously competed for?

A. Yes.

Q. That would include deciduous fruit, citrus fruit, vegetables, oysters, and fresh meat, would it not?

A. Yes.

Q. Then is there not a great deal of traffic which goes packed in ice which can not be unloaded in transit?

A. Well, we used to think so, but we are getting away from that. We find that we can handle nearly all of it over the water lines.

Q. And even that shipped in tank cars?

A. Not tank cars.

Q. Well, a good deal of it goes in tank cars?

A. Not very much.

Q. Wine, asphalt, and oil?

A. We can handle wine all right in bulk; we are doing it every day.

Q. And freight stored in cars in bulk?

A. Yes.

Q. And freight which by reason of its character must be loaded in the car and run to destination?

A. Well, there are a few commodities which will not permit of transfer, but very few of them.

Q. I am not dealing so much with the number of commodities, but upon the value of the traffic. The possibilities from that traffic would represent quite a large figure, would they not?

A. Yes.

Q. It is very valuable traffic?

A. Very.

Q. How about automobiles?

A. I do not know that any of them have ever been handled by ships; that is a large figure, a large traffic.

Q. There is a considerable movement in that commodity?

A. Yes.

Q. As a general thing these through rates on transcontinental traffic are the same over the different roads?

A. Yes.

Q. Rates do not, then, cut much of a figure in the striving for the traffic?

A. No.

Q. And how do the different lines go about it in securing this traffic? What agencies do they put to work to secure it, each for its own line?

A. Well, they have solicitors that go around to the different 187 shippers and beg for the business, day in and day out.

Q. Who controls the routing of traffic nowadays, at the present time?

A. Well, usually the man in charge of the shipping of a large institution, or a small one for that matter.

Q. In other words, the shipper?

A. The shipper; yes.

Q. Now, take the westbound traffic from the Atlantic seaboard to northern and central California points, how is that solicited for?

A. Westbound from Atlantic seaboard to central and northern California points?

Q. Yes; how is it solicited for?

A. It depends on the solicitor. If it was a Northern Pacific man he would solicit for his road, and if it was a Union Pacific man he would solicit for his road.

Q. Then it is solicited for by agents or representatives of the different railroads forming part of the different lines?

A. Yes.

Q. And that solicitation takes place at what end?

188 A. Sometimes at both ends of the lines. They solicit both the consignee and the consignor.

Q. In other words sometimes the consignor controls the routing of the traffic and sometimes the consignee?

A. Yes.

Q. And the result of that is that the different lines taking part in these different through routes maintain soliciting agents both in the east and in the west?

A. Yes.

Q. And those soliciting agents, in case of a westbound shipment go after the consignor in the east and go after the consignor in the west?

A. Yes; they work every way they know how.

Q. Have the western lines, the Rock Island, the Santa Fe, the Union Pacific, the Western Pacific, and the Denver & Rio Grande eastern sales agents?

A. Yes.

Q. And that is true of the Isthmian lines?

A. Yes.

Q. And true of the Sunset-Gulf line?

A. Yes.

Q. And these different soliciting agents try to secure the forwarding of traffic over their lines?

A. Yes.

189 Q. Over the line they represent?

A. Yes.

Q. Is the competitive solicitation between these lines or routes that I have mentioned mild or vigorous?

A. Vigorous.

Q. And active?

A. Yes. There is not enough business to go around.

Q. Now, we have had some talk with respect to the traffic between the Atlantic seaboard territory and northern and central California to be preferentially solicited by the Southern Pacific via the Sunset Route. When the Southern Pacific agent is trying to secure this traffic is he the only Richmond in the field?

A. No.

Q. He meets with the Union Pacific and its eastern connections is striving to get that traffic by the Ogden route?

A. Yes, they are all there trying to get it.

Q. And the consignor sits up and determines by which route his traffic shall go?

A. Yes, usually the consignor on that business.

190 Q. And would not what I have said in respect to solicitation by these different roads apply to east bound traffic between the same points?

A. Yes.

Q. Was that true substantially in 1901 and prior thereto as to the lines then in existence?

A. Well, there were not so many lines, but there were enough lines to make the competition.

Q. If there has been any change there is more competition now than there was in 1901?

A. Yes.

Q. You have spoken of the through line formed by the Central Pacific and the Union Pacific and its eastern connections, that through line offering an alternative or competitive route for the Sunset-Gulf Line, we will say. Do you mean that that was theoretical competition, or is it actual?

A. It is actual.

Q. And always has been within your memory?

A. Yes.

Q. Except I suppose from the time of the merger?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, as to your connection with the Union Pacific; dur-

191 ing your connection with the Union Pacific was there a through service over the Central Pacific and Union Pacific via Ogden?

A. Passenger or freight?

Q. Both?

A. Both.

Q. Joint rate?

A. Yes.

Q. Through contracts of shipment?

A. Yes.

Q. Through passenger tickets?

A. Yes.

Q. Through freight trains?

A. Yes.

Q. Were those arrangements for through service over the Ogde Route such as to admit a movement of through transcontinenta traffic over that route?

A. Yes.

Q. What was the relation between the Union Pacific and the South ern Pacific prior to 1901; friendly or unfriendly?

A. Very friendly.

Q. Which route was preferred in connection with the South

192 ern Pacific for traffic that did not pass over the Sunset Route

A. Well, I used to think they preferred the D. & R. G., b the D. & R. G. man thought that they preferred me, so that I do n believe we can decide that. The eastbound business at Ogden divid about 45 and 55 per cent, 45 per cent to the Denver & Rio Gran and 55 per cent to the Union Pacific. I used to think the Denver Rio Grande got too much.

Q. Was that determined in any way by the amount of deliver which those lines made to the Union Pacific or made to the Centr Pacific?

A. That was a factor, but not the only one.

Q. That was what the Southern Pacific strove to observe, was i

A. Yes.

Q. Now, were there not arrangements for handling through traf such as I have described prior to 1901, satisfactory to the Uni Pacific?

A. Yes.

Q. You never made any complaint in regard to that?

A. No.

Q. Do you know whether there still exists these through trai through service, and through rates?

A. Yes.

193 Q. At the present time by the Ogden Route?

A. Yes; I think the service is better, if anything, than it was then.

Q. Do you know of any two connecting lines under independent management which have any closer relations for operation as one continuous line than exist between the Southern Pacific and the Union Pacific via Ogden?

A. No.

Q. So, so far as the public is concerned in regard to rates and time of transportation, they are operated as one continuous line, are they not?

A. Yes.

Q. You spoke of a quite large percentage that the Southern Pacific secured for the Sunset-Gulf Route in the eighties. Was that not due to the fact that the service on all the all-rail lines for through business was not very good?

A. Well, that probably had something to do with it; but I think there were other reasons more potent than the service.

Q. Well, has not the proportion which the Sunset-Gulf Route secures of this transcontinental business been a greatly diminishing quantity?

194 A. Yes.

Q. From year to year?

A. Yes.

Q. And it is less strong in influence now than it was at any time?

A. Yes; it is decreasing.

Q. And likely to be decreased in the future with the opening of the Panama Canal?

A. Yes.

Q. So that the outlook is that whatever empire or dominion the Sunset-Gulf Route exercised over the traffic passing from California to the Atlantic seaboard territory is a past empire or a failing or receding control?

A. I should think on the wane.

Q. The service over the all-rail lines is very much improved since 1901?

A. Very much.

Q. The ability of the Southern Pacific to offer superior service—if it ever had that ability—is less now than it ever was, is it not?

A. Well, it has grown less in the last few years.

195 Q. You spoke of the condition of the Central Pacific line from 1894 to 1898, and you stated that its present condition was very much better?

A. Yes.

Q. That would be true of pretty nearly every railroad, would it not?

A. Yes. But I think the Central is quite marked in its improvement.

Q. And the Union Pacific has been quite marked in its improvement?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, in regard to transcontinental passenger service, were you speaking of passenger service by the Sunset-Gulf Route?

A. Yes.

Q. How long did it take a passenger to go from New York by ship to New Orleans and thence to San Francisco?

A. I think the time from here to New Orleans is five days by ship, and from there to San Francisco—well, I do not know what the schedule is now, but it is longer than it is from Chicago, I think.

Q. How long does it take them to go from San Francisco to New York via Ogden?

196 A. Well, it is possible to make the run in four days.

Q. So that you have a nine-day run on one hand and a four-day run on the other?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you any idea as to the relative amount of passenger business which goes over the Ogden Route as compared with the passenger business which goes over the Sunset-Gulf Route via New Orleans?

A. I can not speak as to figures; I suppose it is greater by Ogden.

Q. In 1901 and prior thereto the Union Pacific had only one line to make use of between Ogden and San Francisco—the Central Pacific?

A. Yes.

Q. And now has two lines, the Western Pacific also?

A. Yes.

Q. In 1901 and prior thereto the Union Pacific had a line to Portland and then from Portland by water to San Francisco, did it not?

A. They had a line; yes.

Q. We are influenced by the contentions made on the one side in the Union Pacific merger suit, and you might call that a re-197 taliatory line. Now, what other line was there reaching into California, into the Pacific Ocean? What other line has it control of?

A. The San Pedro.

Q. That is a good strong line, is it, and goes into Los Angeles?

A. Yes.

Q. In 1901 the Hepburn bill had not been passed, had it?

A. I hope it was not.

Q. And the Interstate Commerce Commission had no authority to compel connecting lines to make through routes and through rates?

A. No; my recollection is that they don't undertake anything of that kind.

Q. In 1901 the shipper had not the right by law to direct the routing of the traffic?

A. I do not know about that.

Q. Assuming, then, that in 1910 the Interstate Commerce Commission for the first time required the railroad companies to observe the routing directions of shippers; assume that, and also assume that since 1901 the Interstate Commerce Commission has had the right not only to establish through routes and through rates with 198 connecting lines, but to establish reasonable divisions, if they meant to agree among themselves?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, taking into consideration all these changes since 1901, would you say that the Union Pacific is more or less at the mercy of the Southern Pacific by reason of its control of the Central Pacific now than it was in 1901?

A. I do not see that their condition has changed very much; I do not think they are very much better off now than they were then or very much worse off then than they are now.

Q. Are they more or less at the mercy of the Southern Pacific now than they were then?

A. They are not any more at the mercy of the Southern Pacific.

Q. Are they not very much less?

A. I don't think so. They have another connection, which is more helpful to them than anything else.

Q. And the Southern Pacific could be required by the Interstate Commerce Commission to establish through rates with the Union Pacific?

A. Yes.

199 Q. It could be compelled to make fair divisions with them?

A. Yes.

Q. The Union Pacific has two retaliatory lines now where it had one in 1901?

A. Well, not to San Francisco.

Q. What is that?

A. They have one line to San Francisco and one to Los Angeles. They have not two lines to San Francisco; that is, two other than the Central.

Q. They have a line to Portland.

A. I don't call that a line at all, and never did.

Q. We tried for years, I understand, not to call it a line, but the Supreme Court put it on the map.

A. Well, it is not on my map.

Q. And that high authority having put it on the map, we should try to keep it there.

Mr. McCLENNEN. I think we ought to object to your incorporating in that question a statement of fact not yet in evidence.

Mr. BLAIR. Before I asked the question I established the existence of the line via Portland and also the control of the Union Pacific over the line to Los Angeles.

200 Mr. McCLENNEN. My objection was directed to the accuracy of your description of what the Supreme Court had said or done.

Mr. BLAIR. That is something so easy of correction by the Supreme Court that if it is not correct it will hardly do any harm.

Mr. McCLENNEN. I thought it would be more apt to do good, so far as that is concerned.

Mr. BLAIR. Then I am surprised that you object to it.

Mr. McCLENNEN. I was afraid the gift would be overlooked.

201 Redirect examination by Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. Mr. Blair has spoken of the different lines of communication from San Francisco to the East, and among others he mentioned the Panama route formed by the Pacific Mail Steamship Company and the Panama Railroad and the boats on the east side of Panama. That is the same Pacific Mail Steamship Company which is controlled by the Southern Pacific?

A. Yes.

Q. You assented to Mr. Blair's question to the effect that there were no two separate lines forming a continuous route which were more closely connected than the Central and the Union. Do you refer in that answer to anything more than physical connection?

A. Yes; the physical connection, and they make through rates, run through trains, their working arrangements generally are friendly to the territory other than Sunset territory.

Q. Did you mean any more than what you have now described by your answer?

A. No.

Q. There are connecting lines which form a continuous 202 line where both of the connecting lines seek to throw all the traffic possible over the connection, are there not?

A. Yes; there are cases of that kind; usually the same ownership, however.

Q. That might be described as a more close union than a line the operators of which were seeking to divert to a certain route as much of the traffic as possible?

A. There may be connections that work 100 per cent with each ther. The Central and Union do not, but aside from their Sunset erritory, I do not believe two lines could work any more closely ogether than the Union and Southern or Central.

Q. But so far as Sunset territory is concerned, the reverse is true?

A. Yes, sir.

The Southern Pacific would favor their long haul.

Q. The connection between the Western Pacific, for instance, and he Denver & Rio Grande, and the connection between the El Paso Southwestern and Rock Island, is much closer than that between he Central and the Union?

A. I would not say "much closer"; they are closer, because they work practically all business in connection with each other, 08 although they have other affiliations; but probably not as much so as the Southern Pacific has with its Sunset line.

Q. You also, as I understand, assented to Mr. Blair's statement hat the Union and the Central were operated as one continuous ne. By that you, of course, meant, among other things, that they ad joint rates, that there were through trains——

Mr. BLAIR. Counsel objects to counsel for the petitioner leading his n witness and practically answering his questions for him.

(By request, the reporter read the pending unfinished question.)

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. Did you mean to include more than that; and if so, what?

A. No; I think that covers it.

Recross-examination by Mr. BLAIR:

Q. Mr. Schumacher, the fact that the Southern Pacific sometimes licits traffic for its Sunset Route which would otherwise pass over e Ogden route or some other through-rate line—does that inter- re with the arrangement for through service via the Ogden route?

4 A. No.

Q. It does not have any effect upon that?

A. No, sir.

Q. The soliciting or routing of traffic has no essential connection ith the existence of arrangements for the handling of through affic so as to make the two connecting lines a continuous line for the ssage of freight?

A. No.

Q. Counsel asked you about a line of steamships to Panama, the cific Mail. Is there not another line in operation, the Luckenbach ne?

A. I do not know about it.

Q. You are not prepared to say whether or not there is another line in operation than the Pacific Mail?

A. No; I do not know about it.

By Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. Does the soliciting done by the Southern Pacific for the Sunset Route have the effect of diminishing the amount of traffic which normally would go over the Central and Union, or does it not?

A. Yes.

(Whereupon an adjournment was taken until to-morrow, Wednesday, September 23, 1914, at 10.30 o'clock a. m.)

205 THIRD DAY.

ROOM 720, CUSTOM HOUSE,
New York City, September 23, 1914.

Before Special Examiner Frank R. Hanna.

Present on behalf of the United States: Mr. Orr, Mr. McClennen and Mr. Gann.

Present on behalf of the defendants: Mr. Herrin, Mr. Blair, and Mr. Dunne, for the Southern Pacific Company, et al.; and Mr. Trafford, for the Union Trust Company of New York.

Mr. McCLENNEN. Please note upon the record that it is agreed between counsel for petitioner and the counsel for the defendant that the petitioner is not to be taken, by virtue of the stipulation contained in petitioner's Exhibit No. 14, to have conceded the validity of the deed of July 29, 1899, from the Central Pacific Railroad Company to the Central Pacific Railway Company noted on that exhibit under the list of officers for the year 1900.

Also, please note, without agreement, to avoid any misunderstanding, that none of the stipulations made or to be made are to be taken as an admission by the petitioner of the validity of the lease from the Central Pacific Railroad Company to the Southern Pacific Company of February 17, 1885.

206 The petitioner reserves the right to attack the validity of this lease under the claim, of which the petitioner gives notice, that this lease is invalid as being in violation of the rights of the stockholders of the Central Pacific Railroad Company and of the public, not properly authorized, and ultra vires, and not permitted under the Federal legislation accepted by the Central Pacific Railroad Company, and not permitted by the charter of that company, and not permitted by the statutes and laws of the State of California, or by the constitution thereof.

WILLIAM SPROULE was called as a witness on behalf of the petitioner and, being duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. Your residence?

A. San Francisco, California.

Q. And your address?

A. Personal?

Q. Or business.

A. Flood Building, San Francisco, is my business address.

207 Q. You are the president of the Southern Pacific Company?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you hold any official position in the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, the Central Pacific Railroad Company, or the Central Pacific Railway Company; and if so, what?

A. I am president of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company. I am a director in the Central Pacific Railway Company, I believe is the corporation, and I may be a director in the Central Pacific Railroad Company, but I do not recall for the moment. The manual that counsel has will show that.

Q. You are one of the persons named as defendants in this case?

A. I am.

Q. You are temporarily in New York on other business of the company?

A. Yes.

Q. How long have you been connected in any way, as employee or otherwise, with any of those four companies just mentioned?

A. From 1882 to 1906 and from 1911 to date.

208 Q. Your connection from 1911 to date has been as at present?

A. As at present.

Q. During the five years from 1906 to 1911 were you not associated in any way with any of those concerns?

A. I left the service in 1906.

Q. From 1882 to 1906, will you please state the different capacities in which you served from time to time and with which companies?

A. I was in clerical capacities from 1882 to 1887. I became assistant general freight agent in 1887, general freight agent in the beginning of 1898, and freight traffic manager later in that year. That position I retained until I resigned from the company's service in 1906 to engage in other business.

Q. In what department of the work were you engaged clerically from 1882 to 1887?

A. In the freight department, under the general freight agent; subsequently under the freight traffic manager, and then under the general traffic manager.

Q. Were your positions from 1882 to 1887 such as to make you conversant with the general courses of the movement of freight over the Southern and Central Pacific Railroads?

A. In a general way, yes.

209 Q. Were you in the railroad business from 1906 to 1911?

A. No; I was in the express business in 1911.

Q. What concern?

A. Wells-Fargo & Company. I was its president.

Q. President of Wells-Fargo & Company during that period?

A. Yes.

Q. Is that a company that is affiliated in some way with the Southern Pacific Company?

A. No affiliation.

Q. I want to ask you a few questions relative to the map, Petitioner's Exhibit No. 1. Will you note this purple marking and see whether or no it represents correctly the lines of the Central Pacific Railroad?

A. I think so. On that small scale it is hard to tell whether the lines are precise, but in a general way that shows it.

Q. Does the marking in red upon the same map correctly represent the lines operated or controlled by the Southern Pacific Company, other than the Central?

A. I think so.

Q. Do the lines in blue correctly represent the lines operated by the Union Pacific Railroad?

210 A. Those are the lines of the Union Pacific Company. We have no line at present, or in contemplation, from Grants' Pass in southwestern Oregon running, as shown on the map, toward the coast. The hatched lines on this map from Kirk in the southern part of Oregon to Oak Ridge, shown in hatched lines in purple, have not been constructed. Also the line from Eugene Junction in the western part of Oregon, running west and south to Myrtle Point, is under construction, but has not been completed. Also the line from Fernlee in the western part of Nevada to and through Susanville in the eastern part of California, shown here in red, should be shown as purple, as it is owned by the Central Pacific Railway Company. Also the line in red from Harrington, in the north central part of California and running northerly toward Calusa, is under construction. The line from Hazen in the western part of Nevada to Mojave in the southern part of California, shown in purple, that part which is between Mina in the western part of Nevada and Owenyo in the eastern part of California is narrow gauge. The lines in red running north from Maricopa in the southern part of Arizona, and from Bowie in the southeastern part of Arizona, shown in red, are properties of the Arizona Eastern Railroad Company.

Q. The entire capital stock of the Arizona Eastern Railroad Company is owned by the Southern Pacific Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know approximately how long the company has owned the whole or a majority of the stock of that company?

A. I do not.

Q. A part of this line, indicated in red on this map, is made up of the Galveston, Harrisburg & San Antonio Railway Company?

A. Yes; that is east of El Paso.

Q. The capital stock of that company outstanding, stated in dollars at par, is $27,084,372, of which the Southern Pacific Company owns $27,055,900?

A. As to those matters, if you do not wish to accept the figures that are shown in the annual report, I would suggest that you ask those questions of the comptroller, because these are questions with which I, as the operating officer in charge of the Southern Pacific properties, do not myself deal.

Q. I understand. I am taking these right from the annual reports as the simplest way of getting them in the record.

A. I do not wish them to be given as answers from myself.

Q. It would be correct to say that that is what is shown in the annual report of the company?

A. If that is what is in the annual report, yes.

Q. The tracks of the Galveston, Harrisburg & San Antonio Railroad Company, the main line of them, runs from what point to what point?

A. El Paso to Houston.

Q. I am correct, am I, that the annual report of the Southern Pacific Company shows that the capital stock of the Louisiana Western Railroad Company, in dollars at par, is $3,360,000, all of which is owned by the Southern Pacific Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The line of that railroad is from what point to what point?

A. From New Orleans—I forget its junction with the G., H. & S. A.

Mr. BLAIR. It extends from at or near the boundary line between the States of Texas and Louisiana to Lafayette, formerly Vermillionville, in the State of Louisiana; that is the Louisiana Western.

Mr. MCCLENNEN. And is part of the main Sunset line?

Mr. BLAIR. It is a part of the Southern Pacific system and is a part of what you have designated as the Sunset Route.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. Am I right that the annual report of the Southern Pacific Company shows that the capital stock of the Texas & New Orleans Railroad Company, stated in dollars at par, is $5,000,000, of which the Southern Pacific Company owns $4,999,100?

A. Those are the figures, as shown on page 46.

Q. What are the termini of that railroad?

A. It connects the G., H. & S. A. with the Louisiana Western Railroad Company. I am not familiar with the junction points down in that country.

Q. Am I right that the same report shows that the capital stock of the Morgan's Louisiana & Texas Railroad & Steamship Company, stated in dollars at par, is $15,000,000, all of which is owned by the Southern Pacific Company?

A. It is so shown on that page of the annual report, yes.

215 Q. What are the termini of that railroad?

A. Can you answer that, Mr. Blair?

Mr. BLAIR. That railroad runs from Lafayette to New Orleans, but it has extensive branches in other directions. That may be said of the Texas & New Orleans Railroad Company. It has extensive branches which do not form a part of the Sunset Route.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. The same report shows that the total outstanding stock of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, stated in dollars at par, is $160,000,000, all of which is owned by the Southern Pacific Company.

A. Yes.

Q. That road runs, with numerous branches, from San Francisco, California, to El Paso, Texas?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know how long any of these ownerships have been, substantially as described in this report?

A. Any of them?

Q. Yes.

A. Originally, in 1882, when I went with the company, it 216 was the Central Pacific. In 1885 it became Southern Pacific, and many of these lines were then built; others of them have since been built. They were constructed for purposes of public travel and interlaced from time to time as demand for the transportation caused construction, and the convenience of financing placed them with either company.

Q. When you say that it was "Central Pacific" and became "Southern Pacific" you are referring, I take it, to the operating title, not meaning to convey the idea that there was a change of name of the same corporation?

A. I refer to the operating title.

Q. The Southern Pacific Company did not come into existence at l until the latter part of 1884; is that correct?
A. So I believe.
Q. In 1882, when you went with the company, the Southern acific Railroad Company of California and of Arizona and of ew Mexico had the ownership of a line extending from San Franisco to El Paso?
A. Yes.
Mr. HERRIN. From Goshen to El Paso.
The WITNESS. That is right; from Goshen to El Paso. They also had a line from San Francisco to Soledad, as I remember, he Coast Line Southern Pacific Railroad, California.
By Mr. MCCLENNEN:
Q. That line was a part of what has since become the Coast line?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. It was subsequently completed into Los Angeles?
A. Into a junction with a line to Los Angeles.
Q. When you went with the company, in 1882, the Southern acific Railroad Company connected physically at El Paso with the acks of the Galveston, Harrisburg & San Antonio Railroad; is that rrect?
A. I think that is correct.
Q. But the line eastward has not been completed far enough to give a complete line to New Orleans?
A. I think it had been completed in 1882.
Q. Would it conform to your memory that the completion of that ne and the opening of it as a physical matter was the first of ebruary, 1883?
A. Of course, at that particular time I was not in position to charge y memory with those matters, but I know the Sunset Route opened mediately following my joining the company. I joined in October, 82, so I suppose it was probably in the beginning of 1883. The ate, of course, is readily accessible.
Q. Did you know about those railroads at all before going with the mpany?
A. No; that was my entrance into railroad service. I entered at at time as a junior clerk. That was my first entrance into the rail-ad business.
Q. Prior to the opening of that line to New Orleans, which, if ere is no objection, I will ask you to take as February 1, 1883, the ly entrance by rail into California for transcontinental business as through Ogden over the line of the Central Pacific Railroad, or over the line of the Atlantic & Pacific, which has since become the Atchison, meeting the Southern Pacific Railroad at Deming, New Mexico, and entering California through Yuma, on the boundary line of Arizona and California.

A. Yes. The Texas & Pacific also had connected January 1, 1882, at Sierra Blanca with the tracks of the Galveston, Harrisburg & San Antonio Railroad, and so, through El Paso, with the tracks of the Southern Pacific Company.

Q. Then in 1881 El Paso became for the first time a gateway into California for transcontinental freight?

A. So I understand.

Q. Prior to that time the tracks of the Central Pacific were the only means of reaching California by rail for transcontinental business?

A. Yes.

Q. The only competition up to that time with the Central Pacific Railroad on transcontinental business was the water competition?

A. Water competition, including the Isthmus of Panama.

Q. That is, there was a line of steamers from New York to Colon, and railroad tracks across the Isthmus to Panama, and a line of steamers to San Francisco?

A. Yes.

Q. Was there any regular line around the Horn?

220 A. My recollection is that there was one or more.

Q. There was, at all events, considerable traffic by clipper ships around the Horn?

A. Yes; Funch, Edye & Company.

Q. It is evident as a matter of knowledge of a railroad man that the completion of an independent line to New Orleans with connections to New York would inevitably bring strong competition with the Central Pacific Railroad; am I right?

A. There would be competition, and the competition would also be with the water lines.

Q. If a transcontinental line or a line mixed water and rail entering California through Arizona was in contemplation and imminent, was there, as a matter of railroading, any way of preventing that competition with the Central except by discouraging or preventing the completion of that line or acquiring control of it?

(The question was repeated by the reporter.)

A. I do not know how to answer that question. Was there any means of discouraging the competition?

(The question was again repeated.)

A. (Continuing.) I do not see that discouraging or preventing it has anything to do with the case, because neither was done. The fact is that the line was built, and as soon as built necessarily entered into competition. It was very much better for the Central Pacific, of course, that it should be in hands that were friendly to the Central Pacific; but so far as the public interest was concerned, the lines were constructed and at the public service and to the public advantage.

Q. That is, the joint control of the two lines would inevitably reduce the sharpness of the competition?

A. Well, it was one control; it was not two or more controls. The control was a unit. It was controlled by the same people; that is, the Central Pacific line was built from California east and the lines of the Southern Pacific Railroad were built from California east, but they were both built and all built by the same people and the same interests, and the question of corporate name was merely one of convenience.

Mr. McCLENNEN. The petitioner moves to strike out the answer as not responsive to the question.

By Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. I have not asked you in this question what was done, but the effect of the state of facts which I recited in the question. I will ask to have the question read and will ask you to follow the question and answer that as nearly as you can.

Mr. DUNNE. That is objected to as not calling for testimony of any fact, but simply as an argument in the question, based upon hypotheses of one sort or another.

(The question was again repeated by the reporter.)

Mr. DUNNE. We add to our objection that it assumes the existence of a joint control, the witness answering responsively that it was a single or unitary control.

(The question was again repeated by the reporter.)

The WITNESS. I answered that the control was not joint. It was a unit of control.

Mr. McCLENNEN. I ask that the answer be stricken out as not responsive, and the second part of the answer stricken out as not responsive.

By Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. If the operations of the Central Pacific Railroad and the operations of the Sunset line were under a single control, it would inevitably reduce the sharpness of the competition between the two lines, would it not, on transcontinental business?

Mr. DUNNE. Just a moment. We object to that question as without foundation, purely speculative and argumentative, and self-contradictory.

(The question was repeated by the reporter.)

The WITNESS. That question assumes that the Central Pacific is a through line, which it is not. It is only a link in the through line.

It is a through line that makes the competition. The line from Ogden to San Francisco does not compete with a line, for example, from San Francisco to New Orleans.

By Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. Is there any competition between the Central Pacific Railroad and the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe?

A. There is not. The Central Pacific Railroad stops at Ogden.

Q. Is there any competition on transcontinental business between the Central Pacific Railroad and the Western Pacific Railroad?

A. There is competition between the through line formed by the Central Pacific and its eastern connections and the through line formed by the Western Pacific and its eastern connections on transcontinental business, but there is no competition as to the Central Pacific itself on transcontinental business.

Q. Is there any competition between the Central Pacific 224 Railroad and its eastern connections and the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe on transcontinental business?

A. The Central Pacific and its eastern connections and the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railroad, yes. The competition is active.

Q. If the Central Pacific Railroad and its eastern connections were not under the same control as the Sunset Route, would there be competition, as a practical matter, between the Central Pacific Railroad and its eastern connections and the Sunset Route on transcontinental business?

A. The competition would be the same.

Q. The two lines—that is, the Central Pacific Railroad and its eastern connections and the Sunset Route—are physically and in a business way in a position to compete strongly for transcontinental business, one against the other, are they not?

A. The Central Pacific with the Southern Pacific?

Q. The Central Pacific with its eastern connections.

A. As at present constituted, they are.

Q. The effect of having the two lines in one control is to reduce the sharpness of that competition?

225 A. It is not; the effect is to increase the public service and improve it.

Q. Does the Central Pacific Railroad and its eastern connections compete to-day as strongly with the Sunset line as the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe does on transcontinental business?

A. On transcontinental business the line formed by the Central Pacific and its eastern connections is fully as effective as the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe.

Q. By "competition" in these answers that you have given you mean, do you not, that the different lines named are in a position to carry the same classes of business from and to the same territories; am I right?

A. By "competition" I mean that as competitors they are separate and distinct units contending for the same business, namely, transcontinental business.

Q. Is the Central Pacific Railroad contending actively for business which could move by the Sunset Route?

A. The Southern Pacific in soliciting business solicits for its longest haul, with respect to far eastern territory for the classes of business which it can handle by that route to better advantage, but as to the main business of the coast, the high-class business, its solicitation is for the Central Pacific and its eastern connections within designated areas.

226 Q. That class of merchandise which can not satisfactorily be carried by the Sunset line the Southern Pacific seeks to carry by the Central; is that correct?

A. We seek to carry by the Sunset our long-haul business, considering the Sunset Route as our longest haul; limited, however, by the topography of the country, that where the public service would be inferior by the Sunset Route we do not aim to take the business that way. In general, throughout the territory served by the Union Pacific and throughout the interior of the United States we solicit from all points tributary to the Central Pacific in conjunction with the Ogden line.

Q. That is, on all business which is of a nature so that it can be persuaded to the Sunset Route between California on the one hand and the Atlantic seaboard on the other you seek to get it for the Sunset Route?

A. Yes.

Q. You do not seek to get that class of business for the Central Pacific Railway?

A. Our long haul is our preferred haul, and our next preference is the Central Pacific.

227 Q. My question was very simple. I want to know if you will not answer it a little more directly, Mr. Sproule? I think the answer "No" would fully cover it. I am not sure.

Mr. BLAIR. The witness has a right, of course, to answer your question and to make any qualification afterwards to fully present all the facts.

Mr. MCCLENNEN. There is not the slightest question of that; but I do not think he has fully answered it. I do not think there will be any difference between us as to what he may do after that.

(By request the reporter read the question as follows:)

"Q. You do not seek to get that class of business for the Central Pacific Railway?"

The WITNESS. We do seek it, but initially we seek it for the Sunset Route, and, if not readily obtainable by the Sunset Route we take it by the Central Pacific line. Independently of that, however, there is a great mass of business which we do not solicit for the Sunset Route at all, and which is solicited only for the Central Pacific line.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

228 Q. That is, what you can legitimately get for the Sunset Route you seek to get for that route and do not seek to get for the Central Pacific unless you are unable to control it for the Sunset, is that correct?

A. For the class of business that we solicit for the Sunset Route, yes.

Q. What are the commodities which you do not solicit for the Sunset Route? And in giving your answer please abstain from generalities and give the commodities by name.

Mr. BLAIR. Would it not serve to make matters clearer if you defined what you mean by the Sunset Route? You mean the route through Galveston to New York?

Mr. MCCLENNEN. First, in answer to your suggestion, these questions are predicated on the supposition that we are speaking of freight between California points and Atlantic seaboard points, and by "Sunset Route" I am intending at this present time to include what passes through El Paso and New Orleans, or what would pass through El Paso and New Orleans or Galveston.

Mr. BLAIR. And by boat to New York?

Mr. MCCLENNEN. And by boat to New York; or, if there be such a thing, by rail from New Orleans to New York.

(By request the reporter read the pending question, together with Mr. McClennen's explanation.)

229 The WITNESS. Deciduous, or what is commonly called fresh fruits or green fruits, from all of the northern and central California shippers, we solicit exclusively via Ogden.

All Asiatic business coming to us in ships from the Orient goes by way of Ogden, unless the destination makes it necessary to send it the other way.

And from all points in northern and central California, all business we endeavor to send by the Ogden line when it is destined to any point west of Buffalo or Pittsburgh. In fact, generally speaking, for the entire territory of the United States west of Pittsburgh and Buffalo and north of the Ohio River the Central Pacific is the preferred line and the Union Pacific the preferred connection in every respect.

By Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. The question and the explanations were long, so that you are perhaps to be excused for it, but you observe that you have got away from the question as explained. I was speaking of the freight originating in California or to be delivered there to the Atlantic seaboard or originating on the Atlantic seaboard, and asking you to name the commodities between those two territories, that you did not solicit preferentially by the Sunset Route. You started by mentioning fruits from northern and central California, but you named no other commodity. Are there any others?

A. I do not think there are any others. I should have added vegetables and citrus fruits.

Q. That is, fresh vegetables?

A. Fresh vegetables and citrus fruits.

Q. Then, on all business between the Atlantic seaboard and California, excepting fruits in the northern and central part of California and fresh vegetables, the first effort of the Southern Pacific Company is to persuade the freight not to pass over the Central Pacific Railway through Ogden, but rather to pass through El Paso; is that correct?

A. To and from the Atlantic seaboard.

Q. That is true, is it?

A. Yes. You understand, of course, that our solicitation is but a small part of the total solicitation for all that business. All the railroads are soliciting and competing for it.

Q. The Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railroad is competing for that business, is it not?

A. It is.

Q. The Western Pacific Railway Company is competing for that business?

A. It is.

Q. Is there any other road with lines in California competing for that business?

A. With lines in northern and central California, you mean? The San Pedro line also competes in southern California.

Q. Is there any other?

A. Those are the terminal lines.

Q. And the only ones?

A. Yes.

Q. Do any of the railroads not having lines in California solicit in California for eastbound freight to the Atlantic seaboard?

A. A multitude of them.

Q. Will you name those that you know that solicit in California?

A. In addition to the terminal lines, the Northern Pacific, the Great Northern, the Canadian Pacific, the Union Pacific, the 232 Denver & Rio Grande, the Missouri Pacific, the Iron Mountain, the Texas & Pacific, the Chicago & North Western, the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul, the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific, the El Paso & Southwestern, the Burlington, the Chicago & Great Western, the Lake Shore, the New York Central System, the Pennsylvania System, the Baltimore & Ohio System, the Illinois Central, the Frisco line, and there are some others.

Q. You can think of no others at present?

A. There are several others.

Q. I say, you can think of no other names at present? I want to exhaust your recollection.

A. The Wabash; the International Great Northern, I think; the Chicago & Alton, I think; there may be three or four more. Those are the important ones.

Q. The Northern Pacific solicits California business for carriage from Portland over its own lines?

A. It has divisions with us, and works with a steamer line also.

Q. That is, what it succeeds in getting goes either by steamer line from San Francisco or runs over your rails to Portland?

A. Yes.

233 Q. Is that competition serious, so far as California business is concerned with the Sunset Line?

A. It is one factor in the competition.

Q. To save putting it several times: The competition of the Northern Pacific, the Great Northern, and the Canadian Pacific is not very serious, so far as California business is concerned, is it?

A. The percentage of business they do, I think, is not heavy.

Q. And that is on account of the natural conditions, their being so far north; they are not in a position to carry it as readily as these other lines?

A. Mixed rail and water route.

Q. The Union Pacific solicitation, both east and west, is directed toward getting the freight over its lines to Ogden and then over the Central or Western Pacific to California, or from, as the case may be?

A. You refer, now, to strictly California business?

Q. Yes.

A. No. It is restricted, so far as it does not compete with their San Pedro line.

Q. With that exception, is my statement correct?

234 A. Generally speaking, I think so as to freight business?

Q. The solicitation of the Denver and Rio Grande is directed towards getting the business, so far as California is concerned, over the Western Pacific, is it not?

A. Yes; the Western Pacific is their preferred connection. They also work with the Central Pacific.

Q. They do work with the Central Pacific?

A. Yes.

Q. What has just been said about the Denver and Rio Grande applies equally to the Missouri Pacific and Iron Mountain?

A. Yes.

Q. That is, the Missouri Pacific and the Iron Mountain, the Denver and Rio Grande, and the Western Pacific are commonly known as the Gould lines?

A. Yes; excepting that the Iron Mountain has also a connection with the Texas & Pacific and works freely with it in conjunction with our El Paso route.

Q. The effort of the Texas & Pacific is to get a business into California over the Southern Pacific Sunset rails?

A. Via El Paso.

235 Q. The effort of the Chicago Northwestern is to carry the traffic east and west, receiving or delivering at Omaha?

A. Yes.

Q. Carrying it over the Union Pacific?

A. The Chicago & Northwestern, the Union Pacific, and the Central Pacific form the through line.

Q. And what is the preference of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul?

A. They also work with the Union Pacific and Central Pacific.

Q. The effort of the Rock Island, so far as California business is concerned, is to deliver it to the Sunset Route at El Paso?

A. At El Paso. They also make deliveries to the Union Pacific at their Colorado junction—Pueblo.

Q. Their long haul is to El Paso?

A. Their long haul is to El Paso.

Q. And their preference is to El Paso?

A. Yes, sir. They also work through Omaha, as you are aware. They join the Union Pacific at Omaha.

236 Q. The Rock Island line from Chicago through Omaha, and by connections to El Paso?

A. With the Union Pacific at Omaha. It also has a line from Chicago to El Paso in conjunction with the El Paso and Southwestern. It also has a line to Colorado.

Q. The Rock Island has three gateways with which it connects up in transcontinental business, and its preference, in their order, is El Paso or the Colorado points or Omaha?

A. Yes.

Q. The preference of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy is what?

A. They work both with the Rio Grande and the Union Pacific, and their business reaches us at Ogden from the Union Pacific and also reaches the Western Pacific at Salt Lake.

Q. The effect of the Chicago Great Western is to get the business through Omaha or Kansas City?

A. Yes.

Q. And that means ultimately over the Central Pacific or the Western Pacific?

A. They work directly, I think, with the Union Pacific.

237 Q. I suppose, so far as southern California is concerned, it might mean the San Pedro?

A. Yes. However, they work, as do all of these roads, with anybody that will work with them, as a rule. Most of these roads work with the roads that work with them; that is, the Chicago Great Western would solicit business in conjunction with the line that was soliciting for it, you see.

238 Q. As a matter of fact, between these connecting lines where there are choices, that is somewhat a matter of trade between them, is it not?

A. It is a matter of interchange——

Q. (Interposing.) That is, A says to B——

A. (Interposing.) "If you will give me this business, I will give you this business"; not as a rule as to any general specific business, but in the general trend of solicitation, because business is so actively solicited and the competition so keen.

Q. Now, the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern, the New York Central, the Pennsylvania, and the Baltimore & Ohio prefer to get the business to pass through Chicago; is that correct?

A. Some business through Chicago, and some of them prefer some business through St. Louis.

Q. And from that point on west to California it means the same lines that we have just been mentioning?

A. It depends on their western connections—whoever they happen to be.

Q. The Illinois Central is a Mississippi Valley line, is it not?

239 A. It has two lines; it runs from Chicago to Omaha, and from Chicago to New Orleans.

Q. Its longest haul is to New Orleans?

A. Yes.

Q. And it is working more or less preferentially for the Sunset Route, is it not?

A. It works for its longest haul.

Q. Which means the Sunset Route?

A. The Sunset Route would be its natural connection.

Q. If California business gets to New Orleans, the only practicable method is the Southern Pacific from there to California, is it not?

A. Well, we think it is the best line.

Q. And it carries practically all?

A. It is the line that has the best-known shippers.

Q. And it carries practically all of the through business from New Orleans to California?

A. Well, the Texas & Pacific has its own line.

Q. The amount it carries is inconsiderable in comparison with that the Sunset carries, is it not?

A. The Sunset line carries the greater part of the business, I think.

960 Q. The effort of the Frisco Line is to get the California business through Fort Worth and thence over the Southern Pacific?

A. They work very largely with the Santa Fe, too.

Q. Where do they deliver to the Santa Fe or receive from?

A. I do not know what their junction point is at present.

Q. Which gives the Frisco line the longer haul—Fort Worth or the other?

A. I think the divisions are about the same.

Q. The Wabash works preferentially with the Missouri Pacific, does it not—the Gould lines?

A. I think not. I do not know as to that, but I think they work with all lines.

Q. The International & Great Northern runs where?

A. It is a Texas line that runs—well, I would have to look at the guide to determine where its lines are—it is a local line that runs through Texas, from northern Texas down to the Gulf and from northern Texas down to a connection with the Texas & Pacific.

961 Q. Its preference on California business is the Southern?

A. I think it is the Texas & Pacific, is it not? I do not know what its preference is, except that its business reaches us by El Paso.

Q. You say you think its preference is the Texas & Pacific, which brings it to you at El Paso. The Chicago & Alton is another Mississippi Valley line?

A. Yes.

Q. And they seek to carry to Kansas City?

A. Kansas City. You understand that when we talk of the preference of most of these lines that that is simply a general belief, based upon observation, but to determine what the existing preference of any line really is, anybody outside of their own council would have to analyze.

Q. These preferences do rise to a point of agreement in some instances?

A. In some instances, but generally not; the lines generally consult their own interests.

Q. The business that is influenced by these other lines to pass through Ogden you carry as tendered over the Central Pacific?

A. Yes.

242 Q. To and from California?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, am I right in assuming that these same lines maintain solicitors in Atlantic seaboard territory in an effort to secure the west-bound freight to California?

A. That is generally true.

Q. Has the business of the Western Pacific become large as compared with that of the Central and Southern and the Atchison?

A. It has not.

Q. Up to the present time it is not very much of a factor in the competition, is it?

A. It is an important factor in the competition, but it does not succeed in getting a large share of the business. Its competition, however, is just as active as if they were getting a large quantity.

Q. The strongest competitor of the Sunset Route is the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe for California business; is that correct?

A. I should say the strongest competitor is the Central Pacific-Union Pacific line.

(Whereupon a recess was taken until two o'clock p. m.)

243 AFTER RECESS.

The WITNESS. I desire to add to my answer as to commodities which, by reason of their character or packing, we do not solicit for the Sunset Route, the following:

List of commodities not competitive with Sunset-Gulf route.

Perishable freight:
Deciduous fruit, citrus fruit, vegetables, oysters, fresh meat.
Coal and coke in bulk.
Live stock.
Grain in bulk.
Emigrant movables.
Hides and pelts, green.
Liquids, in tank cars. (Wine, asphalt, and oil.)

ore, in bulk.
ash, doors, and blinds.
comotives.
assenger and freight cars.
ilk.
ca.
High explosives.
Earthenware, stoneware, and crockery, in bulk.
Organs and pianos, harnessed in cars.
in cans.
elicate machinery.
loves.
utomobiles and other vehicles.

WILLIAM SPROULE, the witness under examination at the taking of recess, resumed the stand for further direct examination.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. In view of this list which you have just given I will digress om the examination I was making to ask you with reference to the ings on this list. As to deciduous fruit, what is the reason for not nting them over the Sunset Route?

A. Deciduous fruit means the fruits of trees whose leaves fall nually, and they are perishable and want market directly.

Q. That is, it is important to get expedition in transportation?

A. Yes.

Q. And the same is true of citrus fruits?

A. The same is true of citrus fruits.

Q. And vegetables?

A. And vegetables. All those three are diverted freely in transit. The shippers desire to so ship as to easily divert them.

Q. The shipments of citrus fruits from California are very heavy?

A. Yes.

Q. They do go to some extent by the Sunset line?

A. Slightly, only for that territory or contiguous.

Q. That is, only for the southern portion of the State?

A. Yes; and adjacent territory.

Q. Could you place any rough division line in California as to the trus fruit traffic, saying "north of this it all goes via Ogden and uth otherwise"?

A. No; because it is not packed that way. A given territory nts pears, for instance, and another territory at a given time wants aches. It depends on where market can be had. There is no arbitrary line of division of any kind; it is simply a question of how the shipper desires it sent.

Q. The citrus fruit, practically none of it goes by the Morgan boats from New Orleans to New York?

A. Generally speaking, none of it.

Q. Even that which passes through El Paso goes all-rail?

247 A. Yes.

Q. Over other lines beyond?

A. Yes. It is wholly determined by the shipper, to suit his purposes.

Q. Take, for instance, Fresno as a point. Does a large part of the citrus fruit south of Fresno go to El Paso?

A. Yes; it does; because the climatic conditions make it favorable. Later in the season it goes out by Ogden because that is a cooler climate.

Q. Does much citrus fruit originating north of Fresno go through El Paso?

A. Citrus?

Q. Yes.

A. Hardly any.

Q. The deciduous fruit shipments from California are small in comparison with the citrus, are they not?

A. They are not small, but they are very much less than the citrus.

Q. The deciduous fruits of the southern part of the State go out through El Paso, do they?

A. They go both ways.

248 Q. Is there much traffic in fresh vegetables?

A. Yes.

Q. What part of the State are they shipped from?

A. North, south, and central.

Q. All over the State?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you carry in your mind the approximate tonnage per year in fresh vegetables?

A. No; I do not recall.

Q. Oysters, where do oysters in California go?

A. The oysters are westbound.

Q. They are westbound oysters?

A. Yes.

Q. And fresh meat, is that shipped out or shipped in?

A. Shipped in. There is very little movement of fresh meat; it is only under very unusual conditions that fresh meat is shipped.

Q. Is there much traffic in oysters?

A. Yes; because California does not re-seed or propagate oysters out there, with minor exceptions.

Q. Coal and coke in bulk, what is the reason for not urging that through El Paso?

A. Do you refer now to the Atlantic seaboard?

Q. I am simply taking your list.

A. It is coal and coke in bulk, and we would not want to handle on our steamers. As a matter of fact, coal and coke that moved California moves in bulk.

Q. Moves in bulk and does not move from the seaboard, does it?

A. Some blacksmith's coal is moved from seaboard, and some ke, but as a rule it comes from points in Georgia or Alabama.

Q. And goes all rail?

A. Through New Orleans, that is, territory contiguous to New leans, you see.

Q. That coal and coke in bulk to California largely goes over the ils of the Southern in entering California, and not over the rails the Central?

A. But if it originates in the north it goes over the Central. Take cahontas coal or coke for example. It would come over whatever e could get it; so far as we are concerned, we try to get it over the Union Pacific.

Q. Live stock; is the movement chiefly in or out of California?

A. Blooded stock in and market stock out.

Q. And the reason for not urging that over the Sunset is the need rapid transportation?

A. Well, it would not be a desirable route for transshipment; ited rail and water makes it undesirable. We could handle all ese things, but we do not try to.

Q. You try to get it through El Paso, having it brought by rail to e southern lines?

A. If it originated down in the Southern States we would probly bring it to El Paso, but if it originated anywhere that made it ossible reasonably to the Omaha gateway it would move that way. ou understand the shippers have the selection of their own route d they select the routes that are physically best for them.

Q. And in doing your soliciting, when the desires of shippers have come fixed in a certain way you do not necessarily attempt to persuade them further; you drop that branch of traffic and go to others?

A. We do not solicit against the shippers' interests.

Q. Grain in bulk?

A. That is generally eastbound. Barley, for example, to New York for brewing purposes.

Q. And what is the reason for not carrying that or not seeking that through El Paso?

A. The same reason; it is in bulk and transshipment would be awkward. We would have to ship it in bulk from ship to car and then when it got to New York we could not unload it in bulk on the wharf and we would have to find some means of disposing of it; as a commercial question, it is not feasible.

252 Q. Emigrant movables?

A. They are the ordinary outfit of an emigrant moving.

Q. They are very apt to follow the line the emigrant follows?

A. Yes; they follow the route of the emigrant and they are highly breakable and difficult freight to handle, and the emigrant naturally wants it, so far as possible, at the destination in the shape in which he shipped it.

Q. Hides and pelts, green?

A. Hides and pelts are generally ill-smelling and unpleasant stuff to handle, and we do not want to mix them in with other freight.

Q. Liquids, in tank cars. I take it you do not want to remove them from the tanks into the vessels?

A. In those cases where we refer to bulk or in tank cars, it means that the rates being the same those commodities will naturally seek the rail line rather than one in which they would have to find some other container for the transshipment.

Q. Ore, in bulk?

A. The same reason.

Q. Do you not carry some considerable amount of copper from 253 the Shasta Mountains via the Sunset to the Atlantic seaboard?

A. We have carried some what is known as copper bullion, copper mat; that is, the smelter product which goes to the eastern refineries to be separated into the original metals.

Q. That is a large traffic?

A. No.

Q. Can you give me any idea of the tonnage?

A. At present I think they are all closed down.

Q. But when they have been in operation, I mean.

A. At one time it amounted to a couple of hundred tons a month, I think; but the activities of the Government have stopped them. The fumes from the smelter destroying the adjacent foliage shut them up.

Q. Sash, doors, and blinds?

A. Lumber and its products generally. They are the products of our forests, and we do not attempt to take them by the Sunset.

Q. What is the objection to their going by the Sunset?

A. They are fragile and easily damaged.

Q. Locomotives naturally go all rail?

A. Yes; besides, they are unwieldy.

Q. Passenger and freight cars, the same?

A. Similar.

Q. Silk?

A. Silk and tea, and all Asiatic cargo, we have always sent over the Union Pacific.

Q. What is the reason, as to silk and tea? Why could not they go over the long route?

A. They are of very high value.

Q. High explosives?

A. For safety reasons.

Q. Earthenware, stoneware, and crockery, in bulk?

A. They are fragile.

Q. Organs and pianos harnessed in cars?

A. They could not harness them on board ship. "Harnessing" is a term that applies to their fastening in the cars with leather straps and harness.

Q. Tin cans?

A. Tin cans are very bulky. They are shipped in bulk in the cars, and if we handled them we would have to crate them.

Q. Delicate machinery, stoves, automobiles, and other vehicles?

A. The same general reason. We do not consider any of those competitive.

Q. Am I right in understanding you, then, that as to these classes of commodities mentioned in the list that you have just given you simply let them take their natural course without attempting to urge the traffic one way or the other?

A. No; we go further than that. We do not want them.

Q. You do not want them?

A. No.

Q. Going on with what we were talking about before, you have given us, as best your memory would permit, the different domestic and foreign lines that maintain solicitors or otherwise solicit in California?

A. I should have added the Erie and the Grand Trunk to the list which I gave.

Q. The Erie and the Grand Trunk?

A. And the Lackawanna and the Lehigh Valley.

Q. Those four all seek to get the traffic through Chicago?

A. Mainly so, except as to the Grand Trunk. I do not know what their policies are.

Q. What other way does the Grand Trunk have to——

A. (Interposing.) Presumably it is through Chicago.

Q. Is the list which you have given of the roads which solicit in California inclusive of substantially all of the lines which solicit in the seaboard territory for California freight, or are there additional lines soliciting?

A. They solicit in Atlantic seaboard territory freight for California and solicit in California freight for the Atlantic seaboard; but in addition to those I have named which solicit freight from California to the Atlantic seaboard there are undoubtedly a very large additional number who solicit for westbound business in Atlantic seaboard territory.

Q. And they are the various lines which desire to get the business to go through Chicago or St. Louis?

A. Yes; every line in Atlantic seaboard territory desires to get its share of the California business.

Q. Incidentally we have had it defined, but I would like to make sure, and I will ask you: When you speak of Atlantic seaboard territory you mean all of the United States east of——

A. The Atlantic seaboard is east of Buffalo and Pittsburgh.

Q. And north——

A. Of the Norfolk & Western.

257 Q. Making it very nearly agree, but not quite, with the southern boundary line of Virginia?

A. Parkersburg is the point which is the boundary line.

Q. Leaving out of consideration these commodities which you say you do not desire over the Sunset line, as to other commodities the efforts of all of these roads which seek to route through Ogden are directed necessarily, incidentally, to increasing the business of the Western Pacific, the Central Pacific, or the San Pedro line?

A. Or the Santa Fe.

Q. Well, if it went through Ogden would it still travel out over the Santa Fe?

A. Oh, via Ogden? No.

Q. I am right in limiting it to those three, so far as Ogden is concerned, am I not?

A. The efforts of those roads are directed to securing the business for themselves primarily—the originating road—and it will naturally endeavor to route its business most favorably to its own interest; and by what gateway it will arrive in California is a matter which they, as a rule, give only secondary consideration.

258 Their first consideration is for themselves. Their next consideration is for a route that is agreeable to the shipper on the one hand and by which they can give him service on the other hand.

Q. Their effort is for their long haul, speaking in general?

A. On their own line; yes.

Q. I did not make the particular question sufficiently clear to you——

A. I did not quite catch what you meant.

Q. I mean the limitation in the particular question. We have been over the list and I got you to say which of them would prefer Ogden and which of them would prefer El Paso or the Atchison.

A. Yes.

Q. Now I say: Among all those lines which prefer Ogden the success of the effort of those roads to get freight necessarily incidentally helps the business either of the Central Pacific Railway, the Western Pacific, or the San Pedro?

A. It is the business of whichever road happens to get it.

Q. Those are the only three that would get it if it went through Ogden, are they not?

A. The San Pedro Line does not go through Ogden; it goes through Salt Lake. If it goes through Ogden, the only line that would get it would be the Central Pacific.

Q. Then all these lines that are seeking to get the freight for their longest haul, in the case of the lines in which that results in its going through Ogden, their efforts necessarily increase the business of the Central Pacific Railway?

A. As a part of the through line.

Q. And the effort of the solicitors of the Southern Pacific under the direction of its management is to counteract those efforts except in the commodities which I have mentioned, and have the freight go to your so-called 100 per cent line, through New Orleans?

A. No; quite the contrary. We aim to reciprocate with all those lines and interchange business with them and give them business to an extent that will justify them in working all they know how over our lines; that is, the through line via Ogden.

Q. Your solicitors in the Atlantic seaboard territory and in California visit the same merchants to a considerable extent, the same shippers, that are visited by the solicitors of all these other lines, do they not?

A. Yes; there is a very active solicitation by all roads and by all lines.

Q. And the effort of those solicitors with those shippers, except for the excepted commodities, is to have the shipments via the Sunset Route?

A. That is our preferred line.

Q. And if that solicitation is successful, it results in offsetting or defeating the efforts of the solicitors of these various other lines by so much?

A. Yes; naturally. If the Sunset Route gets it, the Santa Fe does not get it. If the Sunset Route gets it out of Los Angeles, the San Pedro does not get it. If the Central Pacific gets it, the Western Pacific does not get it. It naturally follows that what one line gets, the other line does not get.

Q. Precisely. In these various questions as to effort and the movement of freight, I take it you have been speaking, in the main, as of the present time, have you not?

A. Yes; you are asking your questions as of the present time.

Q. The management of the Union Pacific Railroad and the 261 management of the Southern Pacific Railroad was in the same hands from 1901 until the early part of 1913, was it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Before 1901 that was not the case?

A. It was not.

Q. During the period from 1901 to 1913 it was still the desire of that management to use the Sunset Route as the preferred route for the business between California and the Atlantic seaboard?

A. It was.

Q. Will you define Central Freight Association territory?

A. That is between Buffalo and Pittsburgh on the one hand and Chicago and St. Louis on the other, and north of the Ohio River.

Q. During the time that the Southern and Union were under the same control, the effort as to freight between Central Freight Association territory and California was to have it go over the Union and the Central?

A. Yes.

Q. The effort as to the country in the Mississippi Valley below the Ohio River, to California, was to have it go over the Sunset Route?

262 A. The El Paso.

Q. You mean to distinguish that from New Orleans, do you?

A. That includes New Orleans, but not exclusively New Orleans.

Q. That is, either to have it go through New Orleans——

A. (Interposing.) Through New Orleans or through Houston, or through any of the various junctions, as might be advisable.

Q. The obvious reason for this effort with reference to the Central Freight Association territory and California was that this so-to speak common management, if it went over the Central route, got the haul all the way from Omaha to California?

A. Yes.

Q. Or from Kansas City to California?

A. Yes.

263 Q. And that was more profitable than to have that freight travel over independent lines down to New Orleans, where the Sunset Route would get on the whole a smaller percentage of the haul than they would if it went to Omaha; is that correct?

A. That was one of the considerations, I think.

Q. During the period from 1901 to 1910 the most of the soliciting officers of the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific were consolidated into the hands of one man in each place?

A. Joint officers.

Q. There were exceptions to that, I think?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you happen to remember which those were?

A. The New York office, which the Union Pacific maintained separately, and the Southern Pacific maintained its office, and at Boston.

Q. Otherwise the officers were all consolidated?

A. And I think at Philadelphia.

Q. At Philadelphia the offices were maintained separately?

A. Yes; they were maintained separately.

964 Q. Do those three exceptions cover all?

A. Yes.

Q. Prior to 1901 the offices of the Union and of the Southern, the soliciting offices, had all been separate offices?

A. That is correct.

Q. And the solicitors of those respective roads were directly competing with each other to get the business?

A. Sometimes competing and very often cooperating.

Q. Before that merger—I will call it for short—of 1901, the attitude of the Southern Pacific management toward the freight traveling between Central Freight Association territory and San Francisco had been somewhat different from what it became after the merger, had it not?

A. Very slightly.

Q. Prior to 1901 the traffic from Pittsburgh to California was all sought via New Orleans by Southern Pacific solicitors, was it not?

A. Some kinds of freight.

Q. And the same is true of Cincinnati?

A. Yes.

Q. And true to some extent of Cleveland, Ohio?

965 A. I am not sure of that, but Cleveland would be only to a slight extent, if at all.

Q. The same was true to some extent of Detroit?

A. I think not.

Q. Didn't automobiles travel from Detroit via New Orleans prior to that?

A. They may have done so, but if so it would be only to a very limited extent.

Q. Do you remember whether the Milwaukee beer was sought by the Sunset Route?

A. I don't remember.

Q. You don't remember one way or the other?

A. I don't remember one way or the other; I would be very much surprised if they got it. Do you continue to refer to California business?

Q. I continue to refer to California business. Freight was sought prior to 1901 by the Southern Pacific via New Orleans and via El Paso from Chicago and St. Louis?

A. From St. Louis, yes; from Chicago, some. The seeking of business in those days, I should explain, did not depend upon Southern Pacific solicitation; it depended on conditions that prevailed in those territories at that time, conditions that have since 266 vanished by force of law. I mean that the controlling forces in those days were the local lines in those territories, and business took routes in those days that under the conditions of the present it would not take at all, and those conditions were not of the Southern Pacific's making.

Q. Those various lines running, roughly speaking, north and south through the Mississippi Valley territory, were all seeking to have the California business go through New Orleans preferentially?

A. It was no uncommon thing in those days for business to seek the most circuitous possible route in order to get the largest aggregate amount of advantage out of the transportation?

Q. You mean for the initial lines?

A. Yes; and the intermediate lines, the various lines over which the business moved.

Q. Speaking in general the effort of the initial railroad is apt to be more effective than the effort of the intermediate or delivering railroad in influencing the routing of business?

A. It depends on who has the most to offer, everything else being equal; the initial line has the advantage if it——

267 Q. For instance, if the New York Central Railroad wanted the business to go through Omaha, even if they did not have solicitors in the field their very presence on the ground where they were giving the information to shippers through their ordinary local agents would tend to make a much larger amount of business go through Omaha than if that same railroad wanted the business to go through New Orleans; is that true?

A. If the shipper had no interest except at the originating point, that would be true.

Q. What is the meaning of "common points"; for instance, "Pittsburgh common points" means what?

A. That is that the Pittsburgh rate applies to points adjacent; it would take the common rate, the same rate, subject to the same conditions.

Q. Then, speaking in general, what you have said in one way or the other about Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Detroit, Chicago, and St. Louis would apply to the adjacent territory?

A. It means the point and the other shipping points adjacent 908 that take the same rate, subject to the same conditions.

Q. And the attitude of the Southern Pacific Company, as you have described it, toward the freight in those various cities I have mentioned, would apply equally to the adjacent territories of those cities?

A. I do not know to what that question is directed. You are talking about the period prior to 1901?

Q. Yes.

A. Prior to 1901 the term "common points" had the same general signification that it has now.

Q. And the attitude of the Southern Pacific, for instance, towards Pittsburgh freight would be the same as the attitude of the Southern Pacific towards the Pittsburgh common points, for instance, whatever that attitude might be?

A. Well, I am not willing to say that the attitude of the Southern Pacific with respect to business to-day, under the conditions that prevail to-day, would always be the same as in 1901 with respect to Pacific business under conditions that prevailed at that time.

Q. I am still keeping back of 1901.

909 A. But I can say this, that the policy of the Southern Pacific with respect to the conduct of its business is the same since the unmerging, since 1913, the period to which you refer, as it was prior to the time we became dominated by the Union Pacific, 1901.

Q. Now, in addition to the efforts of the local lines in the Mississippi Valley running north and south to get the business through New Orleans, the Southern Pacific solicitors were also endeavoring in that region to get it in that way, were they not?

A. In 1901?

Q. Yes, and prior thereto.

A. There was a great deal of that business that we were not endeavoring to solicit at all.

Q. But there was a great deal of it that you were?

A. There was a great deal of it that we solicited.

Q. Do you want to leave the comparison in that way, as "a great deal and some"? Was there not really more that they were endeavoring to solicit that way than the reverse?

A. No; the great volume of the interior business was being solicited by the routing through Omaha.

270 Q. That was the volume of the interior business of the kind that could be best handled through Omaha?

A. Business generally, interior business.

Q. But as to those classes of freight which could stand the long haul without difficulty, the effort of the Southern Pacific solicitors in Central Freight Association territory prior to 1901 was to get that business through New Orleans, was it not?

A. The bulk of it, no; some of it, yes. With reference to conditions that favored the shipper, wherever the conditions favored the shipper, whoever influenced the tonnage, the solicitor was very likely to work for that business because that was the line of least resistance; but as a general proposition the major portion of the business west of Buffalo and Pittsburgh, inclusive, went by Omaha, the great volume of it; a very small fraction of the tonnage went by way of New Orleans.

Q. I am not speaking now about the actual movement of the traffic, but about the effort so far as the shippers' interests would not suffer, so far as the commodity was of a kind that would stand the long haul without difficulty, was not the effort of the Southern Pacific solicitors prior to 1901 to get the freight from the 271 Central Freight Association territory through New Orleans?

A. With those qualifications, I think it was. But, as exemplifying what I said a while ago about the conditions at that time being responsible for that, it was to the shipper's interest in large measure to send his freight by New Orleans or it would not have so gone. For example, at this time and since the unmerging, our solicitors do not solicit Central Freight Association territory through New Orleans through the Sunset route, but solicit it in connection with the Union Pacific. It was the conditions that were peculiar at that time, and which no carrier controlled.

Q. And that condition was a condition of years' standing, was it not?

A. Years' development. Incidentally, that was the reason why the Hepburn Act was passed.

Q. I have been talking to you about California freight. I would now like to direct your attention to Oregon freight. Is the effort of the Southern Pacific Company with reference to such Oregon freight as is going to travel to the eastern part of the country, and which can be got to pass through California, an effort to have that freight go via the Sunset route, excepting those commodities of which 272 you have given me a list?

A. In the case of Oregon the force and stress of the competition is via Portland, and as against the short haul through Portland we solicit the business by any route by which we will be successful in holding it.

Q. That is, as to that Oregon business, your possibilities are either a short haul out of Portland or else to haul it through California?

A. Yes. Salem, the capital of Oregon, for instance, is only a few hours from Portland and from the Great Northern and Northern Pacific and O. W. R. & N. Any of them may get it, but other forces are all in the field soliciting it; the commercial force of Portland is behind that solicitation, and we have simply to solicit that business by any route by which we can capture it.

Q. But the efforts of your solicitors and your instructions to them are to get it toward California rather than toward Portland?

A. To get it to the route that will give us the most money.

Q. That means toward California?

273 A. Well, yes. As an illustration, prior to the merger we had the route opened through Ogden in connection with the Union Pacific. When the merger came the Ogden route was closed so as to force that business through Portland to the Union Pacific lines through that gateway.

Q. You refer to the Roseville gateway?

A. Yes; the Roseville gateway. Since the unmerging we have reopened the Roseville gateway with the Union Pacific, and now deliver that business to them at Ogden.

Q. You had a division line with respect to that, did you not? That is, business north of a certain point and south of a certain point, or did you close the Roseville gateway entirely?

A. The Roseville gateway was entirely closed on Oregon business.

Q. And the effect of that was that business which was going through Ogden from Oregon had to go over the Oregon Short Line?

A. Or else came down over to the Southern Pacific and out through the El Paso gateway.

Q. You did not get the limit to my question. All the freight that was going through Ogden after that gateway was closed had to go over the Oregon Short Line?

274 A. It had to go over the Oregon Short Line, reaching the Union Pacific at Granger.

Q. The Roseville gateway had been an open gateway for years before 1901?

A. Yes.

Q. How soon after 1901 was the Roseville gateway closed?

A. Very shortly after that.

Q. Prior to the closing of that gateway the Oregon business could come down to Roseville, which is near Sacramento, and then go over the Central Pacific to Ogden?

A. Yes.

Q. The closing of that gateway at Roseville had the direct effect of preferring the Oregon Short Line to the prejudice of the Central Pacific?

A. Yes.

Q. The closing of the Roseville gateway did not affect at all the passage of Oregon business via El Paso?

A. No.

Q. That was still open?

A. It was.

Q. And the effort of the Southern Pacific was to get the 275 Oregon business, so far as it was possible to go through El Paso?

A. Naturally.

Q. That effort continued, even during the period of the merger?

A. It did.

Q. And, of course, continues to-day?

A. Yes. Well, when you say that effort continues to-day in that last question I suppose you are still referring to Atlantic seaboard business?

Q. I am referring to Atlantic seaboard business; yes. At the time the Roseville gateway was closed by the Southern Pacific the Ogden gateway to the Central Pacific from the Union Pacific was also closed as to Oregon business, was it not?

276 Mr. BLAIR. May we have that question repeated?

(The question was repeated by the reporter.)

The WITNESS. I don't understand that question now. May I have it again?

(The question was again repeated.)

The WITNESS. That is as to Oregon business?

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. As to Oregon business; yes.

A. The Oregon gateway was not closed by the Central Pacific.

Mr. HERRIN. By the Southern Pacific?

The WITNESS. It was closed by the Southern Pacific under the merger conditions.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. It was closed by the Southern Pacific?

A. Yes; because the Union Pacific did not want to get the business that way; they wanted to get the business through Portland, and it was for that purpose that the change was made. The Southern Pacific, you know, reopened that gateway as soon as the merger period ceased.

Q. The quantity of freight moving through El Paso east and west between Oregon and Atlantic seaboard is a large quantity, is it not?

A. Not very large; no.

Q. Have you any idea what it would amount to in tons?

A. No. The figures are accessible; they are documental.

Q. Now, what are the conspicuous commodities that are carried via El Paso from Oregon?

A. Chiefly hops, dried fruit, and lumber.

Q. Is the great bulk of the freight in those three commodities?

A. Yes. It is not great in bulk, but that is the bulk of the business.

Q. I mean that a very large proportion of whatever freight there is of the three kinds you have mentioned?

A. Yes.

Q. There is some freight that travels via the Sunset Route to Oregon, is there not?

A. Yes.

Q. If there were no question of the desires of the railroad, or a difference of organization, as a physical matter the natural course of freight passing south through Weed, for instance, and destined to the eastern part of the country, would be over the Central Pacific through Ogden, would it not?

A. By "the eastern part of the country" you mean a line directly east of Omaha?

Q. The whole of the country east of Omaha; yes.

A. The northern portion would pass over the Central Pacific-Union Pacific line, and the States to the south would be more likely to go to the southern line through El Paso.

Q. You mean south of Sacramento?

A. No; I am taking business from Weed, for example, going to the east. If it were destined to points, we will say, in Iowa, Illinois, Indiana, and Ohio, it would be likely to go by way of the Central Pacific-Union Pacific line, but if it were destined to Oklahoma or any of the territory to the south it would be more likely to go by the El Paso line. That would be the line of least resistance, as a matter of railroad operation.

Q. And the same would be true if it were destined for the Atlantic seaboard territory that you have described—the natural course would be through Ogden?

A. The Atlantic seaboard, not to that extent, no; because in sending it around by the Sunset line they have found that that route is a satisfactory route to them—the shippers.

Q. The mileage from Roseville to New Orleans, if overlaid on the Central Pacific-Union Pacific and eastern connections, would come pretty near to reaching the Atlantic seaboard, would it not?

A. To New Orleans; no.

Q. Roseville, then, to New Orleans, would be about 2,500 miles?

A. To the Atlantic seaboard it would be nearer 3,500 miles.

Q. Roseville to the Atlantic seaboard?

A. Yes.

Q. It would be nearer 3,000, would it not?

A. Eight hundred plus a thousand is eighteen hundred, and five hundred more is twenty-three, and a thousand more is thirty-three hundred—between thirty-two hundred and thirty-three hundred, Roseville Junction to New York.

Q. Is not that from San Francisco to New York?

A. There is only 108 miles difference. Giving it in round figures, it is 700 miles from Roseville Junction to Ogden, 1,000 miles 280 from Ogden to Omaha; that is 1,700 miles; and 500 miles—say 490 miles by the short line—from Omaha to Chicago, and the shortest distance from Chicago to New York that I recall is 973 miles. It is over a thousand miles by the New York Central.

Q. Is not the shortest distance 912 miles?

Mr. SPENCE. 916 miles.

The WITNESS. 916 miles. Then I have erred by 60 miles.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. This is a convenient time, so let me ask you in regard to these distances and see if they are correct.

A. Do you expect me to be a walking distance table? Here is a table that tells some of them, and I will give you any distances you want, but I would like to have a chance to look them up.

Q. Omaha to Ogden is 1,000 miles?

A. Yes.

Q. Ogden to San Francisco is 782 miles?

A. Yes.

Q. Chicago to Omaha 492 miles?

A. Yes.

Q. New York to Chicago 916 miles?

A. Yes.

281 Mr. BLAIR. Will you designate that as being by the shortest route?

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. These distances that I am giving you are all by the shortest rail route except as otherwise indicated.

A. They are correct for our present purposes.

Q. Pittsburgh to New York 444 miles?

A. Yes.

Q. New York to New Orleans by water, 1,741 miles; New York New Orleans by shortest rail, 1,372 miles; New Orleans to Houston, 362 miles; Galveston to Houston, 58 miles; New Orleans to El so, 1,192 miles; New Orleans to San Francisco, 2,482 miles; Chigo to New Orleans, 912 miles; Buffalo to New York, 442 miles; incinnati to New Orleans, 829 miles; Portland to New York, ortest rail, 3,204 miles; Portland to New York, via New Orleans d water from New Orleans, 4,487 miles; San Francisco to New ork, 3,191 miles; San Francisco to Kansas City, 1,986 miles. Perhaps it is asking too much for you to verify those, but will you cept them as being correct, except as attention is called to some error?

A. Subject to correction, yes. They do not always agree with the mileage given on this table which I have before me. suppose there are some minor changes perhaps.

Q. Why, then, would not the natural course of freight coming om Oregon through Weed and destined even as far east as the seaard territory, if uninfluenced in any way, naturally pass through oseville and Ogden rather than travel away down to New Orleans, here it had to be carried after it got there by water some 1,700 iles more?

A. It would be a question of the shipper's interests, but chiefly the service. The chief item in the shipper's interest would be e service that he would get. If he finds that by sending it that ay he gets better service, one more satisfactory to him, that is the ay he will ship it. You understand that we have nothing to offer e shipper except his interest in his own shipments—no concession any kind whatever that we can offer him—and the controlling ctor in the routing of all business is not the wishes of the initial rrier or of any other carrier, but it is the shipper's interest in his n business. That is a point which it is advisable we should not se sight of in the technical question of the carriers controlling the routing. The carrier has no control over the routing except the service.

Q. What I mean is this: If you could say to the shipper rth of Weed, "We can offer you just as good accommodations, just free cars, just as prompt attention to your demands, just as quick cing of your freight and settlement of your claims on goods that u ship over our road through Ogden as we can through El Paso", en the natural course of freight coming down from the north rough Weed would be to go through Ogden rather than through l Paso, would it not?

A. You are stating the condition as it exists—that he does get same facilities in every respect so far as the initial carrier is c cerned, the Southern Pacific, whether he sends it out via Ogde via El Paso. There is not one whit of difference. When the sh ment from Weed comes down to Roseville Junction it comes do in the same train whether it is to go out via Ogden or via El P When it goes into the train via Ogden it goes into a train that train the service for which is put on in conjunction with the Un Pacific and in cooperation with it and coordinated with it. I takes the train via El Paso, that is a separate service, and co around via El Paso and Galveston, or whatever route 284 shipper selects; but there is no discrimination against him for him with respect to any route that he elects.

Q. What are the sort of things that your solicitors can and do to shippers to induce them to the Sunset Route, rather than thro Ogden?

A. In times of congestion, for example, or in times of economie the part of the railroads, as the case may be, he finds that when freight gets to Omaha or at any of the many junctions bey Omaha or terminal yards, it is held up, he loses track of it, he n not get it for weeks; and if it comes around by way of Galvesto New York he knows where it is, he knows where to find it, and has no difficulty of that kind. It is only his experience of those c ditions that prompts him to consult his own interest in giving business to the line that, while longer in mileage, is shorter in ser

Q. Is there any other persuasion that you can hold out to Oregon shipper to use the Sunset line rather than the Central Pa line?

A. We have neither concession nor club that we can hold over h

Q. I mean is that one thing, of continuous service by 285 company, the only advantage that you have to offer him to t this circuitous route rather than the shorter and more nat route?

A. I can not answer a question that says "shorter and n natural," because that is a statement to which I do not give ass The natural route for any shipper is the route that will get him shipments to his destination with the least friction to him and most profit to him, which means the shortest time and the facilities.

Q. Then I will not characterize it at all. Other than continu control by one company, have you any inducement to persuade Oregon shipper to use the Sunset Route rather than the Og route?

A. It is not the continuous control that does it.

Q. What is it?

A. It is the congestion and the difficulty of getting through the terminals in these various Eastern States and cities. They get into a network of lines throughout the East here, and the further the business gets away from home the more does it lose its identity in the great mass of business in this eastern country. That is the condition that puts him on his guard.

Q. What is the commodity which you ship from California that most requires expedition in delivery?

A. Fresh fruit.

Q. By what line do you send that, chiefly?

A. That is sent, the great preponderance of it, over the Central Pacific-Union Pacific line, in conjunction with the North Western or St. Paul, and almost uniformly the Erie Railroad to New York. In fact, the Erie has made a specialty of that green fruit business, because of the difficulties that I have described, including the fruit terminals on their own wharf in New York. They make a specialty of the green fruit movement.

Q. And that course of transit you select and urge because it is the most expeditious?

A. Yes. It has been specially organized to take care of that business, which has been built up in that way from a few hundred cars to many thousands annually.

Q. Has any effort been made by the Southern Pacific Company to specially organize for the carriage of other commodities through Ogden as expeditiously as they are carried through El Paso to the Atlantic seaboard?

A. Yes; we endeavor to handle oranges the same way. We have a special arrangement for handling all Asiatic cargoes.

Q. Do the Asiatic cargoes go through promptly?

A. Yes. The business has been specially organized for that purpose. You can realize that raw silk worth $50,000 a carload must be given expedition.

Q. Are there any other classes of merchandise as to which the Southern Pacific has made special efforts to provide expedition on carriage over the Central and through Ogden?

A. The Southern Pacific and Union Pacific have a cooperative manifest freight system which covers all the freight moving, which has been in effect for years and is in effect to-day—was in effect before the merger.

Q. Has any effort been made to organize to insure prompt deliveries at and east of Omaha by the connecting lines?

A. So far as practicable, by appealing to their own self interest. You know when it gets to Omaha it divides up among all the connections east. While it is practicable to make a train load to Omaha, that train load will fly into splinters when it gets to Omaha, and as it gets farther forward it is still further disintegrated until finally, by the time it gets a few hundred miles beyond, there may be nothing left of the original train.

Q. What is the ordinary time which freight takes from San Francisco or Roseville via El Paso and Galveston or New Orleans to New York?

A. Mr. Spence, can you state that?

Mr. McCLENNEN. Please.

Mr. BLAIR. Let the witness testify, and you can ask the other witnesses what they know when they get on the stand.

Mr. ORR. But the witness called for help.

Mr. BLAIR. Let the witness state what he knows, and you can 289 ask whatever you want of the other witnesses as they appear.

The WITNESS. Mr. Spence would be my authority on that. About eighteen days, I should say.

By Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. What is the average time on freight from San Francisco or Roseville to New York via Ogden and Omaha?

A. That is a very hard question to answer. It approximates the same thing.

Q. Is there any inducement other than greater expedition that you can hold out to the Oregon shipper to New York to persuade him to ship by the Sunset Route through El Paso rather than by the Central Pacific through Ogden?

A. Nothing beyond the shipper's own interests and wishes.

Q. Other than expedition is there any other interest of the shipper that now occurs to you that you can point out to him as a persuasion?

A. Service and attention sum up the considerations of the shipper.

Q. You can give the same amount of attention at the initial point whichever way he ships, can you not?

A. Yes.

290 Q. You can furnish him the cars as quickly and conveniently whichever way he ships?

A. Whichever way he ships, so long as his shipment is on our rails. We give the same attention and consideration by whichever route he ships, and the same bill of lading and the same contract and the same liability.

Q. What element of service, other than promptness, do you have to point out to him that you can not give via Ogden that you can give via El Paso?

A. Nothing except what I have already stated.

Q. There is a considerable amount of freight that is not needed hastily, as to the routing of which the shipper is not particularly regardful, is there not?

A. I think such freight as that is negligible in quantity, because e interest runs while the freight is in transit.

Q. Given about equal time, is there not a great amount of freight e routing of which the shipper is not particularly regardful of?

A. He is regardful of it all; but there is some about which he is more insistent because of the character of it, either its value, or because of its seasonableness, or because it is of a perishable nature.

Q. The routing interests him almost entirely on account of probe speed and assurance of delivery?

A. With another consideration on the part of the shippers of rtain commodities, and that is their ability to divert the freight transit to market or destination other than the one originally signated. They make those shipments sometimes responsive to arket demands. At other times they make them because they sell eight in transit.

Q. Shippers are actually considerably influenced by freight solicirs, are they not, to choose this, that, or the other route?

A. They are variously influenced by them.

Q. That is, solicitors do succeed in accomplishing work for the ilroads employing them—many of them very large amounts of rk—do they not?

A. I am afraid they would lose their jobs if they did not. That is, good man will accomplish more than a poor man on the same ing. You cannot exclude the human element from anything.

Q. What position does Mr. Spence hold with the Southern Pacific?

A. Director of traffic.

Q. Does he hold any position with the Central Pacific Railay Company?

A. The Central Pacific Railway Company is leased to the Southn Pacific.

Q. I did not mean to intimate anything by my question. He does t hold any position with that road, does he?

A. I do not know. I do not remember.

Q. And as director of traffic of the Southern Pacific Company is the one in control of the course that traffic shall take, so far as e company is concerned?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The solicitation by the company's solicitors is under him?

A. Let me make that plain as to myself: That while I am president the company as a whole, I am in direct charge of the administion and operation of the Southern Pacific Company's lines west of Paso, Ogden, and Portland, and I am in direct charge of everything within that territory. Mr. Spence, as director of traffic in New York, is the executive officer and has direction of the company's traffic generally.

293 Q. Let me understand you. Does that mean that although not having the title, you are virtually the director of traffic so far as that western end is concerned?

A. It means that our men handling traffic in the territory I have described work under my direction.

Q. To that extent are you coordinate with Mr. Spence?

A. Mr. Spence is my advisor in the matter.

Q. And in your respective territories you control the matter of traffic, whether it be over the Southern Pacific or over the Central Pacific?

A. Yes; whatever route it takes.

Q. Whatever route it takes of the so-called Southern Pacific system?

A. Yes. When we are soliciting business it is always to be remembered that we are solicting against the field. We are solicting against every route.

Q. Why is that?

A. Because any of these other roads can come in and get it. The Santa Fe is just as active in the field as we are, and so is the Western Pacific and so is the Union Pacific, and so are all of these roads that I have described. They have their soliciting staff on the street, 294 their offices under the leading hotels in the city and in the principal towns, and they are scattered throughout this territory solicting business day and night, literally; and we have to be as alert as any of them to hold the business to the lines dominated by the Southern Pacific.

Q. The division of the Southern Pacific system into the Atlantic system and the Pacific system has existed at times, has it not?

A. It has existed at all times.

Q. Does it still exist?

A. It still exists.

Q. What is the Pacific system?

A. The Pacific system is the lines west of El Paso, Texas, Ogden, Utah, and Portland, Oregon.

Q. And the Atlantic system?

A. The Atlantic system is the lines east of El Paso.

Q. The Central Pacific, then, falls entirely into the Pacific system?

A. The Central Pacific is wholly within the Pacific system.

Q. And the Sunset Route east of El Paso, including the boat line to New York, is in the Atlantic system?

295 A. Yes, sir.

Q. By the way, the boat line from Galveston and from New Orleans to New York is directly operated by the Southern Pacific Company, is it not?

A. Yes, but Morgan's Louisiana & Texas Steamship Company has its own manager in New York.

Mr. BLAIR. I think it should be noted that the steamship line is owned and operated by the Southern Pacific Company, and not by Morgan's Louisiana & Texas Steamship Company.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. That is what I understood. That is the fact?

A. Yes.

Q. The Sunset Route is in the field against all competitiors, just as any other railroad is in the field against all competitors, is it not?

A. Yes.

Q. So far as business in California is concerned, apart from that directly contributory to the Atchison rails, the Southern Pacific Company is in a more influential position than any other carrier to acquire the business and affect the routing, is it not?

96 A. We have more lines in California and therefore ought to have a greater radius of activity, but the Santa Fe solicits business all over our lines in California, and so does the Western Pacific.

Q. Does much freight originating on the Southern Pacific lines go over the Santa Fe to points which could be served by the Sunset Route or the Central Pacific?

A. All that they can influence that way.

Q. No doubt; but is that a large quantity?

A. It is of some volume.

Q. Does it amount to much?

A. It is appreciable, I think.

Q. Appreciable?

A. Under the traffic arrangements they have the same opportunity to get business there that we have, so far as the shipper is concerned.

Q. The line that has the rails in the shipper's town or city, other things being equal, is in a very much better position to control the through routing of the traffic or to persuade the through routing of the traffic than any other road, is it not?

A. It should be.

97 Q. And is?

A. Other things being equal; yes.

Q. There has been practically no competition in rates on transcontinental business for years, has there?

A. The policy of the Government has prevented very aggressi competition in rates, because any road cutting a rate has to gi thirty days' notice to its competitors.

Q. How long has that been required by the Government?

A. Since 1906, as I recollect it. We formerly had to give noti before we raised a rate. Now we have to give notice also before w reduce it. That, of course, has an obvious effect.

Q. Without disregarding the pleasantness of it, or the humor it, do you really wish to put upon the Government, with all i other burdens, the responsibility for the uniformity of rates betwe the different transcontinental carriers that has existed for so long?

A. I have raised no issue with the Government.

Q. Then, coming back to the question again, and not considerin for the moment who is responsible for it, the fact is, is it not, th rates on transcontinental business for years have been pra 298 tically the same over all the different roads? That is tru is it?

A. Yes; that is true.

Q. And the competition between them has been in solicitation, i service, in equipment, ease of getting cars, searching out and se tling claims, promptness in delivery, and the personality of the ind vidual representatives of the different roads, their courtesy in dea ing with the public? That is true, is it not?

A. I think that is true.

Q. Is that a fairly comprehensive statement of the possible el ments of competition other than rates?

A. It is a very pleasant generalization; but having heard only once, I do not know just how comprehensive it is. It sound comprehensive.

(By request the reporter repeated the pending question.)

The WITNESS. I do not detect what you have left out. It seem to be all right.

299 By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. You have spoken of the interest of the shipper as affec ing the choice of route. It is true, is it not, that every railroa where it can furnish the shipper equally good accommodations ov the route which gives it the longest haul seeks to have the freig routed that way for the purpose of giving the railroad the greate revenue; is that correct?

A. Every railroad works for its long haul that gives it the mo or greatest revenue when not inconsistent with the service to th public.

Q. I included that in my question. Have your instructions solicitors as to routes which they should work preferentially be oral or on paper, or both?

A. They are merely general instructions. I do not give them to the solicitors myself.

Q. What is that?

A. They are merely general instructions, and in line with the policy I just explained to-day.

Q. Are circulars issued to them from time to time?

A. I think not.

Q. Do you recall whether, after what I will call the "unmerging" in 1913 of the Union and Southern, circulars were 300 issued over your name to solicitors, instructing them to work the Sunset Route preferentially?

A. I should say not.

Q. Do you speak with positiveness about that?

A. I think so.

Q. The instruction is conveyed by word of mouth from time to time?

A. The instructions would not be given by me to solicitors; they would be given by the officer to whom they report.

Q. And he would be whom?

A. The general freight agent.

Q. Would your directions be given to the general freight agent?

A. My directions would be given generally to the vice president in charge of traffic, and he would deliver them to his freight traffic manager; and it is probably the freight traffic manager, by the way, who would issue those instructions.

Q. Do you know whether or not the freight traffic manager, or any other officer or employee of the company, has issued circu-301 lars with reference to working the Sunset Route preferentially?

A. I do not know; but I do not think so. Those instructions would be flexible and to fit the commercial business to which they are adapted. Rigid instructions these days do not go far.

Q. In the early part of the examination there was a slight difference between us as to phraseology. You remember where I spoke of the joint control and you spoke of a unit control?

A. Yes.

Q. I want to direct your attention back to that matter. You have no personal knowledge of who built the Central Pacific Railroad, have you?

A. Well, I lived in California at that time, and the people who built it were Huntington, Stanford, Crocker, and Hopkins, and their associates. They were known as the "big four" at that time.

Q. When were you born?

A. I was born in Ireland.

Q. When?

A. In 1858.

302 Q. You were eleven years old when the railroad was completed and in operation?

A. I did not go to California until 1879.

Q. Well, did you know anything about the Central Pacific Railroad before 1879?

A. Not of my personal knowledge, except such as a young fellow picks up; but as a matter of personal knowledge about which I could testify, of course, I knew nothing about it.

Q. Now, when you spoke a moment ago about Huntington, Hopkins, Stanford, and Crocker, you did not mean to convey the idea that they physically built the road, of course?

A. No; I referred to knowledge that has come to me since, including talks with Mr. C. P. Huntington.

Q. You did not mean to convey the idea that the road was built for them as individuals, as distinct from the corporation known as the Central Pacific Railroad?

A. I did not mean that at all; I meant that they were the men who promoted it and who succeeded in their plans in accomplishing it.

Q. And that is all that you meant?

A. That was all.

Q. In the same way, confining yourself to your personal knowledge, you do not know who constructed or, prior to 1879, 303 owned any part of what is now the Sunset Route?

A. No.

Q. Up to comparatively recent times, if at all, you have no personal knowledge as to who were the holders of the stock of the Central Pacific Railroad Company or the Southern Pacific Railroad Company?

A. No. In those days I only knew it as incidental to my daily work.

Q. At the present time the Southern Pacific Company has widely scattered stockholders, has it not?

A. The Southern Pacific?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes.

Q. There are perhaps 26,000 different stockholders?

A. About 27,000.

Q. And that is somewhat near what it has been for a matter of a dozen years past?

A. I do not know as to that.

Q. Your knowledge on that matter runs back only during the period that you have been president?

A. Yes; and only then when I have had occasion to inquire.

304 Q. There is now no particular group of stockholders that controls the affairs of the Southern Pacific Company, is there?

A. I understand there is not.

Q. I think it appears sufficiently by the answer, but there is no question that the Southern Pacific Company now owns all of the stock of the Central Pacific Railway Company, is there?

A. No, sir.

Q. And it has since 1899?

A. I so understand.

Q. Did you know of the fact of the holdings of stock of the Central Pacific Railroad Company in Europe?

A. No; I would not have any relation to that.

Q. Well, in your connection with the affairs of the company, did you know the fact that some considerable blocks of stock, or some considerable quantity of the stock, was held in Europe?

A. Of which company?

Q. Of the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. Yes; I understood that it was.

Q. And that was as early as your first going with the company, was it not, in 1882?

A. I believe so, but I would not be sure as to that.

305 Q. Did you know that those holdings exceeded a majority of the stock?

A. At that time I was not in position to know anything about it except in a hearsay way. My information was very limited at any time about it.

Q. In the San Francisco fire of 1906 the San Francisco records of those companies were burned, were they not?

A. Destroyed by fire when the city burned.

Q. That included the records of the Southern Pacific Company and the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, the Central Pacific Railroad Company and the Central Pacific Railway Company; am I right?

A. If all those records were there at that time, the presumption is that they were burned. My understanding is that they were.

Q. Was nothing in the way of records or papers of those that were there saved?

A. I believe not. I was one of three officers who endeavored to undertake the saving of papers in the morning, but we were driven out by the Army. The building where the papers were stored caught fire later; it took fire later in the day, when the entire 306 business portion of the city was destroyed.

Q. You did not leave the company then?

A. No; I did not leave until six months after.

Q. And you were there at the time?

A. Yes; and until six months afterwards.

Q. The records of all these four companies were kept in San Francisco, were they not?

A. Except such as were kept in New York at the headquarters here. I would have no means of knowing about those.

Q. Do you know what sort of things were kept in New York?

A. No; you see I had nothing to do with that.

Q. At the present time is there in existence anything by way of records of the company or stock books or otherwise showing who were the stockholders in the Southern Pacific Company in 1899 or in 1893 or in 1885, or any of those years?

A. I do not know.

Q. You do not know whether there is or not?

A. No.

Q. Do you in your position as president know of any means of ascertaining with accuracy who were the shareholders in the Southern Pacific Company at those times?

307 A. If there were any record I do not know where it would be kept; I do not know where it is kept now, but I think in New York. I do not think it is kept in San Francisco. I know that the record of stockholders is carried in New York now. As to the records for those preceding years, I do not know whether such a record exists, or, if it does exist, whether it is in New York or not. Our executive offices are here.

Q. What officers of the Southern Pacific Company have knowledge of the records of the stockholders for that period?

A. I assume the comptroller.

Q. Who is that?

A. A. D. McDonald; he is comptroller and vice president, with offices at 165 Broadway.

Q. He is the comptroller of what?

A. The Southern Pacific Company.

Q. Is he comptroller of any of the others—that is, the Central Pacific Railroad Company, the Central Pacific Railway Company, or the Southern Pacific Railroad Company?

A. I do not know as to the organization of those companies, whether they have an officer of that title. The organization list is carried here.

308 Q. Do you know where the meetings of stockholders of those companies, or any of them, in 1899 and prior thereto, used to be held?

A. In 1899 and prior thereto?

Q. Yes.

A. I had no relation to the subject then. I understand—I would prefer not to undertake to testify on that.

Q. Does any freight from Nevada to the Atlantic seaboard territory go by way of the Sunset Route?

A. I think there is some wool and hides.

Q. How far to the east does that freight start on the lines of the Central Pacific Railroad? Does it start as far east as Corinne, Utah?

A. I think not; I could not say precisely, but I think it is confined to western Nevada. It may possibly be as far east as Elko.

Q. Elko is about a quarter of the way from the eastern boundary of Nevada?

A. About that.

Q. And that wool is carried to Sacramento?

A. Yes; that would be carried to Sacramento.

Q. And then to El Paso?

A. Yes; but it is a small quantity, a very small tonnage.

Q. That movement of traffic has been going on for some years?

A. Yes.

Q. Was it larger some time ago than it has been of late years?

A. I do not know, as a matter of fact, but I think it was.

Q. Prior to 1901 there was considerably more that went through El Paso, was there not, from that country, than since that time?

A. Yes, there was more than since that time; the service was better by the Southern line than it was by direct line to the Atlantic seaboard, by reason of the lack of ability of the lines east to handle it through promptly. It was simply following the line of least resistance; it was a matter of service.

Q. Do you remember a time when in that wool territory the railroad used to issue a bill of lading for fixed weights and count if the shipper left the wool unrouted, but would issue only a bill of lading "shippers load and count" if the shipper routed through Ogden?

A. I do not know as to that, but I can not conceive of a case in which that might be, because if it went around by Galveston we could count it at Galveston and check it up. If it went out to the east we would have no such opportunity, but that is a by-gone day, you know. The shipper has the right to route now that he did not have in those days. The law has changed since, and that is all gone.

Q. Do you know, as a matter of experience with bills of lading, that a bill of lading "shipper's load and count" was not as good for banking purposes as one for a definite load or weight?

A. If the shipper was good at the bank it was all right.

Q. Yes; if he did not need any collateral it would not make any difference at all; is that what you mean?

A. No; but if he held the bank harmless as against an error in his own count, the bank accepted that notation "shipper's load and count." As a matter of fact, it was a very general way of doing all kinds of business at that time. Even at the principal stations, shippers loading at sidetracks would prefer to take a bill of lading at "shipper's load and count" than to bring their freight to the station and have it checked into the car.

311 Q. Why didn't they always take that that way, then; why didn't they always take it "shipper's load and count"?

A. When it suited their convenience they did.

Q. Do you know whether the ability to give a definite load and count bill, if the wool was left unrouted, had the effect of leaving considerable quantities of it unrouted by the shipper?

A. Do you ask me as a fact whether it did?

Q. Yes.

A. I could not answer that.

Q. You do not know?

A. No.

Q. Is this distinction that I have mentioned to you, as applied to that Nevada wool, entirely new to you as I put it to you to-day?

A. No; I know that bills of lading have been issued "shipper's load and count", and there are bills of lading shipped clean. The clean bill of lading is a superior bill of lading.

Q. You knew, did you not, that the reason for the railroad's doing that was so that they might have the routing over the Sunset Route?

312 A. No; I do not admit that such a thing was done with any such design, or that it was done for any other reason than that it was actually routed by the shipper "shipper's load and shipper's count", and the railroad did not know what the count was. That is the fact. But to state it another way: As I understand your question, it is whether the railroad used that compulsory device to control the routing of business, and that if it went by one route the railroad, without knowing what the count was, would give a clean bill of lading, while if it went by another route they would give a "shipper's load and count." Such practice was never indulged in, to my knowledge.

Q. You have expressed it somewhat differently than I intended to develop from you. What I meant was this: Not that compulsion was exercised upon the shipper, but that a certain advantage—perhaps of some value, and perhaps in some instances not of value—was extended to him as an inducement for him not to exercise his right to route the freight, leaving him to leave the freight unrouted and take the advantage, if he wanted to, or to route the freight and not take the advantage, as he might please. That is the practice to which I am directing your attention, and I am asking you if such occurred.

313 A. I do not believe it was ever done. I never heard of such instructions being given or suggestions made that it should be done. In fact, I think we would have a fine riot with the shippers if we attempted it any time.

Q. You said that there was some issuing of bills of lading in former times "shipper's load and count"?

A. Yes.

Q. And that that practice has been discontinued?

A. No; I did not say that.

Q. That still goes on?

A. Yes. Where the shipper loads at a point where there is no opportunity to count it, he loads the car at a siding, we will say, in the country, perhaps behind his own barn or packing house somewhere, or delivers the shipment to the carrier and takes his bill of lading "shipper's load and count."

Q. Perhaps I misunderstood you, but I thought you said something in this connection that some practice had ceased, did you not?

A. I said at the time to which you referred, as I understood it, the shipper did not have the right to route, but that that belongs to a by-gone day; that the law has since given him the right to route; he controls his own routing, the carrier does not.

314 Q. Prior to 1906 was there a good deal of shipment of wool from Nevada unrouted to the Atlantic seaboard territory?

A. A portion of the business went that way.

Q. And that unrouted wool——

A. Oh, unrouted? I think none of it went unrouted; I think it was all routed.

Q. Routed by the shipper?

A. Routed by the shipper.

Q. Did none of it go not routed by the shipper?

A. If there was, it would be a very minor portion of it, in all probability; I am giving you the best of my remembrance.

Q. And that wool, up to 1901, was carried largely through El Paso?

A. A large part of it.

Q. Were you in such a position in the business of the company in 1901 as to be able to observe in any general way the effect upon the tonnage carried by the Central Pacific Railroad proportionally, of the opening of the Sunset Line?

A. No.

315 Q. You have no idea of how soon or how extensive the effect was?

A. You see, I was only a year in the service then and knew nothing about it.

Q. The Central Pacific Railway has terminals in Oakland on the waters of San Francisco Bay?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And has it any terminals in the city of San Francisco?

A. It has not.

Q. The Southern Pacific Railroad has terminals in San Francisco?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And also has terminals in Oakland?

A. The terminals in Oakland are as one, chiefly Central Pacific, and only in a minor way is there any Southern Pacific terminal in Oakland.

Q. San Francisco freight coming up by the Sunset Route is delivered where?

A. It is delivered in San Francisco.

Q. San Francisco freight coming through Ogden is delivered here?

316 A. In San Francisco; the same terminals. The terminals are used without any relation to where the business comes from.

Q. Is the delivery to the San Francisco terminals made across the water from Oakland or around by rail?

A. Chiefly around by way of Dunbarton Point, which crosses the lower arm of the Bay of San Francisco. Deliveries, whether from the Central Pacific line or from the lines via El Paso are made in San Francisco chiefly by our Dunbarton cut-off, which crosses the lower arm of the bay to Redwood City, and the freight is then carried in over the line of the Southern Pacific from Redwood into San Francisco.

Q. Is any of the freight to San Francisco from or through Ogden carried over the Benicia cut-off?

A. None of the freight moves by the Benicia Route unless in an emergency.

Q. The Benicia cut-off terminates at Port Costa, and your passenger traffic——

A. (Interposing). The Benicia cut-off ends at Benicia. The service from Benicia to Port Costa is rendered by ferryboats.

317 Q. And the trains from Sacramento and points east of that carrying passengers for Oakland or San Francisco run to Benicia and are ferried across physically to Port Costa and then take the tracks again and go to Oakland?

A. Yes.

Q. And the San Francisco passengers then leave the train and go by ferry?

A. They leave the train at Oakland pier.

Q. And go by ferry to San Francisco?

A. They ferry over to San Francisco.

Q. The line that now runs from Los Angeles to San Francisco is alled the "Coast line"?

A. There are two lines, one from Los Angeles by way of Bakersfield to San Francisco, which is known as the "Valley line", and the ther is run by the way of the coast line. They have a common stem rom Burbank to Los Angeles. The lines fork.

Q. And the coast line is the line that we see as the road along the oast on the map here?

A. Yes; the coast line comes up through Santa Barbara to San rancisco direct.

Q. Does any of the freight which comes through El Paso come up er the coast line?

A. It does.

Q. What is the preferential way for carrying it; over the coast line or over the valley line?

A. It is a matter of convenience. For some time we have been rrying it by way of the coast line.

Q. The coast line is an extension of the road originally running Gilroy, is it not?

A. Yes, sir; originally running to Gilroy and southerly to Soled and through Soledad south.

Q. Does the Sunset freight coming from through Bakersfield go up er this Southern Pacific line from Goshen or up this line on the st of the San Joaquin River?

A. It takes whichever routes are, for operating reasons, the most nvenient. It depends on the volume and direction of the traffic.

Q. Is there anything about Goshen to make it a natural railway rminal?

A. Goshen is the junction point for the branch line into the oil lds.

Q. How big a place is it?

A. Oh, it has a few hundred people.

Q. Your first recollection of that line down to Goshen would be in 1882?

A. Yes; about that time.

Q. Was there anything to amount to anything between throp or Goshen, then?

A. As I recollect it, at that time that was about all there was in se days. The intention was to build down the San Joaquin Valley. There are two great central valleys in California. One is the Sacramento Valley, north of Sacramento, and the other is the San Joaquin Valley, south of Stockton. The effort was to get down through the San Joaquin Valley. The Central Pacific built, as I understand it, as far as they could get, and then they resumed the rebuilding south of Goshen, through the Southern Pacific, on their way through San Joaquin Valley and to Los Angeles. I might say, in further answer to your question—I have no knowledge whether it was a coincidence or not—but adjacent to Goshen there is some valuable farming territory, very rich land.

(Whereupon an adjournment was taken until to-morrow, Thursday, September 24, 1914, at 10.30 o'clock a. m.)

320 FOURTH DAY.

ROOM 720, CUSTOM HOUSE,
New York City, September 24, 1914.

Before Special Examiner Frank R. Hanna.

Present on behalf of the United States: Mr. Orr, Mr. McClennen, and Mr. Gann.

Present on behalf of the defendants: Mr. Herrin, Mr. Blair, and Mr. Dunne for the Southern Pacific Company, et al.

WILLIAM SPROULE, the witness under examination at the taking of adjournment, resumed the stand.

Direct examination (continued) by Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. Mr. Sproule, will you take the following dates as being correct, subject to correction? I need them in the further examination, and I think you will probably agree with them.

The Central Pacific Railroad Company joined the Union Pacific near Ogden, making a continuous line from San Francisco Bay to Omaha, May 10, 1869.

321 The Southern Pacific Railroad Company reached its junction with the Atchison at Deming in March, 1881.

The Southern Pacific Railroad Company connected, via the Galveston, Harrisburg & San Antonio Railroad, with the Texas & Pacific at Sierra Blanca January 1, 1882.

The through rail from San Francisco to New Orleans via the Central Pacific to Goshen, the Southern Pacific Railroad Company to El Paso, the Galveston, Harrisburg & San Antonio Railroad, the Texas & New Orleans Railroad, the Louisiana Western, and Morgan's Louisiana & Texas Railroad & Steamship Company, was opened for business February 1, 1883, then connecting with a steamboat line from New Orleans to New York, being the steamship line of the Morgan's Louisiana & Texas Railroad & Steamship Company.

The connection between the Central Pacific Railroad and the Rio Grande Western and the Denver & Rio Grande—these last two having since become the Denver & Rio Grande—was made in the summer of 1883.

The Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe, in connection with the Atlantic & Pacific and the Southern Pacific rails, reached Mojave in 1885.

The Northern Pacific opened through to Portland in 1883.

The Oregon Short Line and Oregon Railway & Navigation Company reached Portland from the lines of the Union Pacific at either Granger or Ogden in 1884.

The Canadian Pacific reached Vancouver in 1887.

The Great Northern reached Seattle in 1893.

The Rock Island and El Paso & Southwestern reached El Paso in 1902.

The Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe reached San Francisco over its own rails in May, 1899, except for the distance between Bakersfield and Mojave, between which it used the rails of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, and which it continued so to use.

The Western Pacific was opened through from its junction at Salt Lake City with the Denver & Rio Grande to San Francisco Bay July 31, 1910.

The San Pedro Line from Los Angeles to Salt Lake, and thence over the Oregon Short Line to Ogden, was opened May 1, 1905.

The San Francisco & Portland Steamship Company, owned and controlled by the Oregon-Washington Railroad and Navigation Company, it in turn owned by the Union Pacific Railroad Company, put on a line of steamers from Portland to San Francisco during the period of the merger, 1901–1913, and this line was extended to San Pedro, the port of Los Angeles, and to San Diego after the dissolution of the merger, and is now running from Portland to San Francisco and Los Angeles.

Now, subject to correction if an error has been made, may we take those dates as correct?

A. I should think so, sir.

Q. The Oriental & Occidental Steamship Company was a company owned one-half by the Southern Pacific Company and one-half by the Union Pacific Company, was it?

A. I think it was owned one-half by the Central Pacific and one-half by the Union Pacific.

Q. During what period did that company operate?

A. I do not know when it began. It was dissolved—I could not tell you when it was dissolved; I did not have anything to do with it, as I see, except simply that we handled the freight if it came to us, or delivered freight to them. The process of its dissolution I had nothing to do with, and the year I could not tell you. It is easily accessible, however.

Q. For the time being could you approximate either date?

A. I think it was around 1900.

324 Q. That is, that it began?

A. That it was dissolved.

Q. It dissolved around 1900?

A. I think so.

Mr. HERRIN. It was a little later than that, I think.

Mr. MCCLENNEN. It dissolved soon after the merger went into effect, did it not?

Mr. HERRIN. We will get that date for you exactly.

Mr. MCCLENNEN. It would be convenient to have it.

The WITNESS. It may have been 1902.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. Roughly, how many years did it run?

A. I would suppose probably twenty years, but I do not know with any positiveness.

325 Q. That line ran between what points?

A. San Francisco and Asiatic ports of call, China, and Japan.

Q. The Pacific Mail Steamship Company has been running for many years?

A. Yes.

Q. And is still running?

A. Still running.

Q. And between what points has that been running and does it now run?

A. Between San Francisco and ports of call in China and Japan including Honolulu and Manila—certain ships.

Q. That line also runs from San Francisco to Panama?

A. It runs also to ports of call on the west coast of Mexico and to Panama.

Q. And has it been on all these routes for many years?

A. Yes.

Q. According to the report of the Southern Pacific Company for 1913 the capital stock of that company at par is $20,000,000, of which the Southern Pacific owns $11,080,000, does it not?

326 A. Yes.

Q. Do you know, in a general way, how the balance of the stock is held?

A. I do not.

Q. Do you know enough to say whether it is generally distributed, r whether it is held in some one or two interests?

A. I don't know anything about it.

Q. How long has the Southern Pacific held the controlling stock f the Pacific Mail Steamship Company?

A. I don't know.

Q. Would it be safe to say that that majority interest was acquired shortly before the merger of 1901?

A. I do not know whether it was before or after the merger. It as been some time since; I know that.

Q. At the present time are there any other lines running from alifornia to the Orient besides the Pacific Mail Steamship Comany?

A. There is the Toyo Kisen Kaisha, which is owned by the Japanse. There is the Dollar Line, which is owned by Robert Dollar nd his associates, and there are other ships that run from time to time.

Q. Those three are the only regular lines?

A. The regular liners in regular trans-Pacific trade, in nnection with steamship lines or the Toyo Kisen Kaisha Line om California.

Q. Do any of the three lines touch California anywhere except San Francisco Bay?

A. At San Francisco Bay. The Dollar steamers I would not be rtain about. They may make other calls.

Q. There are some other lines that run from Puget Sound ports the Orient?

A. Yes; and also the Canadian Pacific steamer lines.

Q. Prior to the advent of the Atchison in California, no freight om anywhere in the East could get into California by rail except er the rails of the Central Pacific Railroad or the Southern Pae; is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. Up to the time that the Atchison became powerful, the South- n Pacific virtually controlled the rates for transcontinental busis with California, did it not?

A. In conjunction with its various railroad connections throughout the United States and Mexico. It did not control the rate; it only controlled it as it was a factor in the rate making.

Q. It was, as a practical matter, a controlling factor, was ot?

A. It was one of the controlling factors.

Q. The through rate to California, as a practical matter, could be reduced or raised without the sanction of the Southern Pacific mpany?

A. Without the sanction of every road in the line.

Q. Including the Southern Pacific?

A. Including the Southern Pacific; the Southern Pacific cou not raise nor lower the rate of its own motion.

Q. The Southern Pacific was the only one that controlled through line from San Francisco to the Atlantic seaboard?

A. To New York.

Q. Or anywhere else on the Atlantic seaboard?

A. No. It controlled a steamship line only from San Francis to New York.

Q. I mean there was no other road that controlled any throu line from California to any point on the Atlantic slope; that is tr is it not?

A. I think that is correct.

329 Q. The Southern Pacific had it within its power, with the consent of the other roads, to determine the rate over th through line?

A. Yes and no.

Q. What were the limitations?

A. The Southern Pacific had to consult its rail connections. has not at any time been in a position of independent control of rates, because their great interest in the Central Pacific and th great interest in the railroad situation generally and in the Sun Route itself made it highly inadvisable and, in fact, would have m it a piece of folly for them to undertake to dictate rates by th own line to affect the whole situation. Every railroad has to w with its connections. It is a matter of mutual relation and of re rocal relation in the exchange and interchange of business.

Q. Getting away from the more decorous language of the co room to that used in the rough and tumble of business, is it not t that for years what J. C. Stubbs said as to rates to Califor on transcontinental business went and what he vetoed wo not go?

330 A. Well, the railroad business is not a rough and tum business, and that statement might be a rough and tumblest ment, but it is not true.

Q. Well, is it not pretty nearly accurate?

A. No; it is quite inaccurate; it is not in accordance with the f so far as comes within my knowledge during the period of my experience.

Q. Mr. Stubbs was undoubtedly the most powerful factor in Transcontinental Association conferences and later in the Tr continental Freight Bureau?

A. Mr. Stubbs was a man of powerful personality and would powerful in any body of which he was a member on any subject.

Q. Then, whatever be the elements which produced the result, he was the most powerful element in those gatherings?

A. I do not think so at all. As a matter of fact, the most powerful element in those gatherings produced the transcontinental rate war, and that was the Atchison.

Q. When did the Atchison start its rate war?

A. In 1886, I think.

Q. And how long did that last?

A. I think the greater part of the year. In fact my recol-
331 lection is until the Interstate Commerce Commission came in and put the railroad business on a new basis, in 1887.

Q. Well, there are a great many elements that tend to the voluntary reduction of rates by railroads other than rate wars, are there not?

A. Yes.

Q. Is it not a fact that apart from this rate war of which you speak none of the railroads succeeded in making a voluntary reduction of rates to California against the opposition of Mr. Stubbs?

A. That is not so; it is emphatically not so.

Q. Do you bear in mind instances where they succeeded in making such reduction against the opposition of Mr. Stubbs?

A. Why, the meetings with respect to transcontinental rates lasted sometimes for weeks. It is a give and take question; it is a question of response to mutual needs, to railroad needs, to the economic questions of the time, and it is a question of persuasion or conviction or demonstration, each road with respect to the other, and its connections, and other roads engaged in the same business.

It also has relation to the rates made to and from other Pacific 332 coast ports; and the northern lines, for example, had a distinct influence on the rates made in California. Besides that, the Southern Pacific line was only a part of the through line by its important connections and by the road over which the great volume of the business was done. The Southern Pacific had to give heed to what its connections contended for just as much as they had to give heed to what the Southern Pacific contended for, and it was a question of business negotiation and not a dictatorial stand upon the part of anybody. It was a business question at all times.

Q. Is this an accurate statement, put in the form of question and answer:

"Q. As a matter of fact, could any through all-rail rate be made from the Missouri River or east to California without the consent of the Southern Pacific in the first instance, and subsequently, upon its advent, the consent of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe?

"A. No."

A. Of what period does that speak—before the advent of the Santa Fe?

Q. Before the advent of the Santa Fe.

A. I would answer that a rate could not be made over the Central Pacific Railroad without the consent of the Central Pacific Railroad at that time, and could not be made over the Union Pacific 333 Railroad without the consent and concurrence of the Union Pacific Railroad at that time. A rate could not be made into Chicago without the consent of the Chicago & Northwestern Railroad Company, for example, from Omaha to Chicago at that time. That is true of every railroad over which the rate was operative.

Q. And is the statement which I put to you in the form of question and answer an accurate statement. I will repeat it to you without having it go down on the record again.

(The quoted question and answer were again read by Mr. McClennen.)

A. I was too recently in the service at that time to answer that question from any knowledge of my own, but I will make the statement as I have already made it.

Q. Then you leave it that you do not know whether or not that statement——

A. (Interposing.) Whose testimony is that?

Q. I am reading from the testimony of J. C. Stubbs.

A. I would prefer to stand upon Mr. Stubbs' testimony.

Q. It is at page 3901 of the so-called merger record.

A. As to what occurred at that time, Mr. Stubbs is the authority, not I.

334 Q. Well, there is nothing in your recollection of the situation that would be at all at variance with that answer of Mr. Stubbs's?

A. I was not in a situation at that time; my understanding of the situation is as I haye stated it.

Q. You will notice that this question covers as well the time after the Atchison was in operation. Indeed, it covers certainly every time up to the merger, and by that time you had a position which would put you in the way of knowing the situation?

A. Yes; the rate would not be made over the Southern Pacific without the consent of the Southern Pacific.

Q. Now, dealing with the period as a whole up to 1901, is this statement as Mr. Stubbs has put it correct?

(The statement was again repeated by Mr. McClennen.)

A. I do not construe that the way you construe it at all. I construe him to say——

Q. (Interposing.) You misunderstand me. I am not construing it at all.

Mr. DUNNE. Let him finish.

By Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. I just read you the question and the answer, and I ask you if it is correct.

Mr. BLAIR. You can ask him whether it is correct, but not whether the construction is correct.

Mr. McCLENNEN. I am not asking him that.

The WITNESS. You asked me whether that statement is correct, as to the Southern Pacific up to the merger period, to 1901. I say, according to my understanding of what that question is, it is not correct, and I make that answer because I can only assume from your question that you do not understand that answer as I understand it.

By Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. Am I right in understanding you that this statement which I now read to you is not correct, namely:

(The statement was again read by Mr. McClennen.)

A. When the Southern Pacific was the only line, the only road from California to the east, the consent of the Southern Pacific was necessary as one road in the through line. When the Atchison came in there was another road serving California, and the Southern Pacific's consent was necessary after that only with respect to the Southern Pacific lines, the Atchison having control of their own line.

Q. As a practical matter, the interests of the railroads were so interwoven that the Southern Pacific could not reduce its rate prudently against the opposition of the Atchison, or the Atchison against the opposition of the Southern Pacific; is not that true?

A. As a matter of fact, they did make such reductions.

Q. And at the time of the rate war that you speak of?

A. No; I am speaking of from time to time as the interests of each road predominated.

Q. It was the practice of these roads to confer before any changes in rates?

A. As a rule it was. That rule was honored in the breach from time to time.

Q. And Mr. Stubbs, who gave this testimony that I have read to you, was the representative of the Southern Pacific in those conferences?

A. Yes; either personally or through his subordinate officers.

Q. The man better able to judge than almost anyone else in the country of the actual influence of the Southern Pacific in the Transcontinental Association? Is that true?

337 A. As a generalization, I suppose that is so. I do not think it would be at all conceded by the officers of the other railroads, however.

Q. Is this a correct statement, as of the period up to 1901, and after the Santa Fe had got through to San Francisco:

"The Santa Fe forms a line under one management from Chicago and could do as it pleased. It did not have to ask anybody. The Southern Pacific had its own line all the way through to New York and could do as it pleased."

Was that a correct statement?

A. As a matter of dictum, that is correct. As a matter of practice, it is not so.

Mr. DUNNE. To what page are you referring, Mr. McClennen?

Mr. MCCLENNEN. I read from Mr. Stubbs's testimony, page 3901.

The WITNESS. If they were in a world apart by themselves, they could do that, each of them.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. Apart from the effect as inviting retaliation, the fact 338 was, on business between New York and San Francisco, the Sunset line had the power to determine what rates and what service should prevail, and was the only line that could actually, effectively speak without the cooperation of other lines as to business between those points. That is true, is it not?

A. As to business between——

Q. (Interposing.) San Francisco and New York City.

A. It was not so much a question of retaliation as a question of alienation. It was necessary to the Southern Pacific that it retain the friendship and good will and influence of its connections east of Ogden chiefly, east of El Paso, and that it retain the good will of the railroads centering in New York, and those grave considerations upon which the welfare of the Southern Pacific's own business depended, would prevent it from taking such independent action between New York and San Francisco as would be inimical to its relations with its rail connections generally.

Q. The most powerful line running west from the Missouri River has always been the Union Pacific, has it not?

A. The most powerful line in transcontinental traffic has always been the Central Pacific and Union Pacific's through line.

339 Q. The Union Pacific could not, as a matter of practical railroad business, prior to 1910, get into California except by the use of the rails of the Central Pacific. That is true, is it not, barring its power to get in over the San Pedro line to Los Angeles after some time, say, in 1905?

A. My recollection is that it was into San Francisco by its own line through Portland in connection with the steamship line.

Q. You mean carrying——

A. (Interposing.) Freight.

Q. Freight by way of Granger or Ogden over the Oregon Short Line?

A. Yes.

Q. And the Oregon Railway & Navigation Company?

A. Using its own steamers from Portland to San Francisco.

Q. And thence from Portland by boat to San Francisco?

A. Yes.

Q. In your opinion as a railroad man was that a practicable line for real business?

A. It was.

Q. Was it a line that was considerably used?

340 A. It was not considerably used.

Q. Was it a desirable line?

A. It was like any mixed rail and water line—not as desirable as a through rail line, other conditions being equal.

Q. Well, as desirable in its territory as the mixed rail and water line of the Sunset line?

A. The conditions were unequal, because the Union Pacific's line stopped at Omaha, you see; it did not have the transcontinental line.

Q. In your opinion, that line through Portland from Ogden to San Francisco was a substantial factor in the competitive conditions for California business, was it?

A. As it happened, it was only temporary. It was potential, but not powerful.

Q. It was potential as soon as the rails from Ogden or Granger to Portland's water front were completed, was it not?

A. It was potential; yes. There were possibilities there.

Q. And that was in the middle eighties somewhere—perhaps 1884?

341 A. It was in the middle eighties. That it was practicable is shown by the fact that the Northern Pacific, the Great Northern, and the Canadian Pacific have all used water routes similarly on San Francisco business.

Q. This is an accurate statement of fact, then, in your opinion, is it:—

"The Portland route was a factor in rate making to the coast, using Portland route as descriptive of this route from Ogden to Portland and by boat to San Francisco."?

A. Using Portland to Puget Sound also, it is correct.

Q. You have been of that opinion for years?

A. It has been a factor for years.

Q. And the opinion which you now express is the opinion which you have had for years?

A. I think so.

Q. If the Union Pacific was dissatisfied with the rates to which the Central Pacific would agree, or with the service which the Central Pacific furnished for the business tendered by the Union Pacific, and in consequence had adopted this Portland route, could it have done so without serious danger of loss of business initiating on the lines of the Southern Pacific?

342 A. That is one of those hypothetical questions in its nature. I think, as a matter of practice and of fact, that no such thing occurred. There was no alienation of the Central Pacific's business from the Union Pacific. But that is a question of recollection.

Q. As bearing upon this competitive factor that we have been speaking about, I am asking you for your opinion as a railroad man.

A. I do not know why I should be asked to guess at a question of fact.

Q. Do you regard the probable effect of putting into operation that Portland route, when it never was put into effect in a very substantial way, as a question of fact?

A. It is a question of historical fact. It is a series of transactions that have all occurred, and I do not know why I should sit here and guess at probabilities growing out of it, when those probabilities have elapsed years ago.

Q. Were you aware of the contention made on behalf of the Southern Pacific Company in the merger suit to the effect that that route, as a practical matter, was not a factor in competition, because if the Union Pacific had attempted to send its freight that way 343 it would have resulted in retaliatory measures by the Southern Pacific Company?

A. No; I had nothing to do with the merger suit.

Mr. HERRIN. That was the Union Pacific's position. We only spoke with "our master's voice" in the case.

The WITNESS. You see, I left the service in 1906 and did not return to it until 1911. I was not in the merger litigation in any way, and have no knowledge of what was testified to.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. You give it, then, as your opinion that as a business matter—as a matter of prudence in railroading—that the Union Pacific, if dissatisfied with the treatment given it by the Central Pacific, could have effectively competed by carrying its freight through Portland to San Francisco and then distributing it in California over the local lines there?

A. It would not be a matter of effective competition; it would be a matter of strategem. The competition would not be effective to the same extent as the continued use of a through line would be.

Q. Then, so far as competition by the Union Pacific with the 344 Sunset Line is concerned, it was, as a practical matter, dependent upon some sort of alliance with the Central Pacific, was it not?

A. As the Central Pacific was also dependent on the Union Pacific for the alliance.

Q. Did the Central Pacific route any freight over the Denver & Rio Grande and Missouri Pacific prior to 1901?

A. I think they did.

Q. The Central Pacific had over those lines a means of sending its freight to the Missouri River without the use of the lines of the Union Pacific?

A. Yes.

Q. It used those lines to a very considerable extent?

A. To reciprocate for business that was delivered by those lines to the Central Pacific.

Q. There were times when the freight of the Central Pacific destined to points east of the Missouri River passed over the lines of the Denver & Rio Grande to the extent of more than twenty-five per cent, were there not?

A. That is too close a figure for me to testify to. I know that the vast volume of business went at all times over the Union Pacific. Much the smaller quantity at any time went over the 345 Rio Grande. I would not be surprised if there were times when the volume might reach the figure you name.

Q. And there may have been times when it reached the figure of forty-five per cent?

A. I would regard that as highly improbable, but I can not say from memory.

Q. In other words, for practical railroad purposes, from Ogden to California points prior to 1905, we will assume—assuming that is when the San Pedro was opened—the Central Pacific had a natural rail monopoly?

A. That is not correct. The Santa Fe came into southern California in the year that was named.

Q. I think perhaps you have missed the point of my question. I said from Ogden to California.

A. Oh!

Q. The Central Pacific did have a natural rail monopoly?

A. That was the only road in the line from Ogden to San Francisco.

Q. The Union Pacific has not had a rail monopoly from Ogden to the Missouri River since some time in the early eighties, has it?

A. Since the Rio Grande and connections came to Ogden.

346 Q. In your opinion as a railroad man, dealing with practical railroading, not law or theoretics, was not the control of the Central Pacific over rail freight between California and points east of the Missouri River much more powerful than the control of the Union Pacific prior to 1901?

A. Over California freight?

Q. Yes.

A. To the extent that there was any control, the Central Pacific ought to be the more influential.

Q. The result of that was that the Southern Pacific Company, if it controlled the operations of the Central Pacific and the operations of the Sunset Line, controlled both of the gateways to California, and prior to 1905 all of the rail gateways to California except such as the Atchison could control? That is true, is it not?

A. It is true, depending upon the construction you put upon the word "control"; but "control" is a very large word to use in that connection, because the interstate-commerce act took effect in 1887 and removed from the railroads the control as popularly understood.

Q. The practical movement of transcontinental freight is dependent on the existence of a joint through rate, is it not?

A. Yes.

347 Q. That is, as a practical matter?

A. The law requires that.

Q. I mean that, as a practical matter, if a joint through rate does not exist over a given line and there are other means of transportation on a joint rate, the freight will not move on a sum of the locals?

A. If the sum of the locals exceeds the through rate in force by another practicable line, the freight would not move over the roads that impose the sum of the locals.

348 Q. It is in consequence of that, is it not, that the taking out of a joint rate is described in railroading as closing the gateway?

A. For that piece of business. This closing of the gateway does not mean that the carriers will not receive and transport the freight. For instance, if one line finds, for example, that the lumber rate is too small and it does not want that business it says, "Don't put that rate in by our line, and if it is in take it out." The other lines may keep it in, regarding it as desirable business for them. These lines would keep the gateway open, whereas the other roads would close that gateway.

Q. The trucks would still be open for the freight to pass on the cal rates?

A. It would not pass, as a matter of fact.

Q. It would not pass? That is the situation, is it?

A. Yes; unless there were means of redress later.

Q. Now, it is true, in your understanding, is it not, that prior to 906 railroads were not obliged by law to maintain joint rates?

A. I think they were.

Q. You think the railroads were, prior to 1906, obliged to file joint rates?

A. And my recollection further is that the law prior to 1906 gave e Interstate Commerce Commission the authority to open through ates of their own initiative if there was not already a practicable ute in existence.

Q. Prior to 1906 if the connecting carriers did not agree on what e joint rate should be do you know of any way by which a joint te could be determined?

A. My recollection is that prior to 1906 complaint could be made the Interstate Commerce Commission and they would determine it.

Q. Not quite expecting this answer I will put the question in this m: You know of no practical method, do you, except such, if any, the Interstate Commerce acts may furnish, of instituting a joint te or maintaining a joint rate over two connecting roads, one which is unwilling to consent to it; is that true?

A. That is a correct statement. That refers to interstate business. That is correct as to interstate business.

Q. Then, except so far as the Interstate Commerce acts may give relief the Union Pacific as a matter of practical railroading was dependent upon the consent of the Central Pacific to maintain a joint rate, and in consequence to have a practical means of ess to California terminals, prior to the completion of the San dro line; is that true?

A. As a matter of practical railroading, when any line puts in a e all the lines put in the rate as a rule. No one road has the wer to prevent the rate as a matter of practical railroading.

Q. I appreciate what you say they might do, as a matter of busi-s, but I am right in my statement that they were dependent upon consent of the Central to get practical access to San Francisco?

A. As a matter of practical railroading, if necessary, the rate uld be put in by another line; then the Union Pacific-Central Pa-c line would have to put it in anyway, if they did not join to-her in putting it in, as they did frequently initiate rates them-es.

Q. What other line prior to 1905 could, without the consent the Central, put in a joint rate to cover traffic from Ogden to Cal fornia terminals?

351 A. Not from Ogden, but I understood you were talking ab through transcontinental traffic. The Sante Fe could.

Q. No; I was speaking of the Union Pacific's position.

A. In transcontinental traffic?

Q. Yes; in transcontinental traffic the Union Pacific was depe ent upon having the Ogden gateway to California open was it no

A. Yes; to San Francisco.

Q. And the Union Pacific was dependent on the Central Pac to keep that gateway open?

A. Yes; they were a through line. Perhaps I should explain, a matter of practical railroading, two roads do not come and sit do together in a corner and debate these things the way we are do here at all. They get together with their various connections roads interested in the business and consider what is the wisest thi to do, and proceed to put the rates in effect, or not put them in effect, as the case may be.

Q. These railroad men are business men?

A. They are business questions.

Q. And they exercise the power that they have in the way th seems to them best?

352 A. Yes. It is a question of the through line; it is not question of the road west of Ogden as a competitor, or of road east of Ogden, because it is not. They are connections; it one through line, and the line is debating what is the wise thi to do.

Q. In that respect they are in the same position as any other in vidual who, even if he has the power to control, may find it wi not to exercise that in a way that is injurious to the rights of oth that is about all that means, is it not?

A. Excepting that that power by the nature of things is extrem limited. The control is a commercial and economic control with spect to the making of rates.

Q. After the Union Pacific acquired the control of the South Pacific Company the freight coming over the Central Pacific a bound to points being east of the Missouri River went almost e tirely over the Union Pacific to the exclusion of the Denver & R Grande, did it not?

A. The Southern Pacific and Union Pacific solicited for the Un
Pacific line with the exception of such as went by the other gatew

Q. And the result of that solicitation was to dimin

353 greatly the proportion that had been going over the Den

Rio Grande and increase correspondingly the proportion going er the Union Pacific?

A. Yes; and a further result was to cause the construction of the estern Pacific, which diverted since its construction a great deal of siness from the Union Pacific.

Q. That is, as a means of salvation to the Missouri Pacific and the enver & Rio Grande they constructed the Western Pacific?

A. Yes.

Q. That change in the passage of the traffic—freight going to a nsiderable extent over the Denver & Rio Grande to going only to small extent that way and to a much larger extent over the Union cific—was accomplished without the closing of any gateway, but most entirely by the preferential solicitation of the Southern Pa-fic Company and of the Union Pacific Company, was it not?

A. And their connections.

Q. It was a conspicuous illustration of what solicitation may accomplish in determining the routes of freight travel?

A. It was a conspicuous instance of the force of a man of genius.

Q. What?

A. It was a conspicuous illustration of the force of a man of nius. If under any other circumstances at any other time that ntrol had been acquired in a normal way, there might have been no ch effect on the Union Pacific as there was.

Q. The same kind of influences which turned that traffic so much r the Union Pacific to the loss of the Denver & Rio Grande has yed some part in turning freight originating in Oregon and north-n and central California to the Sunset line; am I right?

A. The solicitation for the Sunset line has been the same with pect to Atlantic seaboard business during the period of the merger during the period before and since.

Q. When the Union Pacific obtained control of the Southern Pa-fic Company there was inaugurated an era of great improvement of e Central Pacific Railroad, was there not?

A. There was.

Mr. HERRIN. And of the Union?

The WITNESS. And of the Union.

By Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. Just take it a little at a time. The roadbed of each road was greatly improved?

A. You mean of the Southern Pacific and the Union Pacific?

Q. The Union and the Central I am speaking of now.

A. Yes.

Q. The service over the rails of the Central-Union was gr improved?

A. Yes.

Q. The schedules were better kept on the freight trains than had ever been before?

A. That is not quite uniformly true. The amount of constru that was going on both upon the Union Pacific and upon the tral Pacific was not favorable to the best service at the time.
effect of those improvements was, of course, an improvement i service.

Q. Did the construction of the work over the Central and Union continue during the whole period from 1901 to 1913 to a usual extent or were the unusual construction works accomplish the early part of the period?

A. The heavier construction was in the earlier part of the p affecting the main line.

Q. After the completion of the work the freight t 356 kept their schedules better than ever before, did they not?

A. I do not know as to that, but I would say that the of those improvements was an improvement in the service.

Q. To render such an improvement in the service over the from Omaha to San Francisco Bay required that the Centra as well as the Union line be in the control of the organizatio had the policy of making such improvements?

A. Improvements in what, service, did you say?

Q. In service.

A. No; the two properties were operated separately.

Q. But they were operated, although separately—as a ba matter they were operated under the supervision of the same of men, were they not?

A. Yes; they were in the same executive control.

Q. Put in another way, the Union Pacific could not make eff its ambition for really improved service from Omaha to San cisco Bay without the cooperation of those in control of the C Pacific Railroad. That is true, is it not?

A. Yes; and that cooperation prevailed before the 357 period and prevails since the merger period.

Q. During the period before the merger was one duties of the solicitors in the territories which the Southern desired to serve over the Sunset Route to watch the movem traffic, and when they found that it was going through Om follow up the shippers and see whether they could be persu send it over the Sunset Route?

A. I think that was a common practice among all lines, to the routing of business over other lines.

Q. Is it true that the Sunset Route is a natural competitor of all other carriers operating between points on the Atlantic st and in the Middle West on the one hand and points on the cific coast and in the Orient on the other?

A. The Oriental business is not sought by the Sunset Route.

Q. Leaving out that part, is that correct?

A. That, as a generalization, is correct. Every road is the natural petitor of every other road, and every route is the natural com- itor of every other route.

Q. And in that sense the Central route, in conjunction with its nections, is, and for many years has been, a natural competitor the Southern?

A. By the "Central route" you mean the through line, of which Central Pacific forms a part?

Q. I said, "With its connections"; yes. The volume of traffic for ich it, with its connections, is a competitor is very large?

A. The Central Pacific-Union Pacific route?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes.

Q. It was apparent to you as a railroad man in 1899 that if the Government lien on the Central Pacific line from Ogden to ramento and from Sacramento to Niles and San Jose, possibly h a break of five miles between Brighton and Sacramento, was closed and the property sold to interests other than the Southern cific Company that would put the Central Pacific Railroad, with connections, in an independent position in this competition, was it ?

A. Whether it would put it in an independent position would de- d upon the outcome of the sale. It would be a capital operation h respect to the Southern Pacific.

Q. You are using the word "capital" in the sense of "execution," in the sense of "bully"?

A. In the sense of "amputation."

(Whereupon a recess was taken until two o'clock p. m.)

AFTER RECESS.

WILLIAM SPROULE, the witness under examination at the taking of recess, resumed the stand for further direct examination.

The WITNESS. Before beginning the session I desire to correct my timony with respect to the Occidental and Oriental Steamship mpany. I find that the Union Pacific was a half owner of that , but neither the Central Pacific nor the Southern Pacific owned other half, which was privately owned.

By Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. By interests not affiliated with any railroad?

A. It was originally owned, I believe, by the Pacific Improvement Company, which was dominated by what were known as the Big Four. How it was subsequently owned as to that half interest, I do not know. I also find that the liquidation occurred in 1909–1910.

Q. And have you the beginning date?

A. I have not the beginning date; I could not find it.

361 Q. Just before adjournment I was speaking to you about the condition presented by the possible foreclosure of the Central

A. Yes.

Q. There was no way, was there, at that time of preventing the condition except by the acquisition of the railroad, either directly by the Southern Pacific or by some company owned by it?

A. I do not know what was in the mind of the Government at the time, but as I understand it the Government negotiated with the Southern Pacific for the purpose of having the Southern Pacific sponsor for the Central Pacific debt instead of foreclosing, as I take it the Government might have done.

Mr. McCLENNEN. I will ask to have all the answer stricken out after the words "I do not know what was in the mind of the Government," on the ground that it is not responsive to the question and not a statement of the witness's own knowledge.

By Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. In addition to the objection, I do not think your answer

362 thus far quite answers the question, so I will ask to have it read, if you will follow it, and see if you can give me a direct answer.

A. Don't you desire that the preceding questions be read and the two go together? I want to get that connection.

(The record was produced, and the witness read the questions and answers in connection with this subject, as follows:)

"Q. It was apparent to you as a railroad man in 1899 that if the Government lien on the Central Pacific line from Ogden to Sacramento and from Sacramento to Niles and San Jose, possibly with a break of five miles between Brighton and Sacramento, was foreclosed and the property sold to interests other than the Southern Pacific Company, that would put the Central Pacific Railroad with its connections in an independent position in this competition, was it not?

"A. Whether it would put it in an independent position would depend upon the outcome of the sale. It would be a capital operation with respect to the Southern Pacific.

"Q. You are using the word 'capital' in the sense of 'execution', not in the sense of 'bully'?

"A. In the sense of 'amputation.'"

(The reporter then read Mr. McClennen's question, as follows:)

"Q. There was no way, was there, at that time, of preventing that condition except by the acquisition of the railroad either directly by the Southern Pacific or by some company owned by it?"

The WITNESS. I do not know what was in the mind of the Government. That was the method chosen to dispose of it. What would have happened if the Government had taken that course I cannot tell, but if it were sold and independently owned it would have formed a main shank of railroad as described without feeders or laterals, and would not be an effective railroad system even for purposes of the Government itself or those who might thus become the owners of the road.

Mr. MCCLENNEN. This answer I will also ask to have stricken out as not responsive, as a statement of conclusion of fact and of law, and an attempted interpretation of written instruments which should speak for themselves, and as a statement of matters not of the witness' knowledge.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. The line of railroad from Ogden to San Francisco Bay, if independently controlled, would in its natural business association with the Union Pacific be a pretty effective line for San Francisco business from points east of the Missouri River, would it not?

A. That line as described did not reach San Francisco, and would not be an effective line.

Q. I said San Francisco Bay.

A. The line as described would not be an effective line. San Jose three miles from the lower end of San Francisco Bay, and such a line itself would not be an effective line to San Francisco Bay.

Q. In answering you have elected to speak of a different line from the one I put in my last question, and I repeat the question: An independent line from Ogden, or the junction near Ogden with the Union Pacific, to San Francisco Bay at Oakland would be a pretty effective line for freight between San Francisco Bay and points east of the Missouri River, would it not?

A. For business originating at or destined to San Francisco, yes.

Q. Now, the only way of preventing the falling of so much of that line as lay between Ogden and San Jose, with a possible hiatus of five miles near Sacramento, into the hands of independent parties to use as a means of competition on the foreclosure of the Government lien was to acquire that line directly fo the Southern Pacific, or by some line owned by the Southern Pacific

A. It seems to me that that is an inference.

Q. Does there appear to you any other way in which that resu could be accomplished?

A. Unless the Government itself took it.

366 Q. If the Government itself took it, it would be in a positio to that extent, with eastern connections, to compete with th
Sunset line, would it not?

A. The Government would take the place of the Central Pacific i its relation to the Federal acts.

Q. The purpose sought to be accomplished by the written co tracts and conveyances which were made was to prevent the pos bility of such a condition arising?

Mr. BLAIR. We object to that on the ground that the written in struments speak for themselves and that this witness has not be shown to know the purpose of the parties to that transaction.

The WITNESS. As I understand, it was to prevent the Southe Pacific losing a dominant and highly important part of its syste without which it would not have been able to give the public ad quate service.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. The Southern Pacific did not at that time own a share of th stock of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, as far as you kno did it?

A. That I do not know.

367 Q. In your connection with the various companies it nev has come to your attention, has it, that the Southern Pacif Company ever owned any stock in the Central Pacific Railroad Co pany?

A. My relation with the property was not of a character th would bring me into touch with these fiscal relations or questions railroad ownership.

Q. Do you not see, Mr. Sproule, that you have not answered t question at all? I am simply asking this——

A. (Interposing.) And I do not know what was the stock owne ship at that time.

Q. Bearing in mind the limitation that you have just stated, it a fact, is it not, that in your relations of that time, or any subsequ time, with the Southern Pacific Company it has never come to yo attention that the Southern Pacific Company ever owned any sto in the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. That I do not know. I do not know whether they owned stock or not of the Central Pacific Railroad Company.

Q. I have not asked you in this question whether they owned it or not. I have simply asked you if it is not a fact that it has never come to your personal attention in your relations with the Southern Pacific Company at any time?

A. It is not a matter that would come to my attention necessarily.

Q. And it never has come to your attention?

A. It may have come to my attention repeatedly and slipped my memory, but I do not retain memory of it.

Q. I will put the question again. I think you can hardly have followed the last one.

It never has come to your attention that the Southern Pacific Company owned any of the stock of the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. I am not trying to evade answering your question at all. I am trying to answer your question. I have already said in three or four different ways that I do not recollect it.

Perhaps I might explain that these properties have been handled as one property; they have not been handled as split-up properties; and it was not necessary for me to know it.

Mr. McCLENNEN. This statement, starting "Perhaps I might explain," I ask to have stricken out as not responsive and as a statement of a conclusion and not of fact.

By Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. It is customary among connecting railroads over routes that are feasible physically and from a business standpoint to make joint rates, is it not?

A. It is.

Q. And has been for many years?

A. Over practicable routes; yes.

Q. Is it not true that up to 1901 the Union Pacific was absolutely dependent upon the Southern Pacific with respect to through rates, through billing, through cars, through train service into California territory?

A. It is not.

Q. Put in the form of question and answer is this a correct statement:

"What was the position of the Union Pacific with respect to through rates, through billing, through cars, through train service into this California territory?

"A. Absolutely dependent upon the Central Pacific lines."

Mr. HERRIN. Was not that the examination on the part of the defendant in that case that you are reading from?

Mr. McCLENNEN. This was the examination of Mr. Stubbs——

Mr. HERRIN. By defendant's counsel?

Mr. McCLENNEN. By Mr. Dunne, as defendant's counsel, in the merger case.

Mr. HERRIN. I thought so. You remember that we reserved our exception to any change of position in this case to what the Government maintained in the other. We do not need to renew that to every question. I am simply calling attention to it.

(By request the reporter repeated the pending question as follows:)

"Q. Put in the form of question and answer is this a correct statement:

"'What was the position of the Union Pacific with respect to through rates, through billing, through cars, through train service into this California territory?

"'A. Absolutely dependent upon the Central Pacific lines.'"

The WITNESS. As to through rates, rates were made jointly, and they were dependent upon each other for the making of the rates over that line.

As to through billing, that was, in like manner, a matter of joint arrangement.

371 As to through cars: A very large part of the car supply for through business came to the Southern Pacific from the Union Pacific and was necessary to carry that business; and without the Union Pacific cars the Southern Pacific would have been unable to load a large and imporant part of the through traffic. The Southern Pacific was dependent upon the Union Pacific for an important part of its vehicles of carriage.

As to through train service: That has always been by cooperation between the two companies, and the Central Pacific train service was as necessary to the Union Pacific as the Union Pacific train service was necessary to the Central Pacific; and that, again, is an interchangeable relation; that is, the Southern Pacific could not handle that business if it had not been for the cooperation of the Union Pacific. It was not a question of one road being at the mercy of the other. There was no such condition.

By Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. If it were changed to say that each, the Union and the Central, was absolutely dependent upon the other in these four respects, would that be correct?

A. That would be nearer the condition.

372 Q. That would be absolutely the condition, would it not?

A. Not absolutely.

Q. With what reservation? Why not absolutely dependent, prior to 1901, in those——

A. (Interposing.) Because the Union Pacific had another route.

Q. You now refer to the one through Portland that we spoke of?

A. Yes; which they could use, just as the Northern line used the water route.

Q. With that exception, the statement would be correct?

A. Or could divert their business through their Colorado junctions away from the Central Pacific.

Q. With those exceptions, the statement would be correct?

A. I think the statement is correct.

Q. In the routing of citrus fruits, from 1899 to 1910, the Southern Pacific Company reserved the right to do its own routing, did it not?

A. Yes; that was a condition on bills of lading of all carriers.

Q. That was a plan that was arrived at by the railroads to overcome difficulties due to the rebating by the intermediate carriers?

A. It was a rule arrived at by all the carriers, the Union Pacific, the Southern Pacific, and all the other carriers engaged in the through traffic, originally because of the difficulty of making through routes, and, secondarily, because there was a system in effect in the earlier days of transcontinental business under which the shippers had their freight billed under one set of rates and received a refund on the basis of another set of rates, provided the routing was in the hands of the carriers. That was the original plan, or one of the early plans, worked out by the transcontinental lines to secure business as against the water routes, and a plan which, however, lapsed in the eighties; but the provision in the bill of lading remained uniform through subsequent years, for a long time. It had no significance as to any particular road or any particular route; it applied to all alike.

Q. During the period that the Southern Pacific Company, with the other railroads, as you spoke of, reserved the right to route this traffic, the Southern Pacific Company, by its internal arrangements, used to provide for a certain percentage of it to go through El Paso, and a certain percentage of it to go through Ogden, did they not?

A. As I recall it, not by percentages; or, if it was by percentages, it was based upon the climatic conditions under which experience showed that the business would move. In every year the main volume of the citrus-fruit business has moved through the southern gateways because of the milder climate, and about the middle or toward the end of March, the main bulk of it moves up to the northern gateways, because the southern climate has become hot. The northern gateway in the earlier part of the season is dangerous from frosts and is mild as the springtime comes.

The division of the citrus-fruit business between the southern and the northern gateways has been based upon climatic conditions, at the instance of the shippers, who, for some years, have done their own routing altogether, and still divide it that way.

Q. You refer to the years since 1910, perhaps?

A. Yes.

Q. It was the regular thing——

A. Oh, long before 1910.

375 Q. Was it?

A. Yes; I left the service in 1906, and it was the rule years before that. The shippers did their own routing. Perhaps I should add that as long back as I was actively connected with the service the shippers did their own routing of oranges, irrespective of the clause in the bill of lading.

Q. That is, the clause reserving——

A. (Interposing.) Reserving the right to route. The carriers did not exercise that right.

376 Q. Well, do you recall that after this plan was put into operation by the railroads, say in 1899, then the Southern Pacific Company used to issue directions, say in February, to their traffic men in the fruit country, saying "On and after March 1st, for instance, route citrus fruits 15 per cent through El Paso and 85 per cent through Ogden?"

A. No, the shippers designated the route. Generally the shipper came to the carriers and arranged for the train service ahead of the movement. At that time the car lines had a good deal to do with the movement because of the icing and ventilator arrangements, and the routing grew out of that combination of general conditions for the purpose of giving the business the best service.

Q. Look, for instance, at what purports to be a print of a letter which I show you here. Were you not aware of such directions as appear in that letter?

Mr. BLAIR. Please state in what pamphlet or volume or book that is.

Mr. MCCLENNEN. I am showing the witness what purports to be a letter of December 29, 1899, on page 599 of the transcript of the record in the so-called "Orange Routing case"; that is No. 1

377 of the October term of the Supreme Court of the United States, entitled "Southern Pacific Company and others against Interstate Commerce Commission", appearing to be a letter addressed to Mr. Charles Selyer, agent Southern Pacific Company, Los Angeles city, and signed by "G. W. Luce."

The WITNESS. That is back in 1899?

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. Yes.

A. I think you will find, if my recollection serves me right, that that was the signal exception to the rule and was adopted for purpose of putting a stop, if the carriers could, to the rebating which was then prevalent and which had grown to be such an abuse.

Q. That is, the rebating by the intermediate lines?

A. Rebating by the intermediate lines, and they temporarily revoked that permission to route so as to try to break up the illegal practices which prevailed and which the initial lines desired to take every means to guard against being made a party to.

Q. Well, now, what I asked you was, is it not true that during that period when that plan of as you say breaking up the rebating practice was in operation, the Southern Pacific Company used to issue to its agents instructions from time to time to the effect "Route 85 per cent of the citrus fruit El Paso and 15 per cent through Ogden, beginning at such and such a date"?

A. I think that is true. The endeavor was, as I recollect it, to break up the rebating without doing injury to any of our connections, and it was our connections that called on us and insisted that we must as part of the through line stand with them in taking steps to break up the rebating. We therefore put out such instructions as would give to our connections, so far as was practicable, all the amount of business they would get normally, while not committing them to the predatory practices that were then in force. In other words, it was an act of good will on the part of the carriers concerned as a temporary device to overcome a temporary condition.

Q. And the percentages which the Southern Pacific Company directed to go through the one gateway or the other were varied from time to time by directions from headquarters?

A. As the season would change. It could not send via Ogden at one period of the year the volume that could be sent by Ogden at another period of the year. The same way with respect to El Paso. I have had no opportunity to see anything further than that page before me, and I state now the general bearings as I recall them.

Q. And that practice of directing the percentages to the one gateway or the other on the part of the Southern Pacific Company kept up for a number of years?

A. As I recall it, it kept up for only a limited time.

Q. That was a matter of years, was it not?

A. I think not. My recollection is not clear on that as to how long it lasted. It doubtless continued long enough to serve its purposes, and it was by the desire of all our connections. The same practice was followed by the other initial carriers. It was not of a discriminatory character in any respect except as regards illegality.

Q. The practice kept up surely into the spring of 1903, did it not?

A. It might have done so.

Q. (Showing record to the witness.) In view of what I have just shown you, it would appear so, would it not?

A. It would appear so; and those were arrangements to 380 which the initial carriers and their immediate connections were parties.

Q. If the Central Pacific Railroad were separated and working with the Union Pacific Railroad, they would become active competitors of the Sunset, would they not, as a practical matter?

A. They would.

Q. That would be true of every one of the California terminals, would it not?

A. Every terminal that that road reached, and any other terminals with which they could make suitable traffic arrangements, with the existing roads, including the Southern Pacific.

Q. It would be true of Oakland, San Jose, Sacramento, Marysville, and Stockton, would it not?

A. You are speaking now of the same lines about which you asked me immediately before adjournment for luncheon?

Q. I am speaking now not of the part which Mr. Blair suggests in his opinion is the only part which was subject to the Government lien; I am now speaking of all of the Central Pacific Railroad shown in purple on Exhibit 1.

A. If the Central Pacific were separate, it would compete at Sacramento, as you have stated, Marysville, as you have stated, 381 Stockton, Oakland, and San Jose, and would doubtless have some arrangement for reaching San Francisco.

Q. And this competition would be acute?

A. As acute as any other competition.

Q. It would increase the competition over what it is at present?

A. It would be one more road in the competitive field.

Q. And, as a result, would increase the competition over what it is at present?

A. It would increase the competition of the roads competing; it would not increase the service.

Q. And would have the effect of putting the Sunset line into strenuous competition with it?

A. Naturally.

Q. The tendency in increasing the number of competing railroads is eventually to bring about a reduction in rates to the shipper?

A. It would not change the rate, it would not change the bill of lading, and it would not change any condition except to add one more road. It would tend to impair the service rather than to improve it.

Q. Is not the tendency of a number of railroads competing to reach out to the shipper and reach conclusions with him which do result in reductions of rates?

A. Not in reduction of rates as a rule; that is the exception.

Q. Don't you think it has that tendency?

A. It has that tendency, but no more than a tendency, as a rule.

Q. And the competition in the larger number of railroads is an dvantage to the public?

A. That is debatable.

Q. In your opinion.

A. What is the question?

Q. In your opinion——

A. (Interposing.) Would increasing the number of railroads what? (The question was repeated by the reporter.)

The WITNESS. If by that you mean the splitting up of existing ilroads into smaller ones, on the general principle that an increase the number of railroad companies is an advantage to the public, I ould say no. If the advantage were to any public it would be pre-ninently to the public of California, which would most be affected, d the public of California strenuously insists that it would be eatly to their disadvantage, and the railroad commission of the State of California so holds.

Mr. MCCLENNEN. I ask to have the last part of the answer stricken out; the last two or three clauses.

The WITNESS. I can not eliminate these things from my opinion.

Mr. MCCLENNEN. I ask to have the last part of the answer stricken t, which begins "and the public of California strenuously insists at it would be greatly to their disadvantage", on to the end of the swer.

Mr. DUNNE. On what ground do you ask to have it stricken out?

Mr. MCCLENNEN. The very obvious ground that it is not at all lled for by the question; on the ground that it is a statement of a nclusion and a statement of a matter which is wholly immaterial to is case, matter not within the personal knowledge of the witness, d such other grounds as may seem to the court proper ones for iking out such an answer.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. In your opinion such competition as would be brought about by e severance of the Central Pacific from the Southern Pacific and operating with the Union Pacific, would be an advantage to the public?

A. That is a difficult question to answer, because it involves a good many considerations. The mere separation from the uthern Pacific and addition to the Union Pacific would not be a atter of consequence to the public.

Q. What elements would be required to make that competition vantageous to the public?

A. The service would be rendered as now, the same bills of lading would be issued as now, the same in terms. The tariffs would be handled in the same way as now. There is no particular respect in which the public would be advantaged by it, while the Southern Pacific would be distinctly disadvantaged in the dismemberment of its own system, and the public would be participants in the disadvantages of that dismemberment, in that the Southern Pacific would then have to hook up its lines, to re-create itself a system, and the Union Pacific, in possession of the Central Pacific, would have also to engage in construction in order to give them access to the territory they would require to make a system out of their newly acquired lines, all of which the public would have eventually to pay for.

Q. You have been of opinion at times, have you not, that the competition which I have described in my question would be of advantage to the public?

385 A. I have said at all times that in my opinion the Central Pacific and Southern Pacific should remain as one property, and that when the effort was made to meet the views of the Government by separating them it was only because of our being in a condition of crisis, at which time the United States could have dissolved the merger, at which time we were under the hand of the Government, at the same time to sell the Central Pacific property, and we made at that time the best bargain we could for the sale of the Central Pacific, and we do not conceive that sale to be against the public advantage.

Q. On the contrary, you conceive of it as being to the public advantage?

A. I do not think you will find that my views at that time would bear that construction; that is, there were phases of it in which it might be construed as to the public advantage and other aspects in which it may be against the public advantage.

Q. You were of opinion at that time that the condition which it would produce would be to the public advantage, were you not?

A. I do not believe that that was my attitude at that time.

386 Q. Don't you think that at that time you were——

A. (Interposing.) My attitude at that time was that we had pursued that negotiation because of the difficulty under which the company was laboring and in preference to finding ourselves subsequently compelled, perhaps, to put the Central Pacific on the bargain counter, and the Southern Pacific itself being without funds; and if that condition were to ensue it would have been against the public advantage, and it was more to the public advantage that we should yield to the conditions and crisis of the times, and we made the best trade we could, and made it in such a way as to serve the public interests and increase the competition at the same time.

Q. You were of opinion, were you not, that that sale would result in increasing competition, which would be of advantage the public?

A. If by the mere fact of competition you hold that to be an vantage to the public, that inference would follow; but that was t the general trend of the times.

Q. You personally were of that opinion at that time, were you t?

A. That competition——

Q. (Interposing.) Was to the public advantage?

A. Generally speaking, that competition is to the public advantage.

Q. And that the competition which would be made by that arrangement would be to the advantage of the public?

A. The atmosphere at that time and the trend of the commission's views at that time was that the trade that was being made was some way collusive and that it was not a bona fide separation of properties, and they were examining me as to what the effect of separation would be; and I pointed out to them what the effect uld be, and whatever I said in that respect is true; that is, where there is now but one road there might in some points be two. On the other hand, there are many places which now have the advantage of a service via Ogden and via El Paso h, which would then be cut off from that facility. To-day Stockn, for example, is on the lines east and west bound, north and south nd, but in the event of the separation the Central Pacific would ve a monopoly of Stockton, one of the terminals; and there is a riety of local conditions there, all of which would have to be gone o in some detail to determine the question of the benefit of that mpetition.

What I was going into at that time, however, was not so much the efit of competition; I was going into the bona fides of the transion.

Q. But at the time you were of opinion that, viewed as a whole, the mpetition which would be made by that severance of the Central m the Southern and its operation with the Union would be an vantage and not a disadvantage to the public?

A. I do not think that I dwelt upon the question of advantage. I d that it would not be to the disadvantage of the public, and I do not conceive now that it would be to the disadvantage of the public, except to the extent that the separation of the Central Pacific from the Southern Pacific properties would leave the thern Pacific properties dismembered; they would have to spend e money in building lines, and so would the Union Pacific, in the avor to re-create the public service by means of two systems in ifornia, where now it is served by one system; but that that would be of advantage to the public is an affirmative part of the question which might be debated. The public would have to stand the additional charges, of course. The public would have to stand the incidental disadvantages. But whether the sum total of that would be an advantage to the public as a whole was then, and still remains, a legitimate question for differences of opinion.

Q. What I ask of you is whether you were not of opinion, within that range, if any, of difference of opinion, that that particular increase of competition would be, on the whole, of advantage to the public.

A. No; my position in the question was that if it were left to my own judgment, I would not do it.

Q. You expressed, did you not, to the commission the view that that arrangement would bring a competition which, even with 390 such disadvantages as it might bring, would be of advantage, on the whole, to the public?

A. I said it would increase the competition. I said that by the time we had whooped up our railroads and completed our new construction and made the necessary traffic alliances, that when that time came our competitors would find that we still had a pretty good railroad, notwithstanding our loss of the Central Pacific.

Q. And you supplemented that by saying that that competition would be an advantage to the public?

A. To the extent that competition may be an advantage to the public.

Q. And, of course, it is needless to say that the views that you express were precisely your views?

A. If you will project my views into the atmosphere of that time, yes.

Q. You were of opinion that the Southern Pacific might, notwithstanding the loss of the Central, still expect to get a greater percentage of the revenue, because it would be in a position to bargain with other railroads and get more than a mileage pro rate on the interstate business which it carried?

A. I think that is true only with respect to the busi-391 ness interchanged between the Central Pacific and the Southern Pacific. Under unified ownership as it exists the business is handled as the business of one system, and always has been; and it is, generally speaking, on a basis of mileage; but if the systems were separated, if the system was divided into two parts, for example, there would no longer be a reason for interchange of business on that basis. It is not usual and would not be proper. In fact, it was stipulated that that question was to go to arbitration, in the agreement between the Union Pacific and the Central and the Southern Pacific at that time, which failed because of the action of the Colorado Railroad Commission.

Q. You were also of opinion that this separation of the Central from the Southern would leave the Southern in a better position to compete with the water lines around the Horn and over Tehuantepec and over Panama?

A. Yes. We were speculating at that time on what we would do as against the Panama Canal. That speculative condition, however, has changed into a condition of reality now, for the canal is open; and we find that things we hoped we might do it is utterly impossible to do.

Q. By the way, that leads me to ask you: Is there any other regular line running from California to Panama except the Pacific Mail Steamship Company?

A. You mean to Panama or through the canal? The Pacific Mail only runs to Panama. It can not go through the canal under the law. Would you like me to tell you the lines that are going through the canal?

Q. Yes.

A. The American-Hawaiian Steamship Company, the Luckenbach Line, and Grace & Company.

Mr. BLAIR. The Luckenbach Line was running to Panama prior to the opening of the canal, was it not?

The WITNESS. Yes; and so were Grace & Company, and so was the Cosmos Line, before the German war broke out; and there are other companies figuring in that trade also. In fact, I think, at the present time, there is a considerable number that had figured on going through the canal that will not go through on account of the war, but that is a temporary condition. Competition by the canal is so active that it has made it hopeless for any railroad line to expect to take any business of consequence away from the water routes.

Mr. BLAIR. Does that apply to a mixed rail-and-water line like the Sunset?

The WITNESS. The mixed rail-and-water line by the Sunset I include with the rail lines.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. Is this a fair statement of the policy of the Southern Pacific Company with reference to California territory north of Tehachapi prior to 1901, namely:

"The agents of the Southern Pacific Company solicited—at least those were their instructions—all freight; first, via the Sunset-Gulf route if it could be handled that way; secondly, if the territory was far enough east, via New Orleans, in connection with either the Illinois Central or the Queen & Crescent and for a while the Louisville

& Nashville. The next favored route was via El Paso on those co modities which were not perishable, in connection with the Texa Pacific, and we had some preferred routing with the Missouri, K sas & Texas"?

A. That is, from south of Tehachapi?

Q. North of Tehachapi.

A. That is only with respect to the El Paso route. You have read the instructions with respect to the Ogden route.

394 Q. This is correct as far as it goes, is it?

A. That I take to be a mere segregation of whatever p of the business would go by El Paso, is it not?

Q. No; this statement is a general statement of the conditions

A. There could not be a general statement that would omit Ogden route.

Q. Well, the routes named in that statement were, prior to 1 preferred over the Ogden in the Southern Pacific Company's sol tations, were they not?

A. I should say not.

Q. Was not this order of preference, contained in the statem that I have given to you, ahead of the Ogden route? That is, not the effort to get these routes which I have mentioned, and Ogden route only if these could not be placed?

A. By reading a fragmentary document of that kind, I can subscribe to that statement.

Q. I show you the whole, so that you may have the context as w [exhibiting book to the witness].

A. It reads here, you see [reading]:

395 "A. Now, I will have to confine myself, Mr. Chairman, the conditions north of Tehachapi.

"Q. The conditions which you know, Mr. Sanborn.

"A. Because I was only at Mojave station, which was a jo agency with the Santa Fe in those days, about nine months, an short time at Santa Barbara, a very short time at Santa Barba the rest of my work was all in northern California."

I do not know who this is that is giving this testimony, but routing instruction that omit the Ogden route would not reflect attitude of the company at that or any other time.

Mr. HERRIN. That was Mr. Sanborn.

The WITNESS. Yes; somebody by the name of Sanborn.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. Do you know who Mr. Sanborn is?

A. The name is not here.

Q. It is shown in the index.

A. Yes; H. H. Sanborn. I think that is the Mr. Sanborn who is connected with the California Commission.

Mr. HERRIN. He is the rate expert of the California Commission, and was formerly with the Southern Pacific.

The WITNESS. He was formerly with the Southern Pacific.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. He was formerly freight solicitor in the employ of the Southern Pacific Company?

A. I do not know, but I think that is the man. You will recollect, of course, that I am not cognizant of that testimony; was not with the company at that time, and do not know what this man was doing at that time; but I take it it is the same man.

Q. Have you any knowledge of the various agreements of the railroads composing the Transcontinental Association relative to the division of business or the method of conducting relations with each other?

A. Yes; I did have, when I was freight traffic manager, a good deal to do with it.

Q. Did you know of this agreement, Exhibit 18, of September 28, 1883 [exhibiting book to the witness]?

A. I had some knowledge of it, yes; but that was in the early days of my service with the company. I entered the company's service in 1882.

Q. Did you know of this supplemental agreement, Exhibit 19, of November 8, 1883?

A. I knew of it in a general way, simply as a clerk in the office.

Q. Did you know of this agreement of October 1, 1889, Exhibit 14, between the roads composing the Transcontinental Association?

(NOTE.—"1872" with reference to this exhibit, occurring on page 231 of the record, should be "1889.")

A. I recall that somewhat remotely. It was an agreement with which I had nothing to do at that time.

Q. Do you happen to remember the period when James Smith was chairman of the Transcontinental Association?

A. He was chairman for a very short time, as I recall it, in the early eighties. As I recall it, it was only for a brief period.

Q. He may have been as late as 1889, may he not?

A. I could not tell you.

Q. Do you know whether or not the Southern Pacific's copy of these three contracts that I have shown you is still in existence?

A. I do not know. If they were filed in San Francisco, they are burned; that is, everything that we had in San Francisco during the great fire of 1906 was destroyed. The building itself was 398 destroyed, and all the vaults in it proved not to be fireproof, as we had supposed they were.

Q. In the ordinary course that would have been either in the company's office in New York or else in San Francisco?

A. Yes; in one place or the other. They may have been destroyed in the Equitable fire here, possibly. We were unfortunate in both our headquarters being burned out.

Q. That is, it is probable that if they were not burned in San Francisco they were destroyed in the Equitable fire in New York?

A. Yes; it is possible that they were destroyed in the Equitable fire in New York.

Q. In administering these properties, as president of the Southern Pacific Company you have done it with a consciousness, have you not, of the probability that the holding of the Central Pacific by the Southern Pacific was contrary to the Sherman Act?

A. No, sir; I do not regard it as probable.

Q. You have been so advised by able counsel of your own selection, have you not?

A. I am not so advised.

Q. Were you not so advised by Mr. John G. Johnson, of Philadelphia?

399 A. I was not present at that conference, as I testified; and I testified as to what I thought, and I was afterwards told that I erred. My testimony was in error in that particular.

Q. That is, in some thus far inscrutable way you got the impression that John G. Johnson had advised that the holding of the Central by the Southern was contrary to the Sherman Act?

A. I was told that at the conference with Mr. Johnson he had stated that the Southern Pacific under its Kentucky charter could not buy its own stock, even for the purpose of retiring it; and as to the rest of what he discussed I find my inferences were mere hearsay and erroneous.

Q. But you did get the impression which you now say was erroneous?

A. Whatever I testified to.

Q. That he had advised that it was contrary to the Sherman Act?

A. Whatever I testified to.

Q. You testified to that in substance, did you not? You testified to this effect, did you not:

"Q. Now, with respect to the position of the Attorney Gen-400 eral, did the Southern Pacific directors or executive committee take the opinion of outside counsel on any of these questions

"A. They called in as an independent counsel Mr. Johnson; I forget his initials.

"Q. Johnson, of Philadelphia?

"A. Johnson, of Philadelphia.

"Mr. McCUTCHEN. John G. Johnson?

"A. John G. Johnson, of Philadelphia, and submitted the matter to him.

"Mr. HERRIN. They submitted first the question as to whether the Southern Pacific could take its own stock?

"A. First whether it could take its own stock, and his opinion confirmed the opinion of our Kentucky counsel, Judge Humphrey, that we could not take our own stock, directly or indirectly. The second point upon which he was asked to advise the executive committee was whether there was reasonable ground for the Attorney General's position, and as to what would be the probable result of action by the Government as outlined by the Attorney General, and his conclusion was that it was improbable that the Southern Pacific could retain the Central Pacific.

"Q. He thought there was enough question about it to justify our going on with this trade?"

A. That is what I testified to.

Q. Of course you so understood at that time?

A. I so understood at that time. It was all in view of this trading. That was my understanding, as I said. I was afterwards informed that I was mistaken about it.

Mr. HERRIN. You have since been informed that you were in error in a part of it?

The WITNESS. As to the latter part.

Mr. McCLENNEN. I think that is all.

Cross-examination by Mr. HERRIN:

Q. This routing of citrus fruit to which your attention has been called has no reference to any competition between the Sunset and the Central routes, has it?

A. None whatever; climatic conditions and distribution are the governing quantities.

Q. You were asked about the Southern Pacific controlling the rate, and I think your answers set forth your views upon that subject; but I would like to ask you if at any time the Southern Pacific was ever in a position to absolutely dominate the rate or the division of rates between the connecting companies, the Union Pacific, or any connecting company?

A. No one company can dominate the rate or even the divisions of the rate.

Q. Do you know anything about the arrangement of division of those rates as between the Central Pacific and the Union Pacific and connecting lines which was made at the opening or at the beginning of the Central route, as to whether or not the Southern Pacific made that division what it wanted it or not?

403 A. Mainly those divisions that were made at that time continue in effect.

Q. They continue in effect?

A. To this day. They never have been satisfactory to the Central Pacific in the beginning or to the Southern Pacific since, where based on mileage pro rate with the Union Pacific. I did not have anything to do, of course, with the original fixing of them, but I do know that from time to time there have been discussions about them, and before I took hold they were the subject of discontent, and afterwards, too.

Q. You know that the company was not satisfied at that time or since?

A. The company contended for higher divisions.

Q. Because of the mountainous grades which were surmounted by the Central Pacific as against the more liberal grades of the eastern roads?

A. They had to climb the Sierra Nevadas. There is another consideration, also. We had all the terminal expenses, whereas the Union Pacific was for most of the business in the nature of a bridge on business originating east of them or being destined to points 404 east of them, so that they were merely a road in transit. They had expensive terminals we had to maintain.

Q. You were asked about the diversion of business from the Denver & Rio Grande after the merger. Was that not in part produced by the superior service of the Union Pacific? Was not the Union Pacific largely improved shortly after that merger by the straightening of its lines and the reduction of grades?

A. During the merger the Union Pacific was improved, and so was the Central Pacific. The Union Pacific was then put in as first class condition as it is to-day and did draw business from its competitors undoubtedly.

Q. That was a factor, was it not?

A. That was a factor.

Q. Now, was not the Sunset line also improved after the merger and during the merger?

A. All the Southern Pacific lines were improved by all roads. Mr. Harriman's general policy was a policy of improvement.

Q. It covered all these lines?

A. All these lines.

Q. You do not recall any discrimination in favor of any one as against the other?

A. No; our Sunset line was improved also, and our Shasta line was improved, likewise. The Southern Pacific lines in California were improved.

Mr. HERRIN. That is all.

Redirect examination by Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. The mileage which determined the pro rate between the Central and the Union was the original mileage?

A. Yes.

Q. There has never been any change in the pro rate on the shortening of the lines?

A. On the shortening of either line.

Q. On the shortening of either line; you simply took the old figure?

A. Yes; it has been regarded as a subject that belongs to the past.

Q. The highest elevation between San Francisco and Omaha on the rails is on the rails of the Union Pacific?

A. It is not a question of elevation; it is a question of grade.

Q. I am afraid you are a little argumentative. I would like to know whether that is not the fact?

A. My recollection is that it is.

Q. Somewhere about Sherman is the highest point?

A. Yes.

Recross-examination by Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Referring to the grade, you start at Sacramento practically at sea level, do you not?

A. Sacramento practically at sea level.

Q. And elevate yourself right up to the top of the Sierras in 100 miles?

A. Yes; over 7,000 feet.

Q. And then you descend on the other side of the Sierras to the plateau of the Nevada and Salt Lake Basin, which is 4,000 feet elevation?

A. Yes.

Q. And then you have only to lift yourself from that 4,200 feet to 3,000 feet over the Rockies, with a very long, gradual, easy grade down to Omaha?

A. Yes; easy grades and long tangents.

(Whereupon an adjournment was taken until to-morrow, Friday, September 24, 1914, at 10.30 o'clock a. m.)

407 FIFTH DAY.

ROOM 720, CUSTOM HOUSE,
New York City, September 25, 1914.

Before Special Examiner Frank R. Hanna.

Present on behalf of the United States: Mr. Orr, Mr. McClenn and Mr. Gann.

Present on behalf of the defendants: Mr. Herrin, Mr. Blair, a Mr. Dunne, for the Southern Pacific Company, et al.

Mr. MCCLENNEN. Please note on the record that in conformity t the testimony of Mr. Sproule, on page 210, the red lines on the ma petitioner's Exhibit No. 1, running from Grants Pass in southweste Oregon, toward the coast have been erased, and that the red line fro Fernlee, in the western part of Nevada, to and through Susanvill in the eastern part of California, which was shown on petitione Exhibit No. 1 in red, has, in accordance with the same page of M Sproule's testimony, been changed to purple.

408 HENRY RUHLANDER was called as a witness on behalf of t petitioner, and, being duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. Your residence?

A. New York City.

Q. Your address?

A. 15 East Forty-eighth Street.

Q. You are connected with the firm of Speyer & Company?

A. A member of that firm.

Q. Exhibit B of defendants' answer in this case sets out a plan readjustment contemplating, among other things, the deposit securities with Speyer & Company in the matter of the Central P cific Railroad Company. Have you with you the record of Speye Company, showing the stock certificates in the Central Pacific Ra road Company which were deposited in 1899 with Speyer & Co pany?

A. Yes.

Q. Is this book the record?

A. Yes, sir; that is the record.

409 Q. Let me see if I properly understand the meaning of This first column indicates the date on which the deposit made?

A. Correct.

Q. The next column entitled "Depositor and address", indic the name of the depositor and his address?

A. That is right.

Q. The next column headed "Number of shares deposited" indicates the number of shares which that depositor deposited?

A. Yes.

Q. And the next column, "Dates and number of the certificates", indicates the number of the certificate and the date which the certificate bore?

A. Correct.

Q. The next column headed "Date of deposit with Central Trust Company" indicates the date on which Speyer & Company redeposited the particular certificates with the Central Trust Company?

A. Yes.

Q. What is the significance of the entries on the right hand page against the entries under the columns which I have read?

410 A. There were certificates deposited, issued to the depositors, for the Central Pacific stock deposited under this plan. Those are the numbers of the certificates of deposit issued. The second note indicates the date on which the assessment of two dollars per share was paid. This marginal note does not mean anything; it is merely the checking of the record by the clerk.

Q. Then the information given by the book, if we read the line across, is the date of deposit, the name of depositor, his address, number of shares deposited, number on the certificate, date on the certificate, date of redeposit, number on Speyer & Company's certificate of deposit issued to the depositor, and the notation of assessment paid or not?

A. That is correct.

Q. This description that you have given seems to cover the consecutive written pages; then it appears that your book has a large number of blank pages. Then I find new entries starting. Can you tell me in general what that means?

A. I can tell you in a general way that after this was completed, these additional shares came in, after it was looked upon as if 411 it had been completed; and, so far as I can recall—you see, this is a long time ago, fifteen years ago—it shows additional deposits after that came in, from various sources.

Q. So that the entries on these isolated dates that I find here are of the same character as the others?

A. Absolutely.

Q. Following that page which you have just described there is another series of blank pages and then a page which has some entries. Can you tell us what those entries are, trifling in amount?

A. I can not give you an actual description, but I imagine—this is only a guess on my part, because, as I say, it is fifteen years ago—those are people who thought they would take the original stock, take stock—you see, under the plan, people had the right to take what is known as "nonassenting"; they did not care to sell their stock to the Central Pacific. They had such a right, my recollection is, and some of them, after they had exercised that right to keep the new Central Pacific stock, changed their minds, but I do not want to make that as a positive statement, because it is too long ago to remember.

412 Mr. McCLENNEN. The petitioner puts in evidence as Exhibit 29 the record book just referred to in the examination of the witness.

(The record book referred to was thereupon marked "Petitioner's Exhibit No. 29, September 25, 1914", and will be found in the volume of petitioner's exhibits.)

Mr. McCLENNEN. It is agreed that this Exhibit No. 29, after being copied by the examiner, is to be returned to the witness and the copy used in lieu thereof.

You may cross-examine, gentlemen.

Mr. BLAIR. We have no questions.

OSCAR L. COLES was called as a witness on behalf of the petitioner, and being duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. What is your full name?

A. Oscar L. Coles.

Q. And your residence?

A. Bayside, Long Island.

Q. And your address in New York City?

413 A. 54 Wall Street, the Central Trust Company.

Q. You are connected with the Central Trust Company?

A. I am.

Q. In what capacity?

A. As transfer clerk in the reorganization department.

Q. It has appeared from the testimony just given by Mr. Rollander that stock certificates in the Central Pacific Railroad Company, deposited with Speyer & Company, were perhaps wholly and at least to some extent redeposited with the Central Trust Company. Have you here the record of the certificates that were deposited with the Central Trust Company?

A. No.

Q. What record did you keep with reference to that transaction?

A. We kept them in a lump sum only, as they came to us.

Q. Have you a record of the total of the deposits of the Central Pacific Railroad Company certificates?

A. I think we have.

Q. Is that here?

A. No. This does not represent the actual stock that come to us in bulk. This represents the certificate of deposit issued by Speyer for that stock.

Q. By "this" you mean the book now before you?

A. The book now before me, yes.

Q. The numbers on your record, then, refer to the numbers not on e certificates of stock of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, but e numbers on the certificates of deposit issued by Speyer & Com-ny?

A. That is correct.

Q. Will this record enable you to state the total number of shares presented by those certificates of deposit which were presented to e Central Trust Company?

A. This record shows the amount of Southern Pacific delivered ainst certificates of deposit issued by Speyer & Company in New ork City.

Mr. BLAIR. Southern Pacific stock, you mean?

The WITNESS. Southern Pacific stock against Speyer's receipts.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. That is, the amount of Southern Pacific stock issued through e Central Trust Company in return for the certificates of deposit Speyer & Company for Central Pacific Railroad Company shares.

A. Yes.

Q. Does the record show the total number of shares of outhern Pacific Company stock that were so issued?

A. It does.

Q. And what is the total?

A. 370,154 shares.

Mr. DUNNE. You mean of Southern Pacific stock?

The WITNESS. Yes; to these various parties.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. Then am I right, inferentially, that this figure 370,154 indicates at the number of Speyer & Company's certificates of deposit for ares in the Central Pacific Railroad Company which were pre-nted to the Central Trust Company, against which the Central ust Company issued certificates for shares in the Southern Pacific mpany, was 370,154?

A. That is correct.

Q. Did the Central Trust Company have anything to do with any the deposits of Central Pacific Railroad Company stock or the ue of Southern Pacific Company stock against it, except that which passed through Speyer & Company as indicated and as represented by this figure 370,154 shares?

416 A. Not as far as I know. I will verify that, as there are some entries here where stuff was sent abroad that was delivered to various parties in New York.

Q. Am I correct that, in addition to the 370,154 shares represented previously by certificates of deposit of Speyer & Company in New York, you have on your book a memorandum indicating that Speyer Brothers in London had issued certificates of deposit additional to the ones above mentioned, against which there was issued by some one 219,941 shares of Southern Pacific Company's stock?

A. I think so.

Q. In the same way, have you a memorandum on your books indicating that there was issued, additional to the above two totals, 79,910 shares of Southern Pacific Company's stock against certificates of deposit for Central Pacific Railroad Company stock which had been deposited with Teixeira de Mattos Brothers?

A. Yes.

Q. Just for convenience, it is true, is it not, that 370,154 plus 219,941 plus 79,910—the three figures which you have mentioned—amount to 670,005?

A. They seem to.

417 Q. The dates on your book indicate, do they not, that you began to receive the certificates of deposit of Speyer & Company, the New York concern, October 9, 1899?

A. That is correct.

Q. And that, up to January 1, 1900, the certificates so received were representative of 362,058 shares?

A. Yes.

Q. And that by January 1, 1901, the deposit had increased this figure to 368,573 shares?

A. That is correct.

Q. And that by January 1, 1902, that figure had increased to 369,711 shares?

A. Yes.

Q. And that there were scattering receipts thereafter up to February 29, 1912, the deposit on that date completing the above-given total of 370,154?

A. Yes.

418 Q. It appears from your record that the 219,941 shares represented by Speyer Brothers' London certificates, with the exception of 80 shares, were received by the Central Trust Company February 26, 1900?

A. Yes.

Q. The same record indicates that the certificates of deposit of ixeira de Mattos Brothers, representative of 79,910 shares, were, th a scattering few exceptions, received by the Central Trust Com- ny December 7, 1899?

A. Yes.

Q. And the indications from your record are that the 79,910 shares presented by the certificates of deposit issued by Teixeira de Mattos others were covered by 7,991 ten-share certificates?

A. To the best of my knowledge.

Q. The certificates of deposit of Speyer Brothers, of London, con- ted of a large number of different groups of certificates, each group itself being consecutive in numbering, and each certificate being ten shares; is that right?

A. I think so. Well, they could not all be for ten shares, be- cause 861 could not come out in multiples of ten; but ten, I think, is the largest certificate in that group, and there are a what we call blank lots, odd amounts.

Q. The certificates of deposit of Speyer & Company, of New York re very numerous?

A. Yes.

Cross-examination by Mr. BLAIR:

Q. In reference to the certificates which you refer to as Speyer & mpany's New York certificates, there appear in your record vari- names representing the certificate holders?

A. Yes.

Q. And many of those names for large amounts you recognize as names of prominent bankers in New York?

A. Yes.

Q. And in reference to the certificates which you have referred to certificates issued by Speyer Brothers in London, it appears from ur record that Speyer Brothers were also the holders of all the tificates presented?

A. Yes.

Q. Does this statement in the second column as to the certifi- cate holder afford any proof as to who was the actual owner of the stock represented by the certificate?

A. I should think not. It might represent the owner. The cer- cates were issued in bearer form.

Q. Do you know whether or not it was customary at that time for owners to have their stock represented by bankers or brokers or er agents?

A. Well, I should suppose that. So far as I know, this would rep- nt the holders of the certificates.

Q. And it did not necessarily represent the owners of the certificates or the stock represented by the certificates?

A. No.

Redirect examination by Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. To make that a little more specific, if an imaginary person John Brown, held one of these certificates of deposit and took it in to N. W. Harris & Company, of Boston, with instructions to exchange it for the new Southern Pacific Company stock, and N. W. Harris & Company sent it forward to you, the only name that you would have would be N. W. Harris & Company? Your records would not show John Brown at all?

421 A. According to the instructions of the latter, it would depend entirely.

Q. The certificates of deposit on their face were all bearer certificates?

A. As I remember, yes.

Q. So that they bore no evidence on their face, when they came to you, of who the owner was?

A. No.

Q. The only information you would have would be what was communicated to you by the depositor?

A. Yes.

Q. And the new stock was issued in the name of the person presenting the certificate, or as he might, by letter or otherwise, direct when he deposited the certificate?

A. Yes; according to this record.

Q. The names in the case of the New York Speyer & Company certificates of deposit are very numerous?

A. Yes.

Q. In the case of Speyer Brothers, of London, the new certificates were all issued in that name?

A. That I do not know. I am not sure that we issued that stock.

Q. And would your last answer apply equally to the German stock?

A. Yes.

Mr. McCLENNEN. That is all.

422 ANGUS D. McDONALD was called as a witness on behalf of the petitioner, and being duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. What is your full name?

A. Angus D. McDonald.

Q. Your residence?

A. Montclair, New Jersey.

Q. And your business address?
A. 165 Broadway, New York City.
Q. What is your relation to the Southern Pacific Company?
A. I am the comptroller of the company.
Q. Do you bear any relation to the Southern Pacific Railroad Company?
A. I think I am also comptroller of that company.
Q. And the same with reference to the Central Pacific Railway Company?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And the same with reference to the Central Pacific Railroad Company?
A. No, sir.
Q. Have you any relation to the Central Pacific Railroad Company?
A. Not that I recall; no, sir.
Q. You have been comptroller of all these three companies the same length of time, have you?
A. No, sir.
Q. Then, will you state the period as to each company?
A. I was appointed comptroller of the Southern Pacific Company April 1, 1913. I do not recall the exact date of the appointments in the case of the other companies; some time during the year 1913.
Q. What, in general, are your duties as comptroller?
A. I have general charge and supervision of the accounting and treasury departments, under the direction of the chairman of the executive committee.
Q. What, if any, class of books, accounts, and papers do you have custody of?
A. I have immediate charge of the accounts in New York City, which include the journals, cash books, records of equipment purchased in New York, and detailed records that are connected therewith.
Q. Does that cover all?
A. No. I omitted the record of vouchers covering payments made through the New York office.
Q. Does this have reference to all three of the companies?
A. No, sir; only the Southern Pacific Company.
Q. What do you have custody of, so far as the Southern Pacific Railroad Company and the Central Pacific Railway Company are concerned?
A. I have no records of those companies under my immediate charge.
Q. How long have you been associated in any way with any of these companies?

A. I entered the service of the Southern Pacific——
Q. (Interposing.) That is, the Southern Pacific Company?
A. The Southern Pacific lines, I would say, in 1901.
Q. In what capacity?
A. As a clerk of the G. H. & S. A. Railway in Texas.
Q. You remained in that position how long?
A. Until December, 1904.
Q. Were you located in Texas during that period?
A. Houston, Texas.
425 Q. From 1904 where were you, and in what capacity?
A. January 1, 1905, I was appointed chief clerk of the a counting office of the Southern Pacific Company at San Francis I remained in that position until December, 1907, when I was a pointed auditor of the Los Angeles Pacific Company, which is a electric line at Los Angeles, controlled by the Southern Pacific Co pany.

I remained in that position until December, 1908, when I was a pointed auditor of the Pacific Electric Railway Company, also a electric line at Los Angeles, owned by the Southern Pacific Co pany—that is, now owned by the Southern Pacific Company.

On January 1, 1910, I was appointed auditor of the Southern P cific Company at San Francisco. I remained in that position un February 1, 1913, when I was appointed deputy comptroller of t company, with headquarters in New York. I remained in the po tion of deputy comptroller for a period of two months. I was th appointed comptroller April 1, 1913.

Q. Have you stated where you were located between 1907 a 1910?
A. At Los Angeles.
426 Q. You were in San Francisco at the time of the 1906 fi
A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know, from your connection with the offices of t various companies, what class of records of these various compan were kept in San Francisco? I now refer to the Southern Pac Company, the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, the Central P cific Railway Company, and the Central Pacific Railroad Compa

A. You refer to the period during which I was located at S Francisco?

Q. Yes.

A. I am familiar with the records.

Q. I want to get the best information I can from you as to t kinds of records of these four companies that were in San Francis and so, presumably, destroyed by the fire, as distinct from reco which were kept elsewhere.

A. The records of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company and the Central Pacific Railway Company—that is, the general books of the company—have always been kept in San Francisco, to the best of my knowledge.

427 Q. And that undoubtedly applies also to the books of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, I suppose?

A. I do not know. That company was operating prior to the time that I came to the company.

The records of the Southern Pacific Company, located in San Francisco, were merely what we call operating records; the general books of the company are kept in New York City.

Q. The books of the other two companies—that is, the Southern Pacific Railroad Company and the Central Pacific Railway Company—which were kept in San Francisco, would also include the corporate records of those two concerns?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where were the formal contracts of these various companies kept?

A. During what time?

Q. At the time of the fire in San Francisco.

A. Almost all of them were located in the accounting department at that time.

Q. As the papers of the companies were kept, is it probable that the agreements connected with the Transcontinental Association, so far as the Southern Pacific Railroad Company was a party to them, or the Southern Pacific Company was a party to them, were in the San Francisco fire?

428 A. I do not know as to that.

Q. You have no knowledge of the probabilities, one way or the other, as to that?

A. It has always been the practice for the traffic department to keep whatever traffic contracts are made. They never have been filed in the accounting department.

Q. Where was the headquarters of the traffic department of the Southern Pacific Company in 1906?

A. Mr. Stubbs, who was the director of traffic at that time, was located in Chicago.

Q. Did his office in Chicago extend up to 1906?

A. I think the office remained in Chicago until some time during 1911, when it was transferred to New York.

Q. What officer of the Southern Pacific Company at the present time would, in the ordinary course of business, have custody of such agreements, if they are still in existence?

A. What do you mean by "such agreements"?

Q. I refer to an Exhibit 18 and Exhibit 19, which were agreements of 1883 between the Southern Pacific Railroad Company and various other railroads, for the formation and operation of the Transcontinental Association; Exhibit 24, an agreement of 429 October 1, 1889, between the Transcontinental Association and the Pacific Mail Steamship Company; Exhibit 25, an agreement of December 16, 1895, between the Panama Railroad Company and the Pacific Mail Steamship Company; Exhibits 26 and 27, agreements of June 11, 1902, between the Panama Railroad Company and the Pacific Mail Steamship Company.

A. As I stated before, agreements covering traffic arrangements are generally kept by the traffic department. I could not say whether they were kept in the office of the traffic manager, the general freight agent, or the director of traffic.

Q. Who are the gentlemen who hold those respective offices at the present time?

A. Mr. L. J. Spence is director of traffic; Mr. G. W. Luce is freight traffic manager of the Southern Pacific Company; Mr. Thomas Graham is assistant traffic manager.

Q. And their respective offices are where?

A. Mr. Spence is located in New York City, and the other two gentlemen named are located in San Francisco.

Q. Were you in New York at the time of the Equitable Building fire?

A. I was not.

430 Q. Do you know what classes of books and papers of any of these four companies were kept in the Equitable Building at that time?

A. I think the methods in effect at that time were the same as they are today; that is, the general books of the Southern Pacific Company are located in New York City. The general books of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company and the Central Pacific Railway Company were kept in San Francisco.

Q. Am I right in understanding that in one or the other of these fires the records of the company that would make it possible to give exact statements as to the volume of freight moving through different gateways, and the revenue therefrom, were destroyed?

A. Such records we kept in San Francisco, and they were destroyed in the fire of 1906.

Q. Were the minute books of the stockholders and directors meetings of the Southern Pacific Company kept in San Francisco at the time of the fire, or in New York, or elsewhere?

A. I am not a competent witness as to that point, but I think they were kept in New York City.

431 Q. The same question with reference to such record books of the other three companies, the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, the Central Pacific Railroad Company, and the Central Pacific Railway Company?

A. I think those records have always been kept in San Francisco.

Q. So that the probability is that all of those records prior to 1906 are destroyed?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you any information with reference to the records of any of these four companies showing the stockholders therein from time to time?

A. That is outside of my jurisdiction. I know nothing whatever of records of stockholders.

Q. You do not know where they were kept for any of these companies?

A. I will qualify that in this way: That the present records of the stockholders are kept in the transfer office. The transfer office is now a part of our treasury department, and the treasury department is under my jurisdiction. So I therefore have indirect control over the records showing the present stockholders of the company.

432 Q. How far back do the records within your control shed any light upon who were the stockholders in any one of these four companies?

A. I do not know as to that. I could not answer without examining the records.

Q. Have you got the transfer books, stock ledgers, or certificate books of the Southern Pacific Company for any period back of 1900 in your possession?

A. I do not think so. My understanding is that practically all of the records of the New York office were lost or impaired in the Equitable fire.

Q. Have you any knowledge or any means of arriving accurately at the names and amounts of holdings of stock in the Southern Pacific Company prior to 1900?

A. I do not know of any way of arriving at it.

Q. Is the same true of the Central Pacific Railroad Company and the Southern Pacific Railroad Company?

A. That is, for the period prior to 1900?

Q. For the period prior to 1900.

A. As to the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, I do not know of any records in existence that will show the stockholders prior to 1900. The same is true of the Central Pacific Railway Company.

433 Q. And is the same true of the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I think perhaps your answer covers it, but I will make sure. Have these records, as to any of these companies, for the period prior to 1900, been duplicated to any extent from any source, so that there would be means of getting the information from such duplicates?

A. I could not answer as to that. The organization was changed somewhat in 1913. Prior to that date the transfer office was a part of the secretary's office; that is, the transfer office of the Southern Pacific Company. In 1913 it was made a part of the treasury department, and therefore came under my indirect control. The secretary's records, stock books of the Southern Pacific Railroad and Central Pacific have never been transferred to the transfer office. They still remain under the control of the secretaries of the respective companies.

434 Q. And any such duplicates, if they existed as to the Southern Pacific Railroad Company and the Central Pacific Railroad Company, would under this arrangement be in the possession of the secretaries of those companies in San Francisco?

A. That is my understanding.

Q. And were so at the time of the fire?

A. Yes.

ARTHUR A. TOPPING was called as a witness on behalf of the petitioner, and, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. GANN:

Q. What is your residence?

A. Washington, D. C.

Q. And your occupation is what?

A. Clerk in the division of tariffs of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Q. How long have you been connected with the commission in the division of tariffs?

A. Seven years.

Q. And what positions have you held in that time, generally speaking?

435 A. I was a clerk all the time.

Q. You are a clerk in the office?

A. Yes.

Q. And have you brought with you from the division of tariffs in Washington statements of various rates which were requested by counsel for the Government to be prepared by the division of tariffs?

A. Yes.

Q. I call your attention to a statement showing the rates on various commodities from New York City to California terminals via water and rail by Gulf route, as compared with rates by other routes, and ask you if that statement was prepared in the division of tariffs of the Interstate Commerce Commission?

A. It was; yes.

Q. Was it prepared under your supervision?

A. Yes.

Q. And you have knowledge of the tariffs from which it was prepared?

A. Yes.

Q. Does that statement show in detail a number of commodities shipped in carload lots?

486 A. Yes.

Q. Does the statement show the dates on which various tariffs were effective, beginning in 1888 and down to the present time?

A. Continuing up to May 27, 1914, the date these statements were compiled.

Q. The statement shows the rate in cents per hundred pounds except as specifically designated otherwise?

A. Yes.

Q. It also shows the comparison between the rates effective by way of the Morgan Line, the Sunset Route, and the Southern Pacific Company, as compared with other all-rail routes, does it?

A. Yes.

Q. Beginning with the first date of the tariff, effective September 1st, 1888, have you made a computation as to the number of items shown in that tariff where the rates applicable over the Morgan Line and Sunset-Gulf Route, generally speaking, were lower than those rates applicable by way of the all-rail route? Have you made such a computation?

A. Yes.

487 Q. Have you the number of rates effective by the Morgan Line, which are lower than the all-rail route?

A. On that date they were the same.

Q. That is, there were no rates in effect on the Morgan Line which were lower than the all-rail route?

A. Not on that date.

Q. Take the next date, May 10, 1893, have you made a computation as to that?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was the number of commodities where the rate by the Morgan Line was lower than the all-rail rates?

A. Sixty-six commodities.

Q. The next date, June 24, 1897, have you made a computa as to that?

A. Yes.

Q. What is the number of commodities where the rates over t
Morgan Line are less than by the other lines?

A. One.

Mr. HERRIN. What was that commodity, please?

The WITNESS. That applied on shoe blacking other than as pr vided under dressing, the rate being 75 cents via the Morgan Li and $1.08 by the other routes.

438 By Mr. GANN:

Q. What was the number of commodities shown on Ju 18, 1900, where the rates were lower over the Morgan Line?

A. 94.

Q. The next date?

A. The dates vary between January 18, 1900, and January 1
1899.

Q. As shown in that table headed "Dates as noted", how ma commodities were there where the rates over the Morgan Line we lower than by the all-rail routes?

A. These rates were effective on various dates during that perio and there were 102 commodities that were lower via the Morgan Mallory Line than the other.

Mr. BLAIR. Was that at all times or some particular time?

The WITNESS. Not necessarily at all times; they were chang more or less during the period.

By Mr. GANN:

Q. And they were compiled in that form for the sake of conv ience rather than making it so elaborate?

A. Yes.

Q. The number was what?

439 A. 102.

Q. Take the next date, January 1st, 1909; how many co modities were there?

A. 21.

Q. October 10, 1910?

A. 17.

Q. And April 15, 1913?

A. 7.

Q. Referring to the table headed May 10, 1893, were there a nu ber of commodities where the rates via the Morgan Line were ma rially less than by the all-rail route?

A. Yes.

Mr. HERRIN. That is a little indefinite. What is meant by "materially"?

Mr. GANN. Where the disparity between the rates effective over the Morgan Line and the all-rail rate amounts to a considerable figure in dollars and cents.

Mr. HERRIN. That is still indefinite.

Mr. MCCLENNEN. Give some illustration.

By Mr. GANN:

Q. Take the rate, for instance, on nails or spikes, cut or wire,
440 n. o. s. in boxes or kegs; what was the rate over the Morgan Line?

A. 30 cents per hundred pounds.

Q. What was the rate by other routes?

A. 70 cents per hundred pounds.

Q. Take the rates on billets, blooms, ingots, muckbar and scrap steel under the heading of iron and steel articles; what was the rate by the Morgan Line?

A. 30 cents per hundred pounds.

Q. And the other rate by other routes?

A. 75 cents.

Q. Referring to the item "ship chandlery, pitch and tar", what was the rate over the Morgan Line?

A. 30 cents.

Q. And over the other route?

A. $1.06.

Q. Look at the item of cement, building or paving; what was the rate over the Morgan Line?

A. 30 cents.

Mr. BLAIR. What year are you referring to?

Mr. GANN. May 10, 1893.

By Mr. GANN:

Q. And by way of the other route?

441 A. $1.10.

Mr. GANN. The petitioner offers in evidence as Exhibit 30 a statement showing the rates on various commodities from New York City to California terminals via water and rail, via gulf routes, as compared with rates by other routes.

Mr. BLAIR. So that we may determine whether there is a legal objection to the offer, I will ask what is the purpose of the offer?

Mr. GANN. Simply to show comprehensively the same things that the witness has been stating.

Mr. DUNNE. But what is the purpose of showing the difference in rates?

Mr. McCLENNEN. To show that the Southern Pacific Company by the Morgan Line was making lower rates than were made by all rail

Mr. DUNNE. For the purpose of showing that it was soliciting and taking the business at these lower rates?

Mr. McCLENNEN. For the purpose of showing whatever the statement would be probative to show.

(The statement referred to was thereupon marked "Petitioner's Exhibit No. 30, September 25, 1914", and will be found in the volume of exhibits.)

(Whereupon a recess was taken until 2 o'clock p. m.)

442 AFTER RECESS.

ARTHUR A. TOPPING, the witness under examination at the taking of recess, resumed the stand.

Direct examination (continued) by Mr. GANN:

Q. Mr. Topping, the statement marked Exhibit No. 30 shows rates applicable on commodities from New York City to California terminals. What are California terminals? That is a technical term, and we may as well have it described in the record.

A. They are set forth here, in attachments to the exhibit, by photographic pages.

Q. Were those pages photographed from the original tariffs on file with the commission in Washington?

A. They were photographed from one of the transcontinental tariffs.

Q. Which was in effect at the time these statements were compiled?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Name some of the principal California terminals shown on the list before you.

443 A. We have San Pedro, California; Los Angeles, California; San Francisco, California; Sacramento, California; Stockton, California; San Jose, California; San Diego, California; there are in all probably fifty or more—Oakland, California; Berkley, California; Alameda, California; Marysville, California.

Q. They are all in California unless otherwise noted, are they not?

A. All California terminals are in the State of California.

Q. It happens that this rate territory does not extend out in other States?

A. No, sir.

Q. This statement as compiled is correct, to the best of your knowledge and belief?

A. It is; yes, sir.

Q. I show you another statement, Mr. Topping, which was prepared by the Division of Tariffs upon request of counsel for the Government, which purports to be a statement showing the rates various commodities from California terminals to New York City by way of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company and the Morgan Line Steamship Company as compared with rates via other 444 routes. Was that statement prepared under your supervision?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And this statement is the supplement or complement of the statement which we have just talked about, is it?

A. The other statement is westbound; this is eastbound.

Q. The same general observations about the headings will apply in this case, will they not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The tariffs from which these rates were taken cover a period from what date?

A. From June 17, 1895, up to May 22, 1914.

Q. The date the statement was compiled in the Division of Tariffs?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Take the first period shown in the statement, June 17, 1895: Have you made a computation as to how many rates there were in effect via the Morgan Line which were lower than the rates in effect via other all-rail lines?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many are there?

A. Four.

445 Q. As the number is so limited, will you state what they are?

A. Beans via Morgan Line, fifty; via other lines, one dollar per hundred pounds.

Green coffee in sacks via Morgan Line, twenty; other lines, one dollar.

Strained honey via Morgan Line, seventy-five; other lines, $1.10.

Alfalfa seed via Morgan Line, seventy-five; other lines, $1.25.

Q. Take the next date, January 10, 1898: How many commodities were there in effect on that date which carried a lower rate by the Morgan Line or Mallory Line than by other all-rail routes?

A. Seventeen.

Q. What are the principal ones?

A. Barley in sacks.

Q. What was the rate by the Morgan Line?

A. Seventy-five; and by other lines, one dollar.

Green coffee, seventy-five, Morgan Line; other lines, one dollar.

Glue, seventy-five via Morgan Line; $1.20 by other lines.

446 Rice, in packages, seventy-five cents via Morgan Line; other lines, one dollar.

Q. That is sufficient for illustration. Take the next date, July 15, 1898: How many commodities which took a lower rate via the Morgan or Mallory Lines than were applicable over the all-rail routes?

A. One.

Q. And that was what?

A. Infusorial earth; via the Morgan Line the rate was sixty, while by the other routes it was one dollar.

Q. The next date, January 18, 1900: How many were there where the commodities applicable via the Morgan Line carried a lower rate than via the all-rail routes?

A. One.

Q. And that was what?

A. Wool in grease; eighty via the Morgan Line, and via the other lines the rate was a class rate.

Q. And, as a general rule, the class rate is higher than the commodity rate?

A. As a rule; yes, sir.

Q. You do not know what the class rate is in this instance, do you?

447 A. I could not say what class was applicable on wool at that date.

Q. Take the next date, October 12, 1903; how many commodities were there where the rates via the Morgan and Mallory Lines were lower than the rates via the all-rail routes?

A. One.

Q. What was that?

A. Whole barley; by the Morgan Line the rate was fifty cents, and the rate via the other lines was seventy-five.

Q. And on January 1, 1909, what was the number of commodities where the rate was less over the Morgan and Mallory Lines?

A. Three.

Q. What are those?

A. Barley, sixty-five via the Morgan Line, and by other lines seventy-five.

Alfalfa seed, via the Morgan Line, the rate was $1.20, and the rate via the other lines was $1.25.

Rice: The rate via the Morgan Line was sixty, and the rates via the other lines were class rates.

448 Q. And as in the other explanation you made about class rates, the presumption is, generally speaking, that the class rates are higher than the commodity rates?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You do not know what the class rate on rice in packages at that date was, do you?

A. No, sir.

Q. What does the last column represent as to date?

A. The date seems to have been omitted in the last column.

Q. By inadvertence?

A. I assume that it was.

Q. Are there any rates, assuming that the heading for that column should have been the same as the others, which were lower by the Morgan and Mallory Lines than were applicable via the all-rail routes?

A. The rates are the same.

Q. So there are no commodities which took a lower rate?

A. No, sir.

Q. Is that statement correct, to the best of your knowledge and belief, Mr. Topping?

A. Yes.

449 Mr. GANN. Petitioner offers in evidence, as Exhibit No. 31, statement showing rates on various commodities from California terminals to New York City via the Southern Pacific Railroad and the Morgan Line, as compared with rates in effect via other routes.

(The statement referred to was thereupon marked "Petitioner's Exhibit No. 31, September 25, 1914", and will be found in the volume of petitioner's exhibits.)

450 Q. I show you Southern Pacific Company joint freight tariff No. 426, I. C. C. 3088, issued November 20, 1908, effective January 1, 1909, and ask you if that is the original tariff filed by the Southern Pacific Company with the Interstate Commerce Commission at Washington, as is required by law.

A. Yes.

Q. What is the number, in the filing system which the Interstate Commerce Commission uses, designating this particular tariff, and the date when it was received in the office of the commission?

A. The filing number is 146691; the filing date is November 25, 1908.

Q. I show you a copy of Southern Pacific Company joint freight tariff No. 426, I. C. C. 3088, issued November 20, 1908, effective January 1, 1909, and ask you if you have compared this tariff with the original tariff which was on file in Washington?

A. Yes.

Q. Is it a facsimile copy?

A. Yes.

Q. On page 22 of this tariff there are rates shown on what commodity?

451 A. Wool in grease, carloads.

Q. With a minimum weight of what?

A. 20,000 pounds.

Q. The rates, wool in grease in carloads, minimum 20,000 pounds, are applicable from what points, as shown by the pages of the tariff?

A. From Corinne, Utah, and Marmol, Nevada.

Q. And from what other points?

A. Certain other points taking group 3, as shown on pages 6 and 7 of the tariff.

Q. What are those points, some of them?

A. Cobre, Nevada; Elko, Nevada; Humboldt, Nevada; Winnemucca, Nevada; Balfour, Utah; Blue Creek, Utah; Bovine, Utah; Dathol, Utah; Gartney, Utah; Hansen, Utah; Kelton, Utah; Kelmar, Utah; Lake, Utah; Matlin, Utah; Metaurus, Utah; Monument, Utah; Ombey, Utah; Peplin, Utah; Promontory, Utah; Rozel, Utah; Stokes, Utah; Surbon, Utah; Terrace, Utah; and Umbria Junction, Utah.

Q. To what points are these rates on wool in grease, carload minimum of 20,000 pounds, applicable from the stations you have just named?

A. New York, N. Y., and Boston, Mass.

452 Q. And what is the rate as carried by this tariff which you have?

A. $2.07½ cents.

Q. Per hundred pounds?

A. Per hundred pounds.

Q. By what route are these rates applicable?

A. Via Southern Pacific, via Rio Grande, New Mexico, and Galveston, Harrisburg & San Antonio Railway Company; Texas & New Orleans Railroad Company; Louisiana Western Railroad Company; Morgan's Louisiana & Texas Railroad & Steamship Company, via New Orleans, La.; Southern Pacific Company's Atlantic steamship lines—Morgan Line—and New York Pier. Or Galveston, Harrisburg & San Antonio Railroad Company via Galveston, Texas; Southern Pacific Company's Atlantic steamship lines—Morgan Line—and New York Pier.

Q. I will ask you whether, from your knowledge, you know the location of the station designated Rio Grande, New Mexico.

A. Yes; Rio Grande is located near the State line of the States of Texas and New Mexico, just outside of the corporate limits of El Paso, Texas, and is the western terminal of the Galveston, Harrisburg & San Antonio Railway.

453 Mr. GANN. Petitioner offers in evidence as Exhibit No. 8 Southern Pacific Company's joint freight tariff No. 426, I. C. C. 3088, issued by the Southern Pacific Company; the Arizona-Colorado Railroad Company; Arizona Southern Railroad Company; Bocas & Loyalton Railroad; Eureka & Palisade Railroad Company; Gila Valley, Globe & Northern Railway Company; Nevada & California Railway; Nevada-California-Oregon Railway; and the Sierra Valley's Railway.

(The tariff referred to was thereupon marked "Petitioner's Exhibit No. 32, September 25, 1914", and will be found in the volume of petitioner's exhibits.)

By Mr. GANN:

Q. Do you know if the rates named in this tariff are effective by way of Ogden and the Union Pacific Railroad from the tariffs which you have brought with you?

A. I have nothing here that would show that.

Cross-examination by Mr. DUNNE:

Q. Exhibits 30 and 31, as I understand it, are compilations which you made from tariffs on file in the office in which you are employed?

454 A. I didn't make them personally.

Q. They were made by somebody?

A. They were made by a clerk in the office.

Q. It was a clerical operation from the tariffs on file?

A. Yes.

Q. New York, as mentioned in these exhibits as a place of origin and destination, means New York City strictly, does it not?

A. The rates are not confined to New York City. I think the exhibits show that the rates are applicable to and from New York and common points.

Q. I do not so understand the exhibit, and I will ask you to look at it, please [showing witness Exhibit No. 30].

A. The caption on the exhibit does read "New York, N. Y." It does not include anything further than that.

Q. So that these exhibits, so far as their face discloses, are addressed to New York City on the one side and California terminals upon the other?

A. That is correct; yes.

Q. Now, do these Exhibits 30 and 31 involve a comparison between the Morgan or Mallory Line and any other routes except all-rail routes?

455 A. They involve the Morgan or Mallory Line on the one hand and all other available routes on the other.

Q. Will you please indicate to me the text of the exhibit which conveys that idea?

A. The heading of Exhibit 30, which I am looking at here, states——

Q. Read it, please.

A. It states "Mallory Line; other routes."

Q. Other routes. It don't say "all other routes", does it?

A. No, sir.

Q. And you are not now prepared to say that this exhibit furnishes a comparison between the Morgan and Mallory Lines upon the one side and any routes upon the other side, except all-rail routes, are you?

A. Well, I can only say—it say the rates of the Morgan Line on the one hand and the other routes on the other.

Q. Other routes?

A. Other routes.

Q. Are you prepared to say that the term "other routes" as used in the captions of these exhibits includes any routes except all-rail routes? Are you prepared to say that?

456 Mr. McClennen. There is no contention at present that the phrase "other routes" has reference to anything other than all-rail routes.

Mr. Dunne. Please note that the phrase "other routes" has no other contention except the phrase "all-rail routes", and that will suspend all further examination on that point.

By Mr. Dunne:

Q. Another thing, does the selection of the particularly numbered years in these exhibits carry any signification to your mind beyond the circumstance that you were requested to furnish the data for those years?

A. That is all.

Q. Were you requested to furnish the data for those selected years or your associate or assistant?

A. Yes; he was.

Mr. Herrin. For those particular dates?

The Witness. Those particular dates.

Redirect examination by Mr. Gann:

Q. Were those requests so specific, as counsel would indicate 457 that for a particular day of a particular year which is shown on the statement you were requested to file these statements, or were you asked to prepare rate statements from a period beginning in 1888 and continuing to the present time?

A. These particular dates shown in these headings were not shown in the request; we were asked to compile these rates from 1888 up to the present time. These date headings show the various tariff changes.

Q. So there is no significance in the particular date at the head of the statement other than that there was a change in the trans-continental tariff of that date; is that true?

A. That is true; yes.

Mr. GANN. That is all. Any further questions?
Mr. DUNNE. That is all.

ROBERT S. LOVETT was called as a witness on behalf of the petitioner, and, having been first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. ORR:

Q. Your name and address?

A. Robert Scott Lovett; business address, 165 Broadway, New York City.

Q. Your present occupation?

A. I am chairman of the executive committee of the Union Pacific Railroad Company and of the companies controlled by it through ownership of stock.

Q. How long have you been engaged in the railroad service of one kind and another?

A. Well, railroad service of a kind I commenced in 1878. I have been connected with railroads, principally as attorney, ever since that time, except one period of about a year.

Q. When did your connection as attorney start; I mean for the railroads?

A. In June, 1883.

Q. With what company?

A. The Houston East & West Texas.

Q. Was that at that time a part of the Southern Pacific system?

A. No; it was not.

Q. Is it now?

A. Yes.

Q. Will you kindly state the experience and railroad connections you have had since that date to the present time?

A. Since the date I became attorney for the Houston East & West?

Q. Yes; if you please.

A. I was attorney for the receivers of the Houston East & West Texas Railway Company from 1885 to 1889; assistant general attorney for the Texas & Pacific Railway Company about a year; and then general attorney of the Texas & Pacific Railway Company until October 1st, 1892. I then became a member of the firm at Houston, Texas, that were at that time general attorneys for one of the Southern Pacific lines, and for the Missouri, Kansas & Texas Railway Company, and perhaps some other minor companies. I afterwards became general attorney for all the Southern Pacific lines in Texas, and as a member of that firm I gave my time chiefly to the railroad business. We were general attorneys, and in that position were also counsel and the advisors of the railroad officers in the State. I left Texas January 1st, 1904, and came to New York as counsel for the Southern Pacific Company and the Union

460 Pacific Company, and of the companies controlled by them, and soon after coming to New York—I do not recall just how soon, but I think within a year—I became a director of the Union Pacific Railroad Company and the Southern Pacific Company and many of the companies controlled by them, and a member of the executive committee. I was in very active connection with the management of the Union Pacific Railroad Company and Southern Pacific system after that, up to the time of Mr. Harriman's death, in September, 1909. Shortly before his death, I do not remember just how long, but probably some time in 1908, I was vice president of the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific Company and many companies controlled by them, and in September, 1909, following Mr. Harriman's death, was elected chairman of the executive committee, and some days later, probably within a month or so, president both of the Southern Pacific Company and of the Union Pacific, and of practically all the companies controlled by those two systems. I held that position as chairman of the executive committee and president until—I think it was December, 1911—when, with the approval of the board of directors, I reorganized the management by resigning as president of the Union Pacific and the Southern Pa-
461 cific companies and of many of their subsidiary companies and we elected a local man, largely, as president; I retained the chairmanship of the executive committee and remained chief executive officer until after the decision of the Supreme Court in what is commonly referred to as the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific merger case, when I resigned as chairman of the executive committee and director of the Southern Pacific Company and of all other companies controlled by it. I think that occurred in January, 1913. Since then I have retained the position of chairman of the executive committee of the Union Pacific Railroad Company and of the companies which it controls.

462 Q. You are actively in charge of that property as such, are you?

A. I am the chief executive officer.

Q. You are familiar, are you not, with the lines of the Southern Pacific and Central Pacific and Union Pacific Railroads?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Their location, I mean?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I will ask you to examine this map, which has been put in the record as Exhibit 1. The Union Pacific lines are colored in blue, the Southern Pacific lines other than the Central are colored in red, and it is intended that the Central Pacific lines should be colored in purple. Will you examine that map and state, in a general way, if it fairly represents their location?

A. Referring, first, to the lines of the Union Pacific Railroad Company, this map shows the company as operating a line from St. Joseph, Missouri, to Hastings, Nebraska, by way of Marysville. That is not a Union Pacific line.

Q. That is the St. Joseph & Grand Island?

163 A. The Union Pacific owns the majority of the stock, but not all.

Q. But it does not operate it?

A. It does not operate it. The St. Joseph & Grand Island, as shown on that map, runs from St. Joseph, Missouri, by way of Marysville and Hastings, to Grand Island, Nebraska. Otherwise, I believe the map correctly shows the lines owned and operated by the Union Pacific Railroad Company. It does not, however, show the lines of the Oregon Short Line Railroad Company nor of the Oregon & Washington Railroad and Navigation Company.

Mr. BLAIR. Is not that a part of your system—those two lines?

The WITNESS. We consider it a part. They are operated by the companies that own them; that is, the Oregon Short Line Railroad Company operates the lines that it owns, and the Oregon & Washington Railroad & Navigation Company operates the lines that it owns. The Union Pacific Railroad Company owns all the stock in both those companies, and we consider them, in ordinary speech, as a part of the Union Pacific system.

By Mr. ORR:

Q. As to the lines represented on the map in purple, being 164 the Central Pacific, what do you say about that being a fair representation of its mileage?

A. The purple colors correctly represent the lines now owned by the Central Pacific Railway Company.

Q. And the Southern Pacific in red, and the steamship line?

A. The Southern Pacific Company operates, under lease, all of the lines shown in red, extending from points in Oregon and California, Arizona and New Mexico, with certain exceptions. There are some lines—for instance, I think the line down to Coos Bay, which is represented on that line, I do not think has been constructed.

Mr. MCCLENNEN. That is a hatched line, I think.

The WITNESS. I believe it is. There is a hatched line in Sacramento Valley that I do not understand has been constructed, and in Arizona there are some small lines that I do not think are now operated by the Southern Pacific Company, the Arizona Eastern—they are branches, however, as shown on this map. The other lines—that is, the lines lying east of the boundary line between Texas and New Mexico, just west of El Paso—those lines are operated by the companies that own them, the Texas and Louisiana corporations; but the stock of all those companies in Texas and Louisiana 465 which operate the lines shown in red on this map, except some shares held by directors, and perhaps a few others, an insignificant number, are owned by the Southern Pacific Company.

Q. As to the steamship line from New Orleans?

A. The Southern Pacific Company operates lines of steamers between New York and New Orleans and New York and Galveston substantially on the routes shown in red.

Q. The Southern Pacific Company controls, either through lease or stock ownership, practically all of the mileage represented in red there?

A. Yes; all of it.

Q. And operates it all?

A. No. It operates itself only the steamship lines and the railroad lines in Oregon, California, and New Mexico. It does not operate any lines in Louisiana and Texas.

Q. But it controls those lines through stock ownership?

A. Through stock ownership.

Q. Describe, if you will, what is known as the Sunset Route.

A. It is a line made up of the steamship lines from New York to New Orleans and Galveston and the lines controlled 466 by the Southern Pacific in Louisiana and Texas and westward through Arizona and New Mexico and California—you cannot draw the line exactly in California as between what is called the Ogden Route and the Sunset Route—but the line by way of El Paso is what is commonly referred to as the Sunset Route.

Q. Does the Southern Pacific Company own any of the stock of the Central Pacific Railway Company?

A. My best information up to the time of my relinquishment of my connection with the company was that it owned all of the stock.

Q. And it has owned all of it since the organization of the company, if it does now?

A. I know that only historically back of 1899. In that way I know it has owned all of it ever since it was issued, in 1899.

Q. Are you acquainted with certain divisions of the country for traffic purposes known as Central Freight Association territory and Atlantic Seaboard territory and Western Trunk Line territory?

A. I understand that in a general way.

467 Q. You know in a general way the territory covered by these different designations?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are you informed through your various connections and associations as to the manner in which freight tonnage originating either in the Atlantic Seaboard territory or in California was solicited by the Southern Pacific Company?

A. When?

Q. In April, 1901?

A. I know it only by reason of my connection with those matters since January 1, 1904. I had no connection with the Central Pacific Railroad Company prior to 1904 and I had a very limited connection with the Southern Pacific Company prior to that time—limited to service in Texas. I know it, however, as I might say, in a historical way from my connection with the company since 1904.

Q. You know it also in a historical way, as you stated, prior to 1901, do you not?

A. In the same way only.

Q. You may state, if you will, the manner in which that traffic was solicited by the Southern Pacific Company and the route it would take in shipment if they got it.

Mr. HERRIN. At what time?

Mr. ORR. Prior to 1901.

Mr. HERRIN. We object to that. I do not see why we should put all witnesses who knew the matter of their own knowledge at that time, or why we should deal with Judge Lovett, who says he only knows it in a historical way. I do not object to anything that comes within his actual knowledge, but as to anything prior to 1904, I understand Judge Lovett to say that he does not know except in a historical way.

By Mr. ORR:

Q. You may speak of your knowledge of that subject after 1904 and not prior to 1901.

A. Beginning with 1904 all traffic in Atlantic Seaboard territory, or California, was solicited by the Southern Pacific representatives on the Sunset Route.

Q. Would that mean water lines to New Orleans and Galveston, or Galveston and from there by rail to California?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is that the rule up to the present time?

A. It is.

Q. Is that solicitation now active or passive?

A. I have no doubt it is very active.

Q. Take shipments, if you know, originating or ending in Central Freight Association territory. Do you know how they were solicited and have been since 1904 up to 1913—up to the time of what we call the unmerging of the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific?

A. Up to the time of the unmerging it was solicited preferentially via the Ogden gateway.

Q. And since that time?

A. Not knowing all about the views of both parties since the unmerging, I do not know positively. My information is, from the best information I can get——

Mr. BLAIR. We object to testimony based on information.

The WITNESS. I should state, however, that I conceive it to be my business to find out how the solicitation is done, and make inquiries of our traffic officers as to how it is done, and get reports occasionally. That is the information that comes to me in an official way. That is the information that I have.

Mr. BLAIR. But, really, we should have a chance to examine these traffic officers ourselves, and hear what the conclusion is as to how this business is solicited.

By Mr. ORR:

470 Q. Will you answer as to how it was solicited since the unmerging?

A. My information, acquired in the way I have stated, is that the business north of the Ohio River—not Ohio River points—and west of Pittsburgh and Buffalo, is solicited by the Ogden gateway to Central California. I think there is some doubt—at least I have some doubt—as to just how far that is true of points nearer Pittsburgh and Buffalo—Cleveland, Ohio, for example. I am not as certain about that as I am about the situation farther west, like Chicago.

Q. Is any of the business solicited to be sent through the New Orleans or El Paso gateway as far west as Chicago that you know of?

A. By the Southern Pacific Company?

Q. Yes.

471 A. Lines leading to New Orleans and to various junctions in Texas, like Beaumont, Houston, Shreveport, Dennison, Fort Worth, El Paso, Texas, solicit that business via those junctions. The Southern Pacific solicitors, even in Chicago, do not, as far as I have been able to ascertain, work against the solicitation of those lines. Acting independently in Chicago, I think the Southern Pacific solicitors would solicit by way of the Ogden gateway to central California. The Union Pacific acts upon the presumption that they would do that. We work preferentially with the Southern Pacific.

Q. You are working for the business that way yourself?

A. Yes; exclusively.

Q. Do you know of any instance where the Southern Pacific has assisted your solicitors in getting the business that way, through the Ogden gateway?

A. No. I would not know of particular instances of solicitation. It is general policy that I speak of, that I understand governs.

Q. You assume, from the fact that you are working the business that way as far as you can control it or influence it, that that is so—that that is the reason the Southern Pacific is assisting, if it ever has, in that direction?

A. I know that is one reason. We work everything that we can for Central California in connection with the Southern Pacific through the Ogden gateway, and we expect them, from all that territory, to do the same thing; and if they do not—I do not know what our position would be. We are assuming that from this territory they are working preferentially the Ogden gateway, in connection with our line. I should say that I do not know how active their solicitation in that territory is.

Q. I understood you to say that the Central Pacific stock is owned entirely by the Southern Pacific Company. Does the Southern Pacific Company control the operation of the Central Pacific lines?

A. Yes; it operates them.

Q. Describe, if you will, an all-rail route commencing at San Francisco or Oakland, over the Central Pacific Railway, and from there east to the Atlantic seaboard, such as would be used in case of an all-rail shipment.

A. One which is actually used under existing conditions?

Q. The shortest all-rail route that you know.

A. The Southern Pacific Railroad from Oakland by way of Benicia to Sacramento; the Central Pacific from Sacramento to Ogden, Utah; the Union Pacific from Ogden to Council Bluffs—I am not sure as to the shorter line from Council Bluffs to the Atlantic seaboard, but the lines actually used, and the distances are approximately the same—the Chicago North Western from Council Bluffs to Chicago, or the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul from Council Bluffs to Chicago, or the Illinois Central from Council Bluffs to Chicago, or the Burlington between the same points, or the Rock Island between the same points, or the Chicago & Great Western between the same points; thence the various trunk lines from Chicago to the Atlantic seaboard—the New York Central, Pennsylvania, Erie, Baltimore & Ohio, and other lines that have connections with some of the eastern lines, like the Lehigh Valley and the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western.

Mr. DUNNE. I assume that Judge Lovett has it in mind, without actually expressing it, that San Francisco was the initial point. Am I right?

The WITNESS. Oakland; that was the question asked.

By Mr. ORR:

Q. He stated from Oakland by way of Benicia.

A. Of course that is not the only line. I am trying to give what I understand to be the shortest line.

Q. Has the Central Pacific a line from Oakland which could take the place of the Southern Pacific to Sacramento?

A. Yes; the Central Pacific from Oakland by way of Niles and Lathrop and Stockton to Sacramento, and thence east over the other lines I have described.

Q. How would the route you have just described, being all rail, compare in distance with what we know as the Sunset Route, part water and part rail, between the points you have named; that is, between San Francisco and New York City?

A. That is easily obtainable from tables. From memory I should say that it would be about 1,500 miles shorter than the Sunset Route, by way of Galveston and New Orleans. I do not mean to be exact about that, but that is my recollection of about what the difference in distance is.

Q. Does the Union Pacific Company solicit passenger and freight traffic over the line you have described between the two coasts?

475 A. It does, very actively.

Q. In its solicitation of business does it take the Central Pacific line from Oakland to a connection with the Union Pacific?

A. Our connection at Ogden is physically with the Central Pacific. The Southern Pacific Company is the lessee. Our business is done with the Southern Pacific Company and not with the Central Pacific.

Q. I am speaking not of the company that operates it but of the rails.

A. It moves both ways. The business as actually moved goes over the line that I first described—that is, by way of Benicia; and also it goes by way of the Niles-Stockton line; that is, freight business. I do not know how much passenger business goes that way.

Q. The business solicited by the Union Pacific is solicited over that route generally, whether it goes by Niles or Benicia?

A. Yes.

Q. Is there much competition between that route and the Sunset Route for the business described?

A. Between the Union Pacific and the Sunset Route?

476 Q. Yes; the Union Pacific—that route; yes—and the Sunset Route.

A. There is between the Union Pacific part of that line. Of course there is no competition between the Central Pacific end of it and the Sunset Route, because it is controlled by the same company; that is not competition in the sense in which I use the term. There is competition between the Union Pacific and its eastern connections and the Southern Pacific Company by way of the Sunset Route—that is, its El Paso gateway and its connections—for that business.

Q. You mean there is competition in the sense of effort to get the business?

A. Yes; and all that competition implies.

Q. If the Central Pacific were separated from and independent of the Southern Pacific control, what effect would that have in the matter of competition on the route you have described?

A. Of course, assuming that the Central Pacific is controlled by the motives that ordinarily control people, it would work very actively for that business by way of the Ogden gateway and its connections east, while the Southern Pacific would work very actively for it by way of the El Paso gateway.

Q. Much more so than is now the case?

Mr. BLAIR. This is a very intelligent witness, and it is not necessary to lead him.

Mr. ORR. I appreciate that.

The WITNESS. As I stated a moment ago, that portion of the line west of Ogden—that is, what is now the Central Pacific, that is controlled by the Southern Pacific—does not work the business from the Atlantic seaboard territory by way of the Ogden gateway at all, except, perhaps, where it can not get it by way of the Sunset line; then it would work it by way of Ogden, but it works preferentially by the Sunset line. The Central Pacific is not a factor in it at all, because it is not an operating company; and if the Central Pacific were independent, undoubtedly it would work very actively in California. It would be a new factor in that competition.

Q. Are you able to state, from your acquaintance with the business and localities, the natural course shipments of freight would take originating north of Tehachapi, California, destined to the Atlantic seaboard, or east of the Missouri River and St. Louis or at St. Louis?

Mr. HERRIN. What do you mean by "natural route"? The shortest?

Mr. ORR. I mean whose territory would that be considered? What would be the shortest and best route, if distance and time were considered and the route it would naturally take if not solicited some other way?

The WITNESS. Your question relates to shipments by rail as against shipments by way of the canal?

By Mr. ORR:

Q. I will ask the question to apply as against any other route.

A. Why, the shortest and most direct route would be the Central Pacific and Union Pacific and their connections east.

Q. Describe briefly, if you will, about what territory in California on the west coast that would cover.

A. I should say that it would cover everything north of Tehachapi, which is about midway between San Francisco and Los Angeles; perhaps it is a little nearer Los Angeles and north of Santa Barbara up to the Oregon boundary. Mojave or Bakersfield—Mojave, I should say—is the best way to identify the point that I mean by the Tehachapi.

479 Q. Some objection was made, perhaps not in the form of an objection, but it seems to be objectionable to counsel for the defendant, to the form of a question I propounded to you, asking you what would be the effect upon competition if the Central Pacific were separated from the control of the Southern Pacific.

Mr. BLAIR. Does anything appear on the record in regard to the views of counsel for the defendant in regard to that question?

Mr. ORR. I believe so.

Mr. BLAIR. I do not recall it.

(By request of counsel for the petitioner, the reporter repeated the pending question.)

Mr. ORR. I did not mean "effect", but "extent."

Br. Mr. ORR:

Q. I ask, would it be much greater? I will ask you to give your views again, if you will, on the extent of that competition and the effect of it.

A. Well, at this time the Southern Pacific, through its control of the lines of the Central Pacific and the Southern Pacific Railroad Company and some other companies, controls all of the rail 480 transportation in Central California, except that controlled by the Santa Fe and Western Pacific; and it naturally prefers the route that affords it the longest haul or the most revenue—not always necessarily the longest haul, because sometimes the difference in the division is not great enough to justify the difference in the length of the haul; and, controlling the Central Pacific as well as the Southern Pacific, it directs the policy of all of those properties and their management. If the Central Pacific Railway Company were operating its own railroad, independently of the control of the Southern Pacific, it would have no interest in sending any of this business through the El Paso gateway, as far as I can see. Its interest would be to pull all that it can, or all that it could control, through the Ogden gateway; while the Southern Pacific and Southern Pacific Railroad, no longer having any interest in sending any of that business through the Ogden gateway, would put it all south or southeast through the El Paso gateway. There would then naturally be that struggle between the Central Pacific and the Southern Pacific in this central California territory.

481 Q. You may state, if you will, whether in your opinion the separation of the Central Pacific from the control of the Southern Pacific would tend to better service or what, if any, benefit would be derived by the shipper from the separation.

A. Well, I do not know that I can answer that; that is going rather far afield, Mr. Orr. I can only assume that there would result the things that usually follow the action of corporations acting in their own interest. There would be competition between the Central Pacific line and the Southern Pacific line where there is none now. As to how far competition is beneficial that is another question. There would be competition where there is none now, or practically none.

Q. Are you informed and able to state anything in connection with the movement of wool originating on the lines of the Central Pacific Railway as far east, we will say, as Corinne?

A. I know in a historical way. By that I mean the knowledge I have acquired of those matters since 1904, how it was handled prior to 1901, and how it was handled during what is called the merger. During the merger it moved through the Ogden gateway as far as possible to the east. I know this only in a historical way.

Mr. BLAIR. We object to this statement of the witness as to how it was moved prior to 1901.

The WITNESS. I have not stated that.

Mr. HERRIN. There is any number of witnesses who know these facts. There is no reason to trouble Judge Lovett as to what he does not know.

By Mr. ORR:

Q. You may state what, in your opinion, from your knowledge of the situation, would be the effect upon the competitive power of the Union Pacific Railroad Company in competing for transcontinental business or other business reaching in the territory served if there was a separation, if the Central Pacific Railway Company were separated from the control of the Southern Pacific Company.

A. The Union Pacific now is merely a connection of the Southern Pacific Company at Ogden, and is not as dependent on the Southern Pacific Company as it formerly was for the business it gets; but the Southern Pacific Company is in the position, by reason of its ownership of the Central Pacific, to divert a great deal of business from there to the Union Pacific. If the Union Pacific had its own line into Central California it would not be dependent on any other line, but would have its own line to come directly in contact with the shippers. I am not prepared to say, however, that we could get any more business then than we get now.

Q. You say the Union Pacific is not as dependent now as it formerly was; why not?

A. Well, perhaps I could do better by contrasting the situation now with what it was when the Union Pacific acquired control of the Southern Pacific. At that time the shipper had no right to route his traffic. That was in the hands of the carrier. There was only one railroad between Ogden or Utah and California. That was in 1901. The Union Pacific was absolutely dependent on the Southern Pacific for its California business. It had no line of its own, and there was no other line. Since 1901 what is commonly referred to as the Clark road has been constructed between Salt Lake City and Los Angeles and San Pedro. The Union Pacific has a half interest and equal voice in the management of that line. That was open for business in 1905. That affords the Union Pacific an entrance into Southern California where it is a competitor with the Southern Pacific Company. The Western Pacific line has 484 been opened from Salt Lake City to central California; that is, to Sacramento, Stockton, Oakland, and San Francisco, and some other points, and the Union Pacific, or the Short Line, connects with it at Salt Lake City, and, while I do not want to throw stones at it, it is not as good a railroad as the Central Pacific in any respect.

Mr. HERRIN. Which road is that?

The WITNESS. The Western Pacific. That has been opened, it is a railroad and it is there, but it was not there in 1901. So, with those considerations, the building of the line from Salt Lake City to Los Angeles, opened for business in 1905, the passage of the Hepburn Act in 1906, which gave the shipper the right to route his freight, and the opening of the Western Pacific, the Union Pacific is not dependent to the same extent now as it was formerly on the Central Pacific; but the Central Pacific is far and away the best connection for the Union Pacific to Central California. It is the shortest line and the best railroad in every sense of the word. Does that answer your question?

By Mr. ORR:

Q. Yes; thank you. The Western Pacific was opened for business in 1910, was it not?

485 A. It is my recollection; it did not make any great impression on the business of the Union Pacific or Central Pacific but I think it was about that date.

Q. You may state whether, in your opinion, solicitation of business has much or little effect on the securing of business.

A. It has some; service has more than any other now. Conditions have changed very much in recent years in that respect.

Q. What now controls the selection of routes principally?

A. First, service; and, next, personal idiosyncrasies of the shipper. I should say next to that is solicitation.

Q. Would you say that because of the all-rail route you have described from the east to the west coast and the reverse it would be in position to give better service than the Sunset Route on the same business—transcontinental business?

A. Would it be in position?

Q. Yes.

A. I think it is in position now.

Q. Well, could that be increased or in any manner changed by the separation of the Central from the Southern Pacific control?

A. I would not like to say that, because I think the Southern Pacific Company is working now, and has been ever since the merger, as it certainly was during the merger, the Ogden gateway very effectively. How long it will continue to do that I do not know. Of course during the control of the Southern Pacific Company by the Union Pacific Company the Union Pacific Company's policy dominated the Southern Pacific in that respect, and the Union Pacific was naturally in favor of the Central Pacific line, with a due sense of responsibility for the entire Southern Pacific system, and because the two systems had the haul from the Missouri River to the Pacific. Perhaps I am going further than the question calls for; I want to make my position clear on that. I can not say that the situation would be improved beyond what it is now by the Southern Pacific, because up to this time, whatever it may do in the future, the Southern Pacific is working the Central Pacific very efficiently.

Q. What I intended to convey by my question was whether the increase of effort in the way of competition for the competing traffic would have the tendency to increase the quality of service. You say service is what induces the business, and my inquiry was as to whether the increase in competition which you have described would be likely to increase the quality of service.

A. That, according to my observation, is what always has been the result of competition—improvement in service.

Mr. ORR. You may cross-examine.

Cross-examination by Mr. BLAIR:

Q. You have spoken of solicitation from and to points in Central California being made by the Union Pacific through the Ogden gateway. How does the Union Pacific preferentially route the traffic for Southern California?

A. By way of Salt Lake City and the so-called Clark route.

Q. Is that the San Pedro, Salt Lake & Los Angeles road?

A. Those words are in its name. I believe its correct name is the San Pedro, Los Angeles & Salt Lake Railroad Company.

Q. That is an affiliated line of the Union Pacific?

A. The Union Pacific owns a half interest.

488 Q. You do not see that line on the Government map?

A. It is here.

Q. But it is not colored?

A. It is black.

Q. It is not observable to the naked eye from where I am.

Mr. McCLENNEN. That is assertive rather than interrogative.

By Mr. BLAIR:

Q. I believe you also called attention to the fact that this line from Granger, I believe, to Portland is not on the map.

Mr. ORR. You mean on this map?

Mr. BLAIR. By map I mean the map produced by the petitioner as Exhibit 1.

The WITNESS. It is on the map, but in small lines, the same as the other railroads.

By Mr. BLAIR:

Q. Like all other railroads in the country.

A. It is not in brilliant colors, like the others.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. The ordinary rule, of course, which these railroad com-

489 panies follow is their own interest, I suppose, by routing as far as they can influence routing; they influence it the way they get the most revenue?

A. That is the result of my observation.

Q. And hence we have the long haul preferred as against the shorter haul?

A. By railroad companies, yes, in those cases where they get more revenue for the long haul, which they usually do.

Q. So that if a company had the same interest, whether freight went one way or the other, two lines that form an alternative line have practically the same interest, it would not make much difference to that company which way that freight went?

A. Not except for trading purposes, with connections.

Q. But so far as the routing is concerned, it would be the same to the company whether it went one way or the other? If, for example, the Southern Pacific Company owned a line down on the Sunset Route for about the same distance that the Central Pacific runs on the Central run it would be practically neutral, would it not, as to whether the freight came one way or the other?

A. Yes; except in so far as the service that some con-490 nections afforded might enable it to get traffic as against some competitor.

Q. That is true; but we were talking about the influence of this long haul or short haul?

A. Yes.

Q. If it had the same interest only in one road as in the other it would be indifferent as to whether it came one way or the other?

A. That is true, except, as I say, possibly the question of trading with connections and service beyond.

Q. We do not want to get into that, because I do not know where it would lead.

A. I don't know either.

Q. If the Southern Pacific Company had no interest except the Sunset Route it would have a good deal less interest than it has in the Central route, because it owns the Central Pacific line, so it has a substantial interest in that railroad, has it not?

A. The Central Pacific?

A. Yes.

A. Yes; it controls the Central Pacific—owns the Central Pacific.

491 Q. I say, it has a substantial interest in that route?

A. Yes.

Q. As it owns the line to Ogden?

A. Yes.

Q. And comparatively the investment in the Central Pacific line almost approximates the investment in the Southern Pacific line, does it not, the Sunset line, the rail line?

A. I do not think so.

Q. There is not very much difference when you come at it. Now, so far as it has an interest in the Central line that neutralizes, does it not, just to that extent its effort to push business over the Sunset line?

A. Yes; certainly.

Q. It would do that, would it not?

A. Yes.

Q. If a man had a one-fourth interest in that line and a three-fourths interest in the other, the one-fourth interest would have its effect in neutralizing the use of the long line?

A. That would seem plain enough.

493 Q. So that if you take the Central Pacific away from the Southern, leaving it no interest in the Central line, it would undoubtedly increase its efforts to force business over the only line it had?

A. It would increase its efforts to force business——

Q. (Interposing.) Over the only line it had, which would be the Sunset line?

A. Undoubtedly.

Q. Then, if the Union Pacific had the Central, you say you would increase your efforts? You could increase them?

A. Yes. I also stated that I was not certain by any means that we would get more business than we are getting now.

Q. I am coming to that. So that this question of mere solicitation in and of itself does not cut much figure, does it, under the law? For instance, suppose the Union Pacific should not solicit at all; it would not violate any law, would it, if it kept its road running?

Mr. McCLENNEN. My objection to the question is that it calls for an opinion of law, and I do not want the judge to go on record unless I know his opinion in advance as to what the law may be.

493 Mr. HERRIN. I do not care about taking up time on that; it is not very important, except that the judge has stated—well, I do not know that I care to go any further.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. You say you do not know whether you would get as much or more business than you are now getting over the Central route, or that all this change might not actually affect materially the actual cost of traffic?

A. Do you want me to answer that?

Q. Yes.

A. Of course, there is a large field here, if you want me to go into it.

Mr. ORR. Go ahead, if you will.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. I only wished to say that you spoke a moment ago and said that you might not get as much business——

Mr. ORR. That is not the question. I ask that the witness be permitted to answer.

The WITNESS. My opinion is that we would not get as much business for a good while, if we had the Central Pacific, as we do now.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. You can develop it.

494 A. I can give the reasons for it.

Q. That is obvious. Since the law has given to the shipper the right to route, he is apprised of that. They generally understand that they can route their freight.

A. I think they do.

Q. And as far as your experience goes, the shippers are quite alive to their own interest, as to the routes that should be selected. I mean the shipper would not consent to route freight against his own interest.

A. No; I think as to that, Mr. Herrin, that the shipper has for many years been very much alive to traffic conditions. I do not think he has the same interest in it now that he had formerly. Formerly he got rebates and concessions, and it was a question of bidding for his business. He did not have the right to route at that time. Now, it is largely a question of service.

Q. Now he is confined to service?

A. Yes.

Q. And he would be naturally prone to select the route that would give him the best service?

A. It has a good deal to do also—the question of location, 495 the line on which the man who controls the business is located is of importance. I do not care whether he is the consignee or the consignor; the man who controls the routing, whether consignor or consignee, his location has a good deal to do with his choice of routes.

Q. And that is what you group under the heading of idiosyncrasies? You used some such word.

A. I should say this as a matter of interest; what I should say, as a matter of personal idiosyncrasies, is where it is practically immaterial to him which way it goes. He may dislike some officer of some particular line and turn his freight away from that, because he has no interest in it, no interest to be gained. There are situations like that—or personal likes or personal friendships; that applies a great deal where the rates and service are equal. That is what I referred to by "idiosyncrasies"; but the matter to which you refer is more a matter of substantial interest, the location of the shipper on the tracks or on the line where he may want a good many favors, service, and such things.

Q. Well, that goes to service?

A. But it may not be that particular shipment, but other shipments.

496 Redirect examination by Mr. ORR:

Q. In answer to a question of Judge Herrin's, you stated that you might not get so much business for a while. State what you intended to convey by that answer; what did you mean?

A. I meant that most of the business in Central California—that is, in California north of Mojave and Santa Barbara—originates on the tracks of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, not on the tracks of the Central Pacific. The Southern Pacific Company, controlling all of these lines, now sends a great deal of the business through the Ogden gateway, because it has an interest in the Central Pacific. It has that inducement. If it did not own the Central Pacific—if, for example, the Union Pacific owned it, or if the Central Pacific were independent—the Southern Pacific would not send any business through the Ogden gateway that it could send through the El Paso gateway; but most of the construction in recent years in Central California has been done by the Southern Pacific Railroad Company and not by the Central Pacific, and unless the Central Pacific could make some trade with the Southern Pacific on 497 divisions that would almost buy that business from it, it would perhaps have to do a lot of building of branches and spend a lot of money that way to get that business, and during that period most of the business would go the other way; that is what I meant.

Q. Does the Central Pacific, even now, send any business through the Ogden gateway, in transcontinental business, that it can control over the Sunset Route to Atlantic coast territory?

A. You mean to the Atlantic seaboard?

Q. Yes.

A. No; I think not.

Q. You would not lose any of that business?

A. We would not lose any of that.

Q. You have not quite answered the question yet. What did you mean when you limited your increase of business to "a while", as you stated—"we might not get it for a while." What did you mean by that, that there would be a time when you would get it?

A. I think that anybody who owned the Central Pacific Railroad, if the Southern Pacific did not own it, I think the Central Pacific alone, or in the hands of somebody else, unless it did some 498 extension, would be very much in the situation of the Western Pacific, because the extensions in California for many years have not been done by the Central Pacific; the Central Pacific would have to either do a lot of construction or would have to make a trade with the Southern Pacific.

Q. Well, the Central Pacific is not precisely in the condition that the Western Pacific is in regard to having no feeders, is it?

A. No; but it has not as many as it would need, if it were independent of the Southern Pacific, unless it got proper divisions from the Southern Pacific—I mean liberal divisions.

Q. Have you any knowledge of the extent, by way of comparison, of the transcontinental business with that of the business other than transcontinental that would be affected by the Southern Pacific sending it another way?

A. In the event that the Central was separated from the Southern Pacific?

Q. Yes.

A. I can not give any figures of percentages; I speak only in a general way as to the effect of that situation.

Q. What I want to know is whether it would affect a very large percentage of the business?

A. Why, if the Central Pacific were separated, if it were independent, both the Central Pacific and the Southern Pacific would be in San Francisco, Oakland, Jan Jose, Stockton, Sacramento, Fresno, and all other towns and places in Central California, contending for traffic, one for the Ogden gateway and the other for the El Paso gateway, and it would affect all that competition and would make competitive practically all the traffic of that territory going east.

Q. Yes; but you have stated, I believe, that none of the Atlantic seaboard business is routed by the Southern Pacific through the Ogden gateway that it can control through the New Orleans gateway; that is the fact, is it not?

A. Yes.

Mr. ORR. That is all.

Mr. BLAIR. No questions.

(Whereupon an adjournment was taken until Tuesday, September 29, 1914, at 10.30 o'clock a. m.)

SIXTH DAY.

ROOM 720, CUSTOM HOUSE,
New York City, September 29, 1914.

Before Special Examiner Frank R. Hanna.

Present on behalf of the United States: Mr. Orr, Mr. McClennen, and Mr. Gann.

Present on behalf of the defendants: Mr. Herrin, Mr. Blair, and Mr. Dunne, for the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, et al.

JOHN B. DEFRIEST was called as a witness on behalf of the petitioner and, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. Your full name?

A. John Becker DeFriest.

Q. And your residence?

A. 411 West 115th Street.

Q. New York City?

A. New York City.

Q. What is your occupation?

A. General eastern agent of the Union Pacific Railroad.

Q. You have occupied that position about how long?

A. Six years.

Q. Prior to that what was your position?

A. General agent in Philadelphia of the Union Pacific.

Q. For how long?

A. Three years.

Q. And prior to that?

A. Chief clerk in the Union Pacific New York office.

Q. For how long?

A. Seventeen years.

Q. That makes a total, then, of your connection with the Union Pacific in seaboard territory of 26 years?

A. 26 years.

Q. What are your duties as general eastern freight agent?

A. Soliciting freight for the Union Pacific.

Q. Personally, or through other solicitors?

A. Personally and through the help of other soliciting agents.

Q. What is the territory in which you solicit or which 502 is under your supervision?

A. Atlantic seaboard territory east of Harrisburg and Buffalo and north of the Virginia-North Carolina State line, and including all New England.

Q. That is, north of the southern boundary line of Virginia?

A. Yes.

Q. And running west as far as Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, and Buffalo, New York?

A. Yes.

Q. Does that mean to include Harrisburg and Buffalo or exclude them?

A. It includes them.

Q. Your duties, then, and of the men under you require the obtaining of such California and Pacific slope freight for the Union Pacific as you can by legitimate means?

A. Yes.

Q. In working that freight do you have any preference, or does the Union Pacific Railroad have any preference as between the different lines east of Omaha?

A. Not very material, except the Milwaukee & Northwestern are our most direct connection.

503 Q. And how is the freight routed beyond Ogden?

A. Southern Pacific.

Q. That is, the rails which in this case we speak of as the Central Pacific rails?

A. Yes.

Q. In soliciting Atlantic seaboard freight, are you brought into contact with the representatives or solicitors of the Southern Pacific Company?

A. We are brought in contact with them; they are our connecting line and we refer to them quite frequently.

Q. Are you brought into such relation with them as to know how they are seeking to route Atlantic seaboard freight for California, Oregon, and Nevada?

A. Yes.

Q. What do they seek?

A. They try to get it through the New Orleans gateway wherever possible.

Q. Failing that, what is their next preference?

A. Well, that is a question; they have got a good many connections, and, so far as I can see, they are rather neutral as to the different gateways through which the freight passes.

504 Q. In your efforts to get freight for the Union Pacific, do you have any cooperation from the solicitors of the Chicago & Northwestern and the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you get any cooperation from the solicitors of the Southern Pacific?

A. Not that I know of; in other words, their soliciting men do not go right out with our soliciting men and work for business that way.

Q. You have been speaking, I take it, as of the present time in your answers. How far back has the condition which you have just been describing existed?

A. Since the segregation of the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific.

Q. That is, in 1913?

A. No; it was before that, wasn't it? I don't remember just how long ago it was since the segregation.

Q. The decision was in December, 1912, as I recall it, and the actual decree a little later. How does the situation which you have described as existing since that segregation, which we will call 505 for convenience the unmerging, compare with the condition that existed in seaboard territory prior to the merger with the Union Pacific in 1901?

A. I think the situation now is about the same as it was before the merger.

Q. What is the normal freight time from California points over the rails of the Central Pacific-Union Pacific and eastern connections to New York City?

A. I think that depends entirely upon the commodity that is moved. If they have a freight train of green fruit, they would move it much quicker than they would a train of dead freight.

Q. Take the green fruit first; what is the ordinary time eastbound over the line I have indicated on that?

A. About ten or eleven days.

Q. The next ordinary freight in carload lots?

A. I should judge about fourteen days. I do not watch the eastern movement very closely, because outside of the fruit business we do not trace very many shipments.

Q. Now, the same question in the reverse direction, westbound?

A. It will average up about thirteen days.

506 Q. Do you experience many instances, either eastbound or westbound, of stoppages in transit and in the switching yards?

A. No, sir.

Q. I was using the term stoppage as indicating delay, not a legal stoppage.

A. We do not have any trouble unless the cars are in bad order.

Q. What do you mean?

A. If they break down or something happens to them in transit.

Q. How long has that been true, that the cars have been running through without delays?

A. Well, I know for the past three years we have not had any trouble at all.

Q. How far to the west and south do you come in contact with the solicitation by the Southern Pacific preferentially by the Sunset Route through New Orleans?

A. Well, the most of their solicitation for the New Orleans gateway is, well, I should say out as far as Harrisburg and down as far as Baltimore; below that they do not get so much for the New Orleans gateway; that is, via the Morgan Line.

507 Q. They absorb the local into New York, do they?

A. No; that is part of the through rate. On some roads they have a regular division, and on others there is a local charge into New York.

Q. I am not sure that I have that clearly. Take from Rochester, New York, going by New York and Sunset to New Orleans, does that travel from Rochester to San Francisco at the same rate as it would travel from New York City to San Francisco?

A. Yes.

Q. You do not have anything directly to do with the Central Freight Association territory yourself?

A. No, sir.

Q. In this seaboard territory is the volume of freight for which you are competing against the Southern Pacific large or small?

A. It is quite heavy.

508 Cross-examination by Mr. BLAIR:

Q. Competition for this business which you have been describing is not confined to the Ogden route and the Sunset Route, is it?

A. No, sir.

Q. There are a number of other lines at the same time striving to get this traffic?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The American-Hawaiian Line is an active competitor for this traffic, is it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. It goes after all business in Atlantic seaboard territory?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. During the merger between the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific was not freight preferentially sought for the Sunset Route?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In about the same way that it is since the "unmerger"?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You spoke of the through rate from Rochester being the same as from the port of New York. You were not asked whether that rate from Rochester to New York was absorbed by the water line. What do you know about that?

A. It is a part of the through rate, and the lines divide the rate via the Morgan Line—that is, from Rochester to New York and New York to San Francisco—the same as the all-rail lines from New York by the Ogden gateway or any other gateway divide the rates.

Q. So that the rail line from Rochester to New York has a division of that through rate?

A. As I understand it; yes.

Q. Which is paid by the shipper?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know what the normal time for the movement of traffic by the Sunset Route is?

A. It is supposed to be the same as via the Ogden gateway.

By Mr. DUNNE:

Q. I understood you to say that the conditions were the same now as during the merger when you were answering Mr. McClennen in respect of the solicitation by the long haul.

A. No.

Q. Please explain that.

A. During the merger if anything was lost or they could not secure the business via the New Orleans gateway they tried to get it in connection with the Union Pacific road via Ogden.

Q. What are the affiliated lines of the Western Pacific between Salt Lake and San Francisco?

A. The D. & R. G. and the Missouri Pacific.

Q. And what is the Missouri Pacific's gateway?

A. St. Louis.

Q. The Santa Fe has a road all the way from Chicago to San Francisco, has it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So that Atlantic seaboard business—business originating in seaboard territory and bound for California—may go through the St. Louis gateway by the Missouri Pacific, the D. & R. G., and the Western Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Which is a through affiliated line from the St. Louis gateway to California?

511 A. Yes, sir.

Q. Similarly, business originating in the seaboard territory and passing through the Chicago gateway, may go by the Santa Fe all-rail from Chicago to San Francisco?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And those lines that I have mentioned are actively competing for Atlantic seaboard business, are they not?

A. Just as hard as anybody else; yes.

Q. And in the event of successful competition by those lines for the business, none of that business moves by the Southern Pacific between Ogden and San Francisco?

A. No, sir.

Q. How many all-rail lines are competing in Atlantic seaboard business for the all-rail movement of that business? Can you name some of the principal lines?

A. There are seven trunk lines from New York to Chicago that are working for it; all of the Iowa lines working via Chicago and Omaha or Kansas City, and also from St. Louis to Kansas City, and all of the rail lines working from the Missouri River to San Francisco. Combining them, altogether there are quite a number.

Q. That is an extremely active and persistent state of 512 competition, is it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is it to the interest of the Southern Pacific Company, in the event that it is unable to procure the long haul by way of the Morgan line, to have that freight move through the Chicago gateway and by way of Ogden to California?

A. Yes.

Q. Why is it to the interest of the Southern Pacific to have it move that way?

A. In order to get the haul on the business from Ogden to San Francisco.

Q. And that is against the adverse and competitive movement of the same freight by the Santa Fe out of Chicago, or by the Missouri Pacific and its affiliated lines through the St. Louis gateway, is it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The American-Hawaiian Line is an all-water line, practically, is it not, from New York to San Francisco?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is that line in active competition, and has it been for some time, as well with the all-rail lines that you mentioned as with the Sunset line of the Southern Pacific?

A. It is.

Q. Does that competition promise to become, if anything, more active in the future?

A. If they get more boats; yes, sir.

Q. Are there any other water lines out of New York soliciting Atlantic seaboard business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Please name them.

A. All-water?

Q. If there are any all-water, name them.

A. An all-water line is the Luckenbach Steamship Company, and W. R. Grace & Company.

Q. Between what ports?

A. Between New York and San Francisco and other Pacific ports. The Mallory Line of steamers between New York and Galveston, and the A., T. & S. F.

Q. The Mallory Line, in connection with the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe, is a mixed water and rail service by way of the Gulf, is it not?

A. Yes.

Q. So that there are two competing mixed rail and water services from and to Atlantic seaboard territory via the Gulf of Mexico?

A. Yes.

Q. Namely, the Mallory Line with its rail connections, and the Morgan Line with its rail connections?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is there any Atlantic seaboard business moving by all-rail through New Orleans or any other southern gateway to California?

A. Some; yes.

Q. What is the southern gateway through which it moves?

A. It moves sometimes through Shreveport, sometimes through Dennison, and it also moves through New Orleans direct.

Q. Is that business relatively considerable?

A. I could not give you any idea of the tonnage that moves.

Q. No; I am simply asking you if it is relatively considerable. I mean, relatively to the takings of the all-rail trunk lines and the mixed rail and water service by the Gulf.

A. No.

515 Q. Why?

A. Because I do not think they can make the same time rail as they are making by the Morgan Line. In other words, it ta the all-rail line longer to get to New Orleans with their freight.

Q. It is not a practicable or a reasonable method of doing business?

A. Oh, yes; they are doing quite some business that way.

Q. But it is relatively inconsiderable, measured up against takings of these through transportation routes?

A. Yes.

Mr. DUNNE. That is all.

Redirect examination by Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. Have you any knowledge of the tonnage carried by the Mall Line as compared with the tonnage carried by the Sunset from N York to California, and the reverse?

A. We have no records at all. The only way I can tell is thro the solicitation. There is a good deal more business moves by Morgan Line and Southern Pacific than by the Mallory Line the Santa Fe.

516 Q. Is the Mallory Line exclusively Santa Fe on Califo business, or is it an independent line?

A. The bulk of the California business moves by the Santa Fe do not think there is hardly any moves by any other line.

Q. That is, you mean the bulk of the Mallory Line business?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know whether any of it moves in connection with Texas & Pacific?

A. We seldom hear of any moving by way of the Mallory L and the Texas & Pacific.

RALPH MILLER JOHNSON was called as a witness on behalf of petitioner, and being duly sworn testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. What is your name?

A. Ralph Miller Johnson.

Q. And your residence?

A. New York.

517 Q. And your address?

A. 57 West Forty-eighth Street.

Q. What is your occupation, Mr. Johnson?

A. General eastern agent of the Chicago & North Western R road.

Q. How long have you occupied that position?

A. Seven years.

Q. What railroad experience had you had prior to that, and where located?

A. I have had a varied experience—from bill clerk, station agent, traveling agent, general agent, general eastern agent, twenty years, of which eleven years have been in the seaboard territory.

Q. So far as the interests of California business are concerned, where do the lines of the Chicago & North Western run?

A. Between Chicago and Omaha.

Q. What are your duties in your present position?

A. To try to secure as much freight as we can for our system lines. I speak of "our system"; it is the Chicago, St. Paul, Minne-518 apolis & Omaha as well as the Chicago & North Western.

Q. To shorten this: Have you heard the direct examination and the cross-examination of Mr. De Friest, just completed?

A. I have.

Q. Do you agree with the testimony that he has given on direct and cross-examination?

A. Absolutely.

Mr. McCLENNEN. That is all.

Cross-examination by Mr. DUNNE:

Q. Just one question: What is the mileage haul of your company involved in the transportation between the Atlantic seaboard and California?

A. About 500 miles.

Q. What is the mileage haul involved in the Southern Pacific link in that through line between Ogden and California?

A. I can not say offhand.

Q. I will not press that question, because the record shows it.

519 WILLIAM W. HALL was called as a witness on behalf of the petitioner, and being duly sworn testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. What is your name?

A. William W. Hall.

Q. And your residence?

A. Cranford, New Jersey.

Q. What is your address?

A. 117 Cranford Avenue.

Q. What is your occupation, Mr. Hall?

A. General agent of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad.

Q. How long have you occupied that position?

A. Four years.

Q. Located in New York City?

A. Yes.

Q. What railroad experience had you prior to that?

A. New England freight and passenger agent for three and a half years in Boston.

Q. Of the same line?

520 A. Yes, sir. General agent of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad at Chicago for four years prior to that. General agent at Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Cincinnati prior to that. Before that traffic freight agent.

Q. Your duties at the present time cover what territory?

A. East of Oswego, Syracuse, and to Scranton and Wilkes-Barre, with a line then drawn through Trenton, north of that to the seaboard, and Hudson River north and south. I have nothing to do with New England.

Q. Within that territory your duty is to get such business as you can for the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. As far as affects Atlantic seaboard-California business, where do the lines of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul run?

A. Chicago to Omaha and Council Bluffs.

Q. You have heard the testimony just given by Mr. De Friest and Mr. Johnson this morning?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you agree with the testimony on direct examination and cross-examination that they have given as expressing your 521 understanding of the situation?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. McCLENNEN. That is all.

Cross-examination by Mr. DUNNE:

Q. What is your mileage between Chicago and Omaha?

A. 491 miles, I believe.

Mr. DUNNE. That is all.

(Whereupon an adjournment was taken until to-morrow, Wednesday, September 30, 1914, at 10.30 o'clock a. m.)

522 SEVENTH DAY.

ROOM 720, CUSTOM HOUSE,
New York City, September 30, 1914.

Before Special Examiner Frank R. Hanna.

Present on behalf of the United States: Mr. Orr, Mr. McClennen and Mr. Gann.

Present on behalf of the defendants: Mr. Herrin, Mr. Blair, and Mr. Dune, for the Southern Pacific Company, et al.

Mr. McCLENNEN. The petitioner puts in evidence as Exhibit No. 33 memoranda prepared by Mr. J. C. Stubbs for use in the case of the United States against the Union Pacific Railroad Company, and introduced in that case June 11, 1908, and appearing at printed page 3397, showing the method used to divide (distribute) transcontinental freight rates as between the different connecting roads between certain points shown in the memoranda, it being agreed by counsel that these memoranda, subject to corrections, may be deemed as duly proved.

(The memoranda referred to was thereupon marked "Petitioner's Exhibit No. 33, September 30, 1914", and will be found in the volume of petitioner's exhibits.)

523 Mr. McCLENNEN. It is agreed by counsel for petitioner and counsel for defendants that for the purpose of showing at any time the statutory law of the State of California, both as to public acts, private acts, general acts, or special acts, or the absence of any such acts, the printed volumes of such laws may be referred to and deemed to be in evidence, so far as material, without any further proof.

Saving the question of materiality, it is agreed by counsel for petitioner and counsel for defendants that Exhibit No. 17, the certified copy of the record of the meeting of April 12, 1898, of the stockholders of the Central Pacific Railroad Company shall have the same force and effect in evidence as the original record of that meeting shown on the books of the company would have, subject to correction if the original be found and any errors in the copy be shown to exist.

The petitioner puts in evidence as Exhibit No. 34 a statement prepared under the supervision of counsel for defendants, at the request of counsel for petitioner, of earnings and expenses of property leased from the Central Pacific Railroad Company by the Southern Pacific Company from January 1, 1888, to June 30, 1913.

524 (The statement referred to was thereupon marked "Petitioner's Exhibit No. 34, September 30, 1914", and will be found in the volume of petitioner's exhibits.)

Mr. McCLENNEN. The petitioner puts in evidence as Exhibit No. 35 a statement prepared under the supervision of counsel for defendants, at the request of counsel for petitioner, of gross operating income, operating expenses and net operating income of the Central Pacific Railroad Company and Central Pacific Railway Company, respectively, for the fiscal years ending December 31, 1880, 1883, 1888, 1893, and June 30, 1899, 1901, and 1913.

(The statement referred to was thereupon marked "Petitioner's Exhibit No. 35, September 30, 1914," and will be found in the volume of petitioner's exhibits.)

Mr. McCLENNEN. The petitioner puts in evidence as Exhibit No. 36 a statement prepared under the supervision of counsel for defendants, at the request of counsel for petitioner, of the operating income, operating expenses and net operating income of the Southern Pacific Company and of the proprietary lines, both in respect to lines leased and not leased, for the fiscal years ending December 31, 1893, June 30, 1899, June 30, 1901, and June 30, 1913.

525 (The statement referred to was thereupon marked "Petitioner's Exhibit No. 36, September 30, 1914", and will be found in the volume of petitioner's exhibits.)

Mr. McCLENNEN. The petitioner puts in evidence as Exhibit No. 37 a statement prepared under the supervision of counsel for defendants, at the request of counsel for petitioner, of the expenses of the Central Pacific Railroad Company and Central Pacific Railway Company, respectively, for maintenance of way and structures for the years 1887 to 1901, inclusive.

(The statement referred to was thereupon marked "Petitioner's Exhibit No. 37, September 30, 1914", and will be found in the volume of petitioner's exhibits.)

Mr. McCLENNEN. The petitioner puts in evidence as Exhibit No. 38 a statement prepared under the supervision of counsel for defendants, at the request of counsel for petitioner, of the expenditures for maintenance of way and structures on the lines of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company and connecting through lines in Texas and Louisiana to New Orleans, making up the through Sunset Route from San Francisco, for the years 1887 to 1901, inclusive.

526 (The statement referred to was thereupon marked "Petitioner's Exhibit No. 38, September 30, 1914", and will be found in the volume of petitioner's exhibits.)

Mr. McCLENNEN. The petitioner puts in evidence as Exhibit No. 39 a statement prepared under the supervision of counsel for defendants, at the request of counsel for petitioner, of the expenditures for additions and betterments, not including expenditures for construction of new lines, of the Central Pacific Railroad Company and Central Pacific Railway Company, respectively, from January 1, 1887, to June 30, 1901, inclusive.

(The statement referred to was thereupon marked "Petitioner's Exhibit No. 39, September 30, 1914", and will be found in the volume of petitioner's exhibits.)

Mr. McCLENNEN. Petitioner puts in evidence as Exhibit No. 40 a statement prepared under the supervision of counsel for defendants at the request of counsel for petitioner, of expenditures for additions and betterments, not including expenditures for construction of new lines, on the Southern Pacific Railroad Company's lines and on connecting through lines in Texas and Louisiana to New Or-527 leans, making up the through Sunset Route to San Francisco, from March 1, 1885, to June 30, 1901, inclusive.

(The statement referred to was thereupon marked "Petitioner's Exhibit No. 40, September 30, 1914", and will be found in the volume of petitioner's exhibits.)

Mr. McClennen. The petitioner puts in evidence as Exhibit No. 41—which, by agreement of counsel for defendants, may be taken as duly proved, subject to correction if errors be found—a statement of dividends declared and paid by the Central Pacific Railroad Company and the Central Pacific Railway Company, respectively, from 1861 to 1913, and compiled, as to the period prior to 1887, from the statement of E. H. Miller, Jr., then secretary of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, as set forth in 5 Pacific Railway Commission Report, page 2547; and, as to the period subsequent thereto, from the annual reports of the Central Pacific Railroad Company to the Interstate Commerce Commission.

528 Mr. McClennen. The petitioner puts in evidence as Exhibit No. 42, a list prepared under the supervision of counsel for defendants, at the request of counsel for petitioner, of the dates of opening for operation of the various portions of the Central Pacific Railroad and Southern Pacific Railroad and subsidiary lines, to the extent appearing on the exhibit, and subject to correction if any error appears to have been made.

(The list referred to was thereupon marked "Petitioner's Exhibit No. 42, September 30, 1914", and will be found in the volume of petitioner's exhibits.)

(Whereupon the taking of testimony in this cause was adjourned to Wednesday, October 7, 1914, at two o'clock p. m., at the Federal Building, Chicago, Ill.)

529 EIGHTH DAY.

Room 606, Federal Building,
Chicago, Ill., October 7, 1914.

Before Special Examiner Frank R. Hanna.

Present on behalf of the United States: Mr. Orr, Mr. McClennen, and Mr. Gann.

Present on behalf of the defendants: Mr. Herrin, Mr. Blair, and Mr. Dunne, for the Southern Pacific Company, et al.

Mr. McClennen. The petitioner puts in evidence as Exhibits Nos. 43 to 58, inclusive, tonnage and revenue statements covering freight between different points therein stated and prepared under the supervision of counsel for defendants at the request of counsel for petitioner.

Mr. BLAIR. Counsel for defendants reserve the right to make any objections to which, in their opinion, these exhibits may be subject when the same are ready to be filed.

(The statements referred to were thereupon marked, respectively, "Petitioner's Exhibit No. 43, October 7, 1914", to "Petitioner's Exhibit No. 58, October 7, 1914", and will be found in the volume of petitioner's exhibits.)

530 Mr. MCCLENNEN. The petitioner puts in evidence as "Petitioner's Exhibit No. 59" the copy certified by the Assistant Secretary of the Interior of the acceptance by the Central Pacific Railroad Company of the act of July 1, 1862.

(The copy referred to was thereupon marked "Petitioner's Exhibit No. 59, October 7, 1914", and will be found in the volume of petitioner's exhibits.)

Mr. MCCLENNEN. The petitioner puts in evidence as "Petitioner's Exhibit No. 60" a copy certified by the Assistant Secretary of the Interior of the acceptance by the Union Pacific Railroad Company of the act of July 1, 1862.

(The copy referred to was thereupon marked "Petitioner's Exhibit No. 60, October 7, 1914", and will be found in the volume of petitioner's exhibits.)

Mr. MCCLENNEN. The petitioner puts in evidence as "Petitioner's Exhibit No. 61" a photograph of a certificate of stock of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, and it should be noted that the original certificate from which this is photographed has at the bottom lines such as are made by cutting off with scissors.

Mr. BLAIR. Have you any objection to stating the purpose or the relevancy of that certificate?

Mr. MCCLENNEN. It is offered for the purpose of showing 531 at least among other things, the form of certificate that was issued by the company, which enabled stockholders to receive their dividends by the submission of dividend warrants, without the necessity of obtaining a transfer of stock into their own name on the books of the company, from which it will be argued, among other things, that the ownership of the stock in the company changed at an earlier date than would be shown by the transfer dates appearing on the books of the company into new names; so that the beneficial holders of the stock exceeded in number and differed in name from those appearing on the stock books of the company, in some instances.

(The photograph referred to was thereupon marked "Petitioner's Exhibit No. 61, October 7, 1914", and will be found in the volume of petitioner's exhibits.)

532 BENJAMIN T. BOOZE was called as a witness on behalf of the petitioner, and being duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. Your full name, please?

A. Benjamin T. Booze.

Q. Your residence?

A. Chicago.

Q. And your address?

A. My business address, 608 South Dearborn Street.

Q. You are connected with the Transcontinental Freight Bureau?

A. I am chief clerk of the Transcontinental Freight Bureau, yes.

Q. Some days ago did you receive from counsel for the Government in this case a request directed to Mr. Countiss, joint agent of that bureau, to make investigation for certain original contracts?

A. We did.

Q. And among others so requested were the originals of the 533 contracts of September 28, 1883, of the Trancontinental Association, and November 8, 1883. Have you made an investigation in an effort to see whether you could find those contracts?

A. We did, sir, and could not find them.

Q. You are the official of that bureau who would have access, and the ability to get those contracts, if they were in the possession of the bureau?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The transcontinental Freight Bureau succeeded to the Transcontinental Association?

A. No, sir; not direct. There was a Transcontinental Freight Rate Committee between the two, that existed for about three or four years.

534 Q. So far as the old papers of the Transcontinental Association are still in existence and in normal custody they are, are they not, in the possession of the bureau?

A. What were left; most of them were destroyed, I understand. There are very few of the old Transcontinental Association records with us at the present time.

Q. Your investigation was such as to enable you to say that the bureau has not those originals?

A. Yes; our investigation was such that we know we have not got them.

Q. You were also asked to search for an agreement of October 1st, 1889, between the Transcontinental Association and the Pacific Mail Steamship Company. Did you make an investigation for that?

A. Yes, we did.

Q. Did you find that you had or had not that?

A. We found the original agreement, yes.

Q. Will you let me have that agreement?

A. Yes, sir. [Hands paper to counsel.] The papers showing the date of withdrawal and cancellation of contract are also enclosed with those papers.

535 Mr. McCLENNEN. The petitioner offers in evidence as Exhibit 62 the agreement just referred to by the witness, that is, the agreement between the Transcontinental Association and the Southern Pacific Company and others dated October 1st, 1889.

May it be agreed that instead of the original the present Exhibit No. 24 may be used with the same effect as the original if it proves to be a true copy, and otherwise that the examiner may make a copy and the original be returned to Mr. Booze.

It should be noted that this original contains in pencil along the margin of the first sheet the words "Withdrawn ninety days after September 30, 1902" (which the witness states was intended to be 1892).

It has attached to it by a filing pin a letter of September 30th, 1892, on the letterhead of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, signed W. W. Lane, secretary, acknowledging the receipt of a letter of September 27th from the Transcontinental Association, notifying of termination 90 days after September 30th, 1892, of the agreement between the Transcontinental Association and the Pacific Mail Steamship Company bearing date the 1st day of October, 1889.

There is also attached by the same pin a copy of a letter
536 on the letterhead of the Transcontinental Association, St. Louis, Missouri, dated September 27, 1892, addressed to the Pacific Mail Steamship Company and signed E. P. Vining, chairman of the Transcontinental Association, announcing the intention of that association to terminate in ninety days after September 30th, 1892, all contracts and agreements now in force between the Transcontinental Association and the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, particularly the agreement bearing date of the 1st day of October, 1899.

(The papers referred to were thereupon marked "Petitioner's Exhibit (Booze) No. 62, October 7, 1914", and will be found in the volume of petitioner's exhibits.)

Q. Have you with you any other agreements between the Transcontinental Association and the Pacific Mail Steamship Company discovered by you in the course of the investigation requested by the petitioner?

A. I have only a copy, and our records do not show that this agreement ever went into effect. It is not signed, and it is dated January 1st, 1888. I have another one here that is signed later than that. Our records do not even show that that ever went into effect, the old records there; they do not show that that ever went into effect.

537 Q. The unsigned draft I will return to you. Will you let me have the other contract which you have just referred to, that was signed?

A. That is the one I turned in there, the later [referring to Exhibit 62]. That is the one you asked for, too.

Q. What additional papers have you with you for which we requested a search?

A. Of those you requested we have only the old Transcontinental Association agreement; the only one that could be found that would be located in our records was one dated September 1, 1887, to take effect January 1, 1888, and that is the original document.

Q. May we have that?

A. Yes. [Hands paper to counsel.] That took effect January 1, 1888.

Mr. McClennen. The petitioner puts in evidence as Exhibit 63 the agreement just referred to by the witness, namely, the agreement dated December 1, 1887, between the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railroad Company, the Southern Pacific Company, and the Central Pacific Railroad Company, and numerous other companies; and this agreement has noted in pencil on the first page, "Notice of 538 withdrawal effective 12–31–92."

It is agreed by counsel that after this agreement has been copied into the record the original may be returned to the witness and the copy used with the same effect as the original.

(The paper referred to was thereupon marked "Petitioner's Exhibit No. 63, Booze, October 7, 1914", and will be found in the volume of exhibits.)

By Mr. McClennen:

Q. Did you make this pencil endorsement of withdrawal on this agreement?

A. I did; yes.

Mr. Herrin. And it is correct, is it?

The Witness. Yes; that is correct.

By Mr. McClennen:

Q. When did you make that endorsement?

A. I made it within the last forty-eight hours, since looking over the papers.

Mr. Herrin. You confirmed the fact from your records?

The Witness. Yes.

By Mr. McCLENNEN:

539 Q. Was the pencil endorsement that appears on Exhibit 61 also made by you?

A. Yes; it was.

Q. And when was that made?

A. That was made at the same time; when I was looking for these papers I wrote it on, and it should have been 1892.

Q. Exactly when did you make these endorsements?

A. Let me see, this is Wednesday; it was Monday, if I remember correctly, after receiving you letter. Monday afternoon; that is right. I went through all our records myself and dug them out.

Mr. HERRIN. These endorsements correctly state the time when those contracts were terminated?

The WITNESS. December 31, 1892. One of them I made 1902, which is incorrect.

By Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. Did you consult with anyone in reference to making such endorsement before making it?

A. I did not; our records showed that.

Q. Why did it occur to you at this particular day and year of grace for the first time to make that endorsement?

A. Well, you will notice that Pacific Mail agreement there—I brought you the papers showing that that was withdrawn De-540 cember 31, 1892, and when that was withdrawn I also found papers, part papers, that the Transcontinental Association members had served notice on the association at the same time, or practically the same time, withdrawing from the association.

Q. My question was not directed quite so much to the fact of the endorsement as to why you happened to take this particular occasion to make it. Why was that?

A. Well, actually and truly to familiarize myself with it, as I was going through a great bunch of old papers, and I wanted to put it down there as a statement of fact, so that I would know exactly after I got through.

541 Q. In the inquiry which led to your search was there any request made of you to investigate as to the dates when these agreements were withdrawn or terminated?

A. None whatever; no, sir. It was for my own information that I put that down.

Q. Was it possibly that a native sensitiveness as to the character of the agreements led you to preserve at just this time the evidence of their mortality?

A. Not at all, sir; not at all. I might, by way of explanation, say that I hold a great many records at the Transcontinental Freight Bureau, and to save myself looking over a great many records I put that down as I came to the proper papers, so that I can swear to it that it is correct; and to make myself perfectly satisfied I generally put down in pencil such notations. I go through papers every day down there, you might say—not legal papers, but other papers, rate matters, and so forth.

Q. Was I correct in thinking that you appealed to Mr. Herrin in the hearing here after my request for the production of these papers and before you handed them to me and obtained his gracious approval before actually handing them to me?

542 A. Well, I thought there were probably two parties in a case, and I had not said anything to the other parties, so naturally I wanted to see if it was agreeable to them before I handed them over to you. There are generally two parties to a case, as I understand it.

Mr. ORR. In some cases, but not in this case.

The WITNESS. I may be wrong—absolutely wrong.

Mr. BLAIR. I think possibly you will find that you are right.

Cross-examination by Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Did I ever speak to you on the subject of these papers?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did I ever speak to you in my life before just this time?

A. I think not.

Q. Did I ever see you before, as far as you know?

A. I have seen Mr. Herrin in San Francisco ten years ago or more, but I do not know that you knew me—no; I am sure you did not know me.

Q. For the comfort and assurance of Mr. McClennen, you do mean to say that I never spoke to you on this subject or had any communication with you?

543 A. Absolutely, sir.

Q. And no knowledge of it from you, or communication with you in any way?

A. I did not know that Mr. Herrin was connected with this case at all.

Q. And I was quite indifferent upon the subject?

A. Yes.

Redirect examination by Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. And you have the good judgment to be appreciative of the privation you have suffered in not enjoying Mr. Herrin's acquaintance until to-day?

A. I have.

Mr. HERRIN. But you can not say as much as to Mr. McClennen?

The WITNESS. May I mention that all of these papers were i effect or produced long before Mr. Countiss was agent of the bureau before he was in charge or before I was connected with the bureau so our records are very incomplete, and we understand that the o transcontinental association records, almost all of them, were burn up. We have very few of them. That is why we were able to pr duce so few of the papers.

544 By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. But we may proceed with the understanding and wi the definite assurance that all the agreements between the membe of the Transcontinental Association and all the agreements betwe the association and the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, whatev their date, which are in the possession of the Transcontinent Freight Bureau or its control, have now been produced?

A. Yes, sir; you may rest assured of that.

Mr. MCCLENNEN. That is all.

WILLIAM H. CONNOR was called as a witness on behalf of t petitioner, and being duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. What is your full name?

A. William H. Connor.

Q. And your residence?

A. Wyoming, Ohio.

Q. What is your address?

A. 411 Walnut Street, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Q. What is your occupation?

545 A. General agent of the Union Pacific Railroad Compan

Q. How long have you been connected either with the Uni Pacific or the Southern Pacific Company?

A. I will give you a brief history. My railroad experience start in 1877 as a youngster; and until 1879 I was with the Chicago Alton Railroad as an operator and clerk, ticket agent, bill clerk, various places in those capacities.

September 1, 1879, I went to St. Louis with the St. Louis, Keok & Northwestern Railroad as city ticket agent and clerk. I remain there until the fall of 1880.

I then went to Keokuk, Iowa, as chief clerk in the general freig and passenger office of the same road. I remained in that capaci until May 30, 1887.

I then went to St. Paul and took a position with the St. Pa Minneapolis & Manitoba Railroad in their advertising departme

I remained there until November 30, the same year. Then I wa to Cincinnati, Ohio, and took a position with the Southern Paci Company as contracting freight agent. I continued as contracting freight agent until April 1, 1889, when I succeeded to the 546 position of commercial agent. I continued in that position until August 31, 1901, when the Union and the Southern Pacific offices in Cincinnati were merged.

On September 1 I became general agent of the consolidated offices. I continued as such until January 31, 1912——

Q. Do you mean January 31, 1912?

A. 1913; on which date the Union and Southern Pacific offices were separated. On February 1 I then continued as general agent of the Union Pacific Company, to date.

Q. And located, still, at Cincinnati?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. If I follow you, you have been twenty-seven continuous years located at Cincinnati, first with the Southern Pacific Company and then with the Southern Pacific Company and the Union Pacific Railroad Company, and then with the Union Pacific Railroad Company alone?

A. It will be twenty-seven years the first of the coming December.

Q. Did you, at the petitioner's request, secure and produce this map which I show you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. By whom is that map published?

A. It is published by Mr. L. A. Lowrey, secretary of the 547 Central Freight Association, Chicago. It is an official map of railroad freight classification territories and freight traffic association territories of the United States.

Q. And the various divisions of freight territory, according to their nomenclature among railroad men, are shown upon the face of this map?

A. Yes, sir; divided into Trunk Line, Central Freight Association, and Transcontinental Freight Association, as well as numerous others specifically shown thereon.

Q. On the face of this map have you drawn the division line between the Central Freight Association territory and the Atlantic seaboard territory?

A. Yes; known as the Trunk Line, from a description as published by the Central Freight Association. It is an exact reproduction of their line.

Q. And that is this black line which begins at Niagara Falls on Lake Ontario?

A. Yes.

Q. Passes through Buffalo and irregularly down through Pittsburgh, and irregularly to Kenova, West Virginia?

A. Yes; that is just a little junction point on the river.

548 Q. Apart from that line, the map is as officially published?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. McCLENNEN. The petitioner puts in evidence, as petitioner's Exhibit No. 64, the map just referred to by the witness.

(The map referred to was thereupon marked "Petitioner's Exhibit (Connor) No. 64, October 7, 1914.")

By Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. Will you bound Central Freight Association territory?

A. Yes. It is bounded on the east by a line drawn from and including Buffalo, N. Y., via Erie Railroad, through Dayton to Salamanca, N. Y.; thence via Pennsylvania Railroad through Craydon and Warren to Oil City and Franklin, Pa.; thence via the Pennsylvania Railroad to Parker, Pa.; thence via B. & O. through Washington, Pa., and Wheeling to Bellaire, Ohio; thence via Ohio River to and including Kenova, West Virginia; thence via the C. & O. Railway to Ashland, Charleston, and Gauley, West Virginia, including all points thereon.

On the north by the north route of the Grand Trunk to and including Toronto to Ft. Gratiot, Michigan; thence via the north 549 and west shores of Lake Huron and Lake Michigan to Chicago, including all points located thereon.

On the west by a line from Chicago through Joliet and Streator to Peoria, Illinois; thence via T., P. & W. to East Burlington; thence via the east bank of the Mississippi River to its junction with Ohio River, including all points on above-described line.

On the south by and including points on the north bank of the Ohio River from Cairo, including Louisville to Coal Grove, Ohio, inclusive.

Q. During this time that you have been located at Cincinnati, what has been the territory under your supervision?

A. When I first went to Cincinnati it was pretty much in its primeval state, as far as the territorial lines were concerned. It was the first agency that they had west of New York City, and it had been there but a short time prior to my going to Cincinnati. I think the first territorial line that was issued to the Cincinnati office was May 28, 1889, and it started at Cleveland, including the same; thence west of a line drawn to Akron Valley Junction, and on the line of the C. & M. R. R. to Marietta, including all of those cities; west on the north side of the Ohio River to Cincinnati, Louisville, 550 and in that vicinity, to and including Frankfort, Lexington, and other whiskey shipping points nearby; continuing on the north bank of the Ohio River to the Mississippi River, and thence to and including St. Louis; north to and including Keokuk; thence south of a line drawn to Springfield, Decatur, and Paris, Terra Haute to Indianapolis; thence to Logansport, to a line drawn east of Goshen, Indiana; thence on the line of the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern Railway at Toledo, north to and including Detroit; thence east to and including Cleveland.

That was the first boundary line of the Cincinnati territory, and it was followed by the establishment of agencies in Pittsburgh, St. Louis, and Kansas City, and likewise the readjustment of the territory.

In the original days the New Orleans office looked after territory as far north as the Ohio River. That was all modified when the additional agencies were established; and the final territory that I looked after I could best outline by reading a second circular, if you care to have it; and it was likewise the territory that was reassigned to me by Mr. Stubbs at the time of the merger.

Q. In 1901?

A. In 1901.

Q. And what is that territory?

A. That territory was from Cleveland, Ohio, to Akron by the Pennsylvania Company and Cleveland, Akron & Columbus Railway, including points thereon; thence to Marietta, inclusive, by Baltimore & Ohio and Pensylvania Companies and points thereon; thence to Parkersburg, West Virginia, inclusive, by Baltimore & Ohio, including points thereon; thence an imaginary line to Charleston, West Virginia; thence to Clifton Forge, Virginia, inclusive, via C. & O. Railway, including points thereon; thence points west of Norfolk & Western Railway, Roanoke, West Virginia, and Bristol, Tennessee, not inclusive; thence from the State line of Tennessee and Kentucky to Guthrie, not inclusive; thence following the line of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad to Wabash River, but not including Louisville & Nashville Railroad stations except Evansville, Indiana; thence via Indiana-Illinois State line, including points thereon of Wabash Railroad; then Wabash Railroad, Detroit line, to Ohio-Indiana State line; thence on said line to the intersection of the Michigan State line; thence by Ohio & Michigan State line to, but not including, Toledo; thence via south shore of Lake Erie to Cleveland.

That boundary continued absolutely without a change until July 1, 1910, when we put a representative in the city of Cleveland. The northeastern boundary was modified to the extent that it took about thirty miles east of Cleveland off of the Pittsburgh territory and put it into my territory; but the shipping points east thereof were nothing to speak of. At the same time the city of Toledo at that date was taken out of the Detroit agent's territory and put under my jurisdiction. So that since July 1 I have had the city of Toledo that I did not have from 1901 until 1910.

Mr. DUNNE. July 1 of what year?

The WITNESS. 1910. That was the date that they put Donald Stubbs over there as representative.

Mr. DUNNE. 1910, you say?

The WITNESS. Yes.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. This last long description, apart from the modifications 553 you have mentioned, covers what you customarily call your territory?

A. Yes; known as the Cincinnati territory.

Q. And you call that the Cincinnati territory?

A. Yes, sir; it is so understood.

Q. In speaking of Cincinnati shipments do you use the term as covering that whole territory?

A. Yes; that includes, of course, Cincinnati proper.

Q. You have spoken of your assignment to the joint agency at the time of the merger in 1901?

A. Yes.

Q. At that time were you furnished by the Southern Pacific Company and the Union Pacific Railroad Company with a statement of the proportional income to the combined companies on freight moved through the different gateways?

A. Yes, sir; through New Orleans and Missouri River channels.

Q. Is this paper which you have before you the statement?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. MCCLENNEN. The petitioner puts in evidence as Exhibit 65 the statement thus referred to.

Mr. BLAIR. We object to it as incompetent, immaterial, and irrelevant to any issue in this cause.

554 (The statement referred to was thereupon marked "Petitioner's Exhibit No. 65, Connor, October 7, 1914", and will be found in the book of exhibits.)

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. Did you, in the course of your business, have prepared a statement showing the movement of freight from the Cincinnati territory via the Sunset Route?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you that paper before you?

A. Yes, sir; I have.

Q. When was that paper prepared?

A. At the close of our business in 1899.

Q. For what purpose?

A. It was for the purpose of submitting to my immediate superior, and likewise keeping a record in the office for my own benefit of the business we were doing.

Mr. McCLENNEN. The petitioner puts in evidence as Exhibit 66 the statement just referred to.

Mr. BLAIR. We object to that statement as incompetent and immaterial evidence and irrelevant to any issue in this cause.

(The statement referred to was thereupon marked "Petitioner's Exhibit No. 66, Connor, October 7, 1914", and will be found in the volume of exhibits.)

By Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. This statement, I understand, was made under your supervision as a part of your ordinary business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Let me make sure that we clearly understand what it covers. This first page, am I right, states the number of carloads moving from your territory via New Orleans and the Sunset Route to all territories?

A. To California and other territories.

Q. And the figures indicate the number of carloads a month that moved from your territory in this way in each month of the years 1890 to 1899, inclusive?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. This does not include the movement of freight into your territory, does it?

A. No, sir; outbound only.

Q. Am I right in understanding that this second sheet shows the same carloads which appear on the first sheet, only, instead of being arranged by months they are arranged by destination points and for the several years?

A. Destination points and States; destination points in California; and the others are by States.

Q. For instance, this second page means that 659 carloads moved in 1890 to California points, including therein a few cars to Oregon and Nevada, and 702 cars moved to Texas, New Mexico, and other southern points?

A. Southwestern points.

Q. And, in the same way, in the year 1898, for instance, from your territory there moved to California, Oregon, and Nevada 1,942 cars via the Sunset, and to Texas, New Mexico, and other southern points 35 cars?

A. Yes.

Q. During that period, 1890 to 1899, or, for convenience, from 1889 to the fall of 1901, did you have any records showing the movement of freight from your territory to California points by any line other than New Orleans and the Sunset Route?

A. No, sir.

557 Q. In the course of your business did you have occasion to investigate the quantity of freight moving from your territory which did not pass over the Sunset Route?

A. In my general solicitation I went against and became acquainted with more or less freight that I could not get over the Sunset Route that I lost.

Q. From your general knowledge of the situation, in charge of that office, what percentage, as nearly as you can state it, of the freight from your territory to California points, total freight, moved via New Orleans and the Sunset Route?

A. I believe it reached as high as 65 per cent.

Q. During the period from 1889 to the fall of 1901 were you in charge of all the solicitation in your territory for the Southern Pacific Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was the policy which you and the solicitors under you carried out with reference to the routing of traffic from California points to your territory?

A. We devoted our exclusive time and attention to the securing of that freight for our New Orleans gateway. We bent every 558 effort with everybody that could lend any assistance. Our receiving agents and solicitors in California, if it was controlled there, were notified and appealed to for assistance. If the control rested at Chicago, St. Louis, Pittsburgh, New York, or any other point we went after it through our representative there. If it was controlled in my territory I looked out for it there, and we all pulled together all the time and worked every means known to influence and secure that shipment for the Sunset Route. We never let up until the shipment was on and the cars moving.

Q. What was the method of movement to the New Orleans gateway?

A. Principally the Queen & Crescent. They were considered our first connection, and at times we used the Louisville & Nashville, and at other times the Illinois Central, and at times all three.

Q. When you use the expression "New Orleans gateway", you have reference to what?

A. The Sunset Route of the Southern Pacific Company, absolutely.

Q. What, if any, effort was expended by you or the representatives of the Southern Pacific Company toward getting freight from your territory through Ogden?

A. None whatever. We looked upon the gateway, or at least the connections up to Ogden, and other connections east of the Missouri River as competitors of the Sunset Route, and so treated them and they have so treated us.

Q. What were the methods pursued in solicitation in your territory? What was done to get the shippers to ship via the Sunset Route through New Orleans?

A. Well, I think the Southern Pacific was a very powerful road, and I think they were looked upon as such by the receivers in California and by the shippers in that territory, and we cultivated them; we tried to do everything we could for their interest and build up their confidence in our road. We traced their freight, we gave them reports on its movement and route, and in that way we kept them more than satisfied. And, again, the Southern Pacific Company in California is a very influential road. If there were any new industries or industrials being located out there, if they were on local territory requiring sidings the Southern Pacific Company naturally had to put them in. If they were around the city, around the Bay of San Francisco, and needed any sidings the Southern Pacific had to put them in. If there was any material to be moved from the east to complete these industrials and plants it was one of the first things our Southern Pacific solicitors did, to see that the business was routed to the greatest extent by our long haul.

Q. What was done in that period with reference to rates?

A. Well, there were times during that period when the rate situation was not altogether on a tariff basis. In other words, there was manipulation, manipulation resulting in—if I can so express it—pure and simple cutting of rates, and at the same time the Southern Pacific Company was never the instigator of any of the cut rates.

Q. What did it do, if anything, with reference to meeting rates when cut by their competitors to Ogden?

A. When we found that the cut-rate situation was on we made use of our position and then met it. We felt that we were justified in any cut rates we ever made.

Q. To be specific, suppose that the Southern Pacific Company learned that A B, a shipper in Cincinnati, had shipped a carload via Ogden to California; what was the ordinary course? What did you do?

A. We would immediately notify our Pacific coast representatives, if it was controlled there, to prevail on that consignee to change to the Sunset Route.

Q. Suppose the routing was controlled by the consignor in your territory?

A. I should leave nothing undone to secure that business and have it changed to the Sunset Route. Failing to do so I would look upon it as lost and so would my superiors at that time.

Q. Was anything done by way of furnishing any special equipment in your territory for use through New Orleans and over the Sunset Route to California?

A. In the early nineties there were built by the Southern Pacific Company—I believe the exact number was, oh, fifty, or between 50 and 60—buggy cars, cars for the accommodation of buggies and furniture, of special dimensions to better accommodate that class of trade. Those cars were put into Ohio and Cincinnati trade exclusively through our New Orleans gateway. The cars were placed at my special disposal. If I needed any such equipment, I would have the Queen & Crescent place a requisition upon the Southern Pacific Company at New Orleans for the cars. They would be moved to Cincinnati and there held subject to distribution on my order.

562 That same applied with the Louisville & Nashville road, and in turn the equipment was placed by me at various manufacturing points and firms for return loading through the New Orleans gateway.

563 Q. During this period was freight moving from California via New Orleans to your territory?

A. Yes.

Q. In what volume?

A. In the season it was quite heavy volume. What I mean by "season" is that in the fall and early winter there was a very heavy movement of such products as canned fruits, dried fruits, lima beans, dried fish, and that class of commodities. Wine, likewise, was a heavy commodity.

Q. When you came into charge of the joint office of the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific in Cincinnati on the 1st of September, 1901, was there any change in the policy laid down or carried out by you?

A. Yes; there was quite a radical change.

Q. What was the change?

A. Shortly after the consolidation instructions were issued to the effect that a line was drawn from Cincinnati following the Ohio River down to the Mississippi River at Cairo; that the points thereon and south thereof should be worked preferentially by the New Orleans gateway. Secondly, by the Missouri River and Union Pacific—Ogden gateway. All territory north of that line for 564 points in California were to be worked preferentially by the Union Pacific from the Missouri River through Ogden, by Southern Pacific Company to what we would call central California; points north of Mojave; and for territory south of Mojave, southern California, it would be Union Pacific and Salt Lake route to Los Angeles.

Q. Do you happen to bear in mind when the Salt Lake route was opened?

A. No; I haven't got the exact year. I think it was 1905 or 1906.

Q. Prior to those instructions of the fall of 1901, had you ever received any instructions to favor the Ogden gateway primarily on any freight, or secondarily on any freight?

A. No; we had not; we did not look upon the Ogden gateway, for my territory, as one that was to receive any of that business that could possibly be influenced through New Orleans.

Q. Have you a memorandum of various mileages affecting your territory?

A. Yes.

Q. Was that made up by you?

A. Yes; by my assistant, and checked over by me.

Q. And it is correct, is it?

A. Yes; that represents the short lines.

Q. The short line mileages?

665 A. Yes.

Mr. McCLENNEN. The petitioner puts in evidence, as petitioner's Exhibit No. 67, this table of mileages just referred to.

(The table referred to was thereupon marked "Petitioner's Exhibit (Connor) No. 67, October 7, 1914", and will be found in the volume of petitioner's exhibits.)

By Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. What is the natural and best route between your territory on the east and points in Nevada and California north of Mojave and Tehachapi on the west?

A. I would consider the channel to Chicago, any one of the various lines leading west to Council Bluffs; thence the Union Pacific to Ogden, and Southern Pacific Company to destination.

Q. Do I understand you that you are not aware of what company owned the rails west of Ogden?

A. I know that the Central Pacific line extending from Ogden to California is owned and operated by the Southern Pacific Company; that is the general knowledge I have.

Q. And in describing the line west of Ogden, is that the line which you mean?

666 A. That would be the Central Pacific line to California destinations.

Q. What is the comparative mileage to San Francisco, for instance, from Cincinnati via that line, and via the Sunset Line?

A. In round numbers, about 800 miles longer via New Orleans than via Omaha and Ogden to San Francisco.

Q. Looking at your table, exactly how many miles is it by the short rail line from Cincinnati to San Francisco?

A. To be exact, it is 764 miles shorter from Cincinnati to San Francisco via the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad to Chicago; Chicago & Northwestern to Omaha; Union Pacific to Ogden, and Southern Pacific Company to San Francisco, making a total of 2,559 miles, as against Queen & Crescent, Cincinnati to New Orleans, 836 miles; New Orleans to San Francisco, 2,487 miles; total, 3,323 miles, the difference being 764 miles.

Q. Put in another way, after the freight has traveled 836 miles to get down to New Orleans, how much nearer to San Francisco is it than it was when it started?

A. Seventy-two miles.

567 Q. Mr. Gann calls to my attention that the term "Queen & Crescent" needs some explanation. What is the Queen & Crescent?

A. The Queen & Crescent is known as the Cincinnati Southern, Cincinnati to Chattanooga; Alabama Great Southern, Chattanooga to Meridian; and New Orleans and Northeastern, from Meridian to New Orleans. They compose the Queen & Crescent.

Q. Have you prepared a statement of the California carloads moving from your territory via New Orleans and Sunset Route, and via the Union Pacific and Central Pacific route, since September 1, 1901?

A. Yes.

Q. Is this the statement?

A. Yes.

Q. Was that made up under your supervision?

A. Yes; that is correct.

Q. When?

A. It has been compiled from year to year during 1901, 1902, 1903, 1904, 1905, 1906, and 1907.

Q. Does that correctly state the carloads going from your territory by those two routes?

568 A. Yes; and when I say "year", I wish to state that the year commenced on the date of the consolidation of my offices, September 1, 1901, which would be twelve months to September 1, 1902. Those were the twelve month periods which this represents.

Mr. DUNNE. From September to September?

The WITNESS. Yes; that is the way I made up my year.

Mr. McCLENNEN. This statement just referred to the petitioner puts in evidence as Exhibit No. 68.

(The statement referred to was thereupon marked "Petitioner's Exhibit (Connor) No. 68, October 7, 1914", and will be found in the volume of petitioner's exhibits.)

By Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. Am I right in understanding that the first figure under the date in each column represents the number of carloads going from your territory via Ogden?

A. Yes.

Q. And the figure under it the number of carloads going from your territory via New Orleans and Sunset Route?

A. Via New Orleans and the other Texas junctions of the Sunset Route.

Q. It would make it all inclusive if I said going from your territory via El Paso to California, would it?

569 A. Yes.

Q. For instance, the year beginning September 1, 1905, there moved out of your territory via Union Pacific and Central Pacific 4,243 cars and via the Sunset Route 830 cars?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you any figures showing the eastbound tonnage?

A. No, sir.

Q. What can you say, from your general knowledge, as to the extent of it?

A. It was very heavy in seasons from central and northern California points. When the fruit and hop and wine season was on it was heavy by the Sunset Route.

Q. Have you a statement showing the number of carloads moving from your territory to California during the calendar year 1912?

A. Yes; I have it before me.

Q. Was that prepared under your supervision?

A. Yes.

Q. Does that correctly set forth the movement?

A. It does.

Mr. McCLENNEN. This statement just referred to petitioner 570 puts in evidence as Exhibit No. 69.

(The statement referred to was thereupon marked "Petitioner's Exhibit (Connor) No. 69, October 7, 1914", and will be found in the volume of petitioner's exhibits.)

By Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. Am I right that this shows that there moved to California via the Union Pacific from your territory in the year 1912, 2,356 cars?

A. Yes.

Q. Via El Paso or Deming, 1,239 cars?

A. Yes.

Q. Via New Orleans or Shreveport, 671 cars?

A. Yes.

Q. And via other junctions, enough to make up 4,647 cars?

A. Yes.

Q. And otherwise stating those same figures, 2,356 cars moved Union Pacific?

A. Yes.

Q. And 2,291 cars moved Southern Pacific Company and not through Ogden?

A. Yes.

Q. El Paso means delivery to the Southern Pacific Company at El Paso?

571 A. The Southern Pacific system at El Paso; yes.

Q. Deming means delivery to the Southern Pacific system at Deming, New Mexico?

A. Yes. That is another junction with the Santa Fe.

Q. New Orleans means the regular Southern Pacific route through New Orleans?

A. Yes.

Q. Shreveport means what?

A. Houston, East & West Texas down to Houston; thence Southern Pacific Company, the Houston, East & West Texas being part of the Atlantic system of the Southern Pacific Company, so considered.

Q. How many different commodities are there moving from your territory from time to time to California points in large quantities?

A. Oh, the carload commodities are very numerous and extensive; a great variety of commodities from my territory, one hundred or more carload propositions, and a multiplicity of less than carload commodities—innumerable.

Q. Since February 1, 1913, you have worked exclusively for the Ogden gateway on all California freight from your territory?

572 A. Yes.

Q. Have you a memorandum of carloads of freight from your territory moving to California recently in carload lots?

A. Yes.

Q. Was that made up under your supervision?

A. Directly so; yes.

Q. And does that correctly state the movement?

A. Yes.

Q. This, I understand you, includes things moving only in carload lots?

A. Yes; the carload proposition only.

Mr. McCLENNEN. The statement just referred to petitioner puts in evidence as Exhibit No. 70.

(The statement referred to was thereupon marked "Petitioner's Exhibit (Connor) No. 70, October 7, 1914", and will be found in the volume of petitioner's exhibits.)

By Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. This statement which you had before you when answering a moment ago, Exhibit 70, I understand you is west bound only?

A. West bound only.

Q. This first column indicates the commodity?

573 A. Yes.

Q. And the numbers in the three columns indicate the number of carloads of that commodity moving in carload lots from your territory to California in July, August, and September, of 1914?

A. Yes.

Q. And the last column is merely the total of the three?

A. Yes.

Q. You now have no direct statistics, I assume, as to the movement of freight from your territory via New Orleans?

A. No, sir.

Q. From your general knowledge of the business in your territory, can you state with any certainty what is now moving via New Orleans and Southern Pacific Company to California from Cincinnati, and via the various routes to El Paso and thence Southern Pacific Company to California?

A. From Cincinnati and Ohio River points and south thereof there is a good business and it is quite extensive in tonnage in the aggregate, and is represented by a great many carloads. I know that from past experience in working the New Orleans gateway, as well as my efforts at present to secure it for the Union Pacific, and 574 I know that the volume that is going through New Orleans is of quite some moment.

Q. In the period 1889 to 1901 did you have any knowledge as to Southern Pacific Company solicitation as to movement of freight from Pittsburgh to New Orleans and thence to California?

A. I had this knowledge, that as to every carload of freight that was forwarded from Pittsburgh, routed through Cincinnati or Louisville to New Orleans en route to California, our Pittsburgh agent advised me of it with a view of having it expedited through my territory and the city of Cincinnati en route to New Orleans. I had occasion to report to the Pittsburgh agency the arrival and passing of that carload at Cincinnati and reported to our New Orleans office in turn its arrival and passing Cincinnati en route to New Orleans.

Q. How did the tonnage passing that way from Pittsburgh territory to California compare with the tonnage from your territory during the same period?

A. It was much heavier, in my judgment.

575 Mr. DUNNE. What period are you speaking of?

Mr. MCCLENNEN. 1889 to 1901.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. Can you inform us whether or not the rails from California via the Central Pacific, the Union Pacific, and eastern connections to Cincinnati are naturally competitive with those via the Sunset Route—New Orleans and thence to Cincinnati—using "competitive" in the sense of ability to carry freight between common territories?

A. They are decidedly competitive westbound, and I believe they are also eastbound, but not so much.

Q. With the rails of the Central Pacific Railroad and the rails of the Southern Pacific Railroad both under the control of the Southern Pacific Company, as you have observed it from year to year in business, has there been competition between the Central Pacific and the Southern Pacific, the one against the other, to get that business?

A. Not in all my experience working straight Southern Pacific Company there was not.

Q. What are a few of the important commodities moving in large quantity from your territory to California?

A. A commodity called Crisco——

576 Mr. DUNNE. What is Crisco?

The WITNESS. A substitute for lard, used in cooking, manufactured by Procter & Gamble Company in Cincinnati. It is a vegetable product, a by-product of cotton-seed oil. Whiskey, automobile trucks, plate steel, galvanized iron, packing-house products, tin cans, automobiles, street cars, machinery, furniture, tile, paper, iron pipe, canned goods, wire, lamp chimneys, belting, fruit jars, bridge iron, road rollers——

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. I will interrupt you. It is not necessary to make it comprehensive. What would the annual tonnage from your territory to California which you could and did secure either for the Southern via the Sunset line or the Union amount to?

A. I can answer that two ways. Take lean years and it would be much less than when business was good; but I think we have handled as high as 200,000 tons—175,000 to 200,000 tons of stuff, all commodities, in a real good year.

Q. Do you have in mind what the average total revenue per ton would be on the freight moving from your territory to California points?

A. No, sir; I could not answer that with sufficient accuracy to go on record. It is a matter that I never handled in my office, as to the earnings of the commodities that moved.

Q. Take the territory in California north of the Tehachapi on the one hand and your territory on the other: If the freight was not artificially controlled by one route or the other by solicitation or otherwise, how much of it would naturally pass through the Ogden gateway and how much of it through New Orleans?

A. From the territories outlined I believe if you were to eliminate all solicitation on the coast as well as in the eastern territories that inside of three years, by allowing the freight to seek its own channel—and I mean by that the routings over which it would be best cared for—I venture to say that 75 per cent of it would go through the Ogden gateway to Cincinnati territory.

Q. And how much over the Atchison or through New Orleans?

A. I think the other 25 per cent would then flow through the Atchison, Western Pacific, and the El Paso and New Orleans gateways.

Q. When did the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railroad become an important factor in the freight business between Central California and points east of the Missouri River?

A. If I remember correctly they went into San Francisco over their own rails about 1898 or 1899. That is subject to correction. And immediately thereafter they became quite an important factor in the westbound California traffic, but never to the degree that the Southern Pacific has been.

Q. It has appeared already in the record that the date to which we refer is May, 1899. Prior to that date what effect did the Atchison have upon the central or northern California freight and your territory?

A. By our system of checking up any car or cars that the Santa Fe have it was not very flattering to the agent in charge of the territory to let any single car even go on to the Santa Fe as far as Mojave. The Fe immediately proceeded to issue adverse routing advice of cars delivered to the Southern Pacific at Mojave, and we would proceed to immediately look after the shipper, if it was controlled in the east, and they did the same in the west, to see that the thing was not repeated.

Q. Do you know over what route the peculiarly valuable freight from San Francisco, such as silks and teas from the Orient, now moves?

A. I do not care to and can not, from my own knowledge and belief, answer that question. There is no silk coming into my territory, and what I know about it is, necessarily, hearsay.

Q. Do you know about the fruit traffic?

A. The deciduous fruits?

Q. Yes.

A. No.

Q. Do you know about the citrus fruits?

A. No. It is a commodity, I might say, that is never solicited by the local representatives in the eastern territory. To my knowledge and information it is a proposition that is controlled in the West very largely by the originating points of the business.

Q. In your connection with the business prior to 1901 did you observe any discrimination by the Southern Pacific Company against the Union Pacific Railroad on those commodities which could be influenced or controlled via the Sunset Route?

A. The same adverse routing reports that I mentioned in connection with the Santa Fe at Mojave were issued on freight reaching the Union Pacific at Ogden, and we were expected to look after 580 and treat it as a lost proposition and to see if we could not get the futures for the longer haul, the Sunset.

Q. Was this occasional or systematic?

A. Systematic.

Q. Was it on the occurrence of observing particular shipments, or was it preconcerted?

A. Preconcerted.

Q. How long, as you observed it, stated in terms of months or years, did that systematic and preconcerted discrimnation continue?

A. It continued up to the consolidation of the Union and Southern Pacific officers and railroads.

Q. By what methods was this systematic and preconcerted discrimination against the Union Pacific carried out?

A. On the arrival of the car, say, in the city of San Francisco, if it originated in my territory and traveled through Ogden, we had a prescribed blank that was filled out by our commercial or general agent, giving me the originating point, the name of the shipper, the commodity and the consignee, and how it was routed, with a further notation, with an interrogation point, as to why it moved that way, and what about the future cars; and that invariably brought forth correspondence, if there was more than one car to follow.

581 Q. Were you aware, in the course of your business, of the change in the course of freight from the Central Pacific rails which previously had gone over the Denver & Rio Grande eastbound before the merger?

A. No, sir; I am not familiar with that.

Q. But after you learned that a particular shipment had gone the way that you say, what methods did you pursue with the shipper to get him to send no more by Ogden but to send it by New Orleans?

A. We would immediately call upon the shipper and learn if he had any further business to move. If it was controlled by him, I put forth my personal and greatest efforts to prevail upon him to make the change to the Sunset Route, frequently being able to point out to him the service that we had been able to give in the past, the satisfaction which he had obtained, both himself and his consignees or customers; and in that way frequently we could prevail upon him to, in turn, use the Sunset Route for any further cars.

Q. If it was controlled by the consignee what course did you pursue?

A. Our representation at destination——

Mr. BLAIR. I object to any statement by the witness about the representative at destination. He can not have personal knowledge of that.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. Proceed with your answer.

A. Our procedure would be for the agent at destination to pursue with the consignee any means or method at his command to prevail upon him to change the routing to the Sunset Route.

Q. Did you receive and transmit these instructions east and west from time to time?

A. Yes, sir; constantly.

Q. And did you have personal knowledge of the course that was being pursued at the time?

A. Oh, I was handling it personally.

(Whereupon an adjournment was taken until to-morrow, Thursday, October 8, 1914, at 10 o'clock a. m.)

NINTH DAY.

ROOM 606, FEDERAL BUILDING,
Chicago, Ill., October 8, 1914.

Before Special Examiner Frank R. Hanna.

Present on behalf of the United States: Mr. Orr, Mr. McClennen, and Mr. Gann.

Present on behalf of the defendants: Mr. Herrin, Mr. Blair, and Mr. Dunne, for the Southern Pacific Company, et al.

WILLIAM H. CONNOR, the witness under examination at the taking of the adjournment, resumed the stand.

Direct examination (continued) by Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. Mr. Connor, prior to the consolidation, September 1, 1901, did the Southern Pacific Company and its representatives, within your knowledge, give to the Union Pacific Railroad Company and its representatives any, and, if so, what, assistance to secure freight via Ogden which could be secured for the Sunset Route between California points on the west and your territory, the Cincinnati territory, or the Atlantic seaboard territory on the east?

A. I can not speak for the Atlantic seaboard territory.

584 From my own territory we exchanged no communications with them.

Q. Do the other connections of the Union Pacific Railroad Company afford its representatives any assistance in procuring freight via Ogden?

A. To the best of my knowledge they do.

Q. Will you state, by way of illustration, some of the railroads that assist in this way?

A. The Chicago & North Western; the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul; the Illinois Central; the Chicago Great Western; and the Chicago & Alton are roads that lend assistance constantly to the Union Pacific in the securing of freight traffic by their cooperation.

Q. You have spoken of the attitude of the Southern Pacific Company prior to the merger and during the merger. Let me now direct your attention to the period since February 1, 1913, and ask you whether, in view of the conditions and possibilities that have existed since that time, you have been able to form a judgment of what the settled policy of the Southern Pacific Company is to be, with respect to freight passing between your territory on the east and California territory on the west.

585 A. From my observance and information at hand, the Southern Pacific Company are giving the Union Pacific a limited amount, to a good extent, of their efforts for the working and interchange of business from territory north of Tehachapi, central California, and northern California; but, at the same time, I do not think or believe we are receiving the undivided support; and this largely attributable to the fact that other eastern representatives of roads connecting with the Southern Pacific Company at El Paso and other Texas junctions have their representatives in California seeking business north of Tehachapi, and I feel satisfied that they are receiving support from the Southern Pacific Company in California.

Q. As a practical matter, prior to the entrance of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe into San Francisco, to what extent, if at all, was the Southern Pacific Company in control of the rate situation with respect to California transcontinental traffic?

A. To the best of my knowledge and belief they were in absolute control.

Q. What were the facts, so far as they came under your observation, which perfected that control?

A. The absence of competition.

Q. Up to 1905, when the San Pedro route was opened, was there any way, other than by the Atchison, by which freight could get into or out of California by rail, other than over the two lines the operations of which were controlled by the Southern Pacific Company; that is, the Central Pacific Railroad and the Southern Pacific Railroad?

A. It was possible to reach there, of course, via Portland.

Q. Was there any other way?

A. No, sir; no other.

Q. To what extent, if at all, did transcontinental freight reach California via Portland?

A. During my twenty-six years' connection with the Southern Pacific and Union Pacific Companies I never knew of a pound moving by the Union Pacific, Portland, and Southern Pacific to San Francisco.

Q. Prior to the opening of the Western Pacific Railroad in 1910, to what extent, if at all, was the Union Pacific Railroad dependent on the Central Pacific Railroad for through service and through billings?

A. They were wholly dependent on them, being their only outlet.

Q. Was the same true with reference to through cars and through rates?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Conversely, what means of exit did the Central Pacific Railroad have through Ogden from California?

A. They had two lines, the Rio Grande Western and connections west and the Union Pacific and connections east.

Q. The Rio Grande Western has now become a part of the Denver & Rio Grande?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the opening of that route was prior to your entrance into the business, was it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. To what extent, if at all, have the Northern Pacific Railroad and the Great Northern Railroad and the Canadian Pacific Railroad, as a practical matter, affected the California transcontinental business?

A. To California State none; to the territory north, such as the Puget Sound territory, such as they serve, they were very material factors.

Q. What is the average freight time from Cincinnati territory to and from San Francisco via the Sunset Route and also via the Ogden route?

A. During my connection with the Sunset Route we were delivering freight in 14 to 17 days via New Orleans. At the same time via Missouri River-Union Pacific through Ogden we were delivering freight in 12 to 14 days.

Q. In the trip via New Orleans what, if any, methods were adopted to hasten the freight from your territory to California?

A. The Queen & Crescent, for instance, had a fast-freight schedule of 56 hours from Cincinnati to New Orleans. California freight was always handled by that through train. Every car that left Cincinnati our New Orleans office was so advised to reach out and 589 look after it and see that it was not detained in the yards at New Orleans; in the old days, when the Morgan Line ships from New York delivered their California cargoes at New Orleans the Cincinnati freight, as a rule, was put in the California special freights that were made up for that cargo and sent through to San Francisco on expedited time, the very best schedule time that could be made.

Mr. DUNNE. Are you speaking of the time when the Morgan ships took the freight to New Orleans in distinction from the subsequent period when they took it to Galveston?

The WITNESS. I have reference to the time when the Morgan Line delivered the cargoes to New Orleans.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. Am I right in understanding you that to some considerable extent the Cincinnati territory freight was incorporated at New Orleans into trains that ran through to California without break?

A. Without break; yes. They were usually solid trains to California.

Q. What effect upon that arrangement did it have when the Southern Pacific began to take its New York freight through Galveston instead of New Orleans?

590 A. It proved that the time was a little longer, but not very materially so. It was longer because at Houston it was then usually picked up. If they had sufficient freight to make up a train it was put in a California train from Houston.

Q. You mean that it made the Cincinnati territory freight a little longer than it had been when it traveled through New Orleans?

A. Yes.

Q. The attachment of that freight at Houston to the trains from Galveston meant attaching it to trains that had traveled some 350 miles or so from Houston?

A. Yes.

Q. I do not know whether you have in mind—if so, state it—when the Galveston route was opened?

A. I could not tell you the exact year now; it has slipped my memory just when they sent the vessels to Galveston with that California freight.

Q. The Southern Pacific Company's New York boats still ply to New Orleans also?

A. I understand they have semiweekly sailings to New Orleans and triweekly to Galveston.

Q. Are these times which you have stated in your earlier answers applicable over all the period of your existence?

A. The schedule times?

Q. Yes.

A. No; I would say that during the latter periods our service was improved, was shortened, was lessened.

Q. Was the relative time as between the Sunset Route and the Ogden Route about the same or different through the entire period?

A. I think there was an improvement shown by both routes.

Q. You have spoken now of this two or three days better time via Ogden than via the Sunset Route in the matter of schedule. What was the situation with reference to the actual day to day running of the trains? Was there the same two or three days or less or more advantage in it in the Ogden Route in the actual running of the trains?

A. I would say it continued day in and day out.

Mr. DUNNE. What period are you speaking of?

Mr. MCCLENNEN. During the entire period of his experience with the road.

Mr. DUNNE. You mean from 1890 to the present?

Mr. MCCLENNEN. Well, I think it was 1887.

Mr. BLAIR. To the present time?

Mr. MCCLENNEN. To the present time.

Mr. DUNNE (to the witness). Is that the period you are covering? I think the record ought to show that.

Mr. MCCLENNEN. Now, Mr. Dunne——

Mr. DUNNE. I will withdraw my inquiry. I do not think I should have interrupted, but I think the record ought to show.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. As you observed the running of trains coming from Chicago to your territory through Ogden and in the opposite direction, what did you observe as to delays in terminals or junctions?

A. Any unusual delays in terminals or junctions were usually caused by congestion of freight, precipitated at times also by climatic conditions or storms, so that the congestions and delays were applicable very largely to all junctions at various periods, but there was nothing regular at all in that respect.

It was a matter, if it occurred, that the operating department did their utmost immediately to remedy.

Q. Can you inform us how frequently there was any appreciable delay—failure to keep the schedule—over the Ogden Route?

593 A. Not on that account I could not, because it occurred at such different times that I do not think I could answer that correctly or definitely.

Q. Are you speaking of a matter that occurred daily or weekly or monthly, or once a year?

A. The unusual delays that I have reference to would occur once a year. I would not say they occurred once a year either; there might be intermissions of months between occurrences. I think the last great big delay that was very serious occurred in 1907, when I believe there were big congestions in Chicago and St. Louis in the belts and yards, and there were big snowstorms that winter, and these delays were very serious, and that applied to freight routed by all routes.

Q. Do you bear in mind any occasion since then?

A. No; I can not say that I do, to give it in detail.

Q. Do you recall any occasions prior to that occasion?

A. Well, I have just cited some delays up north here and what caused them. I believe it was in 1912 we had trouble down in Louisiana, unavoidable trouble, on account of the Mississippi overflowing its banks; it broke the Southern Pacific line west of New Or-594 leans and caused unavoidable delay and congestion. Those are the two most recent and vivid delays that I have in view.

Q. This last one was on the line between New Orleans and El Paso?

A. New Orleans and Houston, over there in Louisiana somewhere.

Q. In these answers that you have been giving as to schedules, conformity to schedules and delays, how long a period have you been covering, from what time to what time?

A. First during the period of the consolidated agencies, when I was placed in direct contact by the handling of freight and schedules through both the New Orleans and Ogden gateways. Prior to that time, when I was handling the Sunset Route exclusively, I naturally made it my business to know what schedule times were being made by the Ogden gateway.

595 Q. And this last answer carries you back to what date?

A. 1887 to 1901; that period.

Q. Apart from rates and service, what is or are the important elements determining the routing of freight?

A. My experience in the Cincinnati territory, where the freight was controlled there, was that it was altogether personal solicitation of the man.

Q. How effective have you found solicitation to be in directing the course of the movement of the freight?

A. I think the freight solicitation, particularly if backed up with a great big powerful road, like I was with the Southern Pacific Company, for instance, is an important factor.

Q. Is there any more important factor than that?

A. Well, we brought pressure to bear in California through the receivers at that time and the consignees—brought things to bear upon them that made it, I think, to their interest to favor us with business that might not have been done otherwise.

Q. As between the initial carrier, the connecting carrier or carriers, and the delivering carrier, the solicitation of which of the three is the most important in directing the routing of the freight?

A. I always thought that it was the terminal line. That was my experience.

Q. And how, as between the initial and the connecting, in relative importance?

A. I do not believe the initial line, on through freights to the Pacific coast, has ever attempted to show any partiality; and it was then up to one of the many intermediate lines to either work with the representatives of the delivering line or with the shipper, in whichever case the routing rested, at destination or originating points.

Q. What was the situation in this respect with regard to eastbound California transcontinental freight?

A. On eastbound California goods, such as we handled very largely into my territory, consisting of fruits, hops, wine, and beans, as a Pacific coast representative I was in contact with the wholesale grocer or the broker or the warehouse or anyone else, either one or all, that might have a control or express a preference for the routing of their goods, and prevailed upon them to give me, for filing with the consignor, or issue to them direct, routing instructions on behalf of the route that I used to designate to them, always giving them consideration for the terminal delivery that they might prefer; and I would then, for the New Orleans route, divide that business preferentially Q. & C., Louisville & Nashville, and Illinois Central; and that through the Ogden-Omaha channel would be divided between the Chicago & North Western, Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul, Illinois Central, and the delivering line preferred, Chicago to destination.

Q. In what way, if at all, is the solicitation of freight made of service to the shipper?

A. It is a very important factor nowadays.

Q. What, if anything, does it include that is of help to him?

A. Well, there is a lot of this stuff that is purchased and sold on a declining or rising market, and there is a great deal of money tied up in a carload of freight—dried fruit, for instance—and the consignor naturally wants to get that freight to destination as quickly as possible, and thereby receive his money for it with as little delay as possible.

Q. What, as a practical matter, do the solicitors do to bring about the result and to assist the shipper?

A. I am pointing out to them the fact that we have got the 598 shortest, quickest, and best route from California to my territory, and have been quite successful in impressing upon them that that is the fact, and have succeeded in getting a great deal of their business routed that way.

Q. Do the solicitors take any part, either personally or through passing it on to other employees, in tracing the shipments to their destination, notifying the shippers and making provision before shipment by furnishing cars and otherwise?

A. Yes, sir. Those are accommodations that they appreciate very much, and a solicitor that makes it a point to trace freight cars keeps his patrons advised of its whereabouts in transit and final delivery is considered very useful and beneficial to the shipper, and on such satisfactory service and information it is made pretty easy for him to call again and get more freight.

Q. Would the release of the Central Pacific road from the control of the Southern Pacific—controlling also the Southern Pacific Railroad and the Sunset Route—produce, as a practical matter, a competition between the Southern Pacific Railroad and the Central Pacific Railroad on transcontinental California business?

A. The Central Pacific would immediately, then, become an 599 independent line, officered with president, vice president, general manager, freight traffic manager, auditor, purchasing department, and on down in the lesser capacities to freight solicitors, all of whom would have a reputation to maintain and a record to make. Their entire influence and efforts would be exerted constantly in behalf of the Central Pacific road. The industrial and commercial interests served by that line would receive one hundred per cent of their efforts and all of the important cities and towns and territory served by the road would benefit to the same extent.

Q. What effect would this have upon the tonnage of the Union Pacific Railroad?

A. I believe it would have a tendency to show a decided increase in a short time after the organization was effectively working.

Q. Would this separation reduce the accommodations to the shipper?

A. To the contrary, I think they would not only be as good as they are to-day, but there would be every incentive to improve them.

Q. As a matter of practical railroading, what effect upon the improvement or injury to service does competition have?

600 A. I think competition is the foremost factor in stimulating service, and that were it not for competition the service would be down to a minimum.

Q. Does it have any, and if so what, ultimate effect upon rates?

A. Competition most certainly has an effect upon both rates and classifications, and always will have. There are times when the interests of the competing line would be better served if they were in a position to make their classification and rates unhampered; so I think it would have a very decided influence over the making of rates.

Cross-examination by Mr. DUNNE:

Q. Mr. Connor, will you give me again the year when you began your service as Cincinnati agent of the Southern Pacific Company?

A. Commercial agent, Mr. Dunne, since April 1, 1889.

Q. And you continued in that capacity without interruption from April 1, 1889, until some time in 1901, was it?

A. To be exact, they consolidated the offices September 1, 1901.

Q. And at that time you became the consolidated agent?

601 A. The general agent.

Q. The general agent, still at Cincinnati?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you continued in that capacity from September, 1901, until some time in 1913 or 1912, was it?

A. 1913, Mr. Dunne; February 1 the separation took place.

Q. Then on the 1st of February you became the agent at Cincinnati of the Union Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you have been continuously in the employ of the Union Pacific in that capacity at that place?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I think I understood you to say that Pittsburgh was not a part of your territory as general agent resident at Cincinnati?

A. It never has been.

Q. Did your Cincinnati territory extend as far north as the shore of Lake Erie?

A. Always.

Q. And, to identify it by some familiar points, did it include Cleveland and Toledo, for example?

A. Yes.

602 Q. I suppose it also included Columbus and Indianapolis?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Columbus and Indianapolis are rather to the south and proximate to Cincinnati in distinction from Toledo and Cleveland upon the north at the shore of Lake Erie?

A. Yes.

Q. Was Detroit also in your territory?

A. No, sir.

Q. Where is Detroit situated geographically in reference to Toledo?

A. Let me perhaps correct you and correct myself, Mr. Dunne—

Q. By all means.

A. You asked if Detroit was in my territory. It was in my territory while I was straight Southern Pacific representative, and after the merger of the offices it was taken away from me.

Q. Where is Detroit situated geographically with reference to Toledo?

A. Sixty miles due north of Toledo.

Q. And during your incumbency as general agent of the Southern Pacific Company resident at Cincinnati, prior to 1901, 603 was the trend of the business from Detroit, Cleveland, Toledo, Indianapolis, and such points towards the New Orleans gateway, so far as you worked it preferentially?

A. Yes, sir; so far as I worked it preferentially.

Q. Did that business move to any considerable extent during that period out of Detroit towards the New Orleans gateway?

A. No, sir.

Q. It did not?

A. It did not.

Q. It moved in large by the northern gateways?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. During that period you were an active and vigorous solicitor for the New Orleans gateway, were you not?

A. I am afraid you flatter me a little, Mr. Dunne.

Q. I do not wish to flatter you at all, Mr. Connor.

A. Well, yes; I tried to be active.

Q. I understood you to say yesterday that you were for the New Orleans gateway first, last, and all the time?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Why was it, under those circumstances, with your activi-
604 ties and your energies in behalf of the New Orleans gateway, that the business of Detroit in large moved by the northern gateways?

A. The shippers preferred it the other way.

Q. Why did the shippers prefer it the other way?

A. They looked upon it as too far north to send via New Orleans from Detroit.

Q. And you did not succeed by your solicitation in changing the attitude of the shippers, so far as the large movement from Detroit was concerned?

A. I never knew of this large movement that you speak of from Detroit.

Q. I mean relatively speaking, of course.

A. Yes. No, sir; I did not change it.

Q. What were the considerations that moved the shippers to prefer the northern route and which gave the business its trend northward instead of southward by the New Orleans gateway?

A. The western connections had local representatives in Detroit; the manufacturers were located on the lines that had no interest in the Toledo-Cincinnati gateway. They had, to the contrary, their sole interest in the long haul through Chicago and St. Louis. The influence brought to bear by those representatives in the solicitation outweighed that which I was able to bring upon them in behalf of the New Orleans gateway.

605 Q. What did you mean by saying that Detroit was too far north?

A. That last answer will answer that.

Q. In other words Detroit was too far north to be within the sphere of your influence, if I may so express it?

A. Yes.

Q. Can you give any estimate, approximate or rough, as to the percentage of Detroit business during your ten years incumbency as Cincinnati agent that moved by the New Orleans gateway in comparison with the northern gateways?

A. In view of my explanation that I did not succeed in securing freight from Detroit I do not think it amounted to anything at all.

Q. Now, taking Cleveland. That was within your territory, as I understand it?

A. Yes.

Q. And was worked by you preferentially and wholeheartedly for the New Orleans gateway?

A. Yes.

Q. What were the principal rail lines out of Cleveland between 1890 and 1901?

A. The same lines that there are to-day.

606 Q. Mention them, please.

A. The Lake Shore & Michigan Southern, the New Yor Chicago & St. Louis, the Pennsylvania Road and the B. & O. Ra road; those are the four principal ones.

Q. Where did those four railroads meet these southern lines g ing from Cincinnati territory to the New Orleans gateway?

A. Both Cincinnati and Louisville.

Q. That is upon the Ohio River, is it not?

A. Yes.

Q. Did these principal lines out of Cleveland, for example, to the Chicago and St. Louis gateways? Take the Pennsylva for example?

A. The Pennsylvania did, the Lake Shore did, the Nickle Pl did, and the B. & O. did, and the Big Four did, in, I might call a roundabout way.

Q. Was the haul for these initial lines radiating from Clevel to the Chicago & St. Louis gateways, as compared with the ot haul to the Ohio River gateways, was that their long or short ha

A. Cincinnati would be their short haul.

607 Q. Did these initial lines prefer the long or short haul u that business?

A. The line that I worked preferentially, the short haul.

Q. What line was that?

A. The Big Four—Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis.

Q. What about the other lines?

A. It did not have a great deal to do with the other lines.

Q. Will you say, with your experience of business in that territ that these three other lines did not prefer their long haul to Chic and St. Louis gateways on Cleveland business?

A. They preferred their long haul; yes.

Q. They preferred the long haul?

A. Yes.

Q. Was that a casual preference for the long haul, or a system preference?

A. Why, it would be a systematic preference.

Q. Was it an accidental preference or a preconcerted preferenc

A. For those lines leading to Chicago and St. Louis?

608 Q. Yes.

A. No accident in it at all.

Q. Is it anything unusual in railroading that a carrier should fer its long haul as against its short haul?

A. No; not that I am aware of.

Q. What were the principal lines—take Cleveland business or other business north of the Ohio River; what were the principal lines to the New Orleans gateway from the Ohio River?

A. The Queen & Crescent, the Louisville & Nashville, and a line that was formed from Cincinnati to Louisville, known as the B. & O. to Louisville, thence Illinois Central to New Orleans. Those were the three competing lines between Cincinnati and New Orleans.

Q. And you worked principally, as I understood you, with the Queen & Crescent?

A. Yes.

Q. Was there any movement southbound of business originating in Cincinnati territory by Texas junctions other than New Orleans during the period from 1890 to 1901?

A. Very little, Mr. Dunne. If you will let me correct that—609 in so far as the El Paso gateway enjoyed some of that business; that is, through the St. Louis to El Paso lines channel.

Q. Just mention those lines a little more definitely.

A. The Gould Line from St. Louis.

Q. How did the Gould line from St. Louis reach the Texas junctions?

A. Over the St. Louis, Iron Mountain & Southern division of their road. I believe it was Texarkana or Fort Worth—make it Fort Worth; thence Texas Pacific to El Paso.

Q. When was the Rock Island line opened to El Paso?

A. I do not know the exact year.

Q. Just approximately?

A. I believe it is a matter of record here, if you want it.

Q. We can prompt you; it was about 1902.

A. I should say about 1902 or 1903.

Q. Has that line been opened and doing business since that time through El Paso junction?

A. Yes.

Q. And from 1890 to 1902 the Gould line was operating Texas junctions through Fort Worth and Texarkana, and since 1902
610 uninterruptedly the Rock Island has been operating through El Paso, has it not?

A. Yes; I so understand.

Q. I call your attention, just for a matter of brief explanation, to Exhibit No. 66 and the expressions in this exhibit of business handled from the territory of W. H. Connor, commercial agent. Those are expressions by way of carload, are they not?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you any accessible data by which these carload expressions may be rendered into terms of tonnage?

A. No, sir.

Q. By the way, where did you get the data, or where are the data from which these exhibits were compiled?

A. They were compiled in my office at the time the business moved and from the records we were then keeping of carload freights.

Q. Where are those records now?

A. I don't know.

Q. Did I understand you that this Exhibit 66 was one of the files of your office and is as old as the year 1899?

A. Yes.

Q. So that you have withdrawn these from the files of 611 your office for the purposes of this case?

A. I do not know why it was not destroyed; but this record was kept, and knowing I was coming up here on this case I looked this up.

Q. I do not think you get my mind about that. My mind is simply this, that the data behind this statement are not now available or accessible to you?

A. I should say not.

Q. You do not know of their whereabouts?

A. No, sir; if they are in existence, I know of their whereabouts.

Q. Where would they be?

A. In the storeroom at Cincinnati.

Q. At Cincinnati?

A. Yes.

Q. And accessible to you?

A. Oh, yes; they would be naturally.

Q. So that there would be no objection to our having access to those records?

A. No, sir; you are perfectly welcome to them.

Q. I notice the exhibit is headed "Ten years' statement of 612 business handled from territory of W. H. Connor, commercial agent." That means, of course, Cincinnati territory?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. Does it mean business handled exclusively through New Orleans?

A. Yes.

Q. Does it include any business that was handled through El Paso?

A. Not in the sense that it did not go through New Orleans. Every carload was delivered to the Southern Pacific Company at New Orleans.

Q. So that this exhibit does not indicate what business, if any, passed through the El Paso gateway which did not go through the New Orleans gateway?

A. It does not include it; no.

Q. Does this statement include business to California as a whole?

A. Yes.

Q. Is any distinction made in this statement between northern and southern California?

A. No, sir.

613 Q. I notice also in this statement certain merchandise cars are listed?

A. Yes.

Q. Does that mean anything more than that certain shipments of merchandise were consolidated into carloads and shipped in that way?

A. Our modus operandi was to solicit this merchandise from points north of the Ohio River as well as Cincinnati and concentrate it there, load it into a solid car for California, and it was then despatched, without further breaking of bulk at New Orleans, to destination.

Q. Does this statement indicate how much of the business handled originated in Cincinnati on the Ohio River and south and how much originated north of the Ohio River?

A. The statement does not so indicate.

Q. Does this statement indicate to what points these merchandise cars were consigned?

A. We billed all of them on San Francisco or Los Angeles; that was a billing matter. The cars contained freight for all destinations in southern California, and the billing would indicate.

Q. Does this statement indicate the ultimate destination of 614 that merchandise freight, whether from Los Angeles as the point of departure or from San Francisco?

A. No, sir; it does not.

Q. I notice also on this statement a compilation of carload business moving to Texas, New Mexico, and Arizona and other southern territory exclusive of California. That was compiled, I apprehend, in the same way, was it not?

A. Yes, in the same way from the same records.

Q. I call to your attention, I may want to ask you a question or two about Exhibit 68, which is headed "California carloads, September 1st, 1901", and proceeds year by year to and inclusive of the year 1907. Was that statement compiled in the same way as the exhibit we have just been speaking about?

A. Yes.

Q. Where are the data from which this statement was made up? Are they accessible or available?

A. If they are in existence they are, Mr. Dunne.

Q. Can you ascertain for us whether they are in existence, and advise us?

A. Yes; I will be very glad to do so.

Q. I notice this statement stops at 1907; was that because 615 the statement, as you found it in your office, did not extend beyond 1907?

A. Yes.

Q. So that for the period between 1907 and the present time you have no such statement or data?

A. Up to the last year; we had it for 1912. You will find it.

Q. We will come to that later?

A. Yes.

Q. But year by year from 1907 to 1914 you have not made up any statement similar to this?

A. With that one exception.

Q. With that exception?

A. Yes. When I say it was not made up, that we did not make it up—it was made up, but what became of it I do not know.

Q. At all events you have not got it?

A. I haven't it.

Q. And it is not produceable so far as you are concerned?

A. No, sir.

Q. When was this memorandum terminating in 1907 made up? Was it made up about 1907?

616 A. At the close of 1907.

Q. Now, then, bearing this exhibit in mind and calling your attention to the heading, "California carloads", does this exhibit refer to the business of northern California alone, or to southern California alone, or is it designed to exhibit business moving in California as a whole?

A. To California as a whole.

Q. Calling your attention now to the tabulation in this statement against the initials S. S., I suppose that means Sunset?

A. It signifies "Sunset."

Q. I notice that for the years 1901 to 1907, inclusive, there is a specification of carload movement for each year against the Sunset; does this statement refer exclusively to carload business moving by the New Orleans gateway?

A. Mr. Dunne, following 1901 there were divisions of rates to California put into effect through the Shreveport gateway, through north Texas junctions, and through, I believe, Alpine, but I am not positive on that; and that S. S., Sunset, represents all cars that reached some portion of the Atlantic system through one of those different gateways.

617 Q. Does it include carload business that reached the Atlantic system through the El Paso gateway?

A. No, sir.

Q. So that this statement does not show or disclose the business that would move through the El Paso gateway via the Rock Island?

A. No, sir.

Q. Have you any means accessible to you of indicating what that carload movement was?

A. It is made up of all classes of commodities. Oh, you mean the Rock Island?

Q. Have you any means, supplementing this statement, of showing the carload business that moved through the El Paso gateway over the Rock Island as a connection at El Paso?

A. I have no knowledge whatever of Rock Island movements.

Q. After the Rock Island was opened in 1902 or 1903 did you receive reports of business passing through the El Paso gateway coming from the Rock Island?

A. No, sir.

Q. You received no reports of that business?

A. No, sir.

618 Q. Then, so far as you are concerned, you are not in a position to state the carload business or furnish us with the carload business up to 1907 that moved off the Rock Island through the El Paso gateway?

A. No more than I could tell you what moved over the Santa Fe.

619 Now, then, between 1901 and 1907, during those years, for what gateway was the Union Pacific-Southern Pacific preferentially working on this business?

A. From points north of the Ohio River preferentially Missouri River, Union Pacific, Ogden, and Southern Pacific.

Q. And for points north of the Ohio River?

A. For points on and south of the Ohio River preferentially through New Orleans.

Q. And for business having a destination in southern California how did you work the business preferentially?

A. What territory?

Q. Business originating in Cincinnati territory and for destinations in southern California.

A. In Cincinnati territory north of the Ohio River southern California business was preferentially worked by Union Pacific to Ogden and Salt Lake route to destination.

Q. When was that Salt Lake route opened?

A. You may correct me on this—1904, was it?

Q. 1905. Now, on business originating at Ohio River and points south the business was routed preferentially by the southern gateway, was it?

A. Yes.

620 Q. And whether that business had destination in southern California or northern California made no difference?

A. It made no difference, and all this routing was in conformity with instructions emanating from the traffic officials.

Q. In so far as this exhibit relates to business moving since the opening of the San Pedro route in 1905, does it represent under the caption "U. P." business that moved principally and preferentially by the San Pedro route in distinction from the detour by way of Ogden and Sacramento?

A. On the opening of the Salt Lake route instructions carried that the southern California business should move that way, and it was only in an exceptional case that it did not move that way.

Q. How does that route compare with the route by way of Ogden, Sacramento, and over the Tehachapi Mountains into southern California?

A. Well, from Ogden it would have the comparison of being about 400 miles shorter by the Salt Lake route than by Sacramento.

Q. Has it been consistently the preferential route of the 621 Union Pacific on southern California business since it was opened?

A. Yes.

Q. I call your attention to Exhibit 69, which is headed "January 1st, 1912, to December 31st, 1912." This is a carload statement, is it not?

A. Altogether.

Q. And in the recapitulation the carload business attributed to the Southern Pacific Company includes as well all other Texas junctions as the New Orleans gateway, does it not?

A. Yes; New Orleans; and Shreveport, you will notice, is added in there.

Q. I understand; but I notice other Texas junctions, besides.

A. Yes; I mention Shreveport because that is a Louisiana point.

Q. Now, Exhibit No. 70 appears to be a compilation of commodities moving in carloads to California from Cincinnati territory for three months of the year 1914; you recall that, do you?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you any other compilation or figures over and above this exhibit?

622 A. No, sir.

Q. This exhibit refers to carload movement of those commodities into northern California, does it not?

A. The State of California.

Q. Is it not exclusive of Los Angeles and southern points?

A. No, sir.

Q. What is the meaning of this statement—possibly it may be my misunderstanding—"Carloads to California, exclusive of Los Angeles and southern points, from Cincinnati territory"?

A. I stand corrected; it excludes Los Angeles; it is exclusive of Los Angeles.

Q. It is exclusive of Los Angeles and southern points?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you a statement similar to this and applicable to Los Angeles and southern territory in California?

A. I have not, but it is available.

Q. It is available?

A. Yes.

Q. It can be prepared?

A. It can be compiled and prepared.

Q. Would you have any objection to compiling a similar statement for southern California territory and furnishing it to us?

A. I will compile it and show you southern California as well as central California.

Q. If you please.

A. I will try to do that; it was an oversight to exclude Los Angeles and make it refer to central and southern California only.

Q. What are the western connections of the primary lines operating out of Cincinnati territory to the Chicago and St. Louis gateways between 1890 and 1901 and since.

A. Well, I will take Cincinnati and St. Louis first; the Baltimore & Ohio, the Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis, and the Pennsylvania Company were the three roads extending from Cincinnati to St. Louis over their long haul.

Q. You are dealing now with the St. Louis gateway?

A. Yes.

Q. What were the western connections then?

A. To Kansas City, Mr. Dunne?

Q. To Kansas City and beyond.

A. From St. Louis to Kansas City, the Chicago & Alton, the Missouri Pacific, the Wabash, the Rock Island, the Frisco Line, the Missouri, Kansas & Texas, and the St. Louis, Iron Mountain & Southern. That is all.

Now, then, Cincinnati to Chicago——

Q. One moment; what are the connections of those lines west of Kansas City and making for California destinations?

A. Those lines terminating at Kansas City have western connections such as the Union Pacific, the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific, the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe, and the Missouri Pacific.

Q. To what points west do those lines go that you have just mentioned?

A. They have western termini at Denver, Colorado Springs, Pueblo, Ogden, Oakland, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Deming, and El Paso.

Q. With what lines do they connect at those western termini for California destinations?

A. Those through Ogden and Salt Lake connect with the Southern Pacific and Western Pacific; those at El Paso with the Southern Pacific Company.

625 Q. Is there any other line through Salt Lake or Ogden with which they connect besides the Southern Pacific and Western Pacific?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. How about the San Pedro line?

A. I beg pardon—that also.

Q. That should be included?

A. Yes; that should be included.

Q. Take the primary lines from Cincinnati territory making for the Chicago gateway; will you name those lines?

A. The Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis; the Pennsylvania Railroad; the Chesapeake & Ohio of Indiana; the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton; and the Monon Route—those form the Cincinnati-Chicago lines.

Q. And with what lines at Chicago do they make connections for the farther transit west?

A. The Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe first; the Chicago, Rock Island——

Q. If I may interrupt: Has the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe a line of its own all the way from Chicago to southern and northern California?

A. To both San Francisco and Los Angeles.

626 Q. Excuse my interruption. Proceed.

A. The Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe; the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific; the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy; the Chicago & North Western; the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul; the Illinois Central; the Chicago Great Western; and the Chicago & Alton. Those are all through Missouri River lines, and extending beyond the Missouri River, connecting with them——

Q. Did you mention the Wabash?

A. Include it if I did not, please.

Q. To what points west do those lines proceed?

A. I beg your pardon?

Q. What are the western termini of those lines out of Chicago?

A. Missouri River points.

Q. Missouri River points? For example?

A. For example, Council Bluffs, St. Joseph, and Kansas City.

Q. What are the lines out of the Missouri River points with which they connect for California points?

A. The Union Pacific. That is the only one.

Q. Are there any others?

A. No, sir.

Q. The Union Pacific as far as Ogden?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is, from Omaha and Kansas City?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is there any other line out of Kansas City or Omaha that goes west besides the Union Pacific?

A. I mentioned those before, but I will repeat them: The Chicago, Burlington & Quincy; the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific; the Missouri Pacific; the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe.

Q. The Missouri Pacific is affiliated with the Denver & Rio Grande?

A. Yes; it is known as one of the Gould lines.

Q. Where is the western terminus of that Gould line?

A. Let me understand you, please. Do you mean the Gould line extended through to California?

Q. No; as far as Ogden.

A. The Missouri Pacific proper extends to Pueblo and there connects with the Denver & Rio Grande, another Gould property, to Salt Lake and Ogden.

Q. And at what point does it connect with the Western Pacific?

A. Salt Lake City.

Q. The Missouri Pacific, the Gould line, also has a line by the south, through the Texas gateways, into California, has it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So that the Gould line has two lines, one by the north and one by the south, on California business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. As I understood you, between 1890 and 1901, you, as the Southern Pacific agent in Cincinnati territory, were working the business preferentially, or, to use your own expression, "first, last, and all the time" for the New Orleans gateway?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Since 1901 and until February, 1913, how did you work this business preferentially?

A. Per instructions, the territory was divided; that portion of it from Cincinnati to Cairo along the Ohio River, points thereon and south thereof, was worked preferentially Sunset Route; that portion of the territory north of the Ohio River was worked preferentially Missouri River, Union Pacific, Ogden, and Southern Pacific Company.

Q. Is that the significance that attaches to this first exhibit 629 that was offered in evidence on your testimony yesterday, showing the earnings by the gateways?

A. I do not know that I touched upon earnings.

Q. Divisions, I mean, by the gateways.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That was the significance of it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then, as I understand you, from 1901 until what has been called here the "unmerger" the business north of the Ohio River was worked preferentially by you as the joint agent for the northern gateways?

A. Yes, sir; to central and northern California via Ogden and the Southern Pacific to southern California via Ogden and the Salt Lake route.

Q. Since 1912, or February 1, 1913, the Southern Pacific and the Union Pacific agents have been separate personalities in that territory, have they not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. With respect to the Cincinnati territory business north of the Ohio River, do you know how the Southern Pacific agent has preferentially worked that business since February, 1913?

630 A. I think he has shown his preference for the Ogden gateway.

Q. And with respect to business originating on the Ohio River and south of the Ohio River, he has preferred the New Orleans gateway?

A. Naturally.

Q. Taking that same Southern Pacific agent, since February, 1913, and upon business originating in the Cincinnati territory and having a destination in southern California, how has he preferentially worked that southern California business?

A. He would have many gateways to work it, and many connections to work it with.

Q. Do you know whether he has preferentially worked that southern California business since February, 1913, by the New Orleans gateway?

A. I would think that competition would force him to work it preferentially through El Paso gateway connections.

Q. What competition?

A. The fact that the service to southern California, I think, is far better through St. Louis and Chicago and El Paso or Ogden than it would be possible to procure through New Orleans.

Q. Then the superiority of the service, as between St. Louis and New Orleans, would in your judgment force him to work it by the El Paso gateway in distinction from the New Orleans gateway?

A. It would be a factor, yes; but not altogether the controlling factor on all shipments.

Q. Well, you have answered my question, Mr. Connor. What would the competition be that he would be met with from the Union Pacific on that business into southern California? By what route?

A. Union Pacific, Ogden, and the Salt Lake route to destination.

Q. Did the Union Pacific solicit or seek to work any business preferentially by the Ogden-Sacramento gateways in contradistinction from the San Pedro?

A. During what period? Any period?

Q. After the San Pedro had gone into operation as a working line.

A. In accordance with instructions I had, it was not so worked via Sacramento.

Q. Which is the better line on southern California business—the line by way of the Union Pacific and Salt Lake, or by way of the Union Pacific with the detour by way of Ogden and Sacramento and over the Tehachapi Mountains?

A. The Ogden and Salt Lake Route.

Q. Does any business, to any substantial extent, originating in Cincinnati territory and having destination in southern California, move by the circuitous route through Sacramento and over the Tehachapi, as against the San Pedro Route and the southern route that you have been speaking of?

A. A very, very small volume, if at all.

Q. Do you recall when the Santa Fe got into San Francisco? It was 1898 or 1899, was it not?

A. I think it was 1898; the latter part of 1898 or 1899, I have forgotten which.

Q. Since that time has the Santa Fe been an important factor in the transcontinental business?

A. So considered; yes.

Q. You so consider it, do you not?

A. Yes.

Q. I call your attention to the following statement made by you yesterday at page 577:

"Q. Take the territory in California north of the Tehachapi on the one hand and your territory on the other: If the freight were not artificially controlled by one route or the other by solicitation or otherwise, how much of it would naturally pass through the Ogden gateway, and how much of it through New Orleans?

633

"A. From the territories outlined I believe if you were to eliminate all solicitation on the coast, as well as in the eastern territories, that inside of three years, by allowing the freight to seek its own channel—and I mean by that the routings over which it would be best cared for—I venture to say that 75 per cent of it would go through the Ogden gateway to Cincinnati territory."

Calling your attention to that testimony, I will call your attention to the further statement that you made on the same page:

"Q. And how much over the Atchison or through New Orleans?

"A. I think the other 25 per cent would then flow through the Atchison, Western Pacific, and the El Paso and New Orleans gateways."

Calling your attention to that testimony, I would like to ask you how much of that other 25 per cent you would assign to the Atchison Topeka & Santa Fe?

A. At the time the Santa Fe got into San Francisco they were without terminals, they were without branches, they were without anything except two streaks of rails; they had no standing in California to speak of, and I do not think that they were in a position to control or influence more than a very small percentage of the business over their rails. If the business was left to itself, on account of the Southern Pacific Company's long and original standing, covering the valleys as they did and originating the business they did, I do not think there is any question of doubt but what the business would naturally have moved over that line and it would not have gotten on to the Santa Fe rails at all, under any conditions.

Q. Do you recall making the following statement yesterday, on page 578, speaking of the Santa Fe:

"A. If I remember correctly they went into San Francisco on their own rails about 1898 or 1899. That is subject to correction"?

A. Yes.

Q. (Continuing reading.) "And immediately thereafter they became quite an important factor in the westbound California traffic but never to the degree that the Southern Pacific has been." Is that a correct statement?

A. They became an important factor in the solicitation of westbound business. There is no statement there that they got

635 Q. Now, I will ask you again the question: This is the y of grace 1914. In the year of grace 1917, three years from now, how much of that 25 per cent that you spoke of yesterday would you assign to the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe?

A. That 75 per cent and 25 per cent business I am satisfied would continue, and the Santa Fe would divide it the best they could with the Western Pacific.

Q. That still does not answer my question. I am anxious to pursue your analysis a little further. Again, I ask you, Mr. Connor—please do not think I am pertinacious: How much of that 25 per cent in the year 1917, in your judgment, would be assignable to the Santa Fe?

A. Twenty per cent.

Q. The other five per cent, then, would be divisible among the other transportation routes that you mentioned, would it not?

A. No, sir; I do not think so. The other five per cent would fall to the Western Pacific, if it fell to anybody. I do not think it would be possible for any El Paso gateway or any New Orleans gateway or any Texas junction gateway to enjoy or participate in that division of business that would be created by taking away the entire solicitation.

636 Q. Then, as I understand you, the 25 per cent would be assigned, in your judgment, 20 per cent to the Santa Fe and the other 5 per cent would be assignable to the exclusion of the El Paso route. Is that correct?

A. It would be assignable to the Western Pacific road.

Q. Please explain to me, if you will, why freight in moving from Cincinnati territory to northern and central California by the Ogden gateway, the Union Pacific and Central Pacific, would be seeking its own channel. Why?

A. I think it would be along the line of least resistance, first——

Q. What do you mean by that?

A. Let me answer, please.

Q. Certainly. I beg your pardon for the interruption.

A. It would be along the line of least resistance, and I think it would pass over roads that were able to give it the best first-class service, and those would be the two important factors. The least resistance would be the shortest line; and I think the Central Pacific, the Union Pacific, the Northwestern, the Pennsylvania road, to the city of Cincinnati or points east of Chicago, would form that kind of a line.

637 Q. What do you mean by saying that that is the routing over which the freight would be best cared for? What do you mean by that?

A. Any freight that passes over first-class roads in every way that receives first-class service in every way, that is expedited to the very best all the time, that is what I mean.

Q. That is a generalization, I think, that we shall all accede to.

A. Yes.

Q. Why would this particular route, by way of Ogden, Union Pacific, and Central Pacific, be the routing over which the freight would be best cared for?

A. I believe that that would be the line selected by any shipper that knew anything about railroads leading from California to Cincinnati in preference to competitors.

Q. In other words, that is the natural route, is it?

A. Absolutely.

Q. And that is the best route?

A. Yes.

638 Q. That is the route which the Southern Pacific solicitor since February, 1913, has been preferentially soliciting business for from Cincinnati territory, is it not?

A. The Southern Pacific representative in Cincinnati territory, I believe, has information—not to my personal knowledge but from hearsay—to use that line. The Southern Pacific representative in Cincinnati territory, on the other hand, at the same time, would not turn down a solicitor or representative of an El Paso gateway connection that came to him to look after some freight originating in that same territory. So that we are not getting the undivided support of the Southern Pacific solicitor in Cincinnati.

Q. I will ask you again if it is not the fact, so far as you know, that the Southern Pacific solicitor in Cincinnati territory, to-day and since February, 1913, has been working the Ogden gateway preferentially on that business for northern and central California?

A. I believe that by far the greatest amount of business is moved that way, and that would naturally mean that the greatest efforts have been put forth that way; but, at the same time, the other competition is there through the El Paso gateway against that central traffic moving by the Union Pacific.

639 Q. With respect to Southern California business since February 1, 1913, has the Southern Pacific solicitor been soliciting that business preferentially by the Southern gateways?

A. Altogether.

Q. What is the competition that he meets by the northern gateways on business into southern California?

A. Such competition as I, the representative of the Union Pacific, can put up against him.

Q. In connection with the San Pedro line, is it not?

A. Yes.

Q. And not in connection with the Central Pacific line via Sacramento and the Tehachapi?

A. Eliminating the Central Pacific.

Mr. DUNNE. I have no further questions.

Redirect examination by Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. On direct examination you referred to the systematic and preconcerted discrimination which had been exercised by the Southern Pacific Company against the Union Pacific Railroad, and on the cross-examination you answered in the affirmative to Mr.
040 Dunne's inquiry as to whether it was an unusual thing in the railroad business that a railroad should prefer its long haul; and this leads me to ask you this question, namely: Leaving out of consideration the Central Pacific Railroad and the Southern Pacific Company which are under consideration in this case, do you know, in the history of railroading in this country, or, indeed, anywhere else, any other railroad which controls a long-haul route and at the same time controls a short-haul route built under acts of Congress imposing upon it a duty, and perhaps an assumed obligation, not to discriminate against another railroad built under acts of Congress; and if you know of any other such instance will you name the railroads?

Mr. DUNNE. I object to the alleged question upon the ground, first, that it is not a question but a speech. I object to it upon the ground, secondly, that it is entirely argumentative, it does not call for any evidential fact, and it is not a proper way to elicit evidence. And I must object, in the third place, to the assumption in the question that this witness is responsible for the polysyllables "preconcerted and systematic discrimination." In the testimony yesterday they emanated from our indulgent and fluent friend on the other side, 041 and, as I recall the proceedings, were acceded to by the witness. That is all.

(By request of counsel the reporter repeated the pending question.)

The WITNESS. I do not know and cannot name any railroads.

Mr. McCLENNEN. That is all.

Mr. DUNNE. That is all.

Mr. McCLENNEN. It is agreed by counsel that Exhibits Nos. 63 to 70, after being copied into the record, may be returned to the witness. Having regard to the additions to the record since Exhibits 22 and 23 were introduced in evidence, the petitioner now puts in evidence those parts of those exhibits which were read or referred to in the testimony and constitute pages 32 to 53, inclusive, thereof, as admissions of the officers of the defendant Southern Pacific Company and Central Pacific Railroad Company, as declarations showing of acts otherwise proved in evidence; as evidence of the limited stock holdings of Messrs. Stanford, Huntington, Hopkins, and Crocker, respectively; and as evidence for any other purpose so far as they may be material or relevant to this case.
042 state of mind, purpose, and intent bearing upon the character

Mr. BLAIR. Counsel for the defendants renew their objection heretofore made to the admissibility of such evidence, both in form and substance, that the same is incompetent and immaterial, not binding upon the defendants, or any of them, in this case, and irrelevant to any issue in this cause.

Mr. MCCLENNEN. The petitioner puts in evidence the fact that on September 22, 1914, a letter was delivered by petitioner's counsel to counsel for the defendants, phrased as follows:

"In addition to the pending requests, we shall be pleased if you would furnish us the following:

"50. The production of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company's original of the Transcontinental Association contracts of September 28, 1883, and November 8, 1883, copies of which were introduced in 643 evidence yesterday from volume 7, Pacific Railway Commission Reports, pages 4258 to 4261, or an agreement that these copies may be used with the same effect as the original."

To this request counsel for the defendants reply that they know nothing about these agreements and have no one at present whose knowledge extends back that far to consult with reference thereto.

(Whereupon a recess was taken until 2 o'clock p. m.)

644 AFTER RECESS.

JOHN A. MUNROE was called as a witness on behalf of the petitioner, and, having been first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. Your residence?

A. Omaha, Nebraska.

Q. Address?

A. Care of the Union Pacific, Omaha.

Q. What position do you hold with the Union Pacific?

A. Vice president.

Q. How long have you been connected in some capacity with the railroad?

A. Since and including 1883.

Q. First in what capacity?

A. Assistant general freight agent.

Q. Until what time?

A. Until October, 1884, when I was made first assistant, with headquarters at Kansas City. From there I was brought back to Omaha as general freight agent in 1886, and continued later as such 645 until some time subsequent to 1888—I do not recall the date now—when I was made assistant general traffic manager. Then, after 1890, as I recall it, I was made freight traffic manager, which position I held until about three years ago, when I was made vice president; so that I have been identified all that period with the traffic department of the Union Pacific lines.

Q. Have you been stationed at Omaha all the time or were you part of the time at Kansas City?

A. Except 15 months at Kansas City?

Q. Did you receive a request from counsel for the Government to produce, if possible, the Union Pacific Railroad Company copy of a transcontinental agreement of September 28th, 1883?

A. I did.

Q. And also of a similar agreement of November 8, 1883?

A. I did.

Q. Did you have a search instituted to see whether the originals could be found?

A. I did.

Q. What did you find to be the fact in that regard?

646 A. I was unable to locate the original agreement, but I found a printed copy of a supplemental agreement, dated Topeka, Kansas, November 8, 1883. That is the only original I could find.

Q. Did you also find a typewritten copy of the agreement of September 28th, 1883?

A. Yes; I also located that.

Q. In what custody were those two agreements which you found?

A. With the auditor of the Union Pacific, as custodian.

Q. What has been done with such original agreements of this character as the Union Pacific Railroad had prior to, say, 1906?

A. They were all sent on to New York for filing in the New York office.

Q. And that office was situated where?

A. At that time in the Equitable Building, 120 Broadway, and subsequently burned; now the office is at 165 Broadway.

Q. Did the Equitable fire burn the files of the Union Pacific Railroad Company?

A. It is my understanding that it did.

Mr. McClennen. Petitioner puts in evidence as Exhibit 71
647 the typewritten copy just referred to by the witness of the agreement of September 28, 1883.

Mr. Blair. The defendants object on the ground that there is no proof that it is a correct copy.

(The paper referred to was thereupon marked "Petitioner's Exhibit No. 71, Munroe, October 8, 1914", and will be found in the volume of petitioner's exhibits.)

Mr. McCLENNEN. The petitioner puts in evidence as Exhibit 71 the agreement of November 8, 1883, just referred to by the witness.

Mr. BLAIR. To which counsel for the defendants make the same objection.

(The paper referred to was thereupon marked "Petitioner's Exhibit No. 72, Munroe, October 8, 1914", and will be found in the volume of petitioner's exhibits.)

Mr. McCLENNEN. It appears from inspection that Exhibits 71 and 72 are the same as Exhibits 18 and 19, and it is agreed that they need not be separately copied, but that these original agreements may be returned to the witness and the copies already in the record used with like effect as the originals.

By Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. Were you asked to make some investigation with reference to freight tonnage interchanged at Ogden between the Central Pacific Railroad and the Union Pacific Railroad?

A. I was.

Q. And have you a statement for certain years in respect to that?

A. I have a statement covering the years 1906 to 1914, inclusive, and by the term "year" I mean the fiscal year ending June 30th. It shows the tonnage received from the Southern Pacific at Ogden by the Union Pacific, and the tonnage delivered by it to the Southern Pacific, the total interchange for each year referred to.

Mr. McCLENNEN. Petitioner puts in evidence the statement just referred to, as Exhibit 73.

(The statement referred to was thereupon marked "Petitioner's Exhibit No. 73, Munroe, October 8, 1914", and will be found in the volume of petitioner's exhibits.)

By Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. Let me see that we correctly understand this statement. First, am I right that this does not include any tonnage coming from California via the San Pedro route?

A. It does not.

Q. The first column obviously indicates the year. The next column—am I right?—is the number of tons in each year which the Union Pacific received from the Central Pacific; that is the eastbound tonnage?

A. That is correct.

Q. The next column indicates in dollars the revenue accruing to the Union Pacific only on that tonnage?

A. Correct.

Q. The next column indicates the tonnage delivered by the Union Pacific to the Central Pacific?

A. It does.

Q. That is the westbound tonnage?

A. Correct.

Q. And the next column indicates the revenue only of the Union Pacific upon that tonnage?

A. Correct.

Q. The next column is the total of the preceding tonnage columns, and the last column is the total of the preceding revenue columns?

A. That is right.

Q. This tabulation was prepared under your supervision?

A. It is our regular accounting department form, and I had this specific statement taken from same. The statement is furnished by our auditor each year. This is just a compilation of accounting department statements, Form 925.

Q. What circumstances led to including the years 1906 to 1914 by?

A. In asking for the statement I asked for about a ten-year statement. I did that for the reason that we have had fires in Omaha, too, and I thought I could go back ten years easily, but might have difficulty in going back farther. I am not sure whether we could go back farther or not, but I asked for ten years, and this is what they gave me.

Q. Approximately what revenue per ton accrued to the Union Pacific on the average?

A. A little over seven dollars a ton.

Q. This tonnage included in this statement is the local as well as transcontinental tonnage?

A. Everything interchanged with the Southern Pacific at Ogden.

Q. Are you able to state with any degree of accuracy how much of that westbound tonnage was transcontinental?

A. I would put it at upwards of 80 per cent; and by transcontinental traffic I mean this, traffic having origin or destination east of the Missouri River on the one hand, and destination or origin west of Ogden on the other, because the minute we pass Ogden we enter what we call the transcontinental zone.

Q. Or, to put it in another way, you have used it to indicate tonnage which neither originated nor was delivered upon the rails of the Union Pacific. Is that correct?

A. No; there is some exception in the case of the points on the Missouri River where we do originate and terminate a lot of this traffic. A large amount of it comes from points east of the Missouri River and goes to points east thereof.

Q. You have given 80 per cent as your estimate in the case of the westbound tonnage; what do you say with reference to the eastbound?

A. Well, the eastbound would probably be even larger; that is for the reason that the States west of the Missouri River, natural consumers of California products, have a very limited population as compared with the consumers east of the Missouri River of the same articles, so the bulk of it would be to points off the Union Pacific rails on eastbound to an extent greater than westbound, although they would both be a very large percentage.

652 Q. How would the total revenue of the Central Pacific for this same tonnage compare with the total revenue of the Union Pacific therefor?

A. It would probably be a little less, for the reason that—take, for instance, Omaha as the basic point on the east and Sacramento as the typical central California one on the west. The percentages are 54 to the Union and 46 to the Southern Pacific for the Central Pacific service. These per cents also obtain in the case of the other points on the Missouri River and the other central California terminals. There are some deductions made for the Missouri River bridge at Council Bluffs and for the Bay Transfer on the west, at San Francisco, before prorating; but there would be a limited amount of the traffic going to points outside of the 46 per cent zone, both to the north and south, but I would say, offhand, as a rough estimate, that the Central Pacific earnings—that is, the Southern Pacific Company earnings—would be 90 per cent of those of the Union therein named, to which would be added for them what we call back locals or differentials on westbound traffic going to interior points taking higher than the westbound terminal rate. I am speaking in 653 that estimate simply of the traffic which is subject to 54 per cent east and 46 per cent west of Ogden.

Q. About how would the total revenue of all lines for moving the freight covered by this Exhibit 73 compare with the revenue of the Union Pacific for the same?

A. Well, I could not give you an answer to that question, because I have not the figures of the many roads competing. My answer would simply be that no single one of them probably would equal the pickings of the Union Pacific, but in the aggregate—you see it involves so many that I am not able at this time to give you an estimate of that.

Q. Did you have some investigation made at the request of counsel for the petitioner with reference to the movement of Nevada wool?

A. I did.

Q. What did you find to be the fact with reference to the time during which wool rates through Ogden from Nevada to the Atlantic seaboard have been in effect?

A. I found that on September 14, 1909, rates on wool from Winnemucca and points east thereof were first published via Ogden, and that on June 25, 1910, rates were also published from points 654 west of Winnemucca, and that prior to September 14, 1909, rates via Ogden were published only from Elko and east, Elko being the dividing line at that time. West of that point the rates were via the western gateway of Sacramento and east via the Sunset Line to the Atlantic seaboard. Our figures show a very limited movement of wool via Ogden prior to 1909 and a gradual change in the situation since, the tendency being to route all rail, apparently.

Q. Do you know from your general observation of conditions where the heavy part of the wool tonnage from Nevada originating contiguous to the Central Pacific rails and destined to New York or Boston traveled?

A. Very largely from central Nevada; I mean in territory west of Elko and east of a point, we will say, a couple of hundred miles west of Winnemucca, within a zone of, say, 650 miles of Ogden.

Q. How does the great bulk of that wool reach New York and Boston?

A. By way of the Sunset, boat to New York, and then transferred and sent likewise to Boston.

Q. That is hauled west from Nevada to Sacramento and then through El Paso to the Gulf ports?

654a A. Or New Orleans, as the case might have been.

Q. To New York or Boston?

A. Yes.

655 Q. When you first had to do with the Union Pacific Railroad, what were the naturally competitive rails, if any, from California to the Atlantic seaboard and to the Central Freight Association territory?

A. The Ogden route and the Mojave route, and Deming and El Paso.

Q. What do you mean by the Mojave route?

A. The line of the Southern Pacific in connection with the Atchison; the Deming route, also similar; the El Paso route, Southern Pacific on the west, various connections east, notably Texas & Pacific.

Q. For convenience, you are speaking of what year?

A. I am speaking of my early connection with the Union Pacific, in 1883 or 1884, or right around there. I am not sure but in the case of Mojave the Atchison entered there later; but I think that the Deming route was in force in 1883. That is my recollection of it.

Q. The Deming route, speaking from the east, was over the Atchison to Deming, New Mexico, and thence by Southern Pacific Railroad to California?

A. Yes.

Q. The Mojave route was via what is now the Atchison to 656 Mojave?

A. Yes; then it was either the Atlantic & Pacific or the Southern Pacific owned it from Mojave over to Yuma, as I recall it. It was afterwards, I think, leased to the Atchison.

Q. When you say Yuma, do you not mean Needles?

A. Needles, yes.

Q. Do you bear in mind about when the Atchison acquired that piece of road from Needles to Mojave from the Southern Pacific?

A. No; I do not recall the date.

Q. It was along somewhere in the eighties, it is safe to say?

A. That is my recollection of it, yes. I think it is a matter of record in the record.

Q. At this time, in 1883, the Ogden route meant Central Pacific Railroad only west of that point?

A. It did.

Q. And what were the possibilities east of Ogden at that time?

A. Prior to 1883 the Union Pacific was the sole Ogden route east. In 1883 the Rio Grande reached there, and formed connection 657 with the Southern Pacific, making two prongs to the fork as to speak, east of Ogden.

Q. Prior to 1885, do you recall that the operations of the Central Pacific Railroad were conducted under the name of Central Pacific Railroad?

A. That is my recollection.

Q. You recall that in 1885 the Southern Pacific Company began to operate that line?

A. About that time, yes. I do not know the exact date.

Q. And that the Southern Pacific Company also operated the Southern Pacific Railroad and the Sunset Route?

A. Yes.

Q. So far as other connecting rails are concerned, was there any material change in the situation after the Atchison reached Mojave somewhere in the eighties, up to the time that the Atchison got into San Francisco over its own rails?

A. Nothing material in the territory north of Tehachapi, as I recall it. Their strength commenced upon the opening of their through line, and they became the Santa Fe all the way to the territory north as well as the territory south and east of Mojave.

Q. It has appeared already in the record that the Atchison 658 got into San Francisco on their own rails in May, 1899. How soon after that did that railroad become a substantial factor in the business of California north of Tehachapi?

A. We commenced noticing it right off, first in one field and then in the other. As I recall it, it took them a little while to get a strong foothold at that time and to very materially increase their takings; but their growth was gradual from the day they went north. To-day, of course, they are, as we all know, a strong factor.

Q. How much of an influence had the Atchison exerted on the California freight north of Tehachapi prior to the time when they got into San Francisco?

A. A very limited influence, I have always thought.

Q. The next change in the rail situation was the opening of the San Pedro route from San Pedro and Los Angeles to Salt Lake, and there connecting with the Oregon Short Line and the Union Pacific; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you bear in mind that that was somewhere about 1905?

A. 1905.

Q. The next change was the opening of the Western Pacific Railroad in 1910 from Salt Lake to San Francisco Bay?

A. Yes; that is correct.

Q. Did the San Pedro route affect the freight situation in California north of Tehachapi?

A. It did not.

Q. What has been the effect of the Western Pacific on the territory north of Tehachapi, or any part of it?

A. It has increased the competition.

Q. Do you have any reliable knowledge of the extent of their takings of freight?

A. Not in detail as to commodities, except in occasional instances now and then. I know their earnings ran about $500,000 a month, or something of that nature. We watch their movement and get such information as we can from time to time, but I could not tell you how many cars per day they had or of what commodities.

Q. You mean their proportion of the revenue amounts to the figure which you have mentioned?

A. My recollection is that their statements which they give out to the public show about $500,000 a month—in the neighborhood of $6,000,000 a year.

Q. That is, their gross freight receipts?

A. That is, the earnings of their company, the gross earnings.

Q. Does that include their passenger business as well?

A. I so understand.

Q. Do you have any knowledge as to how those earnings divide as between freight and passenger?

A. In their case?

Q. Yes.

A. I have not.

Q. Since the Southern Pacific Company assumed the operation of the Central Pacific Railroad and the Southern Pacific Railroad what, if any, competition has there been between those two lines?

A. None.

Q. Prior to the merger of the Southern and the Union, September 1, 1901, what did you observe as to the effort of the Southern Pacific Company with reference to freight between California points on the west and Atlantic seaboard and Central Freight Association points on the east?

A. In the case of the Atlantic seaboard a most substantial, active, working preference for the Sunset Route. In the case of the Central Freight Association territory a similar activity as to the southern portions of it; and by that I mean on and south of a line, say, 661 from, as I recall it, St. Louis via Terra Haute and Danville and the Wabash up to Detroit. South of that line they work very actively for their southern haul. North of that line they co-operate in common with the Union Pacific and their other connections in favor of the Ogden route.

Q. South of that Detroit line did the Southern Pacific Company's representatives furnish the Union Pacific Railroad any assistance in getting freight via Ogden which could be controlled via the Sunset Route?

A. Their first effort was first, last, and always with the Sunset. If they found by investigation that a shipper south of this line was not inclined to go by their long haul, and there was danger of losing him if they so insisted, and especially if they got a pointer from the Union Pacific people of the shipment being in sight, in that case they would cooperate; but their effort was, of course, in favor of their longer haul via the southern gateways.

Q. Does that answer apply both to westbound and eastbound?

A. It does.

Q. What effect upon this solicitation did the merger between the Southern Pacific and the Union Pacific in 1901 have?

662 A. It changed the policy of the Southern Pacific's solicitation to the extent of preferring the Ogden route in the territory north of the Ohio River. The southern gateways remained preferential south of the Ohio River, and the Ohio River itself was more or less neutral, taking into consideration facilities existing thereon, owned by companies operating out of such points as Cincinnati and Louisville. For instance, the Queen & Crescent and the Louisville & Nashville were vitally interested in the southern haul, and a northern line might be similarly interested in the northern haul. In that case deference was had to the local conditions somewhat in the solicitation.

Q. What is the natural route between California, north of Tehachapi on the west and Central Freight Association territory and Atlantic seaboard territory on the east?

A. The short route via Ogden, Omaha, and Chicago.

Q. Between those respective territories, from 1883 to 1914, how has the ordinary time actually made by freight trains by this southern route compared with the time by this Ogden route?

A. It has been better by the Ogden route to that section. By "better" I mean a little quicker; the mileage being shorter.

Q. In terms of days, how much better?

A. I would say, on an average, one to two and a half days.

Q. These answers, I take it, are all directed toward freight. We were not speaking of passenger service at present.

A. Exclusively; yes.

Q. What has been the situation on the Ogden route with reference to freight trains keeping or failing to keep their schedules from time to time?

A. No freight train on any line can be operated with clock-like precision; but the Ogden-Omaha route of the Union Pacific has always had a very good record on performance, and while there have been some delays, they have been the exception and not the rule; simply such as are incidental in the ordinary course of transportation; and, relatively, the Ogden-Omaha line has been the equal of any ever since I have known anything about the Union Pacific; and by "any" I mean any of its competitors.

Q. What has been the effect upon freight which would naturally move over the Union Pacific, of the solicitation and effort of the Southern Pacific Company since controlling the Central Pacific Railroad?

A. There is no question but what the efforts of the Southern Pacific have been the means of controlling a large volume of traffic via their Sunset Route which, if they had not so put forth their efforts, would have gone by the Ogden route and the Union Pacific.

Q. How extensive and of what duration have these efforts been?

A. Ever since the opening of the Sunset line in 1883, as I recall it, the Southern Pacific has been remarkably well organized, very active, and have built up a very handsome business via the Sunset route to and from the East; and their strength has been very pronounced along those lines. We can not help but admire the way they have controlled the traffic. We do not like to compliment our competitors, but we must give them their due.

Q. Will you indicate in some way by what means they have accomplished this control of freight away from the Union Pacific Railroad?

A. Part of the best testimony I have seen on that particular question was that given by Mr. Stubbs, setting forth in detail the reasons for the success of the Sunset Route. I am speaking now solely from memory. He pointed out the fact that—— 665 Mr. BLAIR. We object to this endeavor to incorporate into the testimony indirectly the statements of a man who is not on the witness stand.

Mr. DUNNE. I think, Mr. Munroe, you had better, being the witness, give your own testimony. I think it would be more responsive to counsel's questions, too. You are here to tell what you know, and we shall appreciate it if you will confine yourself to your own knowledge.

The WITNESS. In their efforts in behalf of the Sunset the Southern Pacific have put forth every effort they possibly could, in connection with the transaction of business, to influence patrons to their route and to hold them as clients. There are a thousand and one ways, so to speak, in which a common carrier can have influence with a patron. The local situation has a large bearing as to where the freight originates, the ability of the carrier to serve the patron on other than the traffic specifically involved and in question, the disposition to accommodate, and a lot of little things of that kind, all going to have influence with the shipper; and when pressed by the carrier the shipper naturally desires to cooperate as far as he can consistently, without jeopardizing his own interests; and in the case of the 666 Sunset the reforms instituted in the way of prompt settlements of claims, expedited service, special attention to specific traffic all tended to strengthen that route at the expense of all of the all-rail carriers overland, conspicuous and first of which was the Union Pacific.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. Have you any means of putting in terms of percentage how much was diverted from the Central Pacific-Union Pacific route to the Sunset Route?

A. I have not.

Q. Was it a small or a large volume?

A. It was a large volume of traffic, both east and west bound, particularly between California points on the one hand and points on the Atlantic seaboard on the other.

Q. How long has this method of diversion kept up?

A. Up to the present time.

Q. And began when?

A. With the opening of the Sunset Route.

Q. Prior to the merger in 1901 was there any eastbound traffic over the Central Pacific Railroad destined east of the Missouri River, which passed over the Denver and Rio Grande from Ogden?

A. Prior to what date?

Q. Prior to the merger in 1901.

A. Yes.

Q. What happened with respect to that traffic when the merger occurred in 1901?

A. The efforts of the Southern Pacific Company were directed toward favoring the Union Pacific with traffic which it could control as against the Rio Grande east of Ogden, the Union Pacific's competitor.

Q. Did that have any effect upon the percentage of the eastbound Ogden tonnage which went over the Denver and Rio Grande?

A. It did.

Q. How did those methods which were pursued to accomplish that result differ from those which were pursued by the Southern Pacific Company to accomplish the diversion to the Sunset Route from the Union Pacific?

Mr. DUNNE. We object to this as calling for a conclusion from the witness, and without repeating this objection we will make the objection to this whole line of inquiry. The witness has been dealing in generalities—I say it with great respect to him—from the beginning, and has not been stating concrete evidentiary facts or figures beyond the table that he has submitted, and we shall object to the wholesale conclusions and generalities of the witness as not being evidence tending to support any issue in this case.

The WITNESS. Substantially similar.

Mr. DUNNE. I would like to add to the objection that it does not appear that the witness was an officer of the Southern Pacific Company at any time.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. In view of the objection and the appended assertions of fact, in which we can not concur, I will put this question: Will you please describe the methods which were pursued to divert freight from the Union Pacific to the Sunset Route, and the methods which were pursued to divert freight, after the merger, from the Denver & Rio Grande?

A. Active and persistent solicitation.

669 Q. Had there been any classes of freight passing between California and points east of the Missouri River of a character to require more than the usual expedition of freight trains?

A. Yes.

Q. Will you state by way of illustration some of those classes?

A. First, deciduous fruits, then the citrus fruits, and then Asiatic inbound traffic; those are three illustrations that occur to me at this time.

Q. What were the characteristics of the Asiatic eastbound traffic which required expedition?

A. The extreme competition both via the Suez and the northern routes; and by northern routes I mean the Canadian Pacific and the lines operating to the ports of Seattle and Tacoma, made it necessary to put forth extraordinary effort to hold that traffic to the United States lines. Take for instance silk, the most high priced and important item transported, averaging in value frequently $200,000 a car. That was moved across the continent in about four and a half to five days, handled in baggage cars especially equipped with passenger train trucks and expedited 670 from coast to coast.

Mr. DUNNE. Is that all rail?

The WITNESS. All rail. And fruit, I am speaking now of deciduous fruit, naturally, from its perishable nature that required expedition to market, and we have always had fruit schedules faster than the ordinary freight train schedules. The same principle obtains on citrus fruit, even though the citrus fruit is not so perishable as the deciduous, but it has always been felt, so far as we were concerned, that we could not differentiate in the schedule between the deciduous of northern California and the citrus of southern California. And a limited amount of live stock, but that would be the exception as compared with the other commodities mentioned.

Q. In the case of those commodities where the character of the commodity or the state of outside competition required the greatest and best service, over what route has the freight moved?

A. The Ogden route.

Q. What are the facts, so far as they have come to your knowledge, which led to this eastbound Nevada wool traveling west 671 and south in order to get to its eastern destination at New York or Boston?

A. Shippers' response to the efforts of the Southern Pacific to favor them with the long haul.

Q. Now, if the Central Pacific Railroad and the Union Pacific Railroad had been operated as one continuous line, how would the freight have moved?

A. Via Ogden and Union Pacific.

Q. There was a time in the history of these roads, was there not, when the representatives of them used to meet together as the Transcontinental Association?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you have anything to do with those meetings?

A. I have attended a number of them.

Q. Who was the representative of the Southern Pacific Company at those meetings?

A. Executives—that is, their traffic officials, notably Mr. Stubbs, during his life Mr. Smurr, Mr. Luce, and their freight-traffic officials.

Q. Mr. Luce is one of the gentlemen we have the pleasure of having with us to-day?

A. He is.

672 Q. Prior to the entrance of the Atchison into San Francisco, in May, 1899, what was the control, if any, of the Southern Pacific over transcontinental rates with reference to central and northern California and north of the Tehachapi Mountains?

A. Practically exclusive with the Southern Pacific. They had more influence than any other one interest, and Mr. Stubbs was looked upon as the father of the Transcontinental Association from his long association with that business, and he was and is a strong, potent factor. The Southern Pacific had more voice in the policy than any other interest.

Q. Prior to the opening of the Western Pacific in 1910 did the Union Pacific have any, and if so what, practicable way of getting freight into California other than over the lines of the Central Pacific Railroad?

A. The Union Pacific depended solely upon the Southern Pacific as its California connection for all territory north of the Tehachapi; and, in fact, it depended upon it for all territory in California prior to 1905. Upon the opening of the San Pedro route in 1905 the Southern California route was the preferred one.

673 Q. What was the condition of the way and structures of the Central Pacific Railroad prior to the merger in 1901 and of the Union Pacific Railroad?

A. Well, you understand that I am not an operating officer, and not qualified to speak with precision on matters physical, as they could; but as far as the Union Pacific is concerned, it has always been a line second to none between the Missouri River and Ogden, and by second to none I mean everything which attaches to a railroad in its facilities. It has been progressive in the adoption of modern improvements. I think in that respect it has been in advance of the Central Pacific until more recent years. By that I mean it had heavier rails and heavier bridges and was a little in advance in that respect. In the last few years, of course, there have been a great many improvements made on both properties, and they are nearer alike to-day than they ever have been, and the Central Pacific has been improved marvelously between Ogden and the West.

Q. The improvements to the Central Pacific of which you have just spoken were undertaken and carried out during what period?

A. Very largely subsequent to 1901.

Q. What, if anything, would be the effect upon competition
674 in transcontinental business if the Central Pacific Railroad were operated free from the control of the Southern Pacific Company or any company having another through transcontinental line?

A. A marked increase in competition in everything that that word implies.

Q. Would there be any, and if so what, reduction of the accommodation of shippers resulting from the relieving of the Central Pacific from the control of the Southern Pacific Company?

A. Competition naturally tends toward helping the shippers, and that undoubtedly would be the case in the future as much as it has been in the past.

Q. In dealing with the question of rates on transcontinental freight from and to California have you observed what were the factors influencing the Southern Pacific Company, and, if so, what?

A. My observation is that they have always first regarded their Sunset interests and, based on their diagnosis of them, they move afterwards.

Mr. McCLENNEN. That is all.

675 Cross-examination by Mr. DUNNE:

Q. Mr. Munroe, you are the vice president in charge of traffic for the Union Pacific Railroad, are you not?

A. I am.

Q. Mr. William H. Connor, the witness who testified yesterday and this morning, is one of the commercial agents of the Union Pacific, is he not?

A. He is.

Q. Stationed at Cincinnati?

A. Yes.

Q. And in a general way he reports to you? You are his superior officer?

A. No; he would report to the traffic manager more directly than he would to me.

Q. I quite understand that, but you are over the freight traffic manager?

A. Yes.

Q. I quite understand. Were you present in this room during the morning session and during the entire cross-examination of your subordinate, Mr. Connor?

A. Yes.

676 Q. Now, you have been asked some questions about wool; a good deal of time has been devoted to this question of wool. Were you a witness in the Union Pacific merger case?

A. I was.

Q. Did you give the following testimony in that case?

A. Whatever the record shows.

Q. You had better let me state it. I will invite your attention to it. You were asked the following question by Mr. Severance, and I think during that interesting case I asked you some questions, as this record will develop. Mr. Severance, as counsel for the Government, asked you as follows:

"Q. You have answered to Mr. Dunne that you would not regard a route to Ogden by way of the Southern Pacific around to California as competitive with the Union Pacific system. Is it not a fact that there has been and is still in force a tariff on wool by the Sunset route to Boston which is exactly the same as the tariff over the Union Pacific and its eastern connections from Corinne, Utah, right north of Ogden, and has not business moved on that tariff?

"A. I rather think that tariff is in effect.

677 "Q. It has been in effect for many years; it may have been renewed from time to time.

"A. It has been in effect so long that it has become a dead letter. I know that.

"Q. Now, is that true, that it has become a dead letter? Was not that tariff or a new tariff of that kind filed in the spring of 1909 by the Southern Pacific Company according to this record?

"A. I do not know; but if it had been, it would not be at all strange to me. Everybody knows, everybody familiar with the wool traffic in that section, that the Sacramento route cuts no figure whatsoever, and has not for years, on any wool from any point in Utah to any point on the Atlantic seaboard. Now, we have traffic departments, tariff departments; we have inheritances in the way of rate bases; and unless something was said to the contrary, a tariff, once in effect, is reestablished from time to time, but in actual movement the tariff amounts to nothing and we pay no attention to it.

"Q. Years ago traffic did move that way, did it not, and was competed for actively as between the Union Pacific interests and the Southern Pacific?

"A. Why, I do not think there was any material movement 678 of the wool traffic that way. There may have been an occasional shipment, but——

"Q. Now, do you know anything about it?

"A. I do know something about it, because we have always had a very respectable eastbound traffic from that section, and I can not recall a case where we were ever influenced in any of our actions by any rate via Sacramento on any Utah wool.

"Q. How about north Nevada and southern Idaho?

"A. I do not think that any rate made on Nevada wool by the Southern Pacific ever had any material effect upon wool from opposite points on the Oregon Short Line, but on that question I am not as well prepared to testify as some others here who have been in direct touch with it; but all the reports made to me indicate that it never has amounted to more than talk out there at Salt Lake."

Did you give that testimony in the merger case?

A. I did; and I would like to repeat every single word of it now with emphasis. I want to call your particular attention to this feature of it: The maximum part of your quotation there refers 679 to Utah wool. They did install this tariff from Utah, and we never paid a particle of attention to it as a Utah proposition. I recognize, as set forth in my testimony here, in Nevada the conditions were different—they did take Nevada wool via Sacramento. As to the effect of the Nevada rates upon the Oregon Short Line, I am prepared to state now what I was not perhaps prepared to at that time, but it confirms all that I have said; the rates were lined up on the Meridian principle, but I am not aware of a single case—certainly no report has been made to me indicating that any point in Nevada on the Southern Pacific has during the past few years—and I will say for "the last few years", to make it specific, the last 15, drawn any wool of moment from territory, halfway points, or nearer the Oregon Short Line Railroad.

680 Q. Then, Mr. Munroe, I am justified in saying, and I understanding you to say, that you repeat with emphasis what you said in that testimony as well with respect to Nevada as to Utah wool?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, Mr. Munroe, the relations between the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific at Ogden for a number of years have been intimate and friendly, have they not?

A. Yes.

Q. Before and after 1901?

A. Yes.

Q. The divisions were always satisfactory to you?

A. Some divisions were and some were not.

Q. I speak of the prevailing division at Ogden—54 and 46.

A. Satisfactory.

Q. In respect to the Sunset line, Mr. Munroe, I understand you to say, or—at all events, it was incorporated in the question of counsel on the other side—that the Sunset line had moved a controlling amount of Atlantic seaboard traffic as against the all-rail lines from the Atlantic seaboard. Do you wish to be understood as gen-681 erally and year in and year out making that statement?

A. I mean this, that the Sunset have put forth every effort within their power to control to their long line every pound of freight between the Atlantic seaboard points on the one hand and points in California on the other.

Q. You miss the point of my question, Mr. Munroe. Has the Sunset line, in respect to its takings, enjoyed the control, or a larger part of that tonnage, year in and year out, from Atlantic seaboard territory as against the all-rail lines or any other line, water or water and rail, engaged in the business?

A. I do not know the percentage relation which the Sunset takings bore to the whole traffic via the New Orleans routes and gateways.

Q. Do you know whether the takings have been, relatively speaking, diminished takings year in and year out in that business?

A. I understand that they have been diminishing, especially during recent years, and from causes perfectly natural, so that no blame could attach to anybody in charge of the Sunset properties for losing the business.

682 Q. What are those perfectly natural causes that you have in mind?

A. Take one case, that of dried fruit eastbound from Oregon, San Joaquin Valley, Fresno and vicinity, moving to the Atlantic seaboard territory; by that I mean all territory east of Buffalo and Pittsburgh—suppose it is going to Boston. If it starts for Boston via the Sunset Route, it comes down and is transferred to the Morgan line boat and goes to New York and is reshipped to Boston. When it gets to Boston it is at its destination. The broker, or whoever may be handling it in Boston, may have wanted to put that car out at Worcester or Springfield, or some other point on the Boston & Albany road. In response to a natural commercial demand the transcontinental lines have given the permission to divert the shipments in transit, and that has a marked effect in the routing of edibles. Take the case of green fruit, citrus fruit, and the Asiatic inbound business of which I spoke; I eliminate those entirely from my mind when I consider traffic as between the Sunset and the Union Pacific quite competitive; and that case of dried fruit is one that comes to me as typical.

Q. What other perfectly natural causes have been factors in the relative shrinkage of Sunset takings to the Atlantic seaboard?

683 A. The improvement of the all-rail service, the adoption of modern methods by all links in the through all-rail rails, th greater interest taken in transcontinental traffic by lines in Trun Line and Central Freight Association territory; the united effor extreme solicitation on the part of the all-rail lines to build up th business, coupled with the fact that there is a large traffic eastbound notably this deciduous fruit, moving through all-rail by the Ogde and other routes, and thereby creating in the Atlantic seaboard citi equipment available for through carriage right to the west. Al those things have been factors in the building up of the all-rail traf fic and in reducing the tonnage of the Sunset, and of latter years more active factor. The Sunset has been on the firing line, so t speak. They have been right up against the extreme water com petition on the Atlantic seaboard of the American-Hawaiian, th Panama route, the Tehuantepec route, and, of course, the Cape Ho route, as long as it existed.

Q. To what extent will the intensity of the water competition h reflected by the Panama Canal, if at all?

A. Of course it is problematical what the effect of the Panam Canal is going to be. We are having a very keen object less 684 this week in rates so extremely low offered by the water ca riers that it is very doubtful whether the rail lines can retai in a large amount of the low-rated traffic.

Q. Just one further question: What is the water route, if yo know, that will be adopted and used by the American-Hawaiian Co pany, of whose intense competitive activity you have spoken, on th opening of the canal?

A. Why, they use the canal route.

Q. Yes. In the earlier days of the Sunset Route, when the ta ings were larger, was the magnitude of the Sunset takings explai able by reference to the negligent attitude of the transcontinent railroads, the all-rail lines, in respect to that business?

A. Partly.

Q. That was a factor, was it not?

A. One of the factors.

Q. To the extent that the Sunset line is a rail line now, is t
Sunset line a competitor of the Union Pacific-Ogden route
Chicago territory business to and from California?

A. It is a competitor in the sense of its power to take a certa amount of the traffic, but in actual experience we do not regard, instance, the Illinois Central line to New Orleans and 685 Southern Pacific line west as a competitor worthy of recognition on San Francisco and central California busin
As I think I stated in one hearing held here in Chicago, when start from Chicago and get to New Orleans you are farther a from San Francisco than you were when you started, and I could not reconcile my mind to looking upon that line as a competitor; I mean a competitor in the sense of being able to take away traffic from us. There are occasional shipments that way from causes entirely foreign—facilities and things of that nature—but we do not regard it as an active competitor.

Q. You do not regard the Sunset line as a competitor on Chicago business, and you never have so regarded it?

A. No; in practice we do not.

Q. Why not?

A. It is too roundabout.

Q. What would be the rail routes by which freight would move from Chicago and over the Sunset rails into California?

A. The most direct route, I would say, would be the route of the Rock Island System and the El Paso & Southwestern from here to El Paso, connecting there with the Southern Pacific. I do not believe there is any route between here and New Orleans, or junctions 668 in that immediate vicinity, that could hold its own as against the El Paso route of the Southern Pacific or the Albuquerque route of the Atchison, or the Salt Lake route of the Union Pacific.

Q. Is the long haul of the Illinois Central from Chicago to New Orleans?

A. It is.

Q. Has the Illinois Central a line all the way from Chicago to New Orleans?

A. It has.

Q. Is it a connection at New Orleans of the Southern Pacific?

A. It is.

Q. And the reason why the Sunset line, in respect to Chicago business, is not a competitor, and you have never regarded it as such, is that that route is too roundabout?

A. Too roundabout. I would like to add as a matter of information that the Illinois Central has a line also to Omaha. They cover two sides of the square, so to speak, the longer line being to New Orleans, and they endeavor to fairly apportion their territory so as to give the best service to the patron. I do not think you would find them trying to work the New Orleans as against the Omaha one on a shipment from a point in Illinois, we will say, a 687 couple of hundred miles south. When you get down south of there they would try it; but they have to have regard to the service possible by their competitors via the Missouri River gateways.

Q. That is the thought and that is the factor which they have in mind, is it not?

A. Yes; they can not make a success of the New Orleans route. That is true, undoutedly. That is one of the reasons.

(By request, the reporter repeated the question, as follows:)

"That is the thought and that is the factor which they have in mind, is it not?"

The WITNESS. I think so. One of them.

By Mr. DUNNE:

Q. Mr. Munroe, has there been competition south of the Ohio River—as to points south of the Ohio River—between the Ogden gateway and the southern routes?

A. Yes.

Q. To a large or to a limited extent?

A. Not as active as north. The southern route has a decided advantage down there and the northern lines can not get very much of that business.

Q. It would be correct to say, then, that the competition
688 was only to a limited extent?

A. Limited south of the Ohio River.

Q. North of the Ohio River does not the business move naturally by the northern gateways? Is not that the natural and normal traffic course of the business?

A. We think so.

Q. Since the establishment of the San Pedro line, in 1905, that has been the Union Pacific's preferential route on southern California business, has it not?

A. It has.

Mr. DUNNE. I think that is all I care to ask you.

By Mr. BLAIR:

Q. You spoke of the opening of the Sunset Route in February, 1883. That was the date, was it not?

A. I was not clear as to the month; but it was in 1883, according to my recollection.

Q. I believe you said that from the date of its opening it was the policy to preferentially route to and from California to the Atlantic seaboard territory by that Sunset Route?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That Sunset Route, as you understand, went down to El Paso and then into New Orleans and then by boat to New York?

689 A. Yes.

Q. That Sunset Route was under a unified management at that time?

A. It was.

Q. The same management as the Central Pacific?

A. Yes.

Q. So that the Central Pacific from Ogden to San Francisco and the Sunset Route from the time that it came into existence, in 1883, was under a unified management or control?

Mr. McCLENNEN. We note an objection to the question, that it is prefaced by an assertion of fact which, we submit, is not borne out by the evidence and as calling for matter which in the nature of things can not be within the personal knowledge of the witness.

(By request, the reporter repeated the pending question.)

The WITNESS. That is my understanding.

Mr. McCLENNEN. We note an objection to the answer as stating a conclusion and an inference, not a fact.

Mr. BLAIR. The witness is yours.

690 Redirect examination by Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. You have said, in response to one of Mr. Dunne's questions, that the great success of the Sunset Route may have been due in some measure to the negligence of the all-rail routes, and I shall be obliged if you will inform me whether the Central Pacific Railroad was one of the all-rail routes whose negligence so contributed.

Mr. DUNNE. I object to the question, upon the ground that in so far as it attempts to reproduce the testimony of the witness in respect to the Sunset Route the verbiage of the question does not correspond to the testimony, and does not reproduce it.

The WITNESS. The Central Pacific is one of the links in the all-rail chain from the Atlantic coast to San Francisco, although when I made the answer I did not have that company at all in mind. What I referred to was this: The Union Pacific and all its connections east of Council Bluffs through Chicago have always been and are to-day actively interested in this transcontinental traffic. The negligence to which I referred was due to the extremely heavy traffic and rapid growth in Trunk Line territory a few years ago, 691 which taxed their energies to the utmost, and they therefore had a minimum of time and attention to devote to the transcontinental traffic. That was due to causes which were temporary. Upon the removal of those causes the Trunk Line and the Central Freight have been actively responding in interest to the through service.

By Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. The negligence which you had in mind was a period of some wo years ago, if I understand you?

A. Partly then, and periodically in times of trouble and congesion; they did not seem to appreciate the volume of the Pacific coast raffic.

Q. Can you define any more definitely the periods to which you efer?

A. I would say it referred to periods more prior to two years ago than since. We had a depression, of course, in 1893 to 1898, and we saw some of that feeling then; but for the last five years—I do not know but for the last ten years; I think I could safely say ten—that feeling has disappeared and we have no cause to complain of negligence upon the part of any of our eastern connections. I do not believe they were ever wilfully disposed to be negligent, but they carelessly lost sight of certain business in which we were 692 vitally interested.

Q. During the period when the Southern Pacific Company was urging the Sunset Route to the extent that you have testified, did the Central Pacific Railroad, or those in control of it, put forth efforts to make the all-rail route a better competitor with the Sunset Line, and if so, what effort did they put forth?

A. I am not aware of any action ever taken by the Southern Pacific in the administration of the Central Pacific looking to the betterment of the Central Pacific route as against the Sunset. There have been improvements of various kinds and character installed on the Central Pacific in common with the Union Pacific; but they have not been controlled for or against by the Sunset conditions.

Q. Your attention has been called to the competition now presented by the American-Hawaiian Line traveling through the canal, through the Isthmus of Panama; was there, prior to the existence of the American-Hawaiian Line, a route from San Francisco via the Isthmus of Panama to New York?

A. Yes.

Q. And that was composed of what?

693 A. Pacific Mail ships on the west coast and the Panama road as the intermediary, and ships on the Atlantic coast.

Q. Has that, up to the opening of the canal, and in years past, been any substantial business?

A. It has always been a factor in the business.

Q. Do you know by what the Pacific Mail Steamship Company link in that line has been controlled?

A. They have their own separate organization, with R. P. Schwerin, as I recall it, as president—I think that is his title—of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company. Naturally they are very closely in touch with the owners of the property, one of whom is the Southern Pacific, I believe.

Q. Do you know whether or not the all-rail lines from time to time bought a definite space in the boats plying between San Francisco and Panama, and Colon and New York?

A. I know that years ago there was, for a time, what was called a space-rental arrangement between the transcontinental lines and the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, and there was certain traffic thrown to them under that arrangement.

Q. Under those arrangements did the rail lines pay for the space whether it was occupied or not?

A. My recollection is that they did.

694 Q. Did the rail lines contribute towards those payments according to their division of the rail transcontinental rates?

A. I do not recall the factors obtaining as to the subdivision, but I rather imagine some basis of that kind.

Q. The incentive to the railroads in doing that was to prevent the competition made by that line?

Mr. BLAIR. We object to that as plainly leading and suggestive.

The WITNESS. To minimize the competition and to preserve the rail revenues.

By Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. In view of the objection, I will ask you if you will state what the purpose of the railroads was in making those arrangements.

Mr. BLAIR. Counsel call attention to the fact that the evil effect of the question is already had, as is obvious, and counsel do not accept the tardy correction as any answer to the original objection.

(By request the reporter repeated the pending question.)

The WITNESS. To protect their revenue.

695 By Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. Was the Southern Pacific Company one of the companies cooperating in those arrangements?

A. It was.

Q. Those agreements with the component parts of the Panama Route covered what periods of time? Do you remember?

A. I do not recall the year, but my recollection is that it was prior to the taking effect of the interstate law.

Q. That would be 1887?

A. The interstate law took effect April 4, 1887, as I recall it. I understand there were no legal objections at the time to that sort of an agreement or arrangement. If there had been, of course, the roads would not have gone into it.

Recross-examination by Mr. DUNNE:

Q. Was the Union Pacific a party to that Panama agreement?

A. It was.

Q. Has that agreement been in force for the last thirty years, in round figures?

698 A. The number of years I do not know; but it has not been in force since 1887, practically twenty-seven years.

Q. The Pacific Mail Steamship Company, at the time the Southern Pacific Company became interested in it, was plying between the port of San Francisco and the ports of call in the Orient, was it not?

A. Yes.

Q. And prior to the time the Occidental & Oriental Steamship Company had been plying between the port of San Francisco and the ports of call in the Orient, had it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That inbound Asiatic business that you spoke of moved all rail through the Ogden gateway to its overland destinations, did it not?

A. It did.

Q. Were the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific Company partners, using the term freely, in the Occidental & Oriental Steamship Company?

A. They were.

Q. If your testimony has conveyed the impression that the 697 negligence of the railroad companies which has been suggested here as an explanation to an extent more or less of Sunset takings—if your testimony has conveyed the impression that that negligence was of recent years, are you not mistaken about that?

A. I said that it was more a case of prior to two years ago than it was since that date; and I did refer more particularly to prior to ten years ago, and so stated in the record.

Q. I will carry you back still further than a decade, and I will ask you if the negligence of the railroads as a factor in the taking of the Sunset line does not go back to the earlier and pioneer days of the Sunset line in Atlantic seaboard business?

A. I did not come in contact with it so much in the very early and pioneer days as I did afterwards, but it may have obtained just the same, because when I first went with the Union Pacific I was assigned especially to traffic other than transcontinental, and devoted the major portion of my time to that, and only had a limited amount on the transcontinental traffic. Later I became more closely affiliated and associated with the transcontinental traffic.

698 Q. Do you not recall that in the early days of the Sunset Route, when it was first launched, its takings of Atlantic seaboard business reached 80 or 85 per cent, and it was in those days that the railroads were negligent in respect of the traffic, and that that large percentage was attributable to that very negligence of the railroads?

A. No; I could not subscribe to that. I do recall, now, that at a period the rail lines withdrew from the Atlantic seaboard traffic account of the extremely low rates being made by competitors what might have been termed the apathy of the trunk lines, and Southern Pacific was used to fight that battle, so to speak, and af wards, when peace was declared and conditions changed, the all-rail lines got back into the business; and during that period, of course, the Sunset built up a traffic, and held afterwards a good share of what they did build up.

Q. And the rates went back?

A. And the rates went back.

Q. As a witness in the Union Pacific merger case, did you give the following testimony:

"Q. Now, the Southern Pacific by its Sunset Route was carrying at times, according to the testimony here, 80 or 85 per cent of 699 the business from New York pier to San Francisco. If you had cut that rate by Portland and thereby caused a cut all along the line, as you say, the Southern Pacific, through its enormous tonnage over the Sunset Route, would have suffered very severely in revenue, wouldn't it?

"A. I don't think the Southern Pacific's 85 per cent takings were due entirely to the rate. I think they were due more to negligence of the all-rail overland carriers."

Did you give that testimony?

A. If the record says so.

Mr. DUNNE. That is all.

By Mr. BLAIR:

Q. Just one more question: You say that at a certain period the Sunset Route was used by the railroads. What railroads?

A. I said the all-rail routes. My recollection is this: That the all-rail lines canceled their through tariffs very largely from the Atlantic seaboard to the Pacific and confined their tariffs temporarily to Chicago and west; and that resulted in the through rates via Chicago being very much higher than those obtaining via the Sunset. In other words, the all-rail lines did not make any attempt to 700 meet the rate conditions, but the Sunset did.

Q. You said something about the Sunset having to bear the brunt of the fight?

A. Yes; I spoke of that looking upon the Sunset as one of the members of the Transcontinental Association.

Q. You said something about the Sunset being used to bear the brunt of the fight. Used by what interest?

A. The Southern Pacific stayed in the field and used their Sunset weapons to fight the battles against the competitors in common of the overland carriers.

Q. In other words, the fight was on against the Sunset Route and the all-rail lines on the one side and some water competitors on the other hand.

A. No; the fight was the Sunset against the field.
Q. What was the field?
A. All water carriers or any other line going across the——
Q. What year was that?
A. I do not recall.
Q. Was it not about 1893?
A. I do not recall the year. I would have to look up the records.
701 Q. Was it not initiated by the water lines?
A. My recollection of the whole transaction is more or less hazy.
Q. I think so.
A. I just simply happened to think of it after Mr. Dunne had pointed the matter out.
Q. Then your statement of the facts in connection with that—I do not use the expression in any offensive sense—is not entirely reliable?
A. I would not want to offer in evidence here my memory as being perfect.
Q. Especially when you said you were hazy about the transaction?
A. It is not clearly impressed on my mind.
Q. And you do not know how the controversy started?
A. I have a very distinct recollection of one conference about the matter held here in Chicago, at which I think Richard Gray was present; and as a result of that the Sunset undertook to meet the competition which the transcontinental lines were face to face with and the overland carriers practically withdrew from the business.
Q. You say "undertook." At the request and suggestion 702 of the all-rail lines?
A. It was done with the full knowledge and consent of the all-rail lines.
Q. And at their request?
A. I do not know whether they made the first suggestion or not but they acquiesced in it at all events.
Q. And in their interest?
A. We thought so at the time. We learned afterwards, however hindsight being better than foresight, that if we had to do it over again perhaps we would not have done it.
Q. Well, that would open a long question. That is all.

By Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. This matter of the Panama route and Panama agreements something to which your attention had not been called prior to your taking the stand; am I right?
A. You are right.
Q. And you are speaking without having had any opportunity to investigate dates?

A. That is correct.

703 Q. You have not had called to your attention even that the agreement between the railroads composing the Transcontinental Association and the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, put in evidence in this case as petitioner's Exhibit 24, is dated October 1, 1899?

A. No; I had not had my attention called to it at all. My impression was that it was prior to 1887.

Mr. McClennen. That is all.

Mr. Blair. That is all.

Mr. Dunne. I have no further questions.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, PETITIONER,

v.

SOUTHERN PACIFIC COMPANY, CENTRAL PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY ET AL., DEFENDANTS.

RECORD—VOLUME 2.

DEFENDANTS' EVIDENCE.

Pages 394 to 872, inclusive.

WASHINGTON : GOVERNMENT PRINTING OFFICE : 1915

ROOM 921, FLOOD BUILDING,
San Francisco, Cal., Monday, March 1, 1915.

The hearing was resumed, pursuant to notice, at 2 o'clock p. m., before Frank R. Hanna, special examiner.

Present on behalf of the United States: James W. Orr, Esq., Edward F. McClennen, Esq., and Edward E. Gann, Esq., special assistants to the Attorney General.

Present on behalf of the defendants: W. F. Herrin, Esq., J. P. Blair, Esq., P. F. Dunne, Esq., and Garrett McEnerney, Esq., for the Southern Pacific Company.

707 Mr. HERRIN. I wish to make this preliminary statement before beginning the examination of a witness:

The Southern Pacific Company, the Central Pacific Railway Company, and the individual defendants having made the pleas in bar and estoppel set forth in paragraphs 9 and 10 of the answer herein and desiring and intending to insist upon said pleas, and desiring and intending further to rely upon the said record proceedings, and decree referred to in paragraph 10 of the answer and the argument of counsel as conclusive proof of the existence, prior to the merger in 1901 between the Union Pacific Company and the Southern Pacific Company, of competition between the two companies and the want of power in the Southern Pacific Company to prevent such competition via the Ogden route now state that they rely upon said pleas and each of them and do not waive nor intend to waive their rights under such pleas or either of them by reason of any evidence which they may introduce in the case, and that all such testimony is taken and introduced without waiver of, but subject to and with reservation of, their said pleas and contentions. And to save useless repetition they ask that this objection and reservation be considered as made to all such 708 testimony and evidence, and they give notice that said objection and reservation are so made.

Mr. MCCLENNEN. The petitioner does not, by its silence at this time, concede any of the facts set forth in the foregoing notice.

WILLIAM HOOD was called as a witness on behalf of the defendants, and having been duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. HERRIN:

Q. What is your name?

A. William Hood.

Q. And your official relation to the Southern Pacific Company defendant?

A. Chief engineer.

Q. How long have you been chief engineer?

A. Essentially since the organization of the Southern Pacific Company.

Q. In 1885?

A. In 1885.

Q. Mr. Hood, I present to you a map marked "No. 1", which is intended to show the construction of Southern Pacific 709 lines prior to January 1, 1870, indicating in different colors the ownership of the Central Pacific bond-aided lines, other Central Pacific lines, and all other Southern Pacific lines, and also lines subsequently acquired by the Southern Pacific Company. I will ask you if you know whether that map correctly represents what it purports to show?

A. It correctly represents what it purports to represent.

Mr. HERRIN. I wish to introduce that map in evidence.

(The map referred to was received in evidence and marked "Defendants' Exhibit (Hood) No. 1, March 1, 1915", and will be found in the volume of defendants' exhibits.)

Mr. MCCLENNEN. These red hatched lines, noted "Lines subsequently Southern Pacific", is that intended to mean that the lines were in existence January 1, 1870, but had not then become Southern Pacific?

Mr. HERRIN. That is right. They show the lines as they existed at that time, and that they were subsequently acquired is indicated by the red hatched line.

(By request of the witness the last answer was read as follows:)

"A. It correctly represents what it purports to represent."

710 The WITNESS. Allow me to add: So far as my personal knowledge of the matter extends, which is from May, 1867.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. What does that date refer to?

A. That is the date that I commenced working for the Central Pacific Railroad—May 3, 1867.

Q. And you continued thereafter with the Central Pacific Railroad until you became chief engineer of the Southern Pacific in 1885?

A. I was with the Central Pacific, the Southern Pacific Railway, and various corporate-named railroads until I finally became chief engineer of the Southern Pacific Company, as indicated heretofore.

Q. I also present to you a map marked "No. 2", purporting to show the construction of Southern Pacific lines prior to January 1, 1875, with ownership indicated in colors, according to the previous map, and ask you if that map correctly represents what it purports to show in regard to those matters?

A. Irrespective of whether it was Central Pacific or Southern Pacific railroad or railway or other corporate construction.

Q. And in the same way these red lines indicate the lines, whether in the ownership of the Southern Pacific or in the ownership of the Central Pacific?

A. Yes.

Q. Which were then operated by the Southern Pacific?

A. Yes.

Mr. McCLENNEN. With your statement as to your intention to call this witness again, I will not cross-examine any further at the present time.

Mr. HERRIN. Yes; we will recall him on some very important testimony.

716 JAMES HARVEY STROBRIDGE was called as a witness on behalf of the defendants and, having been duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. HERRIN:

Q. What is your age, Mr. Strobridge?

A. Nearly eighty-eight; eighty-eight in April.

Q. Where do you reside?

A. I reside at Haywards, Alameda County.

Q. Did you ever do any work for the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. Yes.

Q. Where did you begin on that work?

A. I commenced in Sacramento.

Q. What date, about?

A. I think that was in 1864.

Q. What were you doing?

A. The first work I did for the Central Pacific was to raise the grade on Front Street and grade up I Street toward the American River.

Q. What did you do afterwards?

A. I then took charge of laying the track from Sacramento

717 eastward, about fourteen miles, to a place about Antelope.

Q. You may continue stating what you did after that on the Central Pacific, all the way through.

A. After that?

Q. Yes.

A. I then took up the work of building the Central Pacific at New Castle as an entirety, excepting the bridging, and continued it until it met the Union Pacific near Ogden.

Q. What particular thing were you doing; you were in charge of what?

A. I was superintendent of construction.

Q. Who employed you to do that work?

A. For the first portion of that work I was employed by Charles Crocker & Company, until we got, I think, near Colfax; then from that through there was the Contract & Finance Company.

Q. What individuals did you deal with in doing this work?

A. More particularly with Mr. Crocker.

Q. Charles Crocker?

A. Charles Crocker. Occasionally I got orders from Leland Stanford, C. P. Huntington, and sometimes from Mr. Hopkins.

718 Q. Mark Hopkins?

A. Mark Hopkins.

Q. Did you let any contracts for masonry or anything of that sort?

A. Yes; sometimes I let the work for masonry and sometimes Mr. Charles Crocker did it.

Q. When did you finish this line, this main Central Pacific line?

A. The last rail was laid on the 10th of May, 1869.

Q. Was Mr. Crocker frequently on the ground?

A. Yes.

Q. So far as you observed, what individuals controlled the matter? In giving orders to you and instructions concerning this work, what individuals controlled it?

Mr. McCLENNEN. We note an objection to that as calling for a conclusion from the witness.

A. Well, Mr. Crocker more particularly; sometimes C. P. Huntington and sometimes Leland Stanford and sometimes Mark Hopkins did.

Q. Do you remember any particular case where Mr. C. P. Huntington had anything to do with it?

A. Very little; he was seldom on the work, if I recall.

719 At one time I was working for Mr. Crocker at Sacramento, and we had a strike, and Mr. Crocker was out of town; but Mr. Huntington was there, and he said that he would act, perhaps, for Mr. Crocker if he knew what was to be done; and he inquired what the proposition was, and I told him what plans I had, and he said, "All right; go ahead. I will take the responsibility."

Q. After you finished the Central Pacific main line, what work did you do next?

A. I took the contract on my own account to build from Niles to Oakland—to do the grading that was.

Q. You took a contract as a contractor?

A. Yes.

Q. To do the grading of this line from Niles to Oakland?

A. Yes.

Q. Whom did you arrange that matter with?

A. I arranged that with Mr. Stanford.

Q. Leland Stanford?

A. Leland Stanford.

Q. You did not arrange that with Mr. Crocker?

A. No.

Q. Where was he when you did that?

720 A. At that time he was in Europe.

Q. Did you ever have any talk with him afterwards about it when he returned?

A. Yes; he came home and inquired what was being done, and Stanford told him that the contract was let to me. And he asked, "What were the prices?" And Stanford had forgotten pretty much, and he called for me, sent for me to tell what the contract was, and Crocker said that that was all right, that was satisfactory.

Q. Did you tell Crocker what the contract was?

A. Yes.

Q. And he said it was satisfactory?

A. Yes.

Q. Was that contract in writing?

A. No, sir; it was verbal.

Q. It was oral?

A. Yes.

Q. What work did you next do?

A. Next I built from Marysville, the California & Oregon, to Sesma.

Q. That is near what town that you now know—across the river from what town?

721 A. Well, I did know, but I have forgotten.

Q. May I ask if it was Tehama?

A. Yes.

Q. Whom did you arrange that contract with from Marysville to Sesma?

A. They were all there.

Q. Who are "all"?

A. Mr. Crocker, Charles Crocker, Leland Stanford, Mark Hopkins, and Mr. Huntington.

Q. C. P. Huntington?

A. Yes.

Q. And they all had to do with the letting of that contract, did they?

A. They all had to do with it.

Q. Was that contract in writing?

A. No, sir; it was oral.

Q. Verbal?

A. Yes.

Q. What, if you remember, was your next work in this railroad building?

A. I went to Lathrop and built south from Lathrop in the valley.

722 Q. South from Lathrop?

A. Yes.

Q. How did you do that work—as a contractor?

A. That was a contract; yes.

Q. Whom did you make the contract with?

A. Well, I am not certain whether they were all there or not; Mr. Crocker more particularly, I think.

Q. Was that contract in writing?

A. No, sir.

Q. How far did you build on that line?

A. That was about twenty miles.

Q. South of Lathrop?

A. South of Lathrop, but I can not think of the river.

Q. To the Stanislaus?

A. To the Stanislaus.

Q. What was the next contract you took?

A. I continued that from the Stanislaus River to Merced.

Q. What did you do after you had reached Merced?

A. The work was suspended there, and I went to Gilroy and built to Tres Pinos.

Q. From Gilroy to Tres Pinos?

A. Yes; twenty miles.

723 Mr. GANN. Can you give us the date of that?

Q. Do you remember what year that was?

A. I will have to stop and think, I guess. 1871, I think.

Q. You built from Gilroy to Tres Pinos; and was there any other section you built near there?

A. Yes; I then built from Gilroy to Pajaro. This was also contract work.

Q. You were the contractor?

A. I was the contractor; yes.

Q. And with whom did you make the contract to do those two jobs at Gilroy?

A. That was made with Leland Stanford and Mark Hopkins.

Q. After that, where did you go? After you finished Gilroy to Pajaro?

A. I then went to Merced and took a contract to build to Tipton.

Q. Tipton is south of Goshen?

A. Yes.

Q. With whom did you arrange that contract?

A. That was made with Leland Stanford and Mark Hopkins.

Q. Was it in writing?

A. No, sir.

724 Q. Verbal?

A. A verbal contract.

Q. For what company was that road built from Merced south?

A. From Lathrop to about Goshen was the Central Pacific.

Q. The Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the road south of Goshen was for what company?

A. The Southern Pacific.

Q. The Southern Pacific Railroad Company?

A. Yes.

Q. Is there anything that reminds you, any fact that you remember, which reminds you of the difference in those companies, that the road south of Goshen was not built for the Central Pacific but was built for the Southern Pacific?

A. Yes.

Q. What is it?

A. They had to build a twenty-mile section on the Southern Pacific to comply with their arrangement with the Government—the franchise.

Q. They had to build a twenty-mile section for the Southern Pacific prior to what date?

725 A. That had to be completed the 1st day of July, 1872.

Q. Was that done?

A. That was done.

Q. Was it one oral contract covering the road from Merced to Tipton, or did you divide and make two contracts, one to Goshen from the north, and the other from Goshen south to Tipton?

A. It was all one contract.

Q. All one contract?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Whom did you arrange that contract with, if you have not stated?

A. That was arranged, as I recall it, with Leland Stanford and Mark Hopkins.

Q. That was a verbal contract, not in writing?

A. No; all my contracts with the company were all verbal.

Q. Now, in any of those contracts that you have mentioned, do you remember that any of the prices were left to be arranged after doing the work?

A. Yes.

Q. In what case was that?

A. That was building from Gilroy to Pajaro, we arranged 726 for the earth work, and the rock work was left until after the road was completed, because then we could ascertain better what the price should be, as it would show; it was uncovered in places, and it would show after the work was completed, where we could not see before, and we agreed to make the price on that after it showed what it was.

Q. After it was completed did you make a price for the rock work?

A. Yes; we did.

Q. Whom was that fixed with?

A. I think they were all there at that time, Leland Stanford, Mark Hopkins, Mr. Crocker, and C. P. Huntington. Mr. Huntington said, "What price do you expect for this work"? and I named a price that I thought I ought to have, and he said, "Don't you think that is high, in comparison with the earthwork"? and I thought it was not, and after considerable talk he said, "All right; I guess that is right; go ahead."

Q. And did they all agree to it?

A. They all agreed to it; they said that was satisfactory.

Q. Did that apply, that case where you omitted to fix a price
727 for the rock work, did that apply for the sections Gilroy to Tres Pinos and also Gilroy to Pajaro?

A. Both, I believe. There was very little rock on the Tres Pinos line.

Q. For what company were those sections built from Gilroy that you have mentioned?

A. That work was done for the Contract & Finance Company, I think; I think so.

Q. If you remember, what railroad company took the road?

A. I think that was on the Central Pacific.

Q. The Central?

A. I think so. I would have to stop and think a little bit; it has been a good while.

Mr. McClennen. I suppose there is no difference between us as to the fact, is there, that that was really the Southern Pacific?

Mr. Herrin. No; there is not. It was the Southern Pacific. The Central Pacific did not extend there.

Q. But you do not recall as to that?

A. I am not certain.

Q. It was pretty hard to tell, when the same crowd were doing everything, what you were doing and for which particular company?

728 A. Yes.

Q. What did you do next in this railroad work?

A. After we got through at Tipton I had to go to Los Angeles and build a line from San Fernando Mission to Spadre.

Q. Do you remember when you finished that work, or when it had to be finished?

A. That was to be done before the 1st day of January, 1874.

Q. In 1874?

A. I think so.

Q. Was there any other work being done there at that time?

A. There was a short line that I contracted for with somebody down below Los Angeles; I can not tell the place. It was six or eight miles.

Q. I mean was there any other work being done on this line when you went there?

A. When I went there they had commenced work. They had one of my old men there, but it was not satisfactory, and Stanford said, "He will not get there on time", and he wanted I should go 729 down and take charge of that work, and I did, and built that. It had to be done before the 1st day of January, 1874.

Q. How many men did you send down to finish the line?

A. Well, I came back here and sent down 400 men, and I went down there and stayed there and took hold of it and finished the work before the 1st day of January.

Q. How was that work done; by contract or by any construction company?

A. I think it was the Contract & Finance Company.

Q. The Contract & Finance Company?

A. Yes; I think so.

Q. Whom did you take instructions from in doing that work?

A. Mr. Stanford more particularly, and Mark Hopkins had something to do with it.

Q. And you were acting as superintendent of construction?

A. Yes.

Q. What was the next work you did?

A. I did not do any other work until, I believe, I commenced at Yuma and built south from Yuma.

Mr. McCLENNEN. He said "superintendent of construction."
730 Does that mean he was not the contractor?

Mr. HERRIN. It was not his contract; he was working for the Contract & Finance Company as superintendent of construction.

Q. When you went to Yuma and built the line east and south, with whom did you arrange that matter?

A. I arranged that with Leland Stanford.

Q. Did you take the contract?

A. No, sir.

Q. How was it done?

A. I went there as superintendent of construction.
Q. For what company?
A. The Pacific Improvement Company.
Q. Well, was or was not that company organized to do that work?
A. It was organized at that time.
Q. And what official position did you hold in that company?
A. I was superintendent of construction and president of the Pacific Improvement Company.
Q. Did you have full charge of the work then?
A. Yes; I did.
781 Q. How did you get along with that work?
A. Well, we built to Casa Grande.
Q. In Arizona?
A. In Arizona; and then the work was suspended for a time.
Q. How long was it suspended, do you remember?
A. Yes; about a year.
Q. And what did you do then, during the time that was suspended?
A. I came to Oakland and built the Oakland Mole.
Q. For what company?
A. The Central Pacific.
Q. The Central Pacific Railroad Company?
A. Yes.
Q. And did you build any other line up here in California?
A. Yes; I built a short line into Monterey from Castroville; that was a contract.
Q. Then did you return to Casa Grande?
A. I returned to Casa Grande the next year and took up the work with the Southern Pacific again, building south.
Q. How far did you build from Casa Grande before you 782 stopped?
A. We went through Arizona and New Mexico and into Texas as far as the Pecos River.
Q. How far is that east of El Paso, about?
A. Well, nearly 500 miles, as I recall it.
Q. I think it is 418, isn't it?
A. Something like that.
Q. Did you make any reports of the progress of that work to anyone, and if so, to whom?
A. Yes; I reported to C. P. Huntington. Soon after, or about the time—excuse me, I don't know whether it is proper to answer any further.
Q. Yes; go on.
A. About the time we commenced work at Casa Grande I got instructions from Mr. Huntington to report the track laying to him at New York every night, which I did, until the work was completed to the Pecos River.

Q. How did you make the reports?

A. By telegraph.

Q. You sent him a telegram every night of the mileage of track laying done during the day?

A. Yes; so many feet every day.

733 Q. Do you remember about when it was that you got to the Pecos River?

A. No; I can't remember.

Q. During the time you were doing this work from Casa Grande to Pecos River how were you paid—how were the men paid off—do you know by what means? Was there any pay car sent down?

A. A pay car was sent down, and everybody paid in cash.

Q. What pay car was it—of what company?

A. Well, Mr. Redington was paying all over the system, I believe, for the Central Pacific and the Southern Pacific.

Q. It was the pay car, though, of what company? Which company's pay car was it? Mr. Redington, whom you mentioned, what company was he paymaster of?

A. I think he was the paymaster for both of them; he did the paying. Mr. Hanford was the paymaster of record.

Q. Well, was that for the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. Yes; he was.

Q. Do you remember whether it was for one company or the other?

734 A. I do not know whether he was or not. I think that Captain Hanford was paymaster for both companies, as I recall it, and Mr. Redington was the deputy who went on the road and paid the men.

Q. Now, when you completed any section of this road from Goshen south, and you turned it over for operation, what company did you turn it over to?

A. Well, it was turned over to the operating department.

Q. Of what company?

A. Well, Mr. Towne was superintendent of the Central Pacific and the Southern Pacific also, and he was the man that the work was turned over to.

Q. Do you know what company operated the Central Pacific Railroad, the main line from Ogden, when it was first opened?

A. The Central Pacific, as long as I had anything to do with it.

Q. I mean the company that first took it over.

A. That was the Central Pacific Railroad Company.

Q. The Central Pacific Railroad Company took that over and operated it?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, didn't it also operate the line from Lathrop to Goshen?

735 A. Yes.

Q. Didn't it also operate the line south of Goshen, as fast as that was turned over?

A. Yes; it was turned over to the operating department, and Mr. Towne was the general superintendent and took charge of the work as it was turned over.

Q. You were instructed, were you not, as soon as those sections were completed and ready to turn over for operation, to turn them over to Towne as operating manager?

A. Yes; to turn them over; and I notified him when it was ready for them to take it.

Q. You notified Mr. Towne that a section of line, describing it, was ready to be turned over?

A. Yes.

Q. And Mr. Towne took charge of it and operated it from that date?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, the pay car that came down and paid you off monthly, was a pay car of what company; a pay car of the company that was operating the line?

A. Yes.

736 Q. Because it would pay off the men on the operating part of the line, and then continue on to the front and pay off your men; is that so?

A. Yes; that is right.

Mr. McCLENNEN. I will not put this in the form of an objection, but I think I ought to say that you are going pretty far toward leading.

Mr. HERRIN. Yes; I know. I will try to avoid that.

Q. After completing the work to the Pecos River, where did you go to do any further work?

A. I had orders to go to Redding and build the California & Oregon road.

Q. To build a line to Oregon?

A. Build a line to Oregon; but before we got part of our force up there, orders came to stay at Mojave and build a road to the Needles, 250 miles.

Q. Did you do that?

A. I did that.

Q. How did you do that work, as a contractor or otherwise?

A. Oh, that was done for the Pacific Improvement Company.

Q. And you were acting in what capacity?

737 A. I was acting the same as I did before, as superintendent of construction.

Q. When you completed the line from Mojave to the Needles, then did you go north?

A. Then I went north to Redding and built the road from there over the Siskiyou Mountains to Rogue River.

Mr. HERRIN. That is, the Rogue River Valley; to Ashland properly.

Mr. MCCLENNEN. I understand his building covered all the way from Mojave to the Needles?

Mr. HERRIN. Yes.

Q. Do you remember whom you got your orders from when you were moving north to the Oregon line, and when you were told to stop at Mojave? Who instructed you to stop building the line from Mojave to the Needles?

A. I think that order came from Leland Stanford.

Q. Now, you have described your work over these lines, first on the Central Pacific out to Ogden, next from Lathrop south to Goshen, and from Goshen south to the Pecos River, and also other lines in Oregon.

A. Excuse me; I do not know but I have got mixed there. Will you read that again?

738 Q. You have described your work that you have done, first on the Central Pacific to Ogden; next on the Southern Pacific line from Goshen to Pecos River?

A. No, sir.

Q. I do not mean in order.

A. Oh, in order?

Q. I mean you did that work?

A. That was not the next.

Q. No; I don't mean that; I mean that you had worked on the Central Pacific line, main line; that you had worked also on the Southern Pacific main line from Goshen to Pecos River. Was there any difference in the people you were working for in one line as contradistinguished from the other?

Mr. MCCLENNEN. That I object to as calling upon the witness to draw a conclusion on facts which he has already stated, indicative of the companies for which he was working in different operations.

The WITNESS. Shall I answer that?

Q. Yes.

A. No, sir; I took my orders from Charles Crocker, Leland Stanford, Mark Hopkins, and C. P. Huntington, and no one else.
739 Their order, from any of them, was always good to me.

Q. Was it the same on the Southern Pacific Railroad Company as it was on the Central Pacific Railroad Company? That is the question I would ask.

Mr. McCLENNEN. The same objection, and as leading.

A. It was the same.

Q. Did you use the same outfit, the same implements, on the one line that you did on the other?

A. Yes.

Q. What constituted your outfit?

A. We had horses and carts, teams and wagons, plows and scrapers.

Q. In doing all this work didn't you move substantially that same outfit around on the different sections of line that you have described?

Mr. McCLENNEN. Please note the same objection, and as leading.

A. Always.

Q. In other words, you did not have one outfit for the Southern Pacific and another outfit for the Central Pacific?

Mr. McCLENNEN. The same objection.

740 A. No, sir. Lots of the tools and horses that we used on the Central went on to the Southern.

Q. And back again when you did work for the Central at last?

A. They came right back; moved back.

Q. When did Mr. Hopkins die?

A. Mr. Hopkins died some time in 1872, I guess.

Q. No.

A. Well, I disremember; I can not tell. Those records all went into the office, and then I was through with them.

Q. Do you remember when Mr. Crocker died? He died after Mr. Hopkins, did he?

A. Oh, yes; several years. I can not tell that offhand.

Mr. HERRIN. You may take the witness.

Cross-examination by Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. The Southern Pacific Railroad had been built as far as Gilroy before you had anything to do with it?

A. Yes.

Q. It ran from where to Gilroy when you first knew it?

A. From San Francisco to Gilroy, you mean?

Q. From San Francisco to Gilroy?

741 A. Yes.

Q. You first had anything to do with the Southern Pacific Railroad some time in 1870?

A. I forget the date.

Q. Let us work it back. You finished up at Ogden on May 10, 1869?

A. 1869; yes.

Q. And then there was some little time elapsed before you went over to Gilroy?

A. Yes.

Q. So that would make it, pretty surely, as late as 1870 before you began at Gilroy?

A. Oh, yes; even later than that, I think.

Q. As nearly as you can carry it out, what would you fix as the date when you began to extend from Gilroy that Southern Pacific line that then ran from San Francisco to Gilroy?

A. Let me think a moment.

Q. Don't hurry.

A. Well, I can not tell. I should think it was in 1871 or 1872. I have no records and there are a good many things to remember.

742 Q. In 1871 or 1872, or whenever that date was, Mr. Huntington was some kind of an officer of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, wasn't he?

A. Yes; so I understand.

Q. And Mr. Crocker was also?

A. Yes.

Q. And Mr. Stanford was also?

A. Yes.

Q. And Mr. Hopkins was?

A. Mr. Hopkins was a director as long as he lived.

Q. Do you remember who any of the other officers of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company were when you began to work for it in 1871 or 1872?

A. There was no one in authority that I ever took orders from but those four men.

Q. Well, you did happen to see another director around occasionally, did you not?

A. Oh, yes; they seldom came on the work after we were building south. Occasionally, that was all.

Q. All the time that you worked for the Central Pacific Railroad Company, those same four gentlemen were officers of the company?

743 A. They were the directors, yes.

Q. And occupied other positions also—president or treasurer or vice president or what not?

A. There was the president and vice president, and the other two, I guess, were directors. None of the secretaries, or any of them ever came near me.

Q. Except so far as these four gentlemen might interfere with you, you were boss of the situation?

A. Yes; I guess I was.

Q. This Contract & Finance Company, that was another corporation, was it?

A. Yes; that was the corporation that took the contract from the railroad company.

Q. And did that corporation have some officers, too?

A. Yes.

Q. Who were the officers of that company?

A. Charles Crocker, Leland Stanford, Mark Hopkins, and C. P. Huntington.

Q. Then there was another company, after awhile, called the Pacific Improvement Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And who were the officers of that company?

744 A. I was the president of that company and W. E. Brown was the vice president.

Q. Did Mr. Huntington have any position in that company?

A. Not as an officer of that company, I think.

Q. Did Mr. Stanford have any position in it?

A. I think not.

Q. And Mr. Crocker?

A. I think not.

Q. Or Mr. Hopkins?

A. Mr. Hopkins had died prior to the organization of that company.

Q. Was there any Pacific Improvement Company besides you and Mr. Brown?

A. There were some directors. Mr. Douty was a director; and I do not believe I can remember who they were. Of course there was—no; I can not tell who they were.

Q. Did you keep the records of that company?

A. No, sir; those records were kept in the office. Mr. Douty was our secretary, and the pay rolls and all the reports went right into the office at that time.

Q. From time to time you used to get working directions

745 from Mr. Crocker?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And sometimes you would get working directions from Mr. Huntington?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And in the same way from Mr. Stanford or Mr. Hopkins?

A. Yes, sir. As I say, not from Mr. Hopkins, because Mr. Hopkins had died prior to the organization of that company.

Q. When any one of those gentlemen gave you directions, you did not care particularly whether he was doing it as president of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company or the Central Pacific Railroad Company or the Contract & Finance Company or the Pacific Improvement Company?

A. They were authoritative.

Q. Then you did not know at any particular time in which capacity they might be talking with you?

A. They talked to me as owners.

Q. You paid no attention to the particular corporation that they happened to be representing or acting as at any given time, did you?

746 A. No, sir.

Q. Your business was entirely construction business?

A. Yes.

Q. You knew nothing directly about the operation of the railroads after they were turned over to the operating department?

A. No, sir.

Q. Mr. Towne was at the head of the operating department?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Of both the Central Pacific Railroad and the Southern Pacific Railroad?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And when you turned over a line of track to Mr. Towne you would not know particularly which railroad he was taking it up to operate for?

A. No; not of my own knowledge.

Q. This construction outfit that you spoke of, I understood Mr. Herrin to say that you used the same outfit throughout, and you assented to that. You did not mean it quite that way, did you?

A. Well, a good deal of the outfit of the Southern Pacific had been disposed of before we went there.

747 Q. I suppose a good many of those picks and shovels, and even the horses that you began with, had got rather useless before you finished up, had they not?

A. Worn out.

Q. And when you say that you used the same outfit you mean that when you finished up one job if you had any outfit for construction purposes left you moved that outfit on to the next job you went on to do construction work?

A. Yes; in this way: While I was working by private contract I bought a great deal of that stuff; but that was all disposed of, and never went any further. Then, when they started again the orders were to Ben Crocker, who bought horses and wagons and all the sort of thing for the Central Pacific, to ship that to Yuma. There was lots of stuff that had been used—well, lots of that stuff had been used in building from Goshen to San Fernando that I had not used, and that stuff, as I understood it, what there was that was suitable, was sent to Yuma when I started that work.

Q. Did that outfit have any labels on it?

A. That stuff when it was shipped to Yuma was shipped to me, I guess.

Q. I mean did you have your shovels or picks stenciled 748 with any name?

A. No; I do not think so.

Q. Did your work cars have any particular name on them?

A. Yes.

Q. Did they have the name of the Pacific Improvement Company on them?

A. I can not tell whether that was the Pacific Improvement Company that was on our working train, or whether it was Southern Pacific, as we went south. I do not remember.

Q. When you were working on the route up to Ogden, were the cars marked "Contract & Finance Company" or were they marked "Central Pacific"?

A. I do not know; I forget.

Q. You say that you stopped working on the Central Pacific Railroad at Goshen because the Southern Pacific had to build twenty miles in order to save its franchise?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did the twenty miles that was built from Goshen hitch right on to the Central Pacific at Goshen?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was there anything by which you could tell where it was Central Pacific and where it was Southern Pacific?

749 A. I knew when we built it where it was.

Q. I mean, you knew because somebody told you that from here on it was Southern Pacific?

A. Yes.

Q. Did the Central Pacific stop at any particular place at Goshen? Was it at the station?

A. I can not tell. It was about there.

Q. That was about 1872, was it not?

A. Yes.

Q. Was Goshen any place at all?

A. Nothing.

Q. Nothing at all?

A. Nothing.

Q. So that the Southern Pacific rails fastened on to the Centr Pacific rails practically right out in the middle of the wildernes

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And they did it because they had got to get twenty miles Southern Pacific built before January 1st?

A. Before the 1st day of July.

Q. Before the 1st of July?

A. Yes.

750 Q. I see. And you understood that was because of so provision in the franchise of the Southern Pacific that th must build so many miles of road before a certain date?

A. That was it.

Q. Did you know anything about the leases that were made by t Southern Pacific to the Central Pacific or by the Central Pacific the Southern Pacific?

A. Not of my own knowledge.

Q. You never had any written contract at any time, did you?

A. Never.

Q. Did you know anything about the contracts between the Co tract & Finance Company and the railroad? Did you know wheth they had any contracts or not; any written ones?

A. I don't know.

Q. When you were president of the Pacific Improvement Compa did that company then make any written contract with the railroa

A. Yes; I think so.

Q. They made a regular written contract, then?

A. I think so; yes.

Q. I suppose you do not know anything about where th

751 contract is?

A. No.

Q. What is the last that you knew of it?

A. That is all I knew about it. When I completed the work turned it over. That was the last I knew of that, and as for the off work, I knew very little of it. Although I was president of t company I was in the construction end of it.

Q. You were the construction president of the company?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you know anything about the books of the company?

A. Very little.

Q. Did they have any?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. Did you ever see any more than the outside of them?

A. Well, yes; I have seen more than that, but I knew very lit of them.

Q. Did you ever see the books of the Contract & Finance Company?

A. I do not think I did.

Q. You say that you used to report to Mr. Huntington in New York every day by telegraph the amount of track you had 752 laid down in Texas?

A. That day; yes.

Q. Did you know why you did that?

A. Well, in a way. There was a strife at that time between Huntington and Tom Scott; between the Southern Pacific and the Texas & Pacific; and Tom Scott, as they told me, went before the Senate committee and swore that there was not a man working in Arizona on the Southern Pacific; that there was nothing being done; and Huntington wanted me to telegraph that every night.

Q. It was a sort of a race between you and Tom Scott as to who would get to any place first?

A. I think Mr. Huntington telegraphed me once and said that they had agreed on a meeting at Sierra Blanca, if I could get there in time. I thought I could get there in time. I told him if I didn't do it there wouldn't be a live Chinaman left in western Texas.

Q. When Mr. Crocker went to Europe, at that time you have spoken of in your testimony, he severed his connection with all these enterprises, did he not?

A. I think not.

Q. If such was the fact, you never heard of it?

753 A. No. As soon as he came home he wrote to me to know what was being done.

Q. And you never knew that he had been out of these enterprises at all in the interval while he was away?

A. No.

Q. It was at Sierra Blanca that you met the Texas & Pacific?

A. Yes.

Q. And the Texas & Pacific was the road that Tom Scott was instrumental in building?

A. Yes.

Q. He was the president of the Pennsylvania Railroad?

A. I believe so.

Mr. McClennen. That is all.

Mr. Herrin. That is all.

Of course it is understood, Mr. McClennen, that the same rule applies to witnesses called on behalf of the defendants as was applied to witnesses called on behalf of the petitioner, namely, that witnesses shall not be required to sign their testimony unless special request to that effect is made to the examiner by counsel within twenty-four hours from the time the witness was excused.

Mr. McCLENNEN. Yes; the same provision that applied to our witnesses.

754 HENRY CLAY MARTIN was called as a witness on behalf of the defendants, and having been duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Where do you reside, Mr. Martin?

A. San Francisco.

Q. What is your business?

A. I am a machinist. At present I am master mechanic of the Belt Railroad for the State board of harbor commissioners.

Q. In San Francisco?

A. Yes.

Q. How long have you been there?

A. Nearly twelve years.

Q. Did you ever have anything to do for the Southern Pacific Railroad Company?

A. Yes, sir. I was a locomotive engineer for them a good many years, and conductor——

Q. What was your first work that you did for them?

A. My first work? When I came out I could not get on as engineer at first, and I went to work for Ben Crocker at 755 Sacramento. He needed a hand, and I went in as a handy man around his shop in Sacramento.

Q. What shop was that? The Central Pacific shop?

A. Well, it was his own shop. He did some contracting work for the Central Pacific; it was all work for the Central Pacific that he was doing.

Q. What was the first that you did for the Central Pacific Railroad that you remember?

A. The first work that I did for the Central Pacific Railroad—that is, for the operating department—was this: through Ben Crocker I got on to work as locomotive engineer, and I was sent out to Carlin.

Mr. McCLENNEN. Where was that?

The WITNESS. Carlin, Nevada; Humboldt division. Then from there I was sent to the Ogden division, at Terrace, Utah.

Q. You were locomotive engineer?

A. Yes.

Q. Making your run first with headquarters at Carlin?

A. Yes.

Q. And later——

756 A. Later at Terrace, Utah. Then back to Wadsworth, running on the Truckee division, from Wadsworth to Truckee. Then, from there I came down to Sacramento and ran over on the Sacramento division.

Q. Did you run an engine on the Sacramento division?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember what year that was?

A. It was 1874 when I was running out of Sacramento.

Mr. McClennen. 1874?

The Witness. No; I think it was 1873 when I came back on the Sacramento division from Wadsworth.

Q. What did you do next for any of these companies?

A. While I was on the Sacramento division I was on a work train for the track department, and they thought I was an exceptionally good man, so they—Mr. Stevens was general master mechanic, and he had orders to send me down to the front.

Q. Where was that?

A. The front was near Sumner, where Bakersfield is now, I guess. It was all sagebrush prairie then.

Q. What did you do down there?

A. I was engineer and conductor on the construction train.

757 Mr. Orr. Did you give the year when you went to Bakersfield?

The Witness. That was along in 1875. I think it was late in the summer. Everything was burnt up.

Q. You worked there as engineer and conductor of a construction train during the building of the line from the front, as you call it, to Los Angeles?

A. We made connection at Lang station.

Q. At what time?

A. That was the 6th of September, 1876.

Q. Your connection at Lang means you connected the line between Los Angeles and Bakersfield at Lang?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you were on that work of construction?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. From Bakersfield to Los Angeles?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And finished the line and made connection September 6, 1876?

A. Yes.

Q. At Lang?

A. Yes.

758 Q. What did you do next?

A. I stayed on work trains, riprapping the road up through the canyon there——

Q. Which canyon?

A. The Soledad Canyon, between Mojave and Los Angeles. We had some washouts there. Then the outfit was moved to Indio. We built from Indio to the Colorado River right opposite Yuma.

Q. You worked as engineer and conductor on the construction train in that work?

A. Yes. I think we got to the Colorado River the 14th of June, 1877.

Mr. McCLENNEN. That is the Yuma——

Mr. HERRIN. Colorado River, he says. They had to build a bridge afterwards.

Mr. McCLENNEN. Yes.

The WITNESS. It took about a year to build the bridge.

Mr. HERRIN. Yes. It was a year afterwards before they got across.

Q. Then what work did you do next, after you got down to the Colorado River?

A. Then the outfit was moved up, some of it to Oakland 759 and some of it to Suisun, and built across the marsh there, from Suisun to Benicia and from Bay Shore and San Pablo to Tracy. We called it Corral Hollow then.

Q. Where did you go next?

A. I think the outfit was moved to Yuma.

Q. Yuma, Arizona?

A. Yes; after we finished up there.

Q. Who did you work under there?

A. J. H. Strobridge.

Q. The witness who has just testified?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did you do there?

A. I was in the same capacity, engineer and conductor of the train.

Q. What work did you do? How far did you build the road from Yuma before you stopped?

A. To Casa Grande, 182 miles.

Q. From Yuma?

A. Yes; from Yuma.

Q. Did they suspend work there?

A. Yes; for about a year.

Q. Then where did you go?

760 A. Well, I went back to Los Angeles and took a position as passenger conductor.

Q. But did you at any time afterwards go back to Casa Grande and build the road on?

A. Yes; about, I think it was, eleven months after that I started up again. I went back with Mr. Strobridge then, with the same job I had before.

Q. How far did you go east or south of Casa Grande before you stopped?

A. To Pecos River, in Texas.

Q. How far?

A. 418 miles east of El Paso.

Q. Do you remember when you finished that work at Pecos River and made connection?

A. It was Christmas Day, 1882, or the day after, we started back.

Q. Was there anything that impressed the fact on your mind as to that date?

A. Well, the boys went out and got a lot of wild turkeys for Christmas dinner. There were plenty of wild turkeys along the Rio Grande then.

761 Q. In addition to being a mere engineer and conductor of a construction train, were there any other construction trains used in this work except the one you were running?

A. Oh, yes. We had eighteen pile-driving trains driving piles. You see, in constructing the road there were a good many washes that we fixed up temporarily with ties, and then the pile-driving outfits came along and put in permanent work, so there were times when we built over four miles of road in a day.

Q. So that you had several other construction trains?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you have anything to do with them?

A. I had everything to do with them, with everything that ran on the construction track, before we turned it over to the operating department.

Q. What were you doing with it?

A. I was train dispatcher, train master; every night I had a system of having each train—they supplied them with a train operator and they reported per orders at eight o'clock each night——

Q. I do not want to go into too much detail. Mr. McClennen can ask for that if he wants it. To make a simple statement, you had charge of all these other trains?

762 A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember sending any telegrams to Mr. Huntington about the track laid during the day, during this work?

A. There were times when Mr. Strobridge was not on the work, and he cautioned me not to forget to report the station—you see, each 100 feet of road had a station number——

Q. Yes.

A. (Continuing.) Not to forget to report the station each night as it was reached, the number of feet and the station, to Mr. Huntington.

Q. Did you do it?

A. Yes.

Q. You sent a telegram in the absence of Mr. Strobridge?

A. Yes.

Q. To whom?

A. To C. P. Huntington.

Q. In New York City?

A. Yes, sir; 20 Broad Street, I believe it was.

Q. Did you know Mr. Charles Crocker?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you see him during the time of this work from Yuma to Pecos River?

763 A. Yes. He used to come down very often.

Q. Did he have anything to do with the work?

A. Yes, sir. We thought that he was the whole head of the outfit.

Q. Well, did you take any orders from him?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How often did you see him during this work at the front?

Mr. McClennen. This is Mr. Huntington you are referring to?

Mr. Herrin. No; Mr. Crocker.

A. Charles Crocker. Oh, when he was on the coast; sometimes it would be a month or six weeks, or something like that, and then he would come down.

Q. Did he give any orders or directions when he came out to the front?

A. Oh, he always wanted to know how we were getting along.

Q. Did you know Mr. Leland Stanford?

A. Yes.

Q. Did he have anything to do with this?

A. Yes. He was not down there as often as Mr. Crocker 764 was.

Q. Did you know C. P. Huntington?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you see him at any time at the front during this work?

A. Just once; when we were near Sierra Blanca he came out. That is the only time; that is, on that part of the work.

Q. In building this line, as fast as you completed a section of it, was it turned over to any company for operation?

A. Yes; it was turned over to the Central Pacific Railroad Company, Mr. Towne.

Q. Mr. Towne was general superintendent of that company?

A. Yes. Sometimes he would come out a few days before, when we would notify him when he could have the road, and make a trip over it and bring his division superintendents that were going to operate it, to look out and see how many sidings we had provided for him, and the like of that.

Q. Do you remember from whom you ordered your supplies in doing this work?

A. The supplies for the rolling stock?

765 Q. Anything you wanted.

A. All of our supplies came from the Central Pacific Railroad Company.

Q. Do you remember whether they had any purchasing or supply agent that you corresponded with or store house from which you got any supplies?

A. Well, Ben Crocker supplied the camp at the time with supplies, teams, and the like of that. A. J. Stevens and Ben Welch supplied any parts for repairing locomotives.

Q. That was Stevens?

A. Yes.

Q. Who was Stevens?

A. He was general master mechanic of the Central Pacific Railroad Company.

Q. Where was he located?

A. Sacramento.

Q. Sometimes you had to have your locomotives repaired, did you not?

A. Yes.

Q. Where were they sent for repairs?

A. To Sacramento.

Q. At the Central Pacific Railroad Company's shops?

766 A. Yes.

Q. And your cars and other equipment used, were they repaired in the same way?

A. Yes.

Q. At the same place?

A. At the same place. Ben Welch had charge of the repairs of the cars in Sacramento.

Q. He was working for what company?

A. He was master car builder of the Central Pacific Railroad Company.

Q. After you left the Pecos River, where did you go?

A. We moved the same outfit to Mojave.

Q. Then what did you do?

A. We built from Mojave down to the Needles. We got through at the Needles on the 22nd of June, 1883.

Q. Then where did you go?

A. We went to Redding, California.

Q. What work did you do there?

A. We started in on what we called the Oregon & California Extension.

Q. How far did you build from Redding?

A. To Ashland.

767 Q. To Ashland, Oregon?

A. Yes.

Q. And to what company were those sections of the road, when completed, from Redding north to Ashland, turned over for operation?

A. To the Central Pacific.

Q. Mr. Towne was general superintendent?

A. Yes.

Q. Just the same as in the case of the road down in Arizona and New Mexico and Texas?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then did you have anything to do with building any part of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company's line from near Soledad?

A. Yes.

Q. What part of it?

A. From Soledad to San Margarita.

Q. What year was that, if you remember?

A. I think that was in 1886, if I recollect correctly, or 1887.

Q. Who were you working for down there?

A. The same outfit. No change.

768 Q. The same men?

A. Yes, sir; the same officials.

Q. The same men you were working for in Arizona, New Mexico, and Texas?

A. Yes.

Q. The same men you were working for from Redding to Ashland?

A. Yes.

Q. And you had the same outfit?

A. Yes.

Q. It was just a continuation of the same outfit of engines, and so forth?

A. Yes; all Central Pacific equipment.

Q. It was all Central Pacific Railroad?

A. Yes.

Q. Who was your paymaster during all of this work?

A. The same paymaster. Part of the time he was Mr. Hanford, and sometimes it was C. H. Redington.

Q. What company were they acting for?

A. We did not know any other but the Central Pacific Railroad Company.

Mr. HERRIN. You may take the witness.

769 Cross-examination by Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. When were you last connected with construction?

A. When we built from Monterey to Lake Majella. That was a short branch.

Q. When was that?

A. That was in 1890.

Q. And under whom did you do that?

A. Under Mr. Strobridge and the same outfit.

Q. You are using the term "outfit" to mean the people?

A. The people; yes, sir; the same people.

Q. Well, what railroad paid you for your work?

A. The Central Pacific. We were supposed to be working for the Pacific Improvement Company, however. The pay roll read "Pacific Improvement Company."

Q. Did not the Pacific Improvement Company pay you?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you distribute any money yourself?

A. No, sir.

Q. You simply got your own pay?

A. Each man was paid separately, right at the pay car window.

770 Q. Who was the man who paid you?

A. Later, in late years, Mr. Redington, Charlie Redington.

Q. Take it along in 1890, the last of your work; you were paid at the Central Pacific pay car?

A. Yes.

Q. You supposed you were getting money from the Central Pacific Railroad for doing the work?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you used to see the trains that were run on the finished part of the road in those days?

A. Oh, yes. I connected with them at whatever commercial station we had.

Q. How were they marked?

A. Well, first off everything was C. P. R. R., until later, in the late eighties, there was rolling stock, locomotives and engines marked "S. P."

Q. But this pay car that you spoke of used to be marked "Central Pacific"?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. Away along to 1890?

A. Yes.

771 Q. Did some of the other rolling stock used to continue to be marked "Central Pacific"?

A. Oh, yes, yes.

Q. How were the engines marked down on that road?

A. Some of them were marked "Southern Pacific", some of the new rolling stock, before we finished up down in Texas, was marked "S. P. of N. M."—Southern Pacific of New Mexico and S. P. of Arizona.

Q. After you had finished the road from Yuma through Arizona and that road was operated, along in the beginning of the eighties, say, 1881, how were the cars marked? Were they marked "S. P. of Arizona"?

A. Some of them were.

Q. Then did you have some marked "S. P. of New Mexico"?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How did they used to be marked over in Texas after you got beyond El Paso?

A. We used the same ones.

Q. The same?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you have S. P. of Arizona cars over there?

A. Yes.

772 Q. And S. P. of New Mexico?

A. Yes; and Central Pacific Railroad.

Q. And some central Pacific Railroad?

A. Yes. We had more Central Pacific Railroad than any other.

Q. Did you have any Galveston, Harrisburg & San Antonio?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever see that name on any cars?

A. Not before connection was made.

Q. That is, not until you got to the Pecos River?

A. That is right. Then I left. The next day, when we got through down there, I came back to Mojave. I did not go back into that country for several years.

Q. So that, as far as you know, you personally never saw any railroad cars marked Galveston, Harrisburg & San Antonio?

A. Not up until that time.

Q. Have you ever since?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. You have since?

A. Yes.

Q. Where have you seen them?

773 A. Out of El Paso. I went back there—I went to running out of El Paso, Texas, in 1895, as an engineer on the G., H. & S. A.

Q. And they used to have their rolling stock marked G., H. & S. A.?

A. Yes.

Q. All of it?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you mean that in 1895 you were working directly for the G., H. & S. A.?

A. Yes.

Q. You got your pay from them?

A. Yes.

Q. And they were operating the road?

A. Yes.

Q. And the G., H. & S. A. operated from what point to what point?

A. They operated from Houston to El Paso?

Q. Did you run east of Houston?

A. No, sir; I never ran east of Del Rio. That constituted the El Paso division, from El Paso to Del Rio, Texas.

Q. Mr. Towne was general manager of the Southern Pa-
774 cific Railroad and of the Central Pacific Railroad, was he not?

A. Yes, sir. Well, the passes and letterheads were headed "Central Pacific Railroad Company and leased lines."

Q. How late do you remember seeing passes and the letterheads in use at the time bearing those words?

A. Oh, up until 1890.

Q. As late as 1890?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember any of them after 1890?

A. I was not on the road directly after 1890. I went into the Del Monte Hotel, as chief engineer, in Monterey. I quit the road.

Q. Take it along in 1890; what part of the road was being run by the Central Pacific?

A. From Ogden to El Paso, Texas.

Q. That is, the Central Pacific, from Ogden through Sacramento to San Francisco Bay?

A. Yes.

Q. And from San Francisco Bay down through California to El Paso, Texas?

A. Yes, sir.

775 Q. How late did the Central Pacific Railroad continue to operate both those lines?

A. I could not tell you. I could not tell you that; but while I was working on the road I know that their letterheads and passes that were issued were headed "Central Pacific Railroad Company and leased lines."

Q. As late as August 1890, was that so?

A. Well, as late as June—May and June.

Q. How do you fix the time as May and June?

A. Because I was at that time conductor and engineer of a little local train that ran from Del Monte Hotel out to Lake Majella, and used to get passes issued by Mr. Towne, headed "Central Pacific Railroad Company and leased lines." I took up those passes as conductor on the train.

Q. Did you stop on that line in June, 1890?

A. I think it was September when I went into the hotel.

Q. September, 1890?

A. Yes.

Q. Was the Central Pacific Railroad operating both those lines up to September, 1890?

A. I could not say whether it was up to September or not. The reason I say June, 1890, is this: Mr. Towne gave a pass, and I 776 did not want to recognize it because Mr. A. C. Bassett was superintendent of what we called the Northern Division, and he was not under Mr. Towne's jurisdiction, and he told me that Mr. Towne's passes were no good on his division.

Q. And you remember that as being in June, 1890?

A. Yes.

Q. How do you fix the year 1890?

A. The year when I went and took a job as chief engineer of the Hotel Del Monte.

Q. When did you leave the service of the Central Pacific Railroad?

A. How do you mean; in what capacity?

Q. In any capacity.

A. Well, it was at that time, when I went to the hotel down there.

Q. I see. And that, you say, was in September, 1890?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You went out of railroading altogether, then, did you?

A. For awhile; yes, sir.

Q. How long were you out of railroading?

777 A. I stayed down there pretty nearly two years. Then I came up to Oakland and went into the Pacific Improvement Company. I considered that I was working all the time for the P. I. Company. They owned and operated the hotel.

Q. That is, the Pacific Improvement Company operated the hotel?

A. Yes, sir. Then I came up and opened up a creosoting works, creosoting timber here in Oakland; and that was under the Pacific Improvement Company.

Q. That was under the Pacific Improvement Company also?

A. Yes.

Q. How long were you at that?

A. A couple of years. I was there over two years.

Q. Then where did you go?

A. Then I went to El Paso, Texas, from there.

Q. And went to work for the Galveston, Harrisburg & San Antonio Railroad?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever go to work for the Southern Pacific Company?

A. Not after that; no, sir.

Q. Who was Ben Crocker?

778 A. Well, in his time he was a very conspicuous man. He was very close to Charles Crocker. I don't know whether he was any relation to him or not, but he did lots of odd jobs on contract work.

Q. What was his business?

A. First off, the way I came to know him was this: He had the storage of baggage; that is, any baggage that arrived in Sacramento and was there over twenty-four hours was turned over to his storehouse and then he charged storage on it. I had a trunk come out, and I was not very well fixed then to follow it up, and it was over at his storehouse, and I had to go and get it, you know, and there was quite a good deal of storage against it. That is how I came to go to work for him.

Q. You mean to work out the storage?

A. Well, there was a chance to go to work, and I accepted it. There was no chance to get on as an engineer right at that time, because there was only one road in the country then.

Q. He used to furnish some supplies for this railroad construction?

A. Yes; horses and wagons.

Q. You say he was pretty close to Charles Crocker?

779 A. In a business way. I don't know whether he was any relation to him or not.

Q. You worked on the construction of this road from Redding to Ashland, Oregon, all the way, did you?

A. Nearly all the way; yes, sir.

Q. That was constructed for what railroad?

A. For the Central Pacific Railroad.

Q. And where did the Central Pacific Railroad terminate up there when you left off?

A. At Ashland.

Q. How did it end there—in a village or in a city or town or in a forest?

A. Ashland was quite a little town.

Q. Do you remember when that was?

A. I think that was in 1885 or in the spring of 1886.

Q. In the spring of 1886?

A. I think it was; yes.

Q. What railroad operated that line?

A. From Redding up to Ashland?

Q. From Redding to Ashland.

A. The Central Pacific Railroad.

Q. How long did the Central Pacific Railroad continue 780 to operate that line?

A. As long as I know anything about it; I do not know of any other.

Q. How late did you know it?

A. Until I left there.

Q. When was that?

A. In the spring of 1886.

Q. Prior to 1895, when you were on the Galveston, Harrisburg & San Antonio, did you know of the Southern Pacific Company operating any railroads?

A. Well, it was commonly known then——

Q. I do not want what was commonly known. I am asking just if you know, yourself, of the Southern Pacific Company operating any railroads prior to 1895. Just tell me that you did or did not, one or the other.

A. Well, I thought that the Southern Pacific operated the line before I went to El Paso, as the Southern Pacific Company. I do not know just what year they organized that Southern Pacific Company. This little road here out of Frisco down to Monterey was called the northern division of the S. P. Railroad.

Q. When the Central Pacific was operating this railroad 781 that you have spoken of, down at Los Angeles, and operating this railroad up to Ashland, what railroads was the Southern Pacific operating?

A. Well, I don't know just the year that they changed the name of the operating companies. I could not tell you that, when they changed from the Central Pacific Company and leased lines to the Southern Pacific Company. I could not tell you that.

Q. You have no idea?

A. No, sir.

Q. And practically in all of this testimony you do not know at any given time whether you were working for the Central Pacific or for the Southern Pacific at a given time?

A. I am pretty sure I was working for the Central Pacific up until 1890.

Q. Until 1890?

A. Yes.

Q. But just what time after that the Southern Pacific began the operation, you do not know?

A. No, sir.

Mr. McCLENNEN. That is all.

782 Redirect examination by Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Do you remember when the name was changed from the Central Pacific Railroad to the Southern Pacific Company?

A. No, sir.

Q. You remember, however, the fact that there was a change?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You know that the Southern Pacific succeeded the Central Pacific in operating a lot of lines at some time or other?

A. Yes.

Q. But you do not recall when that was?

A. No, sir; I don't know the date.

Q. Before the Southern Pacific Company took the lines the Central Pacific was the operating company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you not remember that long after the Southern Pacific Company was operating the Central Pacific and the main line of the Southern Pacific Railroad that this northern division you spoke of was operated by the Southern Pacific Railroad Company?

783 Mr. McCLENNEN. Objected to as leading.

The WITNESS. Yes, sir.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. That is, the Southern Pacific Company did not take that northern division——

Mr. McCLENNEN. Objected to as leading.

The WITNESS. No, sir.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. (Continuing.) Until 1890 or 1891?

A. Somewhere along there; because Mr. Bassett was the head; he was the operating chief.

Q. Do you not know that before that time, before the Southern Pacific Company took this northern division, that it had for some time before that been operating the Central Pacific and the main line of the Southern Pacific Railroad?

Mr. McCLENNEN. Objected to as leading.

The WITNESS. Before the Southern Pacific Company took over the northern division?

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Yes.

A. That it was operated?

Q. That it was operating the main line of the Southern 784 Pacific Railroad through to El Paso and the Central Pacific line to Ogden, for some time before it took over the northern division of the Southern Pacific Railroad; that is, the line from San Francisco to——

A. Yes; I know that to be a fact.

Q. And that it was operating these other main lines for some time before it took over the northern division of the Southern Pacific Railroad?

A. Yes.

Mr. MCCLENNEN. The same objection.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Have you any recollection as to how long before they took over the northern division of the Southern Pacific Railroad the Southern Pacific Company had been operating these other lines?

A. They had been operating quite a while, a good many years, before they took over this northern division.

Q. But you have nothing in your mind by which you can fix the date?

A. No, sir.

Mr. HERRIN. That is all.

Mr. MCCLENNEN. That is all.

(Whereupon at 4.20 o'clock p. m. an adjournment was taken until to-morrow, Tuesday, March 2, 1915, at 2 p. m.)

TWELFTH DAY.

785 ROOM 921, FLOOD BUILDING,
San Francisco, Cal., Tuesday, March 2, 1915.

The hearing was resumed, pursuant to adjournment, at 2 o'clock p. m., before Frank R. Hanna, special examiner.

Present on behalf of the United States: James W. Orr, Esq.; Edward F. McClennen, Esq.; and Edward E. Gann, Esq., special assistants to the Attorney General.

Present on behalf of the defendants: W. F. Herrin, Esq.; J. P. Blair, Esq.; P. F. Dunne, Esq.; and Garret McEnerney, Esq., for the Southern Pacific Company.

786 Mr. HERRIN. I wish to suggest three corrections that should be made in petitioner's Exhibit 42, as follows:

At page 973 of the record the sentence "Wheatland to Yuba, September 19, 1869", should be changed to read "1868"—just a change in the year.

On page 984 of the record the line "Branch Rossi to Stratton, June 20, 1907", should be changed to "July" instead of "June."

On page 988, first line on the page, "Branch Springfield to Springfield Junction, October 1, 1896", should be changed to read "October 1, 1906."

Those are not very important, but for the sake of accuracy I suggest them, as I understand that counsel for the Government have no objection to this entry being made on the record.

Another suggestion, an omission that I wish to supply in petitioner's Exhibit 14: At page 235 it should be stated, in giving the directors and officers of the Southern Pacific Company for the year 1885, that A. N. Towne was general manager of the Southern Pacific Company. That is shown by the report made, and I do not know how it was omitted from this exhibit which we furnished. I recall Mr. Hood.

787 WILLIAM HOOD was recalled as a witness on behalf of the defendants, and, having been previously sworn, testified as follows:

Redirect examination by Mr. HERRIN:

Q. When did you enter the service of the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. On the 3rd of May, 1867.

Q. In what capacity?

A. I worked for a short time in the office of the chief engineer, and then went, about June, to work as a member of a field construction engineer party out on the road.

Q. What road?

A. Out on the Central Pacific Railroad, in the vicinity of Summit, the summit of the Sierra Nevadas.

Q. And what was your age at that time?

A. I was twenty-one years old on the 4th of February, 1867.

Q. How long did you continue your work on the Central Pacific line?

788 A. I worked on the Central Pacific Railroad in the vicinity of the summit tunnel and between there and Cold Stream Canon east of the summit tunnel until some time in December, 1867. Shall I continue?

Q. Yes.

A. Then I went to Sacramento and was detailed to go to work on the road being prepared for construction between Niles and Sacramento via Livermore Pass, my work principally being in the vicinity of Sunol and Pleasanton, which lasted until early in March, 1868. I then was directed to go out on the Central Pacific Railroad and proceeded direct to the vicinity of what afterwards became Wadsworth, Nevada, and then continued easterly from what became Wadsworth, Nevada, as instrument man in a locating party until some time in July, 1868. I then was given engineering charge of fifteen or twenty miles of railroad in the vicinity of Humboldt Station to Rose Creek Station, and thence continued easterly to as far as Promontory, Utah, in charge of successive isolated pieces of construction of several miles at a time, going from one to another as they were completed.

Mr. McCLENNEN. Is there any Promontory Point?

The WITNESS. No; Promontory station, Utah.

Mr. HERRIN. On the old line.

The WITNESS. Of the Central Pacific.

789 By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Right there, the present Promontory station, which Mr. McClennen refers to, is a station on the cut-off, is it not?

A. The Promontory station I refer to is Promontory, on the original Central Pacific Railroad.

Q. Around the north end of the lake?

A. Certainly; the only road that existed at that time.

Q. It is not on the present line?

A. This occupied until early in May, 1869, just before the final track laying was completed. I then went with a few hundred men, laborers, etc., to Palisade, Nevada, on the Central Pacific Railroad to reconstruct the road for a distance where it had been originally built with the consent of the Government on a temporary line. That ended for a considerable period my engineering connection with the Central Pacific Railroad main line.

Q. Your work was mainly the locating of that line and also taking charge. What did you do as engineer?

A. I took charge of considerable distances of construction that was given charge of.

790 You remember Mr. Strobridge, who testified here yesterday?

A. Very well.

Q. You remember his connection with that work?

A. Yes. Do you wish any more answer than that?

Q. Generally, what did he have to do with it?

A. When I first went on the Central Pacific Railroad, on its construction, the end of the track was at Cisco, and grading was in pro-ress beyond that point, tunneling, etc. At that time the Central Pacific Railroad was being built by Charles Crocker & Company, contractors, for whom we used to make monthly estimates of classified grading, masonry, tunneling, track laying, etc., the same as we do for any contractor, and Mr. Strobridge was their superintendent of construction. That arrangement lasted, as I remember it, to some point between Floriston and Reno—I do not know the exact point. Afterwards the road was built by the Contract & Finance Company, but not on a classified yardage or unit price basis, but on another basis, and Mr. Strobridge was superintendent of the forces engaged in grading and track laying, and the forces of the Contract & Finance Company, engaged in trestling and wooden bridge building, and the like, were under the superintendency of Mr. Arthur Brown, 791 and the masonry, culverts, piers, abutments, and so forth, were built by unit price contracts by individual contractors.

Q. What, if anything, did Mr. Charles Crocker have to do with that work?

A. Charles Crocker was the man to whom everyone looked connected with the construction, whether an engineer—which I can testify to positively—or others, as I know from observation, as the man from whom they received orders in particular as representing the other owners, with the exception of the distance extending about 100 miles west of Ogden, which was graded under what was known as the Mormon contract. That was in the direct charge most of the time of Mr. Leland Stanford, together with other negotiations necessary in that vicinity, and was regular contract work, such as we do nowadays by grading contracts.

Q. You knew Mr. Crocker quite well?

A. Very well.

Q. Did you have any conversations with him, or take any orders from him during this work?

A. Yes. Of course I was under the orders of the chief engi-792 neer, and Mr. Crocker, with the mutual consent of all concerned, would give direct orders to all concerned that he ran across, or anybody that needed it.

Q. Did you know Mr. C. P. Huntington at that time?

A. No, sir; Mr. Huntington was unknown to me personally during the construction of the Central Pacific main line.

Q. Did you know Mr. Mark Hopkins?

A. Yes; very well.

Q. What did he have to do with the road, if anything?

A. He was the treas[illegible]r. I do not remember his having given any construction order[illegible] to my knowledge or that I ever heard of, on the Central Pacific main line.

Q. Did he go out to the front during the work?

A. I never happened to see him.

Q. Were there any other persons than those four you have mentioned that had to do with that work in a controlling capacity?

A. To my personal knowledge, Charles Crocker and Leland Stanford were the men who actively gave orders as to actual construction work and detail.

Q. Did you at any time have to do with the Southern Pacific Railroad Company?

793 A. I might say, as leading up to that question, that I still remained in the service of the Central Pacific Railroad engaged on work north of Marysville until about December, 1871, or January, 1872, and shortly after that time I continued under the orders of the chief engineer of the Central Pacific Railroad on the construction of the branch of the Central Pacific Railroad south to Goshen, and south of Goshen I fell automatically under the orders of the chief engineer of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company.

Q. Who was the chief engineer?

A. The chief engineer of the Central Pacific Railroad during the time I have detailed was Samuel S. Montague, and the chief engineer of the Southern Pacific Railroad at the time, in 1872, that I began taking orders from him was George E. Gray.

Q. You may continue, now, your narration of the work you did in building these lines after you passed Goshen.

A. The construction south from Goshen—which at the time was built there had no name of Goshen, but was simply a point selected for the Southern Pacific Railroad from the west to turn south—continued consecutively, without cessation and without any special line of demarcation other than I have mentioned, to Tipton, which, I think, is about twenty miles south of Goshen, and there the construction ceased for that year; and in the early summer of 1873 I went east on private business until July, 1874, and when I arrived back again to go to work again the track had just reached Bakersfield. I then took active charge of the location of the road from Bakersfield over Tehachapi Pass and south, including charge of construction as well, in the sense of going over it constantly in an advisory capacity, as I was appointed during the progress of that work assistant chief engineer of the Southern Pacific Railroad and essentially acted for the chief engineer in most particulars.

794

This continued until some time in September, 1876, at which time the road was completed through to San Fernando station, now known, I think, as Fernando Station. There was then a stretch of road already completed by a separate organization under the orders of the chief engineer, which extended from Fernando to Indio, and with which I had no personal connection, excepting that occasionally I had gone over it on trips with Mr. Charles Crocker, who was, course, in charge of that, as of other similar matters on the Southern Pacific Railroad.

795 At Indio I commenced with the location of the line and carried it through to Yuma; and without going into too many details as to other pieces of work here and there—which I can describe at length if desired—the track reached Yuma in the late summer of 1877 or thereabouts.

Construction was recommenced at Yuma in the late fall of 1878, and was carried on continuously eastward, with the exception of a few months layoff in the summer of 1879, in the vicinity of Casa Grande; and the construction from the west was carried eastward to join the construction being carried westward from San Antonio at a point about ten miles west of the crossing of Pecos River, the tracks having joined there in the fall of 1882. In the meantime construction had been pushed westward from San Antonio, and I had made the preliminary surveys for it.

Q. For that road west of San Antonio?

A. West of San Antonio; by going to San Antonio at a certain period and working west.

Q. Yes.

A. To join the construction from the west, as above indicated, at a point between Langtry and the Pecos River crossing, to 796 make it specific enough; that construction was done principally under the direct orders of Mr. C. P. Huntington and Mr. James Converse, chief engineer of the Galveston, Harrisburg & San Antonio Railroad, whose efforts of construction, however, were entirely confined to the distance between San Antonio, Texas, and a point perhaps midway between Langtry and Pecos River crossing, it being under my supervision, however, to the extent that, under the direct orders of Mr. Charles Crocker, I would go down there occasionally and revise their line and direct line changes, and approve or veto proposed contracts.

This completed what is known as the Sunset Route as far as San Antonio, Texas. East of San Antonio, Texas, I have no knowledge of it whatever.

Q. You spoke of Mr. Crocker having to do with the construction of that line to San Antonio?

A. Yes.

Q. What did he have to do with it?

A. Well, you understand, I mean between San Antonio and a point midway between Langtry and the Pecos River crossing.

Q. You have spoken of him as having to do with this line—I mean the line all the way from Goshen to San Antonio.

797 A. He had to do with it in this way—just to illustrate: I received a telegram from him by messenger from the military telegraph station to go quickly to the vicinity of the mouth of Devil's River and the Rio Grande River, and see what was doing, whether the contract should be let, whether the route was right, and in general to tell them what to do; and I went and did it, of course.

Q. He gave instructions as to that also, just as he had done on the Central Pacific?

A. Exactly the same.

Mr. McCLENNEN. That is objected to as leading and calling for a conclusion of the witness.

The WITNESS. That is, my relations with Mr. Charles Crocker were, on the entire construction that I had to do with between Lathrop, California, and San Antonio, Texas, of the same character as my relations with Mr. Charles Crocker on the construction of the Central Pacific Railroad and its branches.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Was this road south of Goshen to Pecos River, or near there, turned over for operation to any company as you completed sections of it?

798 A. At occasional intervals, as the track laying progressed and the road became ready for operation, say, a stretch of 100 miles was completed, the operating organization of the Central Pacific Railroad commenced to operate it, and it continued so consecutively as the construction continued east, as far as I knew anything about it, which was at San Antonio, Texas.

Q. What official was in charge of the operating organization of the Central Pacific Railroad?

A. A. N. Towne was the general manager.

Q. What company operated the road after that time—the Southern Pacific Railroad Company?

Mr. McCLENNEN. That is objected to as leading.

The WITNESS. The operation was in direct charge of Mr. A. N. Towne; that is, as far as my knowledge extends.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. What arrangements were used to pay these forces while you were doing the work, from time to time?

A. In general, they were paid from the same pay car that paid the operating force, trainmen, shopmen, and section men.

Q. The pay car of what company was that?

A. The Central Pacific Railroad.

799 Q. The pay car that came down over the part of the line that was being operated by the Central Pacific Railroad Company would continue on to the front and pay the construction forces?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. McCLENNEN. That is objected to as leading.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Who, if you remember, were in charge of that pay car?

A. Major Hanford was in charge a great deal of the time, and Mr. Anthony—R. E. Anthony, I believe his initials were—was considerable of the time his assistant.

Mr. Robinson—I forget his initials—also at one time was Major Hanford's assistant.

The only exception to the pay car method that I recall is that occasionally, both on the original main line of the Central Pacific construction, and occasionally on the construction of the Southern Pacific Railroad that I have been testifying about, special trips beyond the end of the track were sometimes made by the pay car officials, by team, with money and books, and so forth, to extend the payments where practically necessary beyond the end of the tracks.

Q. What position did Major Hanford hold?

800 A. He was known to us as paymaster.

Q. Of what company?

A. Of the Central Pacific Railroad Company.

Q. Do you know whether he is living?

A. I think he is not. I think he is dead.

Q. Did Mr. C. H. Redington have anything to do with that pay car?

A. Yes; but I do not recall Mr. Redington on the Southern Pacific Railroad in Arizona, New Mexico, and Texas, although he might have come there without my recalling it.

Q. Were you, during this time, an employee of the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

Mr. MCCLENNEN. I object to that as calling upon the witness for a conclusion.

The WITNESS. I can only say——

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Who paid you? That is the question.

A. When I was doing work on the construction of the Central Pacific Railroad and branches, I was under the orders of the chief engineer of the Central Pacific Railroad, and on his rolls; and whenever I was doing work on the Southern Pacific Railroad 01 construction I was under the orders of the chief engineer of the Southern Pacific Railroad, and on his rolls. I have no further knowledge of the matter.

Q. How long did Mr. Gray continue as chief engineer of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company?

A. I am not positive as to the date. I think it was until some time in 1885.

Q. How long did Mr. Montague continue as chief engineer of the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. He died in 1883, and at that time, as construction was going on on the branch of the Central Pacific Railroad between Roseville and the Oregon State line, I had been made chief assistant engineer of the Central Pacific Railroad; and when Mr. Montague died, in the summer of 1883, I was made chief engineer of the Central Pacific Railroad in his place.

Q. How long did you continue chief engineer of the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. Until I was appointed chief engineer of the Southern Pacific Company.

Q. In what year?

A. In the fall or summer of 1885.

Mr. McCLENNEN. That was of the Southern Pacific Company?

The WITNESS. Yes.

802 By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Who determined the fixing of the location of these lines that you have mentioned that were constructed, and also when work should be done how fast it should be proceeded with or continued or suspended?

A. It was, in general, Mr. Charles Crocker who gave orders as to when to build a railroad, how fast to build it, about how much money to spend a month, and what kind of railroad to build, whether a first-class main line or otherwise; and sometimes Mr. Leland Stanford would give an order, and sometimes, particularly in 1874, 1875 and 1876, Mr. Mark Hopkins would give an order. In general, however, it was Mr. Charles Crocker.

Q. But the final authority in these matters was held by what men?

Mr. McCLENNEN. That is objected to as leading and calling for a conclusion of the witness.

The WITNESS. I would take orders, during their lifetimes, without question, on any matter, from either Mr. Mark Hopkins, Mr. Charles Crocker, Mr. Leland Stanford, Mr. C. P. Huntington, and, after Mr. Charles Crocker's death, from Charles F. Crocker.

803 By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. His son?

A. His son, representing his estate; and without the least inquiry as to whether the order was known to the rest or not. That was not my business.

Q. Do you remember when Mr. Mark Hopkins died—in what year?

A. It was in the spring of 1878.

Q. Who, if anyone, represented the interests of his estate in these roads after his death?

A. Immediately after his death, as I remember it, they were represented very largely by the other owners, so to speak—Mr. Charles Crocker, Mr. Leland Stanford, and Mr. C. P. Huntington—although later Mr. Timothy Hopkins represented the Hopkins estate interests to a considerable extent. Still later, General Hubbard and Mr. Stillman, as representing Mrs. Hopkins's husband, Mr. Searles.

Q. Do you remember what position Mr. Timothy Hopkins held at any time—what official position?

A. I do not remember at what particular time he might have been vice president or might have held any other official position. In those times we gave almost no attention to whether a man was president or vice president or anything else. It was simply, was he one of the men who owned and controlled the road and from whom we took orders.

Mr. McCLENNEN. The last answer is objected to as not responsive and containing a conclusion drawn by the witness.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. If he was one of the men you have mentioned, his orders were respected?

Mr. McCLENNEN. This question is objected to as intensely leading.

The WITNESS. If Mr. Timothy Hopkins gave me an order, I would obey it at once.

Mr. McCLENNEN. The answer is objected to as not responsive. Petitioner moves to strike out this and the several irresponsive answers referred to in the earlier objection to the testimony of this witness.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Do you remember when Mr. Charles Crocker died?

A. It was in 1888. I think it was in the fall of 1888. I would not undertake to be positive as to the month.

Mr. GANN. Was Mr. Charles F. Crocker the same gentleman who was later known as Colonel Fred Crocker?

The WITNESS. That is the same gentleman.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. You supervised the construction of the road from Redding north in the Sacramento Canon, to the Siskiyou Mountains, did you?

A. I was assistant chief engineer until the death of the chief engineer, S. S. Montagu, and then I was chief engineer from that time, during that construction.

Mr. HERRIN. You may take the witness.

Recross-examination by Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. During the period of your connection with the construction of these roads, the Central Pacific Railroad had been constructed for the major part of the way from Sacramento to Ogden?

A. To be specific, from Cisco to Ogden.

Q. When you began, it had already been constructed from Sacramento to Cisco.

A. From Sacramento to Cisco.

Q. When was the section from Sacramento through Stockton, Lathrop, and Niles to Oakland constructed?

A. That was under way during the construction of the main 806 line of the Central Pacific Railroad, and I was not personally connected with any of that construction from Sacramento through Stockton and Livermore Pass to Niles, excepting as I have testified, for a distance between Niles and Pleasanton, in the spring of 1868, and the information, as I intended to make plain yesterday, as to matters where I was not personally informed, whether after I was connected with the road or not, is from our records.

Q. A good part of that section of the road west of Sacramento was constructed for the Western Pacific Railroad?

A. It was constructed as Western Pacific Railroad, being a road, as I remember it, from San Jose to Sacramento.

Q. By the close of 1869 the Central Pacific Railroad owned and operated a railroad from San Francisco Bay to Ogden?

A. Yes, sir; from early in 1869.

Q. Up to that time you had had nothing to do with the Southern Pacific Railroad in any way?

A. My first connection with the Southern Pacific Railroad in any way whatever was in the summer of 1872, at Goshen.

Q. At that time the Central Pacific Railroad Company owned and operated, in addition to its main line, a line from Sacramento to Goshen?

807 A. From Lathrop to Goshen, the road from Sacramento to Lathrop having been Western Pacific Railroad; and whether the corporate name had been changed or not, I do not know.

Q. The Southern Pacific Railroad had been constructed and operated by that company from San Francisco to Gilroy some time in 1869?

A. As to that, any testimony that I would give would be from records, not from personal knowledge.

Q. I understand.

A. Yes.

Q. And, as advised by those records, that was the fact?

A. It was, yes.

Q. At that time, so far as you know, neither Mr. Huntington, Mr. Stanford, Mr. Hopkins, nor Mr. Crocker had anything to do with the Southern Pacific Railroad Company?

A. I do not know at what time they became connected with the Southern Pacific Railroad Company.

Q. You have never heard of their connection with that company prior to 1870?

A. I do not think I could testify as to the time when they acquired or became connected with the Southern Pacific Rail-808 road. I took no possible interest in it, and I have never looked it up.

Q. I have asked you a slightly different question from that. I have not now asked you the date when they did become connected with it, but simply the question as to whether you recall ever having heard of their connection with the Southern Pacific Railroad Company before 1870?

A. I do not recall it.

Q. Do you know when, if at all, the Central Pacific Railroad Company took up the operation of the line from San Francisco to Gilroy, owned by the Southern Pacific Railroad Company?

A. Let me see. In what sense do you ask the question? Do you mean as to ownership or organization or what? I do not understand it.

Q. I mean this: It appears that the Southern Pacific Railroad Company owned a line from San Francisco to Gilroy as early as 1869. At some time did the Central Pacific Railroad Company, operating organization, take up the operation of that line of railroad between those two points, or any part thereof?

A. I could not answer the question. I was trying hard to 809 think if I ever knew. So far I am unable to answer the question. It is not a thing that I naturally would have cared anything about; and if I knew it, it would be really a matter of indifference to me, the main point being the ownership; but I can not recall that I ever knew anything about it.

Q. When the Central Pacific Railroad's line from Lathrop to Goshen was completed in 1872, how far down that line was there any traffic except traffic for the construction of the Southern Pacific Railroad to the south?

A. Let me see if I understand your question. You understand that the Central Pacific Railroad and the Southern Pacific Railroad were separated at Goshen by a point, so to speak. It ceased being the Central Pacific Railroad and commenced to be the Southern Pacific Railroad, but was built continuously and was operated continuously by the Central Pacific Railroad. I know about that.

Q. Well, now, do you not see that you have not answered my que tion at all, which is a perfectly simple one. It is this: This road w stretching, or these rails were stretching, from Lathrop down t Goshen?

A. Yes.

810 Q. All I have asked you is, how far down that line ther was any traffic in 1872, except the traffic necessitated by th construction of the Southern Pacific Railroad south of Goshen?

A. Commencing at the lower end of the construction at that time—that is, at Tipton, the south end—there was considerable passeng traffic over the line connecting at Tipton with stages for Bakersfiel and other points, and, in particular, Los Angeles. It was the ove land route to Los Angeles at that time for passengers; also for pa sengers for Bakersfield. At Bakersfield these same passengers fr quently continued over to Inyo County, where mining was in hea progress. We did a very large business of stage connecting passe gers to and from Tipton. Working north from there, if that will b just as intelligible, it will be noticed that the town of Visalia and th very large and thickly settled agricultural district around it was very few miles to the eastward of Goshen; and there the traffic w so large and there was so much business, it being an old establishe town many years before the railroad was built, that a branch line w promptly constructed by private capital from Visalia over to Goshe running connecting trains with our road at that point. Nort

811 from there, taking the entire distance, principally betwe
Modesto and Visalia, the country was in a very good natur state for agriculture, and towns and villages grew up with extre rapidity, such, for instance, as Fresno, soon became quite a flourishi city and furnished us a good deal of business. Incidentally, I m remark that in that general region there were occasionally very lar wheat farms in full cultivation a considerable number of years befo the railroad was built at all. These wheat farms disposed of the products by hauling them to the nearest rivers and sloughs, and th like, which were quite frequent in that region. So that we had qu a business grow up very promptly, as well as the old established bu ness of Visalia.

Q. The section of road south from Goshen to the Colorado Riv opposite Yuma, Arizona, was constructed for the Southern Paci Railroad Company of California?

A. Of California.

Q. And the road from Yuma, Arizona, to the eastern boundary Arizona was constructed for the Southern Pacific Railroad Compa of Arizona?

A. It was.

Q. And the railroad from that point to El Paso, Texas, was constructed for the Southern Pacific Railroad Company of 812 New Mexico?

A. It was to the boundary of Texas, which was at the center of the Rio Grande River, as I remember.

Q. That is, it was the other side of the river from El Paso?

A. Yes.

Q. From El Paso east, for what railroad was the construction done?

A. It was constructed, as I remember it, under the corporate name of the Galveston, Harrisburg & San Antonio Railroad or Railway.

Q. That laid in Texas was also operated by the Galveston, Harrisburg & San Antonio Railroad Company, was it not?

A. I would like to be sure that I understand the question. Do you mean as far west as San Antonio prior to any other construction?

Q. I mean skip to the point when there was a through line, in the later part of 1882 or the beginning of 1883.

A. It was operated, as I have heretofore described, by the operating organization of the Central Pacific Railroad.

Q. Did the Galveston, Harrisburg & San Antonio Railroad
813 Company have any operating organization?

A. It had.

Q. And was the personnel of that different from the personnel of the Central Pacific Railroad Company's operating organization?

A. The operating organization of the Galveston, Harrisburg & San Antonio Railroad had jurisdiction as far west as San Antonio when that was the end of their railroad. Now, it never was in regular operation west of San Antonio that I remember of in the strict sense of regular operation until the track from the west connected on the track built westward; that is, the track from the west connected on the track built from the east, and at that time it went into operation under the operating organization of the Central Pacific, A. N. Towne being general manager. And in addition to that, as I understood it—I am now coming to where I understood instead of where I know—Mr. Towne's jurisdiction was then extended over the existing operating officials of the existing railroad, San Antonio eastward.

Mr. HERRIN. To what point—to New Orleans?

The WITNESS. New Orleans.

814 By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. Do you mean quite that?

A. Yes.

Q. That the operating organization of the Galveston, Harrisburg & San Antonio Railroad went all the way to New Orleans?

A. Well, no; I do not mean that; I should not have said that. Thank you for the correction. But let me say, as near as I know, that Mr. Towne's jurisdiction extended over the operation of what then became a continuous line of railroad, including giving orders to the operating officials of the sundry railroads from San Antonio, Texas, to New Orleans.

Q. Was Mr. Towne any official of the Galveston, Harrisburg & San Antonio Railroad Company?

A. I do not know.

Q. That is, you do not know, when he gave his orders over that railroad, whether he was giving them as an official of that railroad or as an official of the Central Pacific?

A. I do not know.

Q. The ownership of the lines constructed for the Central Pacific Railroad Company never changed, to your knowledge, prior 815 to 1899, did they, from the time they were originally constructed?

A. I had no knowledge of any radical change of ownership other than what would occur by estates versus the original owners.

Q. I did not make my question clear. I do not refer to what changes might have taken place in the ownership of the stock in that railroad; I mean that after the Central Pacific Railroad was constructed, as you have outlined, for the Central Pacific Railroad Company, the Central Pacific Railroad Company never parted with any part of that railroad, so far as you know, prior to 1899?

A. No; I never knew of their selling any railroad.

Q. So far as you knew that corporation owned all of that railroad up to 1899?

A. Yes; I never knew of the Central Pacific Railroad selling any part of its ownership.

Q. And in the same way the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, the California corporation, and the Southern Pacific Railroad Company of Arizona, the Southern Pacific Railroad Company of New Mexico, and the Galveston, Harrisburg & San Antonio Railroad never parted, so far as you know, with any portions of their railroad?

816 A. I knew nothing of it one way or the other, and never heard of their parting with anything. Any testimony of mine as to handling the stock and corporate ownerships, and the like of that, would be radically of hearsay. It was not any of my affair and it wasn't anything that I needed to know about.

Q. All this construction work for the Central Pacific Railroad Company and for the Southern Pacific Railroad Company in the various States and Territories was performed by construction companies, except the part done by Mr. Crocker or Mr. Crocker and his partners. Is that correct?

A. It is not strictly accurate. It is nearly accurate as applying—it is accurate in one sense, but I think the answer will require to be a little in detail.

Q. Perhaps I can put the question a little more in detail and thus obviate any misunderstanding.

A. And refer specifically to which lines you mean.

Q. Take the line from Oakland to Sacramento. Was that built by a construction company?

A. I knew about that railroad, as I indicated, although I was not directly connected with the construction. It was built di-817 rectly by contractors, grading and other contractors; and I understood, without knowing positively, that those contractors were in fact subcontractors of a construction company.

Q. I see. Now, what construction company was that?

A. I understood it to be the Contract & Finance Company; but I wish it clearly understood that this is not definite knowledge; it is simply my understanding.

Q. The line eastward from Sacramento for a distance was constructed by Charles Crocker & Company?

A. Charles Crocker & Company.

Q. As a general contractor with the railroad?

A. Precisely, and with unit prices. They, as usual, had a few subcontractors, chiefly for stone masonry work.

Q. You mean the railroad had?

A. No; that Charles Crocker & Company had subcontractors, as I remember it, exclusively for stone masonry.

Q. Charles Crocker & Company was composed of whom?

A. I never knew anything about it.

Q. Did you ever know of anyone other than Charles Crocker connected with that concern?

A. I knew absolutely nothing about it. I made monthly estimates for Charles Crocker & Company, and turned them into 818 the office of the chief engineer, duly classified, as we do now for any contractor, and that is as far as I knew anything about it, except that I know that J. H. Strobridge was known as their superintendent.

Q. Would it be conservative to say that you knew anyone connected with Charles Crocker as being a part of Charles Crocker & Company, except Charles Crocker?

A. I knew nothing about it, except that it was Charles Crocker & Company.

Q. And you had fairly definite knowledge that Charles Crocker & Company was Charles Crocker?

A. It may occur to you that a young man of twenty-one, who wa very busy and working pretty hard and who liked to go hunting an fishing on Sundays, did not care who Charles Crocker & Company was at all, and had no interest in it; that was my situation exactly.

Q. Having regard for those human frailties, did you get any im pression, howsoever vague, as to whether or not Charles Crocke was any part of Charles Crocker & Company?

A. I never even thought about it. If you asked me if I now hav a theory about it, I could give you that, but, in fact, in 1867 and 186 I never gave it a thought.

819 Q. I suppose you mean that so long as your work wa mapped out for you and the construction went forward in accordance with the plans and you received adequate compensation for your services and had your opportunity to fish on Sundays, you did not pay any particular attention, at any given time, as to the person, firm, or corporation for whom you were working in doing particular work. Is that true?

A. Yes; I reported, as heretofore testified, to the chief engineer, received orders from him or his duly delegated assistants. I knew J. H. Strobridge as superintendent for Charles Crocker & Company, and I knew Charles Crocker as the man who would come around and ask me what I was doing and why I was doing it that way, and also who would tell me to do it differently, if he took a notion.

Q. During that period were you chief engineer for Charles Crocker & Company, or were you chief engineer for the Central Pacific Rail road Company?

A. I was an assistant of the chief engineer of the Central Pacific Railroad Company.

Q. Of the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. Yes.

820 Q. Next, east of the section constructed by Charles Crocker & Company for the Central Pacific Railroad Company, the railroad was constructed by the Contract & Finance Company?

A. Yes.

Q. Up to its junction with the Union Pacific at Ogden?

A. That is my understanding of it.

Q. Were Charles Crocker & Company connected in any way with the Contract & Finance Company?

A. I have absolutely no knowledge of that detail.

Q. Did you ever meet in the flesh, to know it, any part of the Contract & Finance Company?

A. I may have known who was president or the vice president or other officer of the Contract & Finance Company—it is a good while ago to be positive about such a matter—but I very frequently met Charles Crocker and Leland Stanford.

Q. Did you not have some more or less concrete impression as to whether Charles Crocker was connected with the Contract & Finance Company?

A. I may have had, but it didn't impress me particularly.

Q. You put it rather tentatively; don't you think you did have?

821 A. I think I took very little interest in it; I knew who was the boss, that was all, and I followed his orders.

Q. I have not asked you how much interest you took, but simply whether you did not get an impression that Charles Crocker was connected in some way with the Contract & Finance Company.

A. I have not any remembrance about it at all. As I said, in reference to that matter, I suppose you do not care for my present theories; what you want is my impressions in 1867, 1868, and 1869. I do not remember about it. I am sorry I do not; I would be very glad to tell you.

Q. Then what construction company contracted for the Central Pacific Railroad section from Lathrop to Goshen?

A. I do not know. I think that perhaps some one can present exact dates of the organizations of the several construction companies, but I am unable to do so, except in a general way. For instance, I remember, at a certain period, the Pacific Improvement Company was organized, and I think it was in the seventies, but I don't remember exactly when. I remember after that that the Southern Development Company was organized, I think for the Texas work, but as I said before, I took very little interest in 822 anything of that kind. It was not any of my affair at all, and I knew very little about it.

Q. Does your recollection enable you to state whether it was either the Contract & Finance Company or the Pacific Improvement Company?

A. I am quite certain that the Pacific Improvement Company was not organized until a considerable time after the track reached Tipton.

Q. Well, with that information, would you not recall that the construction from Lathrop to Goshen was by the Contract & Finance Company?

A. I do not recall about it. I took no interest in it. If you care for an opinion, I will give you that.

Q. I do not want an opinion. I asked for your recollection.

A. I can give you nothing else but an opinion.

Q. From 1872 on to 1883, say, who was the chief engineer of the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. It was Samuel S. Montague.

Q. Were you next in order to him?

A. No, sir. When we arrived at Goshen, with the construction down to which point we had been under the orders of 823 Samuel S. Montague, chief engineer of the Central Pacific Railroad, we suddenly became under the orders of George E. Gray, chief engineer of the Southern Pacific Railroad, on that construction southward. At times, I have specified here before, the Southern Pacific Railroad of California and of Arizona and of New Mexico, and the Galveston, Harrisburg & San Antonio as far as San Antonio, Texas, with the exception of what Mr. Converse, chief engineer of the Galveston, Harrisburg & San Antonio west of San Antonio, had direct charge of, was technically under the orders of George E. Gray, chief engineer of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company; and I, some time in 1875, instead of assistant engineer, became chief assistant engineer and actively engaged in executing the construction. I remained in that State until the summer of 1883, perhaps June, that I was still assistant chief engineer of the Southern Pacific Railroad. You understand, assistant engineer from Goshen in, perhaps, July, 1872, until some time in 1875, except when I was east, and then assistant chief engineer from some time in the summer of 1875 of the Southern Pacific Railroad until about June, 1883, and then assistant chief engineer of the Central Pacific Railroad on account of the heavy construction then being toward Oregon 824 from Redding, Mr. Montague still being chief engineer until his death.

Q. That is, from 1872 at Goshen, until 1883——

A. About June.

Q. About June—you were an official of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company under Mr. Gray?

A. Yes.

Q. Then you were transferred to the Central Pacific Railroad for construction which it was doing north?

A. Yes; north of Redding.

Q. Now, when this pay car used to come down with money aboard, how did you recognize it as being a pay car of the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. My remembrance is that it was so labeled. Personally I only saw it occasionally, generally being too far at the front.

Q. You paid no particular attention to the labeling on the vehicle that brought your pay; is that it?

A. Well, of course this is a purely personal matter. I will say I never drew any. When I wanted any money I got it otherwise, but the vehicles in advance of the end of the track, that brought 825 the pay to the men at the front, were just plain, ordinary vehicles, without any labels at all.

Q. No labels of any kind?

A. No.

Q. And you had nothing from which you could get any definite impression as to whether it was the Southern Pacific Railroad Company's money that was being sent down in this pay car, or whether it was the Central Pacific Railroad Company's money?

A. I would not know one kind of money from the other.

Q. And there was nothing in the wrappings or conveyance that would give you any information on that subject?

A. My remembrance is that personally I never drew a cent of money from the pay car at all, but I have seen the pay car often.

Q. And that answers my question as fully as you can, does it?

A. The pay car that I used to see was labeled Central Pacific Railroad, to the best of my knowledge and remembrance.

Q. During the period of construction of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company there was not any rolling stock labeled Southern Pacific Railroad, was there?

A. You mean in use?

826 Q. Either in use or disuse.

A. I must get this question more clearly. Do you mean did I ever see any Southern Pacific Railroad rolling stock so labeled in the course of the times that we were constructing railroads?

Q. Well, I mean did you ever see any rolling stock at any time in your life labeled Southern Pacific Railroad?

A. I have.

Q. When first?

A. I do not remember first; I remember the last, if that will do you any good. That was a week ago yesterday, coming up from the Hotel Del Monte. Coming up from the Hotel Del Monte I rode in the chair car, which I was greatly interested in, marked Southern Pacific Railroad Company of California, one of the old-time wooden cars. That is the last one. The first one I really can not remember.

Q. Can you give me any idea at all?

A. My best remembrance is that they used to be bought at certain intervals and in certain amounts, rolling stock labeled "Southern Pacific Railroad of California, G. H. & S. A. Railroad," or railway, whichever it was, and I think there was rolling stock bought 827 and labeled, both engines and freight cars and passenger cars, labeled "Southern Pacific Railroad Company of New Mexico." I have seen such things as that, and in general there is rolling stock labeled with sundry corporate names and duly listed.

Q. Did you ever, so far as you now recall, see any rolling stock labeled "Southern Pacific Railroad Company", prior to the summer of 1872?

A. I don't remember. I would be very glad to testify if I did remember, but I do not remember when I first commenced seeing rolling stock labeled "Southern Pacific Railroad Company of California", or "Cal.", to be exact, abbreviated.

Q. Had you ever seen, so far as you recall, any such rolling stock prior to 1879?

A. I have no specific remembrance of when I have seen any specifically labeled rolling stock. As I said before, I would be very glad to remember, but you are asking me questions that had I known in 1879 I was going to be asked I would have made a memorandum so as to be able to answer correctly to-day.

Q. Have you any recollection of seeing any rolling stock labeled "Southern Pacific Railroad Company" before the 1st of March, 1885?

828 A. I am very confident that I have seen rolling stock labeled "Southern Pacific Railroad Company of California" in use, a great deal of it in use before that time; but I can not tell you where or when.

Q. Then we can put it as some time before the 1st of March, 1885, with certainty, can we?

A. Yes; most certainly you can.

Q. Let us go back a little. Can we put it before 1879 that you had seen any such?

A. Of course, you are excluding the coast division? That is a line down the peninsula. You must know, in all these questions——

Q. No; I am not excluding anything.

A. My remembrance is that the rolling stock, a good deal of the rolling stock on the peninsula, from here to San Jose and then south, was labeled "Southern Pacific Railroad Company of California."

Q. That was as early as what time?

A. Oh, I could not tell you, but I should say there was rolling stock labeled that way a long time ago.

Q. As early as 1872?

829 A. I could not be specific. I can now only get into opinions, and you do not care for them.

Q. As early as 1879?

A. I can only say that there must have been, but I don't remember.

Q. Why do you say that there must have been, prior to 1879?

A. Because it was customary to have rolling stock in those days marked with sundry corporate names; they were bought that way.

Q. And among others, the Southern Pacific Railroad Company of California?

A. It was customary to have the engines and the cars marked "Southern Pacific Railroad Company of California", and, as I said

I rode in one a week ago yesterday. That, by the way, was dated 1888, if I remember, and it was customary to have "G., H. & S. A. Railroad" on the freight and passenger cars and locomotives, and it was a common custom to put corporate names on the rolling stock, being a practical and theoretical sign on the rolling stock of certain corporate properties; it was the custom for a long time, and I really hope that general statement will satisfy you, because you can realize how much you would be up against it if I were to ask 830 you when you first saw a New York Central car, so as to be sure that it was a New York Central car, and it is the same situation with me; I can not remember exactly when, but it was a common custom to use labeled rolling stock.

Q. I am not trying to overtax your memory, and when you can not remember, say so.

A. All right.

Q. Now, we come back to this coast line. You say this line from San Francisco through San Jose to Gilroy and down had rolling stock with the name "Southern Pacific Railroad Company of California" at a very early date?

A. Yes. I can not say how early, but it was originally built as Southern Pacific Railroad.

Q. And operated as such?

A. It was built as the Southern Pacific Railroad, and if you want hearsay evidence, as I understood, by people not connected with the Central Pacific Railroad Company to San Jose and south; and I have been to San Jose on that railroad as early as—very early after 1867. I should dislike to testify that I saw any rolling stock marked "Southern Pacific Railroad" and I would still more dislike to testify that I did not see any.

831 Q. Now, that is a line which has since been completed and has become known as the "coast line", has it not, or the coast division?

A. Do I understand that you want a history or statement of the corporate name under which the coast division was constructed? It was not constructed as the Southern Pacific Railroad Company.

Q. No; I am asking you a very simple question. Here is a line of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company that in 1869 ran from San Francisco to Gilroy. Now, that line, irrespective of what corporation has since completed it, is a line which has been completed and has become what is known either as the coast line or the coast division, and now connects in some way all the way through with the line through Yuma?

A. If I understand your question, your understanding is not correct as to that. I will state just how it is and then you will judge whether I am answering you correctly or not. The Southern Pacific Railroad extends to Tres Pinos by way of Gilroy. It also extends from Gilroy via Castroville, now known as Del Monte Junction, to San Miguel and, as I remember it, about a mile and a half south of San Miguel. From that point the road was constructed as 832 Southern Pacific branch railway through to Saugus via Santa Barbara, for the particular reason that the Southern Pacific Railroad at a point a mile south of San Miguel, not yet built, was projected across the Coast Range into the Tulare Valley as one part of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company; and still another part of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company was projected from the terminus at Tres Pinos to the terminus at Alcalde, on that constructed line from Goshen to Alcalde, so that the coast line was not originally built as the Southern Pacific Railroad Company south of a point about a mile and a half south of San Miguel; it was built as Southern Pacific branch railway.

Q. I was unfortunate in not making my question clear. I will start with a preliminary one. There is at the present time something that is known as the Coast Line or Coast Division, is there not?

A. Yes.

Q. If a freight car starts out of San Francisco, destined to New Orleans, over the coast division, it passes down through Gilroy, does it not?

A. Yes.

Q. And passes from San Francisco to Gilroy over a line
833 which had been constructed for the Southern Pacific Railroad Company of California prior to 1870?

A. That is correct.

Q. Now, the Southern Pacific Company first began to do business in March of 1885, did it not?

A. My remembrance is in the spring of 1885.

Q. And after that company began to do business, you still saw rolling stock containing the various names of the various companies, the Central Pacific Railroad Company, the Southern Pacific Railroad Company of California and of Arizona and of New Mexico, and so forth?

A. Yes; and to this day.

Q. The construction of the Central Pacific Railroad Company by Charles Crocker & Company was on a unit basis?

A. Yes.

Q. That means so much per foot or per mile, for different characters of work?

A. No; it means that each month we would turn in, on the several sections of construction, estimates that during that month they had moved so many cubic yards of earth and so many cubic yards of granite or of volcanic rock, or whatever there was moved, and 834 they had done so much masonry or tunnel excavation and so forth, the same as we do for any contractor nowadays.

Q. How did the contract between the Central Pacific Railroad Company and the Contract & Finance Company vary from that?

A. We returned no estimates whatsoever of quantities moved, except stone masonry, culverts, bridge piers, and abutments, which were done by certain contractors who were stone masonry specialists, and whom we understood to have their contracts from the Contract & Finance Company.

Q. That is, the detail measurements were needed because of the relation between the general contractor and these subcontractors?

A. Entirely.

Q. And not because of any relation between the Contract & Finance Company and the railroad?

A. Your understanding is correct.

Q. Do you know what the arrangement was between the railroad company and the Contract & Finance Company?

A. I do not of my own knowledge. I never saw the contract.

Q. You never saw any contract?

835 A. I did not see any contract—to the best of my remembrance, I never saw one of those contracts until after I became chief engineer of the Central Pacific Railroad Company. That is the best of my remembrance.

Q. That would be after 1883?

A. That was in 1883, the latter part of 1883.

Q. Did you ever see any contract then which had reference to the original construction of the main line of the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. I do not remember of it. It will occur to you that my interest was to see what my duties were, and my duties were to see that the road was built to the satisfaction of the president and the chief engineer, both of whom, or the representative of the president, certified to the construction of the road to their satisfaction in successive distances or mileages.

Q. That is, your only interest was to see that the construction company did the work to the satisfaction of the railroad company represented by you as the man in the field?

A. Certainly.

Q. Were those contracts between the railroad company and the Contract & Finance Company that you saw after 1883 current contracts, or contracts for past time?

836 A. They were contracts under which I was proceeding.

Q. Proceeding after 1883?

A. Yes.

Q. And you never saw any contracts, so far as you recall, covering the work done before 1880 by the Contract & Finance Company for the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. I do not remember seeing any. There was no reason why I should, and I do not remember ever having seen one.

Q. Can you tell me approximately how many miles of the Southern Pacific Railroad were built by the Contract & Finance Company?

A. I could not state. I remember that the Pacific Improvement Company took the construction at a certain time, as we learned or heard. You remember that I was never chief engineer of the Southern Pacific Railroad during the construction; I was assistant chief engineer, and I never certified any of their constructed mileages until I became chief engineer of it; and, incidentally, that the testimony may not be confusing, you want to remember that after the Southern Pacific Company became organized and I became chief engineer of that, I still remained chief engineer of every corporation that 837 they leased tracks of, so that if that is not kept in mind you may be misled and misunderstand some of my statements.

Q. That is, after the spring of 1885, when the Southern Pacific first began to do business, you were the chief engineer of the Southern Pacific?

A. No; after the spring of 1885——

Q. Of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company?

A. After the spring of 1885, I was chief engineer of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, and George Gray of the Southern Pacific Company, until the fall of 1885, when I was made chief engineer of the Southern Pacific Company, I think in October, 1885, or some time in the fall; and thereafter I have been chief engineer of all the corporations leased by the Southern Pacific Company, as well as the chief engineer of the Southern Pacific Company.

Q. That dates from the fall of 1885?

A. It dates from my appointment as chief engineer of the Southern Pacific Company, which I think was in the fall of 1885; but it was considerably after its organization, some months after. It was a circular issued by Leland Stanford; I would not pretend to remember the month; I think that is probably unimportant.

838 By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. You have been, at all times since your appointment in 1885, chief engineer of the Southern Pacific Company?

A. I have.

Q. Actively engaged in pursuing the duties of that office?

A. I have.

Q. When Mr. Gray was chief engineer of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, were not you the active official under him, doing the work?

A. Yes; he was an engineer whose experience had been in the East, but when it came to mountain and desert construction, he said candidly to me and every one else that he was out of his element, and was very glad to have me act for him without consultation whenever it was expedient, but as the merest matter of course, in ordinary courtesy, we kept the best relations. He was honest, however, and said frankly "I will have to rely on you", and being quite willing to work, I worked.

Q. The point I wanted to make was that you were an active official?

A. Yes; entirely.

839 Q. Doing the work?

A. Entirely so.

Q. Can you fix the date of your appointment as chief engineer of the Southern Pacific Company?

A. I would say it was in the fall of 1885.

Q. I hand you what purports to be a circular issued by Leland Stanford, and I ask you if you recognize that?

A. I do. It was earlier than I thought. It was August, 1885.

Q. What do you recognize that as being?

A. A circular, Southern Pacific Company, office of the president, San Francisco, California, August 13, 1885. Mr. William Hood has this day been appointed chief engineer of the Southern Pacific Company, Pacific system. Leland Stanford, president.

I would ask to be allowed to correct my testimony to that extent.

Q. Does that fix the date?

A. That fixes the date.

Q. Now, the Southern Pacific Company began its operations in the spring of 1885 by taking a lease of the Southern Pacific Rail-840 road line, which, I think, was effective March 1, 1885, and a lease of the Central Pacific lines which was effective April 1, 1885. During that interim from March 1st were you the acting engineer for the Southern Pacific Company?

A. Yes.

Q. If there was anything to do, you did it?

A. Yes.

Mr. McCLENNEN. Note an objection to the question as containing an assertion of facts not yet proved.

The WITNESS. I was in charge of any construction pertaining to either the Central Pacific Railroad Company or the Southern Pacific Railroad during the time that I mentioned.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. If the Southern Pacific Company required the services of engineer from the earliest date of its operation, before August 1 who, if you know, did that work?

Mr. MCCLENNEN. That I object to as assuming that it had need or that there was any provision made for any need prior August 13, 1885.

The WITNESS. I did any work that I was called upon to do in t time for the Southern Pacific Company.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. From the beginning?

841 A. From the beginning.

Q. You were the real acting engineer from the beginning

A. I was the real acting engineer from the beginning for the Sou ern Pacific Company.

Q. Have you ever surveyed the line of railroad connecting T Pinos with Alcalde?

A. There has been such a line surveyed very many years ago, I had nothing to do with it.

Q. You spoke of Goshen as being on the line of the South Pacific Railroad. Now, there is built a line westwardly from Gos extending to Alcalde, is there not?

A. Yes.

Q. What do you call the line of the Southern Pacific Railro You spoke in your testimony of it not having been completed. I you speak of the line which is to be connected from Tres Pinos Alcalde?

A. The original projected line of the Southern Pacific Railr was via Tres Pinos, to which point it was constructed; thence o the mountains to the Tulare Valley, in the general vicinity of Gosh and the actual construction was from Goshen westwardly to Alca

Mr. HERRIN. The articles of incorporation show that t

842 line is covered.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Concerning the northern division of the Southern Pacific R road, extending from San Francisco to Gilroy, don't you recall t that was operated for some time by Mr. Bassett?

A. I know that it was operated by Mr. Bassett for a long time, cluding a considerable time after the road was constructed south that point.

Q. It was a separate organization, was it not?

A. My understanding was, if you wish testimony as to understa ings, that Mr. Bassett reported directly to the executive officers the company, and did not report to A. N. Towne until the time when A. N. Towne took over the operation of that line, as to which I am uncertain as to the date.

Q. You don't remember the date?

A. No.

Q. Do you remember the date when the coast line was connected and was operated through? This is all shown by the record.

A. The coast line was operated as a through line in the 843 spring of 1901, without attempting to specify the month.

Q. Now, was the northern division taken over by Mr. Towne before that?

A. A very long time before that.

Q. Well, some time before that?

A. Yes.

Q. But before it was taken over by Mr. Towne, was it not operated by the Southern Pacific Railroad Company and not by the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. I can only say that that was my opinion. I did not know, of my own knowledge, and I had no occasion to know.

Mr. HERRIN. That is all.

H. B. BRECKENFELD was called as a witness on behalf of the defendants, and having been duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Please give your age, Mr. Breckenfeld.

A. Fifty-nine.

Q. Your residence.

A. Berkeley.

844 Q. And your occupation or business.

A. I am a member of the efficiency committee of the Southern Pacific Company.

Q. How long have you been a member of that committee?

A. Since March 1, 1914.

Q. Did you ever work for the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. Yes.

Q. When did you begin service with that company?

A. In 1870.

Q. In what capacity?

A. In the capacity of telegraph operator at San Jose, California.

Q. How long did you remain there?

A. I remained in the service at San Jose for about a year.

Q. Then where did you go?

A. Then I was transferred to Sacramento.

Q. What did you do there?

A. I was assigned to duty in the office of the division superintendent of the Sacramento division. I first worked as telegraph 845 operator, and then became superintendent's clerk, and afterwards train despatcher, chief train despatcher and assistant superintendent; from there I was transferred to San Francisco.

Q. At what time?

A. In 1906.

Q. Now, from 1875 to 1906, when you left Sacramento, what were your duties there?

A. They were of various characters; at first I was telegraph operator, then became superintendent's clerk, and subsequently train despatcher.

Q. Did you have anything to do with time-tables?

A. Yes.

Q. What?

A. From about 1873 until the time I left; at first I assisted, and later I had general charge, under the general direction of the superintendent, of the compilation of the working time-tables for the Sacramento division.

Q. Do you remember, in a general way, the extent of that division during that time?

A. Why, at first the westerly terminus was Sacramento. Later on it was extended still farther westerly so as to include the Cali-846 fornia Pacific system, which extended to South Vallejo, with branches to Calistoga, and easterly; the terminal at different times was at Truckee, California, and Wadsworth, Nevada; the northerly terminus was at different points from Redding northward to near the State line.

Q. Did it ever include any part of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company's line?

A. Yes.

Q. What part?

A. From what afterwards became the Southern Pacific Railroad, from Sacramento to Placerville, and from Sacramento to Benicia, from Napa Junction to Calistoga, and other branches in that territory.

Q. In arranging these time-tables and routing trains was any attention paid to the ownership of these particular lines, or were they regarded as one property?

Mr. McCLENNEN. That is objected to as leading and calling upon the witness to draw a conclusion instead of obtaining his narrative of what he did.

The WITNESS. The time-tables were compiled with the idea of performing the best service; there was no attention paid to the corporate boundaries.

847 By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. You did not send trains around by the Central Pacific line to Oakland, did you? By Niles or Livermore; that is, the principal trains?

Mr. MCCLENNEN. That is objected to as leading.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Well, what route did you take for principal trains between Sacramento and San Francisco?

A. Prior to 1879 trains—for example, between Ogden and San Francisco—were routed via Stockton, because that was the only way to get there. Subsequently, or beginning in the fall of 1879, the important trains were run via what then became the short route or direct route, and upon arriving at Sacramento from the east, instead of being sent via Stockton they were routed via Suisun, Benicia, and the short line to Oakland.

Q. Do you remember when the Southern Pacific Company took possession of the Central Pacific lines?

A. April 1, 1885. How I remember it is that there was a circular issued by the officials of the Central Pacific indicating that such would be the case.

848 Q. Do you remember when the Southern Pacific took possession of the Southern Pacific lines?

A. It was about the same time; I think perhaps a little sooner.

Q. Do you remember the operating officials? Who were operating the lines before the Southern Pacific Company took possession; what company?

A. The Central Pacific Railroad.

Q. It was operating its own lines?

A. It was operating its own lines, and also the lines which it had leased.

Q. Did that include the lines of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company?

A. Yes.

Q. Was the Central Pacific Railroad Company operating the Southern Pacific Railroad line from Goshen to Los Angeles in 1885?

A. It was operating the line south of Goshen. Whether it extended to Los Angeles I do not recall.

Q. Don't you recall, in 1885?

A. In 1885 it could not have been. That was not the territory with which I was connected at that time, but it could not have been.

849 Q. You do not remember when the line was connected with Los Angeles?

A. No; I don't.

Q. Who were the operating officials of the Central Pacific Railroad Company at this time, at the time the Southern Pacific Company took over those lines?

A. Why, A. N. Towne was general manager.

Q. Who was general superintendent?

A. J. A. Fillmore, and R. H. Pratt was assistant superintendent.

Q. Who was master of transportation, if you remember?

A. E. N. Railton.

Q. And who was general passenger agent?

A. T. H. Goodman.

Q. What were the corresponding officials of the Southern Pacific Company when it took possession?

A. The same persons.

Q. Was there any change in the operating organization at the time the Southern Pacific Company took the place of the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. No, sir; I didn't notice any.

850 Q. The Southern Pacific Company has continued to operate those lines since that time to your knowledge?

A. Yes.

Cross-examination by Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. Do you say that a distinction was made between the Central Pacific Railroad lines and the Southern Pacific Railroad lines as to the date when the Southern Pacific Company began to operate?

A. That is my recollection. At that time I was connected with the corporate property included within the Central Pacific, and in those days we never paid much attention to Central Pacific or Southern Pacific, it was all the same thing; but I recall that a circular was issued, announcing that, effective April 1, 1885, the Southern Pacific Company would take over the operation of the lines of the Central Pacific Railroad, and that all officers and employees were to govern themselves accordingly, that they would all continue in their respective positions.

Q. Well, take it at the end of February, 1885, for instance, just before the 1st of March; the Central Pacific Railroad Company was operating all of the Central Pacific Railroad, was it not?

851 A. Yes.

Q. It was also operating over substantially all of the Southern Pacific Railroad, was it not?

A. Yes.

Q. The Central Pacific Railroad Company continued to operate the Central Pacific Railroad up to April 1, 1885?

A. Yes.

Q. Did the Central Pacific Railroad cease to operate the Southern Pacific Railroad before it ceased to operate the Central Pacific?

A. Such is my recollection.

Q. This short line that you have spoken of is the one called the Benicia cut-off, is it not?

A. It is sometimes so designated.

Q. Just how much of it, in your language, is the Benicia cut-off?

A. The short route was made up of a portion of the original California Pacific Railroad, which ran from Sacramento to South Vallejo. A short piece of railroad was built, beginning at Suisun, on that line, and running for a distance of about seventeen miles across the marsh to Benicia, on the Straits of Carquinez, and at that point a large transfer boat was utilized to convey trains across the strait, about one mile in width, to Port Costa, on the opposite shore, from which point the constructed line was utilized from Port Costa to Oakland, and by that combination of lines the short route from Sacramento to Oakland was made possible.

Q. Speaking now of the spring of 1885, that line from Sacramento to the approach to Oakland was a Southern Pacific Railroad line, was it not?

A. You understand, in the first place, the original corporate ownership was that of the California Pacific Railroad from Sacramento as far as Suisun. Then from Suisun to Benicia it was at that time known as the Northern Railway, or part of the Northern Railway—not the entire Northern Railway—and from Port Costa, on the opposite shore, to Oakland is was also the Northern Railway.

Q. Was any part of that, in 1885, the Southern Pacific Railroad?

A. These smaller corporate properties were taken over from time to time by the Southern Pacific Railroad, but at what time I can not clearly recall.

Q. Do you know whether they had been so taken over before 1885?

A. I would not be sure about that.

Q. You say that care was taken to distinguish between the Southern Pacific Railroad and the Central Pacific Railroad in the date of change of operation?

Mr. BLAIR. He did not say anything about care being taken, I think.

The WITNESS. What I mean to say is that it seems to me there was a slight difference in the dates of those two events, perhaps something like a month. I am not quite sure; I will say about a month.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. What piece of track do you know of that belonged to the Southern Pacific Railroad Company and was operated by the Southern Pacific Company prior to the time when the Southern Pacific Company began to operate the Central Pacific track on March 1, 1885?

A. As to that I am not very clear. We did not pay very much attention—in those days I was a young man, and I did not pay very much attention to things of that character. My work was all for the one set of officials, and I was not particularly impressed with these distinctions as between the Central Pacific and Southern 854 Pacific, and still less with the original corporate distinctions.

Q. Take it on the 28th of February, 1885, the entire operating organization was a Central Pacific Railroad Company organization, was it not?

A. Yes, sir; that was the case.

Q. Except for some incidental lines somewhere the Southern Pacific Railroad Company then had no operating organization, did it?

A. I think that is the case.

Q. Do you know of any man who was adopted into the Southern Pacific Company's operating organization prior to April 1, 1885? And, if so, who was he?

A. I am not sure that I understand your question.

Q. On the 28th of February, 1885, we have the only operating organization, the organization of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, do we not?

A. Yes.

Q. There was not any new organization put into the field in that spring, was there?

A. Any new operating organization?

Q. Yes.

A. Why, in the spring of 1885 the Southern Pacific Com-855 pany was organized, and its functions were announced in this general circular to all the employees.

Q. And it took over the entire operating organization of the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And it did it at one time?

A. Well, it did it at one time, except that it was my recollection that there was a slight interval—whether that is of any moment or not—my recollection is that there was a slight interval in the dates of the announcements of the two transactions, something like a month.

Q. You, on the 28th of February, 1885, were doing some work connected with operations over the Central Pacific Railroad, and some work connected with operations over the Southern Pacific Railroad, were you not?

A. Yes, sir. If these branch lines at that time had been taken over by the Southern Pacific—of which I am not sure now. Those ran along, and they were acquired by the Southern Pacific Railroad at various times, with which I am not entirely clear.

856 Q. Did you enter the employ of the Southern Pacific Company as to some lines, yourself, at a different date from that at which you entered it as to the lines of the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. There was no ceremony. I did not enter the employ of the Southern Pacific Company in that sense. I simply received this information, that the Southern Pacific Company had taken over these various lines, and that all employees would continue the same as they were doing at that time; so that I just kept on working.

Q. Did you receive two different circulars yourself, one as to one lot of lines and one as to another lot of lines?

A. My impression is that there were two circulars; but as to that I am not entirely clear. I think there were two.

Q. When last did you see either one of those circulars?

A. I think it was about a month ago.

Q. Which one did you see then—or did you see both of them?

A. I think I saw the Central Pacific.

Q. Did you see any as to the Southern Pacific Railroad at that time?

A. I think not.

857 Q. When last did you see the circular as to the Southern Pacific Railroad, having reference to this turnover of the spring of 1885?

A. Why, I think perhaps four or five months ago.

Q. Did you see that at the same time that you saw the one as to the Central Pacific?

A. I am not very such as to that. I have been looking at a number of circulars, and I am not quite sure just how it is about that.

Q. Where were these circulars when you saw them within the present year?

A. They were in the Flood Building.

Q. Here in the Southern Pacific Company's offices?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. McCLENNEN. Have you got those circulars, Mr. Herrin?

Mr. HERRIN. Yes.

Mr. McCLENNEN. Will you let me have them, please?

Mr. HERRIN. They are both in evidence in Mr. Pratt's deposition, and both exhibits; one is Exhibit 2 and the other is Exhibit 3 [handing papers to counsel for the petitioner].

By Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. Are the circulars to which you have just referred the ones marked, respectively, "Defendants' Pratt's Exhibit 2" and "De-858 fendant's Pratt's Exhibit 3", dated, respectively, February 27, 1885, and April 1, 1885, which I show you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And was it only the differences referred to in these two circulars which you had reference to in the testimony which you have been giving?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. McCLENNEN. That is all.

Mr. HERRIN. Have you finished with this witness?

Mr. McCLENNEN. Yes; I am through with the witness.

(Whereupon at 4.30 o'clock p. m. an adjournment was taken until to-morrow, Wednesday, March 3, 1915, at 11 o'clock a. m.)

859 THIRTEENTH DAY.

ROOM 921, FLOOD BUILDING,
San Francisco, Cal., Wednesday, March 3, 1915.

The hearing was resumed, pursuant to adjournment, at 11 o'clock a. m., before Frank R. Hanna, special examiner.

Present on behalf of the United States: James W. Orr, Esq., Edward F. McClennen, Esq., and Edward E. Gann, Esq., special assistants to the Attorney General.

Present on behalf of the defendants: W. F. Herrin, Esq., J. P. Blair, Esq., P. F. Dunne, Esq., Garret McEnerney, Esq., and E. J. Foulds, Esq., for the Southern Pacific Company.

860 H. ENGLEBRIGHT was called as a witness on behalf of the defendants, and having been duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. HERRIN:

Q. What is your age?

A. Sixty-three.

Q. Your occupation?

A. Master car repairer, western division, Oakland.

Q. Of the Southern Pacific Company?

A. Yes.

Q. Were you ever employed by the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. Yes.

Q. When did you begin work for that company?

A. Well, I commenced with the California Pacific Railroad in October, 1869, which was absorbed or taken over by the Central Pacific, and I went to Sacramento in December, 1871.

Q. What were you doing there?

A. Blacksmith's apprentice.

Q. In the shop of the company?

A. Yes.

861 Q. How long did you continue there?

A. Well, I continued there until May, 1873.

Q. Then where did you go?

A. Why, I left the service of the company then and was absent about two and a half years. I worked at the Mare Island Navy Yard and the North Pacific Coast Railroad and other places.

Q. When did you return to the Central Pacific?

A. March 15, 1876.

Q. How long did you continue?

A. That was at Sacramento; and then I was transferred to San Francisco in March, 1877, by Ben Welch, master car builder at Sacramento.

Q. What did you do here?

A. I was a blacksmith then.

Q. At what place?

A. San Francisco, Sixth and Townsend Streets.

Q. In the shops of the company?

A. Yes.

Q. The Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. Yes.

Q. How long did you continue there?

902 A. Until November, 1878, when I was transferred to Oakland under the same jurisdiction.

Q. Were you in the shops of the company at Oakland?

A. Yes.

Q. How long did you continue there?

A. Until May, 1892.

Q. What occurred then?

A. I was then sent to Fresno, and I was car foreman at Fresno nd also roundhouse foreman until August, 1898.

Q. And then?

A. Then I was transferred as car foreman to San Francisco, and remained there until February, 1900, when I was appointed master ar repairer at Oakland. I have been there ever since.

Q. Now, while you were in the Sacramento shops, from December, 871, to May, 1873, as you have stated, what work did you do?

A. I first worked in the car department under Mr. Welch as a lacksmith and apprentice on car work, and I was afterwards a ember of the wrecking train, and we used to go out on the road a good deal picking up wrecks, cars, engines, and so forth; and 3 then afterwards I went over into the blacksmith shop in the machine department, and I worked there until I left, in May, 873, on locomotive work and work of that character.

Q. You worked on engines?

A. Yes. When we built the first twelve engines I worked on those engines; 1872–73 they were turned out.

Q. Were those engines built for the Central Pacific?

A. The Central Pacific Railroad; yes.

Q. Where were they used?

A. They were used all on the western division out of Oakland, between Oakland and Sacramento; I think all of them but one or two; there were twelve engines built, if I recall it, two of which went to Virginia and Truckee. The others were used on the western division.

Q. While you were in Oakland in 1878 to 1892 what work did you do?

A. I was a blacksmith in the shops there and I was also on the wrecking train—went out on the road.

Q. Did you have to do with repairs of engines that were operated on the Southern Pacific Railroad?

A. Not at Oakland; car work entirely at Oakland.

864 Q. The cars that were used on the Southern Pacific Railroad came from the Oakland shops?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember any engines that were sent out from the east for the G., H. & S. A.—locomotives?

A. Yes.

Q. Will you state what you know about them and what years that was?

A. Well, I can not recall the years, but it was along in the early eighties; it might have been 1881 or 1882, along in there somewhere. Those engines came to Sacramento and were used between Oakland and Sacramento.

Q. To what company did those engines belong?

A. They were G., H. & S. A.—Galveston, Harrisburg & San Antonio—later.

Q. Where were they used?

A. Between Oakland and Sacramento.

Q. Did you ever see those engines in the Sacramento shops?

A. The engines came from the east to the Sacramento shops. In fact, all new engines were delivered at Sacramento.

865 Q. Do you know about the use of engines and equipment of these different companies—the Central Pacific, the Southern Pacific of California, the Southern Pacific of Arizona, the Southern Pacific of New Mexico, and the G., H. & S. A.? Were those engines, those locomotives, used indiscriminately over the different lines?

A. Yes; they were used indiscriminately over the different lines with reference to the classes of the different types that were needed.

Q. State whether or not you have seen engines and rolling stock labeled "S. P. of New Mexico", for example, or "S. P. of Arizona", in use on the California lines?

A. Yes.

Q. Also Central Pacific rolling stock in use on the lines of the Southern Pacific Railroad in California?

A. Yes; we had them C. P., S. P., S. P. Cal., Northern Railway, S. P. of Arizona, New Mexico, and so forth. They were used indiscriminately on the western division at that time.

Q. Do you remember the two large locomotives, supposed to be large at that time, No. 229 Central Pacific and No. 237 Central Pacific?

A. Yes.

Q. What do you know about them?

866 A. I know that they were being built at the Sacramento shops and I made a number of visits up there to look at them while they were under construction, and they were taken South and used on the Southern Pacific on the Tehachapi hill.

Q. Tehachapi Mountains?

A. Yes. They were both C. P. engines, though, and they never ran anywhere else. No. 237 was worn out there on the mountain.

Q. They were your largest engines at that time?

A. Yes. When that engine was built it was the largest engine in the world.

Q. And the work required on the Tehachapi Mountain made it suitable to use that engine at that place?

A. Yes.

Q. And it was there used?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember when the Southern Pacific Company, the present company operating those lines, took them over for operation?

867 A. Well, I can not state the year, but it was about 1885 or 1886, somewhere in that neighborhood; I remember that distinctly; yes.

Q. I will ask you: What company was operating those lines before the Southern Pacific Company took them?

A. Central Pacific Railroad, so far as I understand.

Q. You were down there prior to the time the Southern Pacific took it? You had been over the lines of the Southern Pacific Railroad?

A. Yes.

Q. How far south?

A. I had been as far south working—I think Delano was the farthest point south I went.

Q. Did you ever go to Los Angeles?

A. Only on a short trip or something, but working out of Oakland I went with the wrecking train to Delano, and also from Sacramento in 1876 to Goshen Junction and did some work there.

Q. And you know the Central Pacific Railroad Company was operating the line south of Goshen?

Mr. McCLENNEN. I object to that as leading and as showing something the witness could not have observed from his earlier testimony.

The WITNESS. Yes.

868 By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. What do you know about the company that was operating the Southern Pacific Railroad line south of Goshen to Los Angeles prior to the time the Southern Pacific Company took it in 1885 or 1886, as you have stated?

A. It was all operated under one head—the same managers.

Q. What head was that?

A. The Central Pacific Railroad.

Q. Who were the operating officials of that company?

A. A. N. Towne was general superintendent and A. J. Steels was general master mechanic in charge of locomotives and power; Benjamin Welch was the master car builder in charge of all car work and their jurisdiction extended over the entire system.

Q. How far did that go?

A. To El Paso and Ogden.

Q. Do you remember J. A. Fillmore?

A. Yes; afterwards. Filimore was at Sacramento, division superintendent in the early days, when I went there.

Q. What happened after the Southern Pacific Company took 869 those lines, the Southern Pacific Railroad and the Central Pacific Railroad, what was Fillmore doing?

A. Fillmore succeeded Fellows; E. C. Fellows was assistant general superintendent to Mr. Towne, and Fellows died and Fillmore was brought down from Sacramento. I could not state the year exactly.

Q. And after that he was what?

A. General superintendent. Towne was general manager.

Q. Who was the general passenger agent of the Central Pacific?

A. Mr. Goodman.

Q. T. H. Goodman?

A. Yes.

Q. You remember R. H. Pratt?

A. Yes; very well.

Q. What position did he hold?

A. He was assistant general superintendent. I think that was his title at that time.

Q. These officials of the Central Pacific Railroad Company had jurisdiction over what lines prior to the Southern Pacific Company's advent?

A. Do you mean what different lines?

Q. Yes.

870 A. The Central Pacific Railroad of California, the Southern Pacific of California, the Southern Pacific of New Mexico, the Southern Pacific of Arizona, the Northern Railway, the California Pacific Railroad, the Stockton & Copperopolis Railroad, the Los Angeles, and Independence——

Q. That is as far as you need go.

A. There might be some more. I can not think of them now.

Q. Which the record shows. The operating officials you have mentioned, of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, who were in office when the Southern Pacific Company took these lines—did they or did they not become like operating officials of the Southern Pacific Company, or did the Southern Pacific Company have a new set of officials?

Mr. McCLENNEN. This is objected to as calling for a conclusion, and for information which a railroad company's blacksmith is not in a position to receive.

The WITNESS. No; it went right along just as it was.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Did the Southern Pacific Company have any other officials than those that were in office under the Central Pacific Company?

871 A. I never heard of any.

Q. Was there any change in these officials, so far as you knew, when the Southern Pacific Company took charge?

A. I can not recall any change whatever.

Q. What were you doing in 1885 when the Southern Pacific Company took possession?

A. Working in the Oakland shops as a blacksmith.

Q. And you were out on the line at times, making repairs?

A. Yes, sir; I was on the wreck train when required.

Q. Did you know A. N. Towne?

A. Only by sight and by reputation.

Q. Did you know Mr. Fillmore?

A. Yes; I knew him personally.

Q. Did you know Mr. Pratt?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you know Mr. Goodman?

A. Only by sight and reputation.

Q. Do you know whether Mr. Goodman is living?

A. I believe he died a year or so ago; last year.

Q. Is Mr. Fillmore living?

A. Mr. Fillmore died some years ago.

872 Q. Is Mr. Towne living?

A. No, sir.

Q. Is Mr. Stevens living?

A. Mr. Stevens died some twenty years ago. He died in 1888. Ben Welch died two years ago.

Mr. HERRIN. You may take the witness.

Cross-examination by Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. It appears definitely, Mr. Engelbright, from other testimony in the case, that the date when the Central Pacific lease to the Southern Pacific was to go into operation, was April 1, 1885. Having that date in mind, will you tell me prior to that date, just prior to that date, what rolling stock labels predominated in the region that you saw?

A. The freight equipment was stenciled with the initials of the road; that is, the Ceneral Pacific cars were stenciled "C. P."; the S. P. cars of California were stenciled "S. P. Cal."; the Southern Pacific of New Mexico were stenciled "S. P. of N. M."; the Southern Pacific of Arizona were stenciled "S. P. of A."; the California Pacific were stenciled "Cal. P."; the Northern Railway were stenciled "N. Ry."; and the locomotives were stenciled in the same way, 873 and the passenger equipment in the same way.

Q. Did you used to see the trains much in operation or only as cars came in for repairs?

A. Well, I saw trains in operation a great deal. Oakland was the terminal yard at that time, and we did the largest passenger business at Oakland yards, where the trains were made up and where they were received and made up and repaired and cleaned and sent out again.

Q. Was that the terminal yard for the southerly system as well as for the central system?

A. Yes, sir; everything that came into Oakland went into that yard.

Q. Come back, then, to the original question: Which should you say you saw the most of, Southern Pacific cars or Central Pacific cars, or other lines?

A. Well, in the early days there were more of the Central Pacific cars.

Q. That is going back how early?

A. Oh, going back in the seventies. About along in 1885 there were a great many Southern Pacific cars and the S. P. of A. and N. M., and these other lines that began to arrive from the east.

Q. Just prior to 1885 did you used to see many of the G., H. & S. A. cars up there? I mean many as compared with the eat bulk of cars.

A. Well, I could not recollect whether I did or not. That is, fixing e date.

Q. There would be nothing to fix it in your mind, would there?

A. Not particularly; no.

Q. Just a casual observation?

A. We did have, I know, a great many G., H. & S. A. cars, but I uld not say just right to the date when it was.

Q. Would you get Union Pacific cars in there?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. A good many?

A. Lots of them, and all other foreign cars.

Q. And Denver & Rio Grande cars?

A. Well, I don't remember in that early day of seeing any D. & G. cars. That was a narrow-gauge road then, and we did not have m come out here. We had, however, all kinds of what we called eign cars. Any car that is not our own we call a foreign car.

Q. Did that apply to passenger cars?

A. No, sir.

Q. That was freight cars that you were speaking of?

. Freight equipment; yes, sir.

. Take passenger cars next. Did you used to see foreign passen- cars?

. No foreign passenger cars; no, sir; other than Pullmans.

. Didn't you used to get Union Pacific ordinary passenger ches?

. No, sir; they were cut out at Ogden.

. Did you used to get G., H. & S. A. passenger cars?

. Occasionally; yes, sir.

. Was it a frequent occurrence or just occasionally?

. Well, quite frequently; yes, sir.

. How about the passenger cars of the S. P. of Arizona?

. They were run indiscriminately, just as we required them.

. And the S. P. of New Mexico?

. Yes, sir; we ran them all into Oakland and out of Oakland.

. Did the S. P. cars of Arizona and New Mexico run much be- tween Oakland and Ogden?

A. Well, if they needed them; yes.

Q. Was it a frequent occurrence?

. Quite frequent; yes, sir. I don't believe there was any dis- ination made much; we used the cars wherever we happened to them, of the required class.

Q. Could you give me some idea of how many times there would be, in the course of a week, say, when there would be a S. P. of Arizona car run up to Ogden?

A. No, sir; I couldn't do that.

Q. And there was nothing to attract your attention to it particularly?

A. No, sir.

Q. And the engines—how were most of the engines labeled that ran from San Francisco to Ogden?

A. All I know about is what ran to Sacramento. That was the end of our division. Another class of engine was used from Ogden on, but we used all kinds of engines between Oakland and Sacramento—C. P., S. P. Cal., S. P. of A., and N. M.—wherever the class was suitable for the trains they used them on.

Q. After 1880 most of the passenger business for Ogden used to run to Sacramento over S. P. tracks, did it not?

877 A. Well, it ran to Benicia on the Northern Railway tracks or to Port Costa and across the bay on what was then known as the California Pacific from Benicia to Sacramento.

Q. Do you know when those became S. P. tracks?

A. No, sir; I can not recall when it was.

Q. Those never became Central Pacific tracks?

A. No, sir.

Q. You know the line running from San Francisco down through Gilroy, the so-called coast line?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Prior to April 1, 1885, what company operated that line?

A. The Southern Pacific Railroad.

Q. Did not the Central operate that?

A. Well, I don't know about that. I believe they did. They called that the northern division, or something, at that time.

Q. In your position, with all these different labels on the cars, there was really no way in which you could know which railroad was operating any particular line, was there?

A. No, sir.

Q. That is, the only way you could judge was by who was 878 operating you?

A. That is the idea; yes.

Q. You knew you were working for the Central Pacific Railroad up to the 1st of April, 1885?

A. Yes.

Q. But who any conductors or engineers might be working for on any of these lines you really did not know at all?

A. Well, only that we all worked for the same company, the same management, the same paymaster.

Q. Take this very thing, the coast line through Gilroy: Did you really know, between 1880 and 1885, whether the conductors and engineers on that line were working under the same paymaster as you were yourself?

A. I could not say as to that. I was not there at that time.

Q. And the same would be true of any other line, except those lines that you came immediately in contact with?

A. Yes.

Q. Within a few miles of your own place. Was the transfer of operation of all the different lines, from the Central Pacific to the Southern Pacific, made at one time?

A. I do not know.

879 Q. Was the operation of the Southern Pacific lines that you came in contact with in 1885 transferred at the same time as the operation of the Central Pacific lines that you came in contact with?

A. I believe so; yes.

Q. That is, there came some time, a certain day, when it was generally known that the Central Pacific had ceased to operate the lines and the Southern Pacific had begun to operate them?

A. I never heard of that. I never heard of any such date. In the position that I occupied, I did not notice any changes or did not hear of any. The thing went right along just the same.

Q. It appears that in March, 1885, you were working for the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You found out some time that you were working for the Southern Pacific Company, did you not?

A. Yes; only in a general way; but there was not any change; the same paymaster paid off, and it went right along—the same officials. There was no change, as far as we were concerned.

880 Q. There came a time, did there not, when, if somebody had asked you who you were working for, you would have said you were working for the Southern Pacific Company?

A. The S. P. Company; yes, sir.

Q. And before that, if anybody had asked you who you were working for, you would have said you were working for the Central Pacific?

A. Yes, sir; the Central Pacific.

Q. What I want to get at is just how you found out when you were working for one and when you were working for the other.

A. Men in my class at that time never got any circulars or letters to that effect. It was only what the foreman told us in regard to charging time for work. And then we began to see the term "Southern Pacific Company" used on all the stationery and time cards, and the like of that.

Q. It did not make any particular difference to you what the name of your employer was?

A. No, sir.

Q. And you sort of got information just as you picked it up around the street?

881 A. Yes, sir. Well, the printed matter, the time cards and the advertisements and printed literature, was Southern Pacific Company.

Q. You used to handle time cards, so that you would see that?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. In 1885?

A. Yes, sir. That is, I mean shop cards.

Q. You mean ordinary day work cards, such as they have in the shop?

A. Yes; and printed matter was marked "S. P. Company."

Mr. McCLENNEN. That is all.

Redirect examination by Mr. HERRIN:

Q. You did not see any Union Pacific locomotives running on the Central Pacific?

A. No.

Q. Or on the Southern Pacific?

A. No, sir.

Q. You did not see any Denver & Rio Grande locomotives?

A. No, sir.

Q. Nor any foreign locomotives at all?

A. No, sir.

882 Q. You did not regard the S. P. of Arizona as being a foreign road, did you?

Mr. McCLENNEN. That is objected to as leading, immaterial, irrelevant, and incompetent, and calling upon the witness for a conclusion.

The WITNESS. No, sir.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. When you spoke of foreign cars, what did you mean?

A. Chicago & North Western, New York Central, Pennsylvania Railroad, Baltimore & Ohio—any of those roads are called foreign. All the others were called system.

Q. What cars did you consider as not being foreign cars? What cars were not foreign cars?

Mr. McCLENNEN. That is objected to as calling upon the witness to draw a conclusion, as immaterial, incompetent, and irrelevant, and not proper redirect examination.

The WITNESS. Central Pacific, Southern Pacific of California, Southern Pacific of New Mexico, Southern Pacific of Arizona.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. That would be the same as to the locomotives?

Mr. MCCLENNEN. The same objection.

883 The WITNESS. Yes; Northern Railway, San Pablo, Tulare.

Mr. HERRIN. That is all.

I offer in evidence the deposition of Mr. R. H. Pratt, taken in San Francisco, July 14 and 15, 1914, and it is agreed that it shall be copied in the record.

Mr. MCCLENNEN. Petitioner, without repeating them, saves all of the several objections set forth in the deposition.

Q. And you were superintendent of track, you became superintendent of track in August of 1869, on the track between Truckee and Ogden?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long did you continue as such superintendent?

A. Until 1871; in the fall, November, 1871, about that time. I do not remember the exact date.

Q. Then what did you do, if anything, afterwards?

891 A. I was appointed superintendent of the Salt Lake Division, located at Ogden.

Q. Your office was at Ogden?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And how far did that division extend westward?

A. It extended west to Wells.

Q. Wells, Nevada?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. ORR. From Ogden to Wells?

The WITNESS. Yes, sir; from Ogden to Wells.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. How long did you continue in that position?

A. At Ogden?

Q. Yes.

A. Seven years.

Q. Until when?

A. Until August, 1879.

Q. Then what did you do, if anything?

A. Then I was moved as superintendent from Ogden to Sacramento; placed in charge of the Sacramento division.

Q. How long did that continue?

A. That continued two years.

Q. And after that, what did you do, if anything?

892 A. I was appointed assistant general superintendent, headquarters at San Francisco.

Q. And how long did that continue?

A. Until 1895.

Q. When you retired from the service?

A. Yes; I resigned.

Mr. ORR. Until when in 1895?

The WITNESS. December 31st, 1895.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Your work from the time you became superintendent of the Salt Lake Division, in 1872, until you retired in 1895, was the operation of the road, the operation of trains?

A. Yes, sir; the operation of trains.

Q. What were your duties when you were superintendent of the Salt Lake division; what were your duties?

A. My duties were, I was in general charge of all the traffic over all that division and also over the foremen of track; also general charge of the whole division; everything that went over the division.

Q. And from the time you became assistant general superintendent, what were your duties?

893 A. My duties were general charge all over the Central Pacific line and branches; Central Pacific and Southern Pacific line and branches.

Q. You do not mean that you handled the traffic, as a traffic officer, but you were an operating officer?

A. Division superintendent over the line under my superiors; that distance of track.

Q. You were then in charge of operation?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. As contradistinguished from the other departments, you were an operating official?

A. That is what I was.

Q. Who was the president of the Central Pacific Railroad Company from the time you had business relations with it, down to 1885?

A. Leland Stanford.

Q. Was there any vice president during that time?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was it?

A. C. P. Huntington.

Mr. ORR. Covering the same period?

The WITNESS. Yes, sir.

894 By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Was there any other vice president during that time?

A. Mr. Charles Crocker was second vice president during the same time.

Q. Who was the secretary of the Central Pacific Railroad Company during that period?

A. E. H. Miller, Jr.

Q. Who was the first treasurer of the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. Mr. Mark Hopkins.

Q. How long did he continue in such office?

A. He continued until his death. My memory don't serve me, I can not tell you exactly when he died. About 188— I can not say just now.

Q. About 1880?

A. Yes, sir; about that time somewhere.

Q. Who was the chief operating officer of the Central Pacific from 1869?

A. Charles Crocker was superintendent.

Q. How long did he continue in that position?

A. I can not give you it positively, but I think it was about October, 1869.

895 Q. 1869?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who succeeded him as the chief operating official?

A. Mr. A. N. Towne.

Q. Did Mr. Towne continue as chief operating official of the Central Pacific Railroad until 1885?

A. He did.

Q. When did you first know the Southern Pacific Railroad Company?

A. The Southern Pacific Railroad Company? Well, about 1885.

Q. Didn't you know it before that?

A. Perhaps it was a little earlier than that. I can not think of the date to-day.

Q. Do you know what company built the road from Lathrop to Goshen?

A. That was previous to 1885.

Q. I say, do you know what company built that road?

A. The Central Pacific.

Q. To Goshen?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What company built the road south of Goshen?

896 A. The Central Pacific Railroad Company.

Q. The Central Pacific south of Goshen to Los Angeles, Yuma, and El Paso?

A. The Southern Pacific.

Q. Which was it, the Central Pacific or Southern Pacific?

A. The Southern Pacific.

Q. The Southern Pacific Railroad Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. From Goshen?

A. From Goshen.

Q. When any section of that road was open for operation south of Goshen, do you know what company operated the road?

A. Well, the Central Pacific Company operated it until the Southern Pacific was formed.

Q. That is all right. I want to continue along as it was brought in, as these sections were brought in to be operated by the company operating them.

A. The Central Pacific Company.

Q. Did the Southern Pacific Company operate any of the line?

A. The Southern Pacific operated it after.

897 Q. The Southern Pacific Railroad Company?

A. The Southern Pacific Railroad Company?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you mean the Southern Pacific Railroad Company operated it? The Southern Pacific Railroad Company built it, built the road south of Goshen, but what company operated it?

A. What years, now?

Q. From the time it was opened, that was about 1885?

A. Down to 1885?

Q. Yes.

A. The Central Pacific Company.

Q. The Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember when that line reached El Paso in its progress eastward, about when?

A. I can not remember.

Q. Did the Central Pacific Railroad operate the line to El Paso at any time?

A. It did.

Q. Did it operate the road east of El Paso to New Orleans at any time?

898 A. It did.

Q. Do you remember when the line was opened between New Orleans and San Francisco, or about when?

A. I am unable to give the date.

Q. Was it prior to 1885?

A. I am unable to state the date, but I know the road was completed and connected with San Antonio.

Q. Did the Central Pacific Railroad Company operate trains at any time between New Orleans and San Francisco?

A. It did.

Q. Was it doing that at the time that line was taken over by the Southern Pacific Company? That was in 1885.

A. Yes, sir; 1885—early in 1885.

Q. How long before that had it been operating that through road between New Orleans and San Francisco?

A. About two years, I think; it was about two years it was open.
Q. So it was probably about 1883 or 1882?
A. Yes, sir; about 1883.
Q. That the New Orleans line was opened?
A. Yes, sir.
899 Q. Did your jurisdiction extend over the line south of Goshen?
A. It did.
Q. All the way to New Orleans?
A. All the way to New Orleans for a period of about two years.
Q. Do you remember when the Southern Pacific Company, the Kentucky corporation, took over the operation of the road between New Orleans and San Francisco; do you know?
A. Yes, sir; I remember.
Q. What year was that?
A. About 1885.
Q. Was there any change made in your jurisdiction at that time as to its extent?
A. No change whatever.
Q. Was there afterwards?
A. Never. Not as long as I remained with the company.
Q. Did your jurisdiction always extend through to New Orleans?
A. Not always.
Q. That is what I want to get at. The exact point of my question is to find out when you were restricted to El Paso.
900 A. Well, perhaps I will have to explain that a little. I can not give you the date, but somewhere about 1883, or somewhere, my jurisdiction was extended to New Orleans, and we operated from San Francisco for about two years, and it was found for some reason by the directors that it was not the best thing to do. Then we turned to the former operation, the operation formerly had been from New Orleans by the Morgan Steamer Company Line, which had previously owned those lines, and after that it was operated from New Orleans.
Q. Was it not a fact that as fast as the road was built and owned for operation south of Goshen to Los Angeles, El Paso, San Antonio, and on to New Orleans—as soon as that through line was opened for operation that the Central Pacific Company operated it?
A. It was.
Q. It was the first company that operated that line?
A. The first company.
Q. And your jurisdiction then extended all the way to New Orleans?
A. All the way to New Orleans.
Q. And that continued—that was some time in 1883, you think?
A. Yes, sir; I think that was about 1883.

901 Q. I think probably it may be a little earlier than that. That is about right.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You made several trips over that road, you say?

A. Two trips a year, generally.

Q. Official trips?

A. Official trips and inspections over the road.

Q. And that continued until 1885, when the Southern Pacific Company of Kentucky took over that road to operate it as lessee?

A. It did.

Q. And did your jurisdiction extend after that, after the Southern Pacific Company took it, east of El Paso, or was it restricted at that time to El Paso? In other words, what they call the Pacific system of the Southern Pacific Company—when was that organized?

A. I can not give you the date. I do not remember.

Q. Now, from the beginning, Mr. Pratt, who were the controlling officials and stockholders, as you saw them in everyday life and in your business, of the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

Mr. McCLENNEN. Note an objection on the ground that the 902 question calls for the conclusion of the witness to draw a conclusion of fact and a conclusion of law.

The WITNESS. May I give my answer?

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Yes.

A. Leland Stanford, C. P. Huntington, Charles Crocker, and Mark Hopkins.

Q. Did you know each of those gentlemen yourself?

A. I knew them personally.

Q. Did you ever have to do with them, or any of them, in your official business while operating the Central Pacific Railroad?

A. Quite often; more especially with Mr. Hopkins and Mr. Crocker, in my history of the road.

Q. Did you receive instructions from them?

A. I did receive instructions.

Q. And obeyed them?

A. Always, if I could.

Q. How long did that status continue of their control, or, as you observed it, from the time you began with the company?

Mr. McCLENNEN. The same objection.

903 The WITNESS. As long as I was connected with the company, except two who died previous.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Who were they?

A. Charles Crocker and Mark Hopkins.

Q. During the lifetime of Mr. Hopkins and during the lifetime of Mr. Crocker they each continued actively in the management of the Central Pacific Railroad?

A. They did.

Q. Who were the gentlemen that determined finally the questions that had to be decided for the Central Pacific Railroad in its financial and executive department?

Mr. McCLENNEN. Note an exception to that on the ground it calls for the witness to draw a conclusion, give an opinion, which is not material or relevant to this case, and is not the best evidence of the fact of corporate action.

The WITNESS. Leland Stanford, Charles Crocker, C. P. Huntington, and Mark Hopkins.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. How do you know that? I want to get at what facts you base that statement on.

A. I know it from taking their orders from them and 904 working for them and with them; that is, they were on the work frequently, one of them, almost one or the other of them was always at the work and the other in the office.

Q. What did Mr. Charles Crocker have to do from the beginning until he died?

A. General superintendent and paymaster from the time the work was commenced until December, 1868. Then he resigned and they reappointed another paymaster, and then later on, in 1869, he was relieved by Mr. Towne.

Q. Did he continue his activities after that in connection with the company?

A. Until his sickness and death.

Q. Do you know when that occurred?

A. I am unable to give the date.

Q. He was in charge of the construction of the road in the early stages?

A. Charles Crocker; yes.

Q. Was he not on the ground most of the time?

A. He was on the ground most of the time; he was very energetic.

Q. Very active man, was he not?

A. Very active all through; very active.

905 Q. What did Mr. Hopkins have to do?

A. Mr. Hopkins was more in his office, did more office work; he did not come out on the road so much.

Q. Was he sometimes out on the road?

A. Oh, yes; he would come over occasionally and visit us and look over the work a little, but was not so active.

Q. What did Mr. Stanford have to do?

A. Mr. Stanford often came out on inspection tours and work in his capacity.

Q. Was he active in the management of the company?

A. He was quite active.

Q. He was president during all of this time?

A. He was present during all this time.

Q. Did you ever consult with him as to the business of the company?

A. Did I?

Q. Yes.

A. Not so much as I consulted with Mr. Crocker.

Q. You saw more of Mr. Crocker?

A. I saw more of Mr. Crocker, because he was the active man on the ground.

Q. Did you consult with Mr. Stanford at all?

906 A. I did.

Q. Frequently?

A. Not frequently. Less frequently than the other two.

Q. Than Mr. Hopkins and Mr. Crocker?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you know Mr. C. P. Huntington?

A. I did.

Q. When did you see him on the road?

A. Generally he made his residence in New York most of the time, after the second year of building the road, and I only saw him personally when he came out on his annual and semiannual inspection. Of course, I took orders from him during those times. He always was with us, our men in charge.

Q. Did you ever receive orders from Mr. Huntington?

A. I did.

Q. When Mr. Crocker was on the ground, in the absence of the three gentlemen, did he exercise the control?

A. He did.

Q. Generally?

A. Generally.

Q. Of the company's business?

A. Yes, sir; he was considered as superintendent. He 907 was considered the active man.

Q. I have asked you if you remember when the Southern Pacific Company of Kentucky took over the line between San Francisco and New Orleans as lessee. You stated you did. Do you also remember the time when the Southern Pacific Company of Kentucky took over the operation of the Central Pacific road as lessee from the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What time was that?

A. About 1885.

Q. About the same time that it took over the Southern Pacific Railroad Company?

A. About the same time.

Q. Now, at the time of this lease, or at the time of these leases, one of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company's line and the other of the Central Pacific Railroad Company's line, both to the Southern Pacific Company of Kentucky, do you know who were the chief officials of the Central Pacific Railroad Company? I will ask you if you know who was president at that time?

A. Leland Stanford.

Q. Who was the vice president?

908 A. C. P. Huntington.

Q. Who was the second vice president?

A. Charles Crocker.

Q. Who was the treasurer?

A. Mark Hopkins, until his death.

Q. He died before that. Who succeeded Mark Hopkins?

A. I am not quite sure who succeeded him directly.

Q. Was it Timothy Hopkins?

A. Timothy Hopkins, I think; I am not quite sure it was Timothy Hopkins.

Q. Who was the secretary?

A. E. H. Miller.

Q. Edward Harry Miller, Jr.?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was the general manager?

A. Mr. A. N. Towne.

Q. The chief engineer?

A. Mr. William Hood.

Q. The general superintendent?

A. J. A. Fillmore.

Q. The assistant general superintendent?

A. Myself—R. H. Pratt.

909 Q. The general passenger agent?

A. Mr. T. H. Goodman.

Q. The traffic manager?

A. Mr. Stubbs.

Q. I am going to ask you who was the traffic manager and who was the general freight agent, if you remember.

A. Richard Gray was freight agent.

Q. And who was what we call the traffic manager?

A. J. C. Stubbs.

Q. And who was the general counsel?

A. Judge Sanderson.

Q. Now, we are speaking of the time when the Southern Pacific Company of Kentucky took over these two lines as lessee. Do you know the officers of the road of that company at this time? For example, who was president?

A. Leland Stanford.

Q. Did or did not the Southern Pacific Company have precisely the same officials that you have named for the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. The same that I have named.

Q. All the way through?

A. No change whatever.

910 Q. After the death of Charles Crocker, who succeeded him, if any one, in his position with the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. I am unable to state that any one succeeded him immediately.

Q. Well, afterwards, who succeeded him? Was in any one of his own name?

A. C. F. Crocker.

Q. Who was C. F. Crocker?

A. C. F. Crocker was a son of Charles Crocker.

Q. Then, as I understand you, Mr. Charles Crocker was succeeded by his son, Mr. C. F. Crocker?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. ORR. In what position?

The WITNESS. As second vice president.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Now, after the death of Mark Hopkins, who did you recognize in your daily life as dominating the affairs of the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

Mr. MCCLENNEN. That is objected to as calling for a conclusion, and matter that is immaterial, irrelevant, and incompetent.

911 The WITNESS. Leland Stanford and C. P. Huntington.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Anybody else after Mr. Hopkins died?

A. Mr. Huntington, Mr. Crocker, and Mr. Stanford.

Q. Those three men?

A. Those three men; yes.

Q. After the death of Mr. Charles Crocker, about 1888 or 1889, who did you recognize as dominating the affairs of the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

Mr. MCCLENNEN. The same objection.

The WITNESS. Leland Stanford and C. P. Huntington.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Who were the men who dominated the affairs of the Southern Pacific Company from the time it took these leases in March and April, 1885?

Mr. MCCLENNEN: The same objection.

The WITNESS. Leland Stanford, C. P. Huntington, and Mr. Crocker.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Was there any difference in the control or organization of those two companies at that time, 1885, namely, the Central Pacific 912 Railroad Company and the Southern Pacific Company, that you ever noticed?

Mr. MCCLENNEN. The same objection; and further, calling for the witness to express an opinion and to state the substance of corporate to be shown by the record.

The WITNESS. No difference.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Did you at any time receive from Leland Stanford oral orders—orders given orally, not in writing—that controlled you in your official duties?

A. I did.

Q. Did that occur frequently?

A. Not very frequently.

Q. It sometimes did?

A. It sometimes did.

Q. How about Charles Crocker?

A. The same. More frequently with Charles Crocker.

Q. How about Mark Hopkins?

A. Mark Hopkins quite frequently during two or three years, quite frequently; all correspondence was entirely with him; that is, during the time I had charge of the Dutch Flat and Donner Lake Wagon Road.

Q. Did you always obey his instructions?

913 A. To the best of my ability.

Q. Never questioned them?

A. Never questioned them.

Q. Was there any difference, so far as you noticed, in the management or control of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, as compared with the other two companies that you have mentioned, the Central Pacific Railroad Company and the Southern Pacific Company of Kentucky?

Mr. MCCLENNEN. The same objection as last stated.

The WITNESS. No difference.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. When the Southern Pacific Company took possession of these ads under its leases, did you become an official of the Southern cific Company then and cease your official relations with the Cen-al Pacific Railroad?

A. So far as the heading of the stationery.

Q. Did you become an official of that company?

A. I became an official of that company.

Q. You were assistant general superintendent of the Southern cific Company, instead of the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. I was.

Q. So one day you were an official of one company and the next day you became the same official of the Southern Pacific mpany?

A. I did.

Q. In making that change, was there any change in the organiza-on or change in salary or change in duties of any official, so far as u know?

Mr. MCCLENNEN. The same objection as last above stated, and, fur-er, as calling in part for a matter which must of necessity be beyond e knowledge of the witness.

The WITNESS. No changes whatever.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. You know that your own duties were not changed?

A. Not changed in the least.

Q. And that in your dealing with other officials precisely the same lations continued as were existing before the lease?

A. The same.

Q. And do you know of any change whatever that was made in the ganization of the company?

A. Not excepting some of the changes in the heading of blanks.

Q. What was that?

A. Stamp or something of the kind was put on the head the Central Pacific Railroad Company paper.

Q. You took the old stationery that you were using for the Central cific Railroad Company, and what did you do with it?

A. Put "Southern Pacific" on.

Q. Just as illustrating that, do you recognize that paper I hand u? [handing]

A. I do. I recognize the signature.

Q. That letterhead, as we call it, was the letterhead you officials re using for the Central Pacific Railroad Company, was it?

A. It was.

Q. And the only change was stamping across it in red ink "Southern Pacific Company"?

A. That is all the change.

Q. Do you recognize that signature?

A. I do.

Q. Whose is it?

A. T. H. Goodman, and Mr. Horsburgh, his chief clerk at that time.

916 Mr. HERRIN. I will offer this in evidence just as an exhibit.

Mr. MCCLENNEN. Only for the purpose of identifying the stationery?

Mr. HERRIN. For the purpose of showing that instead of getting new stationery they used up the old stationery in that way.

DEAR SIR:

Very respy.,

T. H. GOODMAN, G. P. & T. A.,

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. How was your rolling stock that you were using on the Central Pacific Railroad Company labeled prior to the use of it on the Southern Pacific Railroad Company's lines?

A. C. P. Railroad Company.

Q. Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. Central Pacific Railroad Company.

Q. Your locomotives and your cars?

A. All the cars; all the stock.

Q. Now, when the Central Pacific Railroad Company extended its operations over the line south of Goshen, even as far as K

Orleans, how was their rolling stock labeled that was used over those lines?

A. Labeled the same for a long time.

Q. It was all Central Pacific Railroad?

A. All Central Pacific until a much later date.

Q. And that was the condition in March and April, 1885, when these leases were made to the Southern Pacific Company of Kentucky?

A. It was.

Q. Did you continue thereafter to use this same stock, this same rolling stock, with the same label?

A. The same rolling stock. I can not remember the date when we began to change.

Q. When did you change it?

A. That I can not tell you.

Q. I mean when a car was brought in and had to be repainted, would you then—what did you put on in place of Central Pacific Railroad?

A. Then some of the stock was transferred to the Southern Pacific Company, some of the rolling stock, and the headings changed, or the labels changed at that time.

Q. You did not do that until you had occasion to repaint the rolling stock; then you would label it properly with the name of the Southern Pacific Company?

A. Quite a long time after, we did.

Q. Do you recognize the paper I hand you? [handing]

A. Yes, sir; I recognize that circular.

Q. By whom was it issued?

A. Issued by Leland Stanford.

Mr. HERRIN. We offer this as defendants' Pratt Exhibit 2.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. You recognize this as a circular issued by Leland Stanford, President of the Southern Pacific, at about its date, February, 1885?

A. I do.

(The paper is marked "Defendants' Pratt Exhibit 2", and is as follows:)

LELAND STANFORD, President.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Do you recognize this paper that I hand you? [handing]

A. Yes, sir; I recognize it.

Q. You recognize it as a circular issued by Mr. Towne—Mr. A. N. Towne—the general manager of the Southern Pacific Company, at about its date, April 1, 1885?

A. I do; I recognize it.

Mr. HERRIN. I offer that as defendants' Pratt Exhibit 3.

(The paper is marked "Defendants' Pratt Exhibit 3", and is as follows:)

SOUTHERN PACIFIC COMPANY, PACIFIC SYSTEM,
GENERAL MANAGER'S OFFICE,
San Francisco, April 1, 1885.

To all officers and employees:

Announcing the lease by the Southern Pacific Company of the Central Pacific Railroad and lines heretofore under lease to the last-named company, taking effect this day, it is the purpose of this circular to advise all officers, agents, and employees of the various roads and lines comprising the system that they will, until further notice, continue in the performance of their various duties as heretofore, sending reports and correspondence regarding the affairs of the company to the heads of the various offices as formerly.

Respectfully,

A. N. TOWNE, General Manager.

Cross-examination by Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. Mr. Pratt, did you have anything to do yourself with the construction of any of the line of the Southern Pacific Railroad?

A. I did.

Q. What is the first date at which you had anything to do with the Southern Pacific Railroad?

A. It must have been about 1885, under the Southern Pacific lease.

Mr. HERRIN. It was after the lease?

The WITNESS. After the lease was made, of course.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. I have not made clear to you what I had in mind. You recall, do you, that the Southern Pacific Company, which took over operations in 1885, was a Kentucky corporation?

A. Yes, sir; I remember it was said to be a Kentucky corporation.

Q. And you knew that it was a new corporation at that time?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, before that company was organized in 1884 or 1885, there had been a Southern Pacific Railroad Company as well as a Central Pacific Railroad Company. You knew that, did you not?

A. Yes, sir; I knew that.

Q. Now, in that period prior to 1885, I will say between 1864 and 1885, had you personally had anything to do with the construction of any of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company's line?

A. No, sir; I had nothing to do with the construction until it was turned over to the operating department.

Q. You had nothing to do with the construction?

A. I had nothing to do personally with the construction until it was turned over.

Q. Did you have a general contemporary knowledge of the construction of those Southern Pacific Railroad lines?

A. Just a knowledge of how the work was going on under the construction and the way it was going on at the time, and the 925 miles that were turned over to us for operation. It was turned over as it was built, ten miles at a time, or five miles.

Q. At the time you were constructing the Central Pacific Railroad from Sacramento to Ogden there was nothing being done by you or any of those with whom you were connected, so far as you know, by the Southern Pacific Railroad, was there?

A. I am unable to answer you just the date that they commenced building south from Goshen.

Q. The first construction work done by the Central Pacific Railroad was upon this line running from Sacramento to Ogden?

Mr. DUNNE. You are now calling the attention of the witness to a map marked "Southern Pacific Company and proprietary companies, 1913"?

The WITNESS. Yes; I was still with it.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. The first construction work done was that from Sacramento to Ogden?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The road from Sacramento to San Jose was not constructed by the Central Pacific Railroad?

926 A. It was purchased.

Q. It was purchased?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And when it was purchased it was a completed line over that distance?

A. I am unable to tell you that, because I was at the east end of the road all the time; I was not here when that was purchased and as not familiar with the road to San Jose until after I came to San Francisco as assistant general superintendent.

Mr. McCLENNEN. Mr. Herrin, will you kindly give us on the main ne of the Central Pacific Railroad Company the sections, with their ates of completion?

Mr. HERRIN. Yes; I will give it to you right now, if you want it. he following are the sections with respect to dates of opening for peration of the Central Pacific Railroad line between Sacramento nd Ogden:

By Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. Do you remember how far the Southern Pacific Railroad had been constructed the first time that you knew of its being operated by any of the men with whom you were connected or by any concern they were interested in?

A. I can not remember; I came to the general office in 1882; I can not remember; my memory don't serve me to give you those dates.

Q. Do you remember the fact that there was a Southern Pacific Railroad of some extent before any of these men that you have mentioned had anything to do with it?

A. No, sir; I don't.

Q. Do you remember a railroad that used to run from San Francisco to Gilroy?

929 A. I don't remember; I never was on it; I don't remember; I remember there was such a railroad there, but I can not give you the date.

Q. Don't you remember during your early railroad business here of there being a railroad from San Francisco to Goshen that you had nothing to do with?

A. Yes, sir; I remember there was a railroad that went through San Jose to Gilroy at an early date, but I can not give you the date.

Q. Without being able to give the date, you remember that was prior to the time when the Central Pacific Railroad Company had anything to do with it? That is, that it was an independent road?

A. No, sir; I do not know.

Q. Do you remember a time when that road was running down to Gilroy when it was not being operated by your company?

A. No, sir; I am unable to say that I remember that.

Q. At that time you did take over the operation of that railroad from San Francisco to Gilroy?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember that the first time that you ever took 930 over that operation it was already a constructed road as far as Gilroy?

A. I can only remember that in 1882, when I came into the general office, it was then constructed, and we operated it, but as to its previous construction or operation I am unable to say.

Q. Is it fair to say, then, that prior to 1882 you knew nothing about the Southern Pacific Railroad?

A. No, sir; not by any personal connection with it, as I was located on the Central Pacific until I came in the general office in 1882.

Q. What is the first time of which you have knowledge of who were the officers or directors of the Southern Pacific Company?

A. Well, of course, I know the officers of the Central Pacific Railroad were the officers of the Southern Pacific.

Mr. McCLENNEN. I will ask to have that answer struck out as not responsive.

By Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. What I have asked you is the first date that you can fix at which you had any knowledge of who were the officers of the Southern Pacific Railroad.

A. I had that knowledge. Of the Central Pacific owners 931 and directors?

Q. No; Southern Pacific. I want to get the time when your knowledge begins of who were the officers and directors of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company.

A. When I had any authority to say it would be in 1882, because I was not connected with the general office of the Southern Pacific or Central Pacific until 1882; I mean as to the general officers. Of course, I knew all these things, but I do not understand just how I can answer that.

Q. You do not quite mean that you knew at all times who were the officers of the Southern Pacific Railroad?

A. Yes, sir; I knew that, not by any personal connection with them in regard to the road, but I knew the same as we know everything.

Q. Now, you knew, for instance, that Mr. Willcutt was the secretary of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you also knew that he never was the secretary of the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You knew that at one time David D. Colton was one of the vice presidents of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company?

932 A. I did, for a short time.

Q. And you knew that he never was an officer of the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. No, sir; I did not know that he was ever an officer of the Central Pacific Railroad Company.

Q. Did you know, Mr. Pratt, that Mr. Lloyd Tevis was the president of the Southern Pacific Company?

A. I did not.

Q. Did you ever hear of him as the president of that company?

A. I never did of my knowledge.

Q. Did you ever know Mr. Tevis?

A. I was not acquainted with him, but I knew him when I saw him.

Q. Did he ever have any connection with the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. Did you know that Mr. D. B. Minor was the secretary of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company?

A. I did not.

Q. Did you know him?

A. I did not know him.

933 Q. Did he ever have any connection with the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. Did you know that more than three-quarters of the stock of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company was held at one time by Mr. Lloyd Tevis, Mr. William E. Barron, Mr. Thomas Bell, Mr. W. B. Carr, and Mr. D. B. Minor?

A. I did not.

Q. Of your own knowledge, I take it, you never knew yourself who held any of the shares of stock of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company?

A. I have no knowledge of that.

Q. And in the same way, you had no personal knowledge of who were the stockholders holding the stock of the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. I did not.

Q. When you became foreman of construction in 1865, on the line of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, for whom did you work?

A. For the directors of the railroad, of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, directors and owners.

Q. Were you the man actively on the job overseeing the 934 work?

A. No, sir; I was not.

Q. You were an office man, were you?

A. I was not an office man; I was on the work and had charge of men and camps.

Q. Did you ever work for Charles Crocker & Company?

A. Charles Crocker & Company? Perhaps I am wrong, I do not know what that company means.

Q. Did you ever work for Charles Crocker?

A. Charles Crocker and the other directors of the railroad company.

Q. Don't you know that Charles Crocker built, as an individual, or Charles Crocker & Company, and not the Central Pacific Railroad Company, was the one that constructed some portion of the line from San Francisco?

A. I knew that they contracted and financed the company, constructed some of the railroad.

Q. Don't you know when the Contract & Finance Company began onstruction that the construction was begun by Charles Crocker & 'ompany?

A. I have no knowledge of that.

Q. Did you ever work for the Contract & Finance Company?

35 A. Worked for Mr. Crocker. Mr. Crocker was superintendent, and Mr. J. H. Strobridge was the general superinendent of the work, remained on the work, and Mr. Charles Crocker as the head; we looked to him for our orders.

Q. Putting it simply, did you ever work for the Contract & Finance Company?

A. I don't know. I worked for the railroad company. I don't now how you would segregate that. The Contract & Finance Company did the work, but under the directors and owners of the road, nd they were the controllers; they directed us and were our heads.

Q. How were you paid, in cash or by check?

A. Paid in cash by Mr. Charles Crocker.

Q. Charles Crocker paid you?

A. He was second vice president.

Q. Did you know at the time whether you were being paid with he cash of the Central Pacific Railroad Company or cash of the 'ontract & Finance Company?

A. I certainly supposed I was paid by the Central Pacific Raiload Company. We all supposed that.

Q. What was the Contract & Finance Company doing?

36 Mr. ORR. We move to strike out so much of the last answer that says "We all supposed that," as not responsive, and beg the opinion of the witness.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. What was the Contract & Finance Company doing?

A. That is a matter I have no control over.

Q. You knew they constructed some part of that road, don't you?

A. I knew it was said it was done by the Contract & Finance Company.

Q. The work that was said that was being done by the Contract & inance Company was work that you were doing?

A. It was also done by the Central Pacific Railroad Company.

Q. What do you mean, the Contract & Finance Company was laying one rail and the Central Pacific the other?

A. The Contract & Finance Company was, as far as I knew, nothing; that was a matter that did not come under me, except that it as the Southern Pacific Company. Whatever arrangement they might have had with the Contract & Finance Company I did not know anything about.

Mr. DUNNE. I think the witness inadvertently said Southern Pacific instead of Central Pacific.

937 The WITNESS. Yes; Central Pacific.

By Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. You mean to say as far as the actual construction of the work, as you did the work, you did not actually know the Contract & Finance Company was doing it?

A. I said so; I knew nothing about it; I knew nothing about the management of the heads at all; we were doing the work for the owners and builders of the railroad, and they paid us, and as far as I knew anything about the Contract & Finance Company it was only hearsay. I knew nothing about it. I was paid by the Central Pacific Company; the treasurer of the company paid us.

Q. Who was the Contract & Finance Company?

A. The Central Pacific Railroad Company was the Contract & Finance Company.

Q. It was all the same thing as you think?

A. It was all the same thing as I supposed.

Q. What, according to your understanding when you were working there, was the Contract & Finance Company doing?

A. That I can not tell you from any knowledge I have; I am not sure, because I had no knowledge of the formation of the Con-

938 tract & Finance Company; I was not connected with the head of the company near enough to know.

Q. Did you know that the railroad company, the Central Pacific Railroad Company, let the construction of the line from Sacramento out for a distance to Charles Crocker & Company and subsequently let the construction of the line for the balance of the distance to near Ogden where it joined the Union Pacific, to the Contract & Finance Company?

A. I have no knowledge of the Charles Crocker & Company at all. That was said to us, the Contract & Finance Company were building the road. I knew nothing about that, nothing about it personally at all. I have no knowledge of the formation of the Contract & Finance Company at all. I have no knowledge of it.

Q. Was it Mr. Crocker that told you the Contract & Finance Company was constructing the road?

A. He never told me so.

Q. Who told you so?

A. I think I said that it was a general understanding.

Q. A general understanding?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. General understanding while the work was going on?

939 A. General understanding that the Contract & Finance Company were doing the work, but how and why I knew nothing about it. We were paid by the Central Pacific Company and we were superintended by the Central Pacific Company and all the officers were of the Central Pacific owners and builders.

Q. The Contract & Finance Company was also composed of Leland Stanford, Collis P. Huntington, Charles Crocker, and Mark Hopkins?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So it was the same individuals?

A. The same individuals.

Q. And you understand that that company was composed of no one except those four?

A. That was my understanding.

Q. And you had no particular knowledge when Mr. Crocker gave you instructions or handed you money whether he was then the Central Pacific Railroad Company or the Contract & Finance Company in doing that particular act?

A. I certainly asked no questions.

Q. You asked no questions?

A. No, sir.

Q. You knew that the Central Pacific Railroad Company had a great many stockholders, did you not?

940 A. No; I did not know personally. I did not know personally that it had very many stockholders. In fact, I had no information in that regard.

Q. I show you the list of the stockholders of the Central Pacific Railroad Company to whom the stock was originally issued as that list was prepared by Mr. E. H. Miller, jr., as secretary, under date of July 26, 1887, as shown as Exhibit 5 to the testimony of Mr. Leland Stanford before the United States Pacific Railway Commission at volume 5, page 2550, and ask you whether you knew any of these stockholders? I will read the names to you, and as I read them to you, if you will, indicate whether you did or did not know them, all of them.

Mr. DUNNE. Your question assumes that you have a list of stockholders before you prepared by Mr. Miller and attached as an exhibit to the testimony of Leland Stanford. I do not want to make any unnecessary or technical objections, but I shall object to the question upon the ground it is without foundation and without resting on the facts in evidence and, so far as the question discloses, calling for mere hearsay, and that you are now exhibiting to the witness some printed books.

941 Mr. McCLENNEN. The witness has stated that he supposed the four gentlemen named were the only stockholders in the railroad in some of his answers.

The WITNESS. I do not mean that I said I supposed they were the only stockholders. I supposed they were the owners and builders. So far as the stock has been issued, I have no knowledge of the stock that was issued, except I might say this man or that man might own stock.

By Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. When you said you supposed they were the owners, you did not mean—you did not actually mean that they were the only stockholders in the company?

A. I mean they were the originators and builders and they put all their money in first, and put all their money in in commencing and starting the road at Sacramento.

Q. You did not know they put a dollar in, did you? Stop to consider. You did not know yourself that they put a dollar in, did you?

A. No, sir; as Mr. Hopkins told me one day, he said he thought they were broke.

Mr. McCLENNEN. I will ask to have the last answer from "Mr. Hopkins told me" and the rest of it stricken out as not 942 responsive.

By Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. You understood that the corporation known as the Central Pacific Railroad Company was the owner of that line of railroad, first from Sacramento to its junction with the Union Pacific near Ogden and subsequently coming from Sacramento south to Niles and then out to Oakland, and you knew that the Central Pacific Railroad Company, that corporation, was the only owner of that road?

A. I supposed it was the owner of the road.

Q. You supposed it was the owner of the road?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you supposed that it was composed of a certain large number of stockholders, of which Mr. Stanford, Mr. Hopkins, Mr. Crocker, and Mr. Huntington were four?

Mr. DUNNE. I must object to that question as being without foundation, the witness having previously testified that he had no knowledge of the subject of the stockholders and had no information upon the subject, and the question is framed in a leading form and contains the implication that he knew there was a large number of stockholders.

943 The WITNESS. Originally, when the railroad first commenced to build, we had no knowledge of who the stockholders were and I did not know, had no knowledge of who the stockholders were

We supposed that Messrs. Stanford, Huntington, Crocker, and Hopkins were the owners and builders of the road. Now, what stock was issued, I am entirely at sea; I don't know anything about it.

By Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. When you say that you understood that those four were the builders of the road, do you wish to take back your earlier answer that you supposed that the Central Pacific Railroad Company was the builder of the road?

A. They were the Central Pacific Railroad Company.

Mr. McCLENNEN. I ask to have that stricken out as not responsive.

By Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. You understand, do you not, Mr. Pratt, that a given piece of railroad had been owned at the same time by four individuals and by a corporation, and that if a corporation owned it the four individuals do not own the railroad?

Mr. DUNNE. Objected to upon the ground it is incompetent and calling for the conclusion of the witness as a matter of law.

944 The WITNESS. I do not know how to answer that question.

Mr. McCLENNEN. Read the question, Mr. Reporter.

(The question was read as above recorded.)

The WITNESS. If four individuals form themselves into a corporation, they, of course, I suppose, have to admit that the corporation owned it.

By Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. Now, if the persons in that corporation are not the only four individuals, but many others, then you would say that the four individuals with the many others are the ones that own it?

A. If I knew there were four and many others. I do not know that.

Q. And you had no knowledge that Mr. Stanford or Mr. Hopkins or Mr. Crocker or Mr. Huntington—you had no personal knowledge that any of those gentlemen owned stock in this railroad?

A. Perhaps not.

Q. That is the fact?

A. It depends on what constitutes knowing.

Q. Now, you have said that Mr. Huntington, Mr. Stanford, Mr. Hopkins, and Mr. Crocker at times and from time to time 945 gave you directions and controlled your actions?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The directions and control that they exercised in that way was the ordinary control that men would exercise who held the positions of officers and directors of the railroad?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you mean nothing more than that by your answer?

A. No, sir; nothing more than that.

Q. When was it that you were first informed that the construction of the road had been let to the Contract & Finance Company?

A. I can not remember.

Q. It was while the work was going on, was it?

A. It was some time while the work was going on. I can not remember now. I do not remember any instance that would lead me to remember.

Q. And did you know that a large part of the stock of the corporation was issued to the Contract & Finance Company under that contract?

A. I did not.

Q. Did you know that a large part of the bonds of the 946 company were paid over to the Contract & Finance Company?

A. I did not.

Q. Was it at the time that these four gentlemen, Mr. Stanford, Mr. Huntington, Mr. Hopkins, and Mr. Crocker, were the officers and so many of the directors of the Central Pacific Railroad Company that you learned that the construction work had been given to the Contract & Finance Company?

A. It must have been.

Q. And it was at the same time that you learned that these four gentlemen composed the Contract & Finance Company?

A. About the same time; somewhere the same time.

Q. Do you know why the Central Pacific Railroad Company stopped its construction at Goshen?

A. I do not.

Q. Was Goshen a natural terminal of the railroad?

A. It was no terminus to the Southern Pacific Railroad that I know of; no facilities there for a terminal; no reason there for a terminal. The building of the Southern Pacific toward New Orleans would be more reason for a terminal there.

Q. I refer to the time when the Central Pacific Railroad Com-947 pany stopped work at Goshen. At that time the Southern Pacific Railroad Company had no road at Goshen, had it?

A. No, sir.

Q. Goshen was not a place of any size?

A. No place of any size, no.

Q. It was a natural ending place for a railroad?

A. No, sir.

Mr. HERRIN. The following are the sections and dates of opening for operations of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company south of Goshen:

Goshen to Tipton, July 25, 1872.
Tipton to Delano, July 14, 1873.
Delano to Sumner, October 26, 1874.

Other sections not connected at that time with this line were opened as follows:

San Fernando to Los Angeles, April 15, 1874.
Los Angeles to Spadra, April 15, 1874.
Sumner to Caliente, April 26, 1875.
Caliente to Mojave, August 9, 1876.
Mojave to Tunnel, September 6, 1876.
Tunnel to San Fernando, January 1, 1876.

That completes the line between Goshen and Los Angeles. Continuing south from Spadra:

948 Spadra to Colton, July 16, 1875.
Colton to Indio, March 29, 1876.
Indio to Colorado River (near Yuma), May 23, 1877.

At the same time, or in that same period, we had the Southern Pacific Railroad of Arizona from:

Yuma to Casa Grande, May 15, 1879.
Casa Grande to Tucson, May 17, 1880.
Tucson to New Mexico line, September 15, 1880.

Then the section in New Mexico known as the Southern Pacific Railroad of New Mexico, the section from:

Arizona line to Rio Grande bridge, October 18, 1880.
Rio Grande bridge to El Paso via Galveston, Harrisburg & San Antonio, April, 1881.

From the line east of El Paso:

San Antonio to 405 miles west, June 1, 1882.
Eagle Pass Branch (45 miles), June 1, 1882.
Harwood to Gonzales (13 miles), 1883.
San Antonio to Junction with line building from the west near Pecos bridge completing through line, January 15, 1883.

949 Trains between San Francisco, New Orleans, and Galveston were first operated February 1, 1883.

San Francisco to Menlo Park, October 17, 1863.
Menlo Park to San Jose, January 16, 1864.
San Jose to Gilroy, March 13, 1869.

Then I have got a note:

San Francisco to Pajaro, November 27, 1871.
Pajaro to Salinas, November 1, 1872.

Salinas to Soledad, August 12, 1873.
Soledad to Templeton, November 16, 1888.
Templeton to Santa Margarita, January 13, 1889.

By MR. MCCLENNEN:

Q. You came in the main office in 1882?

A. Yes, sir; May, 1882.

Q. And up to that time you had no reliable knowledge of things, what was being done on the Southern Pacific Railroad?

A. It was operated by the general manager. I was in his office as assistant general superintendent.

Q. That was beginning in 1882?

A. In 1882, which was operating almost as far as it has been built.

950 Q. I do not think I make it clear. I said before 1882 you had no knowledge of how it was operated?

A. No personal knowledge.

Q. When you came in, in 1882, it was being operated by the Southern Pacific Railroad Company to somewhere down in Texas?

A. Nearly connected with Texas.

Q. Then it continued to be operated farther and farther, until it got into New Orleans?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you know anything about the way in which those roads over the Southern Pacific Railroad were controlled by the Central Pacific—that is, whether the Central was a lessee, or whether it was acting as an agent, or in what legal way it was operating those properties?

A. No, sir.

Q. All you know is, it was operating as——

A. (Interrupting.) It was turned over to our people for operation.

Q. And the Central cars were being run the whole distance?

A. And Central Pacific employees all through.

951 Q. And, for instance, the repair men on the railroad——

A. (Interrupting.) Were all Central Pacific men; no change whatever; no one knew of any change, personally.

Q. Did you know anything about where the freight cars were running from and to?

A. Something; yes, sir.

Q. Did you know anything about where the through freight was originally and where it was going to?

A. Well, I knew something, but my memory would not serve me to state where and when, exactly, or anything about it. If I had been directing the freight department, I would have remembered it.

Q. From your position you knew that prior to the completion of the line to Texas all of the east-bound freight had gone over the Central Pacific and the Union Pacific?

A. Yes, sir; prior to that.

Mr. HERRIN. That was the only line, was it not?

The WITNESS. That was the only line existing then between the west and east.

By Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. When the line was completed to New Orleans how did the freight used to go for the eastern part of the country?

952 A. Some of it was routed by the way of New Orleans and some of it east over the Union Pacific.

Q. After the completion of the line to New Orleans, take the bulk of the freight originating in San Francisco and going to the Atlantic seaboard, what route would it take?

Mr. HERRING. I object to that as not proper cross-examination. The witness has not been examined in chief at all on the movement of traffic, and he said that he had nothing to do with that, only operated it.

The WITNESS. My duties were such I could not answer that. I could not give you intelligent information on that from my memory. Of course it would be entirely from my memory.

By Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. Did you note the fact that the amount of eastbound freight traffic over the Central Pacific Railroad's own line through Ogden and on in that direction was perceptibly less after the completion of the line to New Orleans than it had been before?

Mr. HERRIN. I make the same objection, as not cross-examination, and, besides that, any movement of traffic over these lines prior 53 to July 2, 1890, could have no possible materiality or relevancy to the issue.

The WITNESS. I don't remember.

By Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. You don't remember anything about that?

A. I don't remember anything to give you an intelligent answer to the changes in that respect. I suppose there must have been some, of course.

Q. You do remember, do you not, that freight cars, after the opening of the line through New Orleans, used to come down from these points in Nevada, down to about Sacramento, and then down around through New Orleans over the Southern Pacific road?

A. I don't remember that after the Union Pacific and Central Pacific were connected.

Q. Do you remember that in your observation of the way in which this road was operated that you did not note that eastbound cars from Reno and eastern California used to travel west through or near Sacramento, and then down over the Central or Southern Pacific line to New Orleans?

A. I can not say that there were not some instances, but certainly very rare.

954 Q. Didn't you used to operate this line beginning in the Ogden region and coming down to Sacramento and thence around to New Orleans as one continuous line?

A. Yes, sir; but it was a very hard haul to haul these mountains to go around to New Orleans this way.

Q. Across the two mountains twice for that?

A. I can not remember. They probably may have some instances, but I can not remember. That was too much cost.

Q. How did those cars used to go east?

A. East on the Union—and the Central Pacific and Union Pacific from Nevada.

Q. After the completion of the line through to New Orleans, did you notice much freight going out of San Francisco through Ogden and eastbound?

A. Considerable freight; yes.

Q. Did you ever compare it in your mind at all with what had been going that way before the line through to New Orleans was opened?

A. If I did compare it during my work in the office, I have forgotten it.

Q. Do you know who the officers were of the Galveston, Harrisburg & San Antonio Railroad?

955 A. No, sir; I don't remember. I probably knew at the time, but I don't remember now.

Q. Were they the same officers as the Southern Pacific officers, or different officers? I am referring prior to 1885 now.

A. Prior to 1885 I did not know any of the officers of the road at all.

Q. Did you know, in that period prior to 1885, who the officers of the Morgan Line were?

A. Well, I know that Captain Hutchinson was the chief man. I don't know that Captain Hutchinson was chief owner there of the Morgan Line—did not know officially until after 1885, about 1885; it was a little earlier than that, probably 1884; a little earlier than 1885.

(Whereupon an adjournment was taken until to-morrow, Wednesday, July 15, 1914, at ten o'clock a. m.)

956

WEDNESDAY, JULY 15, 1914.

R. H. PRATT resumed the stand, and testified further, as follows:

Cross-examination (continued) by Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. I take it you did not have any direct knowledge of who were the officers and directors of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company prior to 1885?

A. I did not directly. Tell me who you refer to, the officers of the road?

Q. Officers and directors.

A. I knew the officers after 1882.

Q. Did you know the directors?

A. I can not name all the directors. My memory does not serve me.

Q. You understand I am now referring, not to the Kentucky corporation, but to the old California corporation, the Southern Pacific Railroad Company.

A. I did not know the directors. I could not name them from memory.

Q. On page 11 of your evidence, Mr. Herrin asked you this question:

57 "Q. Now, from the beginning, Mr. Pratt, who were the controlling officials and stockholders, as you saw them in everyday life and in your business, of the Central Pacific Railroad Company?"

Did you know of the stock, if it was so, that a large part of the stock of the Central Pacific Railroad Company was disposed of by the original holders?

A. I did not; no, sir.

Q. I call your attention to a statement made by Mr. Richard S. Hofford, appearing on behalf of the Southern Pacific Railroad before the Committee on Railroads in the United States Senate, March 12, 1878, in the course of which he said——

Mr. HERRIN (interrupting). Have you the reference to that document?

Mr. ORR. We have not, but we will furnish it to you.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. I call your attention to a statement made by Mr. Richard S. Hofford, appearing on behalf of the Southern Pacific Railroad before the Committee on Railroads in the United States Senate on March 12, 1878, in the course of which he said:

8 "It is affirmed respecting those by whose labor and enterprise the Southern Pacific Railroad of California has been extended to its present terminus to Fort Yuma that but few of thei number are connected, whether by ownership or otherwise, with th Central Pacific Company—so few, indeed, as to constitute but on seventh in ownership and control of the former corporation, and thi is an assertion which is capable, it would seem, of absolute authent cation."

In view of that statement, you would not wish to be understoo as saying that in 1878 the four gentlemen whom you have me tioned were the controlling stockholders of that company?

A. I do not say about the stock; I do not know about the stoc and, in fact, that first answer you might say that I gave the co trolling officers, the stockohlders; of the stock I do not know muc about.

Q. All you meant by that, Mr. Pratt, really is these four gentl men whom you have mentioned were the prominent officers of t corporation who in its daily affairs in their contact directed yo efforts?

A. Yes, sir; and owners as far as I know.

Mr. McClennen. I will ask to have that part of t 959 answer "and owners as far as I know" stricken out as n responsive.

Mr. Herrin: It should not be stricken out. It is entirely r sponsive, in my opinion.

By Mr. McClennen:

Q. You did not understand that those gentlemen were owners any sense except as they were stockholders in the corporation?

A. I did. I understand that they were owners.

Q. Of what?

A. General information.

Q. Owners of what?

A. Owners of the road they were building.

Q. I am speaking of 1878 now.

A. 1878?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. At that time you understood that the Central Pacific Railro Company was the owner of the line of road and its equipment, d you not?

A. Those men that I named were the owners of both.

960 Q. Didn't you understand that the Central Pacific Ra road Company owned the railroad?

A. I did.

Q. And you understood that it owned the entire railroad fr Ogden to San Francisco Bay?

A. I did.

Q. And that it had the full title to that line of railroad?

A. As far as I knew. They had the full title.

Q. Now, as to the matter of ownership, I call your attention to the testimony of Mr. Collis P. Huntington at the hearing before the Committee on Pacific Railroads in the Senate on February 17, 1896, at page 131 of Senate Document No. 314 of the Fifty-fourth Congress, the first session, in which occurred this question and answer:

"Senator MORGAN. In whatever way you contrived to get the ownership represented, about what is the percentage of the stock of the Central Pacific which is owned by the stockholders of the Southern Pacific?

"Mr. HUNTINGTON. I do not know. It is not very much. We have had to part with these Central Pacific shares to pay the old indebtedness, and we have not got very many shares. I am not a large shareholder."

961 Mr. HERRIN. What is the date of that?

Mr. MCCLENNEN. That is 1896.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. In view of that statement, you would not wish to be understood as saying that Mr. Huntington was the owner of any large part of the stock or of the railroad of the Central Pacific Railroad Company at that time?

Mr. DUNNE. We object to the question as purely argumentative; in no sense calling for evidentiary matter, and simply asking for the deduction, or opinion, or inference of this witness.

Mr. HERRIN. Also call attention to the witness to the fact that this purports to be in 1896, this testimony.

Mr. MCCLENNEN. The inferences which the witness has already stated on this subject give occasion for this question.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. Now, do you have in mind the question, or would you like to have it read?

A. I would like to hear the question again.

Mr. MCCLENNEN: If you will read it, Mr. Reporter, so the witness will have an uninterrupted answer.

962 The WITNESS. I have no knowledge of the financial condition of the company at that time.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. In view of this statement of Mr. Huntington's, I ask you if you still desire it to be understood that you are giving your belief that Mr. Huntington was the owner of any substantial part of that railroad at that time?

A. During the building?

Q. I am not asking you about that. I am just asking you about this time.

A. I did not.

Mr. HERRIN. 1895, after you left the company?

The WITNESS. I did not.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. I call your attention to the testimony of Mr. Collis P. Huntington, given before the Committee on Pacific Railroads in the Senate on February 17, 1896, page 133, Senate Document No. 314, Fifty-fourth Congress, first session, in the course of which, referring to the time of the formation of the Southern Pacific Company in 1884, occurred this testimony:

963 "Senator MORGAN. Did you have any in the Central Pacific?

"A. Yes.

"Q. Did you transfer that stock?

"A. No.

"Q. Have you got it yet?

"A. Yes.

"Q. How much?

"A. Not a great many shares. I suppose I have got four or five thousand shares.

"Q. How much money would that represent on the face value?

"A. One thousand shares represents $100,000.

"Q. And you have got four or five thousand shares; about $500,000?

"A. Yes."

And again on page 139 of the same, this testimony:

"Senator MORGAN. You say the stock of the Central Pacific Company has been taken up by this Kentucky company?

"Mr. HUNTINGTON. Excuse me. The Southern Pacific Company has no stock in the Central Pacific.

"Q. None at all?

"A. No.

964 "Q. No stockholder of the Central Pacific has ever exchanged his stock with the Southern Pacific?

"A. No; I am sure of it. No stockholder of the Central Pacific was ever asked to exchange it.

"Q. You never would permit that?

"A. We would not ask it to be done."

And again on February 20, 1896, in the course of the same hearing, at page 208, this testimony:

"Senator MORGAN. I will ask you, preliminarily, Mr. Huntington, to state as nearly as you can the exact amount of stock which you now own in the Central Pacific Railroad.

"Mr. HUNTINGTON. I stated, I think, that I owned over six thousand shares.

"Q. Representing in face value over $600,000?

"A. Yes.

"Q. What is the largest amount of stock in that railroad that you (sic)

"A. I do not know that I ever owned more than that. I had an interest in the Contract & Finance Company.

"Q. You do not think that you have personally owned more than $600,000 of this stock?

965 "A. I never had more than that standing in my own name. I am not prepared to say that I ever had so much as that.

"Q. What was the largest amount you owned at any time or that you had a right to as a member of the Contract & Finance Company?

"A. I do not know. Mr. Hopkins kept all those accounts. He was the bookkeeper of that concern, and whatever he said always went with me. I never saw the books of the Contract & Finance Company.

"Q. Were all the memoranda of the ownership of the stock and distribution of the stock of each stockholder in the Contract & Finance Company kept on the books of that company?

"A. I think so. The Central Pacific stock was sold largely and the debts of the Contract & Finance Company were paid out of the proceeds of the sale. so that it did not really come into my hands.

"Q. Was there ever any distribution of the assets of the Contract & Finance Company?

"A. Yes.

"Q. When was that made?

966 "A. I do not recollect the date. I should say along in the '70's.

"Q. Did that include a distribution of the bonds and stock of the Central Pacific Company?

"A. There was no distribution. They were sold to pay the debts of the Contract & Finance Company, which debts were incurred, according to my recollection, by the building of the Central Pacific Road.

"Q. And out of their sale the Contract & Finance Company paid its debts?

"A. Yes."

Now, in the light of that testimony of Mr. Huntington's as to what he held in 1884, and as to what was done with the stock in the '70's, you would not wish to be understood as saying that he was a substantial owner of the stock even in the later '70's, would you?

Mr. DUNNE. We object to that on the ground already stated. The question is entirely incompetent.

The WITNESS. It is a matter I know nothing about whatever.

By Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. In view of that statement, you would not feel justified in 967 stating that after the completion of the road, Mr. Huntington was the owner of any substantial part of it?

A. I would not.

Q. I call your attention to volume 7 of the testimony taken before the United States Railway Commission under the bill approved March 3, 1887, at page 3751, to a letter therein of May 15, 1887, addressed to "Friend Colton," by C. P. Huntington, in the course of which he says:

"Scott is working everywhere for his open highway; but I think we can beat him; but it will cost money and harder work to beat him with money under the plan of some of my associates, viz, having it understood that the Central Pacific and Southern Pacific are, as it were, one property. Then it would be without money if the public could know the facts; that is, that the Southern Pacific is a separate and distinct property."

In view of that statement of Mr. Huntington's, you would not wish to be understood by any of your testimony to intimate that the Central Pacific Railroad and the Southern Pacific Railroad were one property, or any one ownership at that time, 1877?

A. Well, I understand that it was one ownership.

Q. Have you any more reliable information on which to 968 base that statement than Mr. Huntington's own statement here that they are separate properties?

A. My general information and memory.

Mr. McCLENNEN. I will ask to have that stricken out as not responsive.

By Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. What I asked you is, have you any more reliable information as to the common ownership of the property than this statement of Mr. Huntington's himself which I have just read to you?

A. I have not.

Q. I call your attention to the testimony taken before the same commission, volume 5, page 2829, the testimony of Mr. Leland Stanford, in the course of which he says:

"Neither we ourselves individually nor any of the Central Pacific people are in any manner responsible for the building of the Southern Pacific line."

In view of that testimony, you would not wish to be understood as stating that the Central Pacific people were the ones who began the construction of the Southern Pacific Railroad, would you?

A. As far as I know they were.

969 Q. Have you any more reliable information than this statement which I have just read you of Mr. Leland Stanford's?

Mr. DUNNE. We object to that as purely argumentative and inferential and, indeed, without foundation, there being no evidence in the case that such statement was ever made by Mr. Stanford.

The WITNESS. I have no knowledge of Mr. Stanford's statement.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. What I ask you is whether you have any more reliable piece of information upon which to base your belief than this statement of Mr. Stanford?

A. So far as my knowledge goes, they were the builders.

Mr. MCCLENNEN. I will ask to have that stricken out as not responsive.

Mr. DUNNE. I think we should be justified in instructing the witness not to answer the question, although I am not very much disposed to do that; but there is no evidence in this case that Mr. Stanford ever made that statement except the mere assumption of that question. I want to submit to your better judgment in that you are conducting the examination along a very wide departure from 970 the evidence, and if we were trying this case before a judge our objection would be sustained.

Mr. MCCLENNEN. Will you read the question?

(The question was read as above recorded.)

The WITNESS. No; I have not.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. To put it more directly, you have no personal direct knowledge of your own of what corporation or group of men actually began the construction of the Southern Pacific Railroad, have you?

A. I have; I worked for them.

Q. Did you work on the beginning of the construction of the Southern Pacific Railroad?

A. I did not, on the Southern Pacific.

Q. And you have no direct knowledge of your own of who were the persons who began the construction of that Southern Pacific Railroad, have you?

A. Not until after some of it was built.

Q. You never saw in any business way, at least, any part of the line of the Southern Pacific Railroad until after it had been constructed at least as far as Gilroy?

A. Gilroy? No; I did not.

971 Q. What, prior to 1895, was the general character of the Central Pacific Railroad from San Francisco Bay to Ogden with respect to grades?

A. Grades?

Q. Yes.

A. The general character was that the first, about the first, 100 miles was pretty near level grade; the next, to the summit of the Sierras, was a very heavy grade, sometimes 160 feet to the mile, and also on the other side of the Sierras the same grade until they reached Reno. Then the grade for 500 miles was more of a level character. From thence to Ogden there were a good many intervening mountains or hills, making often heavy grades of over 100 feet to the mile, and some as high as 150 feet to the mile.

Q. How many miles are covered by the part where the grades are as high as 160?

A. Well, I am unable to state that.

Mr. HERRIN. What is the use of taking up time with a witness who has been away from the property for twenty years? We can furnish you the profiles of the old line and also the present line, if you want to get the exact information.

Mr. MCCLENNEN. I do want that in part. I hope you will 972 be indulgent with me, in that I am trying to get it in the best shape I can.

Mr. Reporter, will you read the question?

(The question was read as above recorded.)

The WITNESS. I am unable to give you anything that my memory does not serve me. Of course, I was working there all the time, but my memory is not good for figures, although at the time I probably knew about it. I can not give it to you now.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. In the same general way, what is the condition as to the grade over the so-called Sunset Route—that is, from San Francisco or Sacramento through Yuma and thence on around to New Orleans?

A. From San Francisco for about 250 miles the road is very near level, and from there over the Tehachapi Mountains the grade is very heavy, up and down, going through many tunnels, that would be about passing somewhere in the neighborhood of 70 miles. From there to Yuma, with the exception of perhaps 10 miles, 10 or 15 miles—from 10 to 25 miles—the grade is also level, very near level. I don't mean by that that it is level exactly. Then from Yuma

973 to El Paso the mountains are cut so that the grades are very much varied; some pretty heavy grades and some lighter grades all the way through, and some level places for perhaps 20 or 30 miles.

Q. And does that complete the description through?

A. On to New Orleans, not hardly; no; because the grade from there to New Orleans—the grades are very light generally. It is pretty near level country; of course there are some short, heavy grades, but only short pieces.

Q. How, during the time you were assistant general superintendent, did the ordinary course of maintenance on the two lines compare; that is, one from San Francisco to Ogden, and the other from San Francisco to New Orleans?

A. From memory I can give you no information; my memory does not serve me on those figures at all.

Q. Without attempting to commit you to any precise figure, does it lie in your mind at all whether one was, on the average, more expensive than the other to maintain, or whether they were somewhere near equal?

A. May I ask if you mean whether the Central Pacific or Southern Pacific was most expensive to maintain?

Q. Yes.

A. Per mile the Central Pacific was more expensive.

974 Q. Was the divergence a substantial one, or a small one?

A. Well, I don't know whether it could be construed in that way, because I can give only a vague answer to that. It is certainly quite a proportion larger, the Central Pacific, the expense of maintenance and operation.

Q. From San Francisco to the Atlantic seaboard the most direct and shortest and best route is over the Central Pacific through Ogden and over the Union Pacific to the Missouri River and thence on by connections, is it not?

A. To what point?

Q. To any point between Florida and Maine.

A. May I have that question again?

Mr. McCLENNEN. Read the question, Mr. Reporter.

(The question was read as above recorded.)

The WITNESS. To Florida it would be over the Sunset Route.

By Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. Well, how about that part of the Atlantic coast north of Carolina?

A. Considering the grades of both roads, I am unable to say. The grades of the Central Pacific and Union Pacific are much 75 heavier than the grades south by the southern route, but I am unable to tell you.

Q. Have you any recollection of the difference in mileage?

A. I have not. From what points?

Q. I will say, to be specific, from San Francisco to New York City by the Ogden route, and San Francisco to New York City by the Sunset Route.

A. My memory does not serve me as to the exact mileage.

Q. It is considerably shorter over the Ogden route?

A. A little shorter.

Q. Considerably shorter, is it not?

A. From memory, I am unable to say how much shorter.

Q. Don't you know what the rail is from San Francisco to New Orleans?

A. About 2,400 miles.

Q. About 2,400 miles?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the water line from New Orleans to New York something like 1,200 miles?

A. Something like that; I don't remember exactly.

Q. The distance from San Francisco to Omaha is about 1,700 miles, is it not?

976 A. About that; I don't remember the exact mileage now.

Q. And the distance from Omaha to New York is something like 1,400 miles?

A. Yes, sir; that is correct.

Q. Is this a fairly accurate statement?—"From the Pacific coast to New York the Central Pacific and Union Pacific is the shortest route, and with proper management it is the best route and always will be."

Mr. HERRIN. May I ask what you are reading from?

Mr. MCCLENNEN. I am reading from the testimony of John C. Stubbs, volume 6 of the testimony taken by the United States Railway Commission under the bill approved March 3, 1887, at page 3310.

The WITNESS. I am unable to say that it is. I don't know.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. You don't know which is the best route?

A. I don't know which will be.

Q. Leaving out the future, then, should you say that up to the time you severed your connection it was the best?

A. It was then.

Q. At the time you severed your connection in 1895 what 977 was the comparative condition of the two roads from San Francisco—the Central via Ogden or the Sunset Route via New Orleans—with respect to upkeep?

A. Probably the Central Pacific and Union Pacific; they were older roads and built longer; had been built longer and more settled etter, and had longer time to mature the roadbed, but they were oth in fair condition in 1895.

Q. I understand your answer to be, in substance, that by reason f the longer settling the northern route was somewhat in better ondition?

A. Yes, sir; probably a little better.

Q. Can you give us some idea of how long it was before the re-arking of the rolling stock of the Central Pacific Railroad Com-any with the name of the Southern Pacific Company had become omplete?

A. I can't give you correct information on that, because it went slowly.

Q. There came a time when the re-marking had become complete?

A. Yes, sir; there came a time.

Q. And all the new equipment was marked "Southern Pacific Company"?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So before you left the railroad proper there was nothing ft with the name "Central" on it?

A. Pretty well established then; very well.

Q. That is, "Southern"?

A. Yes, sir; all our new equipment came labeled and marked for e proper road.

Q. That is, Southern Pacific Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know whether, after 1885, any new equipment was ught by or for the Central Pacific Railroad Company, or whether was all bought for the Southern Pacific Company?

A. There was no equipment bought for the Central and bought the Southern.

Q. But that which was bought for the Central, I understand you, s nevertheless marked "Southern Pacific Company"?

A. Southern Pacific Company, after that company was formed.

Q. You have spoken of the date of the opening of the Central cific Railroad Company as a through line, as May 10, 1869?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And at that time it was a through operating line from the tracks of the Union Pacific near Ogden to San Francisco y at Oakland, and had terminals there and was in a condition to ry through eastern freight to the Pacific Ocean or to take Pacific an freight to the East?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Before 1885 the Southern Pacific Railroad had likewise a com-te line, with connections and terminals, and in a position to carry freight from San Francisco Bay continuously to New Orleans at tidewater?

A. I can not remember the date before 1885, but it was before 1885, I think.

Mr. McCLENNEN. That is all.

Redirect examination by Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Mr. Pratt, the Contract & Finance Company had something to do with the construction of the Central Pacific?

A. It did.

Q. Did it have anything to do with the operation of the Central Pacific?

A. Never to my knowledge.

980 Q. Now, in your cross-examination you stated that the actions of Messrs. Stanford, Huntington, Crocker, and Hopkins were such as they would perform as officials merely. Do you mean to say that was all the interest those men had in that property, the Central Pacific, they were merely officials and interested only in getting their salaries?

A. They were owners and builders.

Mr. McCLENNEN. That question I object to as leading in form and in manner of address and as calling for a conclusion of the witness and not for facts and immaterial matter not of the witness's own knowledge. And the answer is objected to as not responsive, and we move to strike it out as stating a conclusion.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. You did not mean to be understood, did you, that they were acting merely as officers and not as substantial owners of that property?

Mr. McCLENNEN. That is objected to as leading and calling for a conclusion.

The WITNESS. I did not.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Now, in your thirty years' experience with this company

981 the Central Pacific Railroad Company and the Southern Pacific Railroad Company and the Southern Pacific Company, your testimony is based upon all the information that you got during those thirty years in operating with these properties, with these men, and your answers are given in view of all the information you derived from every source during that thirty years?

Mr. McCLENNEN. That question is objected to as leading and calling for a conclusion, and argumentative in form and too general.

The WITNESS. Yes, sir.

Mr. McCLENNEN. In view of the answer of the witness, which discloses that he has been speaking from hearsay to a considerable extent, we move that his answers in the direct examination, except so far as they appear affirmatively to be of his personal knowledge, be stricken out.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. You did not see the certificate of stock that any one of those stockholders had?

A. I did not.

Q. But you know who controlled and dominated the property, do you not?

982 Mr. McCLENNEN. That I object to as leading and calling for a conclusion as to matter which is not material and not proper redirect examination.

The WITNESS. I do.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. If some one was to tell you that Governor Stanford said he never had any stock in the Central Pacific, and never owned anything in it, would that change your opinion and knowledge?

Mr. McCLENNEN. That I object to upon the ground that the opinion of the witness is not material, and that it did not make his opinion of hearsay statements come up to the description of knowledge used in the question.

The WITNESS. Not a particle.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Would such a statement change your knowledge of the facts?

Mr. McCLENNEN. That I object to upon the ground that the question assumes that the witness had knowledge, whereas the evidence shows that he did not have knowledge on the subject.

The WITNESS. It would not.

983 By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. You were actively engaged for thirty years in administering this property, were you not?

A. In working and administering, yes.

Q. And, you had opportunities of knowing who controlled the property?

A. I had.

Q. And who were the owners of it?

A. I had.

Mr. ORR. That is objected to as leading and suggestive and calling for the opinion of the witness.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Did you ever hear or know of any stockholder who exercised any voice or influence in the management of the property of the Central Pacific Railroad Company except the four men you have mentioned, Stanford, Huntington, Crocker, and Hopkins?

Mr. MCCLENNEN. That is objected to as leading and as immaterial, and not proper redirect examination.

A. I never heard or knew that any other person had any authority. I never did.

Q. Except those men?

984 A. Except those men.

Mr. DUNNE. There is one little matter I would like to clear up, and with your permission, Mr. McClennen, I will ask him a question about it.

By Mr. DUNNE:

Q. You spoke of a piece of track from San Francisco to Gilroy.

A. I did not. I was asked some question.

Q. In respect to that?

A. In respect to that.

Q. Is the general direction of that track southerly from San Francisco?

A. Yes, sir; southwesterly.

Q. Southeasterly?

A. Well, it would be south from here to Gilroy, I think; I am not quite sure as to the points of the compass.

Q. At all events, in contradistinction to a northerly direction?

A. Yes, sir; southerly.

Q. Was that track extended beyond Gilroy and continuing in a southerly direction later?

A. It was.

985 Q. Do you recall when that further extension southerly was made?

A. I can not tell you; I can not remember the date.

Q. Now, then, the Southern Pacific Railroad Company was also extended from Goshen to the south, was it not?

A. It was.

Q. Do you recall about when that extension was made?

A. I can not tell you the date.

Q. From San Francisco to Goshen half the road was built by the Central Pacific, was it not?

A. It was as far as I know.

Q. Now, then, when the road was opened from San Francisco to tidewater at New Orleans by way of Los Angeles and El Paso the road consisted in part of the Central Pacific Railroad from San Francisco to Goshen and the Southern Pacific Railroad from Goshen on, did it not?

A. It did.

Q. At the time that the road was opened for operations and traffic who administered that road? What was the operating company?

A. The owners, you mean, and builders?

Q. No; the operating company.

986 A. The Central Pacific.

Q. The Central Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The Central Pacific operated the part of the line from San Francisco to Goshen as the Central Pacific property, did it not?

A. It did.

Q. And the line from Goshen to New Orleans as the Southern Pacific Railroad Company property under lease to the Central Pacific; is that correct?

Mr. McCLENNEN. That I object to as leading and in part obviously had no road to lease beyond a point near the eastern boundary of New Mexico.

By Mr. DUNNE:

Q. And the line from Goshen to New Orleans as the Southern Pacific Railroad Company's property under lease to the Central Pacific, is that correct as far as the Southern Pacific's rails extended? Is that correct, Mr. Pratt?

A. That is correct.

Q. From the ultimate extension of the Southern Pacific's rails to the eastern boundary line of New Mexico to tidewater at 987 New Orleans. To put the matter simply, from El Paso to New Orleans, did the Central Pacific Railroad Company operate that property as well?

A. They did.

Q. In the discharge of your duties as assistant general superintendent, did your jurisdiction extend from San Francisco to Goshen, from Goshen to El Paso, and from El Paso to tidewater at New Orleans?

Mr. McCLENNEN. I call your attention to the fact that this was covered by Mr. Herrin in the direct examination.

Mr. DUNNE. I know, but it was a little confused by the cross-examination.

Mr. McCLENNEN. If it goes further, I will have to object to it on the ground that it is a matter already covered by the direct examination.

The WITNESS. It did.

By Mr. DUNNE:

Q. Now, then, Mr. Pratt, so far as your knowledge goes, and bring ing your mind to the extension that I have spoken of from Gosh beyond and from Gilroy beyond, who built those extensions?

A. The Central Pacific Company.

988 Q. Who operated those extensions prior to the organizatio of the Southern Pacific Company?

A. The Central Pacific, owners and builders.

Q. Now, then, at any time from your first connection with th
Central Pacific Railroad Company until your retirement from th service while the Central Pacific Railroad property as a physica thing and the Southern Pacific Railroad property as a physical thin were in concurrent existence, was there any space of time durin your connection with the property that there was any adversary co trol of management as between them?

Mr. MCCLENNEN. That is objected to as leading in phraseolog and in manner which it is impossible for the stenographer to sho in the record and as calling upon the witness to state a conclusion o fact and a conclusion of law and as calling for matter which is i competent, irrelevant, and immaterial.

The WITNESS. There was not.

By Mr. DUNNE:

Q. Speaking now from your intimate and direct connection wi the properties as assistant general superintendent, is it not the fa that the Central Pacific Railroad Company and the Southe

989 Pacific Railroad Company at all times within your related e perience when the two properties were in concurrent exi ence—is it not the fact that at all times they were operated as unified property?

Mr. MCCLENNEN. The same objection as made to the last questi

The WITNESS. It is a fact.

Mr. DUNNE. That is all.

Recross-examination by Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. Did you never hear, did you say, or know of any attempts any other stockholders to exercise rights in connection with th Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. I never did; nothing that I had anything to do with.

Q. Didn't you ever hear of any of the numerous suits filed stockholders in the Central Pacific Railroad Company claiming th they were being deprived of their rights by the actions of Stanfo Huntington, Crocker, and Hopkins?

A. I don't know how to answer that question. Of course, not a that came under my observation.

Q. You heard of them?

A. Probably I have heard of them. I can not now cite you the cases, if there were any.

890 Mr. McCLENNEN. That is all.

(Signed) R. H. PRATT.

[SEAL.] HERBERT BENNETT,
Notary Public in and for the City and County of San Francisco, State of California.

1030 W. W. SLATER was called as a witness on behalf of the d fendants, and, having been duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Mr. Slater, will you please state your age?

A. Sixty-six.

Q. And your residence?

A. San Francisco.

Q. Did you ever work for the Central Pacific Railroad Compan

A. Yes, sir.

Q. At what time?

A. I was first employed jointly with the Union Pacific Compa as telegraph operator at Ogden, Utah, the 1st of January, 1869.

Q. What did you do afterwards?

A. I was next employed by the San Francisco & San Jose R road in April, 1869, as clerk and operator at San Jose. Then, June of the same year, 1869, I was employed at Warm Springs with Central Pacific Railroad as receiver of material for the buildi 1031 of the line to Sacramento. In October of that year, after line was finished through to Sacramento, I was employed agent and operator at a point in Niles Canyon, called San Jose Ju tion, which does not exist now. The following year, in April, 18
I was transferred—in fact, my whole equipment was transferre to the new station at Niles, until September, 1871, when I left leave of absence, was later taken sick and went East, and came b in 1875. In the meantime I was employed several months on San Francisco & San Jose Railroad in 1871 at Mountain View agent and operator. Then I went East and came back in 1875, was employed at Oakland Wharf, first as operator and a few mon later as train despatcher.

Q. How long did you continue that?

A. Until February 1, 1885, when I was made master of sig in charge of the signal system.

Q. In 1885?

A. In 1885.

Q. And have you since continued in that position?

A. I was in that position until March 1, 1914, when I retire

Q. What were your duties as operator or despatcher?

1032 A. Handling the movement of trains on the line between Sacramento and Oakland Wharf, and the various branch lines south as far as Mojave, and for a short period, through to The Needles, over what is now a portion of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe road, and which was then the Atlantic & Pacific road.

Q. So, as despatcher at Oakland, or Oakland Pier, you handled trains running between San Francisco and Sacramento over the Central Pacific, and between San Francisco and Mojave, and for a time as far as the Needles?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the western division included the Southern Pacific line to Mojave?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. McCLENNEN. What date are you speaking of?

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. What date would that be?

A. That was previous to 1885; between 1875 and 1885. I could not recall the exact date. It was along about 1880.

Q. Do you know what company operated the road prior to 1885, prior to the advent of the Southern Pacific Company—what company operated these lines you have mentioned?

A. The officers were under the Central Pacific Railroad.

1033 Q. The Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. Yes.

Q. It operated the line to Mojave, as well as the line to Sacramento?

A. Well, it was under one set of officials, under one division superintendent, the men that I reported to.

Q. Do you know what company operated the line south of Mojave to Los Angeles?

A. It was under the same company, under the same general management.

Q. Were you ever over the line to Los Angeles?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you ever go over the line south of Los Angeles to El Paso?

A. After 1885 I did.

Q. Did you know, prior to 1885, how far the jurisdiction of the Central Pacific Railroad Company extended down south?

A. Under the general management of one set of officers, who were located at Fourth and Townsend Streets—I don't know whether they were Central Pacific or Southern Pacific at that time.

1034 Q. So far as you know, there was only one set of officials?

A. One set of officials.

Q. They were the officials of what company?

A. Of the Central Pacific prior to 1885 and of the Southern Pacific Company after that time.

Q. You remember when the Southern Pacific Company came in, do you?

A. Only in a general way. I was then located at Oakland and had no knowledge of the fact of any change; in fact, I do not recall that there was any special change.

Q. You do not recall any change in the official management or staff?

A. No, sir.

Q. What is your recollection as to that, as to whether there was any?

A. There was none.

Q. You know there was no change?

A. I know there was no change.

Q. Was your attention ever called to the different ownerships of these lines that were operated by the Central Pacific Railroad Company first, and afterwards by the Southern Pacific Company?

1035 If so, in what way, if you remember?

A. I have no knowledge of any change or anything other than this: I was making up time cards, and I do not recall now during that time whether they were Central Pacific or Southern Pacific. I did not consider it of any importance.

Q. The point I want to get at is whether you concerned yourself with whether one company owned this line and another company owned that line?

A. No, sir.

Q. Or whether you dealt with it as a system of lines operated as one thing.

Mr. McCLENNEN. That is objected to as leading and as calling upon the witness for a conclusion.

The WITNESS. May I ask: This is prior to 1885?

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. I mean at any time. I do not think it makes any difference.

A. After 1885, when I had occasion to make out material reports, I was required to charge the material to the various lines on which the material was used.

Q. That is all I wanted to get at. You had instructions 1036 from the auditor, did you not, to make your charges against one company or another, according to where the material was used?

A. Yes.

Q. And is that or is it not the only case where you considered the ownership of these different lines?

A. That is all, sir.

Q. In operation did you consider the ownership at all?

A. Not at all.

Mr. HERRIN: That is all.

Cross-examination by Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. What was the period during which your course of duty called upon you to make out cards for the charging of materials?

A. It was subsequent to 1885.

Q. Beginning directly in 1885?

A. Yes; February, 1885.

Q. That is, as a train despatcher you had had no occasion to do anything of that kind?

A. No, sir.

Q. As signal master you were called upon to make these 1037 charges?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And from February, 1885, when any material was used for any particular part of the railroad, operated either by the Central Pacific or the Southern Pacific, you charged that on the card to the particular road for which it was to be used?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What sort of materials were you handling in that position?

A. Signal materials.

Q. That had nothing to do with rolling stock?

A. No.

Q. Only ways and structures?

A. Maintenance of ways.

Q. And the signal material that you were supplied, or that passed through your hands, was charged by you on the cards to the road that owned the line on which that signal material was to be erected or used?

A. Yes.

Q. You had no knowledge as to whether the same course had been pursued with signal material prior to 1885 or not?

1038 A. There was no signal material prior to that time.

Q. There was no signal material prior to that time?

A. No; I was the beginning of it.

Q. Do you know, after 1885, whether the same course was pursued as to rolling stock?

A. I have no knowledge of that.

Q. And do you know whether before and after 1885 the same course was pursued with reference to material for other structures connected with the railroad?

A. Only in a general way. I know our blanks were arranged to include all classes of material. Of course, mine was only signal material.

Q. That is the reason that you charged to the different railroads signal material only—because that was the only kind of material that you were handling?

A. That is all I handled.

Q. But the material blanks which you were handling were arranged to make similar distributing charges on all other kinds of material?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And those same blanks had been in use before 1885—the same type of blanks, I mean?

1039 A. I presume so. I do not know.

Mr. McCLENNEN. That is all.

Mr. HERRIN. That is all.

ARCHIE LISTER was called as a witness on behalf of the defendants, and having been duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Please state your age.

A. Sixty-seven.

Q. Where do you reside?

A. Lomita Park, San Mateo County.

Q. Did you ever work for the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. I started the 1st of February, 1870, for the Central Pacific.

Q. What were you doing?

A. Telegraph operator at Pleasanton.

Q. Just continue and state your work for that company, what it was and where you were.

Q. I went from Pleasanton to Banta as operator. From 1040 Banta I went to Livermore. From Livermore I went to Midway. From Midway to Simpsons, now Melrose. In July, 1871, I went down to Long Moor.

Q. That is in San Francisco Bay, here?

A. Yes; Oakland, as operator. I relieved Mr. Railton. Mr. Railton had relieved Mr. Bassett. Mr. Bassett was train despatcher at that time, and was appointed superintendent of the San Francisco & San Jose Railroad, I believe they called it at that time, and in 1872 I was made train despatcher, and continued in that position until 1900, I think it was, or 1901.

Q. What were your duties as train despatcher?

A. I moved the trains between Oakland, Long Wharf, and Sacramento, and as far south as the railroad had been turned over to he company; and we eventually ran it to Mojave. Then, when he line was built from Mojave to The Needles, we handled that.

Q. What company were you working for?

A. The Central Pacific.

Q. The Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. The Central Pacific Railroad Company.

Q. Do you remember that the road was being constructed 041 south of Goshen towards Los Angeles during the time you were acting as train despatcher?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know what company took over the sections of that ine as it was completed for operation?

A. The Central Pacific, as far as I understood it. Everything as C. P., as far as I understood.

Q. You had to do with the despatching of trains over the line as ar as what point south?

A. When the road got down to as far as Goshen or Tipton, in hat neighborhood, they put in a set of despatchers at Tulare, and hey handled the trains during the day, during the stress of busi- ess, and we handled them nights, after six o'clock at night, and e took charge from Oakland to Mojave and The Needles.

Q. You handled the trains during certain hours as far as Mojave?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And The Needles as well?

A. Yes; when they opened that line.

Q. And you were working for what company when you did that?

042 A. The Central Pacific, western division. That was called the Western Pacific when I started in; when I first started in.

Q. You were working on what was called the Western Pacific en?

A. Yes.

Q. How long did you continue to work for the Central Pacific Rail- ad Company?

A. Well, until they retired me, as far as I know; 1910.

Q. You never heard of the Southern Pacific Company?

A. Only just about 1885, or somewhere in that neighborhood; the rs and locomotives and so on were initialed S. P., and some C. P.

Q. Did you ever work for the Southern Pacific Company?

A. Well, it was all the one thing to me. I did not know the differ- ce, in fact.

Q. Do you remember any change from the Central Pacific Rail- ad Company to the Southern Pacific Company?

A. I do not.

Q. You do not?

A. No, sir.

Mr. HERRIN. That is all. Take the witness.

1043 Mr. MCCLENNEN. No cross-examination.

(Whereupon a recess was taken until 2 o'clock p. m.)

1044 AFTER RECESS.

EDGAR MELVILLE LUCKETT was called as a witness on behalf of the defendants, and, having been duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Will you state your age?

A. Sixty-five last birthday.

Q. And your residence?

A. My residence, 2683 Green Street.

Q. San Francisco?

A. This city; yes.

Q. Have you ever worked for the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. At what time?

A. I started work for them in the latter part of 1873.

Q. At what point?

A. Sacramento.

Q. In what capacity?

A. As journeyman machinist.

1045 Q. In the shops?

A. Yes; the Sacramento shops.

Q. How long did you work there?

A. I worked in Sacramento as journeyman up until Septembe 1875, when I was promoted and sent to Terrace, Utah, as divisio foreman of the Salt Lake division of the Central Pacific.

Q. How long did you remain there?

A. About three years.

Q. Then where did you go?

A. Then I was brought back to Sacramento shops again a placed in charge of a gang there in the erecting shop. I remain there for six or seven months, something like that, when I was se up to Carson City, Nevada, on the V. & T., and I remained the two years, or a little over two years, when I came back again Sacramento and was placed in charge of a gang there, and bu the first Stephens valve gear locomotive. That was engine C. 48, and I rebuilt several others, and put on the improved valve ge Then I built engine 237, which was called the El Gubernador; it w supposed to be the largest engine in America. It was built for Tehachapi Mountain.

1046 Q. How was that marked?

A. It was marked "C. P."

Q. Number what?

A. 237 was the number, but it had a name, El Gubernador.

Q. Where was that engine used?

A. On Tehachapi Mountain. When I got it built I was sent down there and I was traveling engineer for several months. Then I was brought back to Sacramento, and after six or seven months was appointed foreman of the Sacramento shops—machine shops.

Q. Of the Central Pacific Railroad?

A. Central Pacific Railroad, and I stayed in that position for a few months—six or seven months, I guess—and was made general foreman of the Sacramento shops, of all the shops of the Central Pacific Railroad; that is, at Sacramento. I held that position up to September, 1893. I was then promoted and sent to the Salt Lake division, master mechanic of the Salt Lake division. My headquarters were in Ogden, Utah. I remained there until February 1, 1906. I was then given an extended leave of absence.

1047 Q. During the time you were in the Sacramento shops, for what roads did you do work, building locomotives, and the like?

A. We did work for all the roads; that is, several of the S. P.'s and the C. P.'s, and did some work for the Oregon road, and we did a lot of work for the S. P. of Cal., S. P. of A.—S. P. of Arizona—the G., H. & S. A.—all the roads.

Q. When you say "C. P." you mean Central Pacific?

A. Yes.

Q. And "S. P." is Southern Pacific?

A. Yes.

Q. And G., H. & S. A. means Galveston, Harrisburg & San Antonio?

A. Yes.

Q. Where is the road of that company located?

A. Down in Texas.

Q. Do you remember the Southern Pacific Railroad of New Mexico having anything to do with that?

A. Yes; we built locomotives for them. They were commonly called S. P. of N. M.

Q. Did you have anything to do with the building of pumping stations along those lines?

1048 A. Yes; down on the desert of Arizona we built several new pumping stations. They had to haul water there for years, and we built several quite extensive pumping stations there.

Q. Did you have anything to do with furnishing track supplies and materials to those lines?

A. Yes; we furnished, I guess, all the spikes and bolts and fish plates that were used on the Southern Pacific; that is, most all of them. We could furnish them cheaper than we could buy them at that time.

Q. Do you remember at any time running over time or extra time in doing this work?

A. Yes; there was a portion of the time, in doing a portion of the work on the Southern Pacific, that we had to work night and day to keep up with our orders for bolts, spikes, and nuts.

Q. What road?

A. Down in Arizona, the S. P. of A., when they were building that.

Q. Did you have anything to do with or ever set up any locomotives for the G., H. & S. A.?

A. Yes; all of the engines that came out for those different 1049 roads came to Sacramento, towed out in a train and put together there, and set up and shipped to the different places or consigned to wherever they needed them the worst. I remember we got a lot of G., H. & S. A.'s there once, and were hard up for engines on the western division over here, what we call the western division—that is, running from Oakland to Sacramento—and we used four of them there for quite a while. We also sent some of them down to Mr. Johnson, at Tulare. He was master mechanic of the Visalia division. At that time we did practically all the work for the whole system at Sacramento. We did not have any large shops then at any other place.

Q. That was the only general shop?

A. That was the only general shop that the company had.

Q. And that supplied all these roads you have mentioned?

A. Yes; with material of all kinds, and locomotives.

Q. The general repairs were made to those locomotives at what point; at Sacramento?

A. All divisions shipped their engines in there for general repairs; that is, what we called heavy general repairs. There were nothing but small division shops on the different divisions, both south and east.

Q. What sort of repairs did you make at those division 1050 shops?

A. Light repairs, running repairs; but never did any heavy work.

Q. Do you know anything about furnishing enginemen and journeymen mechanics, and employees of that sort, to the different divisions of those roads, both the Central Pacific and the Southern Pacific Railroad Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What about that?

A. Well, if we had a surplus of men on any division on the C. P. nd the S. P. had a rush of business and they wanted more men, we ould send them down there, transfer them, and when they got hrough we would bring them back; and the same way with mechan-s, if we had a surplus of mechanics, these different divisions when ey wanted mechanics or engineers always called on Sacramento, lled on the general master mechanic; that is, if they could not pick em up themselves.

Q. From what you say these shops at Sacramento seemed to be ractically as much a shop for the Southern Pacific Railroad Com-any as for the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

Mr. McCLENNEN. That is objected to as leading and call-51 ing for a conclusion.

The WITNESS. Yes.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Was there any distinction made with respect to the ownership those lines?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you remember when the Southern Pacific Railroad line uth of Goshen, towards New Orleans, was being constructed?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know what was done with that line when sections of it re completed for operation?

A. Well, as soon as the construction department got through with piece of track, they turned it over to the operating department.

Q. Of what company?

A. The Central Pacific.

Q. The Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. Yes; turned it over to the same officers; Mr. Towne, for in-nce, he was general manager; and Mr. Fillmore.

Q. Did that continue right on through, as far as the line was con-structed, if you know?

52 Mr. McCLENNEN. Objected to as leading.

The WITNESS. Yes.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. How far did it continue south, as far as El Paso?

Mr. McCLENNEN. The same objection.

The WITNESS. Yes. At one time I think it went farther than Paso; I think it went on to New Orleans. Then later on they med the Atlantic system; that stopped at El Paso, and this d here was the Pacific system.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Do you remember when the Southern Pacific Company, the present company that is operating these lines, took possession of them?

A. Not exactly; I do not. I think it was around 1885 or 1886, somewheres around in there. I remember the time, but I can not recall dates.

Q. Was there any change in the operating management or staff when that change occurred?

A. None whatever; the same master mechanics and the same general officers.

Q. Mr. Towne continued as general manager?

A. He was the general manager, and all the division
1053 master mechanics remained just the same.

Q. Did Mr. Fillmore continue in his place?

A. Yes; Mr. Fillmore was general superintendent. A. J. Stevens was general master mechanic.

Mr. HERRIN. Take the witness.

Cross-examination by Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. When you built an engine in the Sacramento shop, prior to 1885, for the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, to what did you charge the work?

A. Always charged it to the initial of the engine; if it was an S. P. engine it was charged to S. P., and if it was a C. P. engine it was charged to C. P.

Q. Those charges were made of so much material and so much time, were they?

A. Yes; the time and the material was taken every day.

Q. Was that carried out into dollars, in the charges that you made?

A. Well, I couldn't tell you about that. That would be the accounting department.

Q. Under your direction, the charge was simply made of the 1054 materials and time that went into an engine, a charge to the railroad company for which the engine was being built?

A. Yes.

Q. And if it was the Southern Pacific Railroad Company of Arizona it was charged to that railroad?

A. Well, when we built engines we would build so many, and they would be charged; for instance, fifteen, fifteen locomotives would be the charge. Then, whenever they got them done, we would get instructions to letter them; that is, put the initials on. If it was S. P. or C. P., it was so put on.

Q. All the work, all labor and materials that went into each one of those engines, was charged up to the railroad company for which that engine was lettered?

A. Yes; I presume so; that is the accounting department. We charged in the shop so many locomotives. As I say, if we were building ten, we would charge time to ten locomotives, time and materials and everything, that would go in, and they would cost so much, and when they were done we got at the cost of them.

Q. What sort of charge card did you have?

A. We had a card about three inches wide and about four inches long, with the date on it and hours, and every man, 055 before he went to work, got one of those cards, and he had to deposit that card in a box that was kept in the shop for hat purpose, and the timekeeper the next morning would take those ards up, and he would put in so many hours on this and so many ours on that, total so many hours, and sign his name at the bottom, nd he would take them up and distribute the time to different ccounts.

Q. That is, of these different railroads?

A. Yes; whatever it was for.

Q. That accounts for the time. Now, did you have cards for aterial in the same way?

A. No; we didn't have cards for material.

Q. How were the materials charged up?

A. They would ordinarily be charged on the back of one of those bsolete cards, if it was more than six months old. A fellow would y that he wanted so much so and so, charge so and so, and sign s name to it, and they were to be turned right into the office.

Q. They would be turned in to the same account as the time was arged for?

A. Turned it in to the gang foreman, and the gang foreman would turn it in with his charges.

56 Q. Was the same method of charging pursued with reference to repairs that were done on those engines when they ne back again?

A. Yes; a man charged his time to whatever he was working on, urs, and signed his name to it. No man could get any time unless put in a time card and showed what he was doing.

Q. What did you have to do personally with the turning over of rly constructed roadway to the operating department?

A. Nothing; that was not in my department.

Q. When you say that the portions of the roadway, as completed, re turned over for operation, you mean that they were turned r to some organization of which Mr. Towne was the head?

A. Yes; and Mr. Towne would issue a circular to all shops and everybody concerned on the road that so-and-so had been turned over to the operating department.

Q. That is, that a certain section of track had been turned over to the operating department?

A. Yes.

Q. What railroad company was operating the line from San 1057 Francisco down through Gilroy, that which is part of the coast line now?

A. The coast division?

Q. Yes; what company was operating that?

A. That was an independent company for a while. That is, it was under Mr. Bassett, and I think he was bossing all hands there for quite a while; but eventually, when it was completed, when Mr. Huntington completed the road, it was part of the Southern Pacific.

Q. How late did Mr. Bassett continue to be boss of that line?

A. Well, I could not tell exactly, but I know that Mr. Bassett and Mr. Jack Wilson, who was the master mechanic—we did a lot of work for them in Sacramento—did a lot of their heavy work for them.

Q. Can you give me some general idea about how long Mr. Bassett remained at the head of operation of that coast line?

A. I think it was around in 1878, somewhere along there; I wouldn't be positive about it.

Q. Up to that day, if you are right on the date, the Central Pacific Railroad Company had never operated that line?

1058 A. Not that I know of.

Q. That was operated under the name of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company?

A. We always have known it as the coast division.

Q. Do you remember how the rolling stock of that railroad used to be lettered when it came into the Sacramento shops?

A. No; I do not.

Q. Was it C. P. R. R. of Cal.?

A. No; it wasn't C. P., I am pretty sure.

Q. Was it S. P. R. R. of Cal.?

A. It might be, yes; I would not be positive about that.

Q. That line was not completed until about 1901, was it?

A. I think it was around there somewhere; I think a little before that; I would not be sure.

Q. It was not very much before that, was it?

A. Not many years before that.

Q. You knew at some time that the Southern Pacific Company took over the operations that had been conducted before that by the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. Yes; around about 1885, I think, or around there some-1059 where, within a year of that time. There was a general circular came out, and they cut off the line east of El Paso and made the two systems—the Atlantic system and the Pacific system.
Q. After 1885 what company operated the Pacific system.
A. The Central Pacific. Well, I guess it was the S. P. then, but it was the same men.
Q. I wanted to find out what company it was; which one was it?
A. Well, after that the S. P.; our stationery and everything came out more with "S. P."
Q. Don't you know, after 1885, which company was operating the lines west of El Paso?
A. I did not know any difference between S. P. and C. P. It was all managed by the same men, and there wasn't any more men or any ess men; all that we knew was that we were working for the same men and getting our pay from the same pay car.
Q. From 1885 to 1895 what railroad company did you think you were working for?
A. Well, I guess I was working for the Central Pacific. I was on he eastern end of the C. P. at that time; from 1893 to 1896 I was master mechanic from Reno to Ogden.
060 Q. Then up to 1906 you understood you were working for the Central Pacific Railroad Company?
A. No; we all turned into S. P.'s, somehow.
Q. When did you become a convert?
A. Well, I don't know just exactly. Along about 1894 we were ivorced from the S. P.
Q. You were divorced from the S. P.?
A. Yes; some time along about 1894, and we went to the Oregon hort Line, and then we were Oregon Short Line, Salt Lake divi-on, but we drew our money from the S. P. pay car. I was sup-osed to be the S. P. man. The Union Pacific took us over, or the hort Line.
Q. After 1894, up at Ogden, you were working for the Oregon hort Line and getting paid by the Southern Pacific Company?
A. I was being bossed by the superintendent of motive power on Short Line; yes.
Q. But you were still getting your pay from the Southern Pacific
mpany?
A. Yes; they paid all the time.
Q. How long was the Southern Pacific Company engaged in paying those employees of the Oregon Short Line?
1 A. Up to a few years ago; about three years ago, I think, the S. P. took it back again. The Union Pacific haven't got it, nor the Short Line has not got it. I don't just remember those dates, because I have been out of the service since.

Q. Before we move out of the State, let us go back to this time when you were still in the Sacramento shops, up to 1893.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Just before you went to Ogden in 1893, what company were you working for?

A. Well, I guess I was working for the Southern Pacific. The Southern Pacific seemed to predominate there, but we were working for the same men; they were bosses, and had always been bosses. Mr. Towne had died then and Mr. Kruttschnitt and Mr. H. E. Huntington took his place.

Q. Didn't you know in 1893 whether you were working for the Southern Pacific Company or not?

A. Yes; I was working for the Southern Pacific Company.

Q. You were working for the Southern Pacific Company?

A. Yes; the Southern Pacific Company predominated then. Everything was marked "Southern Pacific", practically; that 1062 is, with the exception of equipment, cars and locomotives; they bear the same initials now.

Q. Your stationery was marked "Southern Pacific Company" then, wasn't it?

A. Yes.

Q. That is, in 1893?

A. Yes.

Q. Well, now, back in 1884 that same sort of stationery had been marked "Central Pacific Railroad Company"?

A. Yes; up to about 1885 or 1886, somewhere along in there; I don't just remember. Everything was C. P.; that is, the stationery and such as that.

Q. Now, when the Southern Pacific Company took over the operation of the railroads, did they re-mark any of the rolling stock?

A. No; not that I know of.

Q. The marking stayed just the same?

A. The marking is there yet on a great deal of their equipment.

Q. On the equipment built since 1885, have you marked some of it Central Pacific Railroad, or C. P. R. R. Co.?

A. Yes, I think there has been; yes.

Q. Down to how late a day did they mark new rolling 1063 stock C. P. R. R. Co.?

A. Well, now, I don't know. The equipment blanks of the company would tell you.

Q. Did they ever stop marking new rolling stock C. P. R. R. Co. when it was going onto the Ogden and Sacramento division?

A. Not that I know of.

Q. It still kept on right down to the end?

A. The same.

Q. There came a time, did there not, when the Southern Pacific Company began to do the operating of the Pacific system west of El Paso?

A. Yes, there came a time, but it would be hard for anybody to tell just when the time was, because there was no change; nobody got promoted or got discharged.

Q. Was there not a time when the employees were circularized generally, and informed that on and after such and such a date the Southern Pacific Company would take over the control and operation of the railroad?

A. Yes.

Q. When was that date?

1064 A. As I told you, it is around in '85 or '86, somewhere in there.

Q. About '85 or '86?

A. But at that time—what brings it to my memory is that at that time the lines east of El Paso were cut off, and that was made separate, taken away from us, taken away from the general officers. Mr. Black Ryan, who was master mechanic under Mr. Stevens at San Antonio, he was made general master mechanic of the Atlantic system, and his road came up to El Paso.

Q. And that, you say, was 1885 or 1886?

A. Yes; I can not remember just when it was.

Q. Was it at that time that the Southern Pacific Company took over the operation of the lines west of El Paso?

A. The Southern Pacific?

Q. Yes.

A. They had been operating that, but they were taken away from the Southern Pacific; that is, the Pacific system, and two systems were made. One was the Atlantic and the other was the Pacific. This was the Pacific, and the one from El Paso to New Orleans was the Atlantic system.

Q. I am afraid we will have to start afresh on this. Prior 1065 to 1885 the Central Pacific Railroad Company was operating the railroad of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, and operating over the lines owned by the Southern Pacific Railroad Company of California, Arizona, and New Mexico, was it not?

A. So far as I know. All I know about the affair is that the same bosses, Mr. Towne, Mr. Curtis, Mr. Stevens, and Mr. Fillmore, those men were our bosses then, and they remained to be bosses.

Q. I haven't asked you about any change. I am afraid you are getting away from my question. Remember the year 1884, just say that over in your mind for some time—1884. I am not asking you about any change; I am just wanting to find out about what wa going on in 1884.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. At that time the Central Pacific Railroad Company was oper ating the Central Pacific Railroad from Ogden to San Francisc and was also operating some of the lines at least of the Souther Pacific Railroad Company from San Francisco Bay down throug
California, Arizona, and New Mexico, was it not?

A. Yes.

1066 Q. Now, some time about the 1st of April, 1885, did ther come some kind of change with respect to those lines; do yo know?

A. Did there come some change?

Q. Yes.

A. I think that must have been about the time that they separate the systems.

Q. When they separated the systems they cut off the lines east
El Paso?

A. Yes.

Q. Did it have any effect upon the operations west of El Paso?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did the Central Pacific Railroad Company keep on operatin the lines west of El Paso?

A. Yes; so far as I know.

Q. And kept on operating those lines west of El Paso up to wh time?

A. Up to the present time. Well, I don't know; as I say, it g merged into the S. P. Just what time that came I don't know; don't remember.

Q. Was there a time when you learned that those roads we 1067 of El Paso which previously had been operated by the Centr Pacific Railroad Company began to be operated by the Sout ern Pacific Company? Bear in mind the question—west of El Pa

A. Yes; that is this side.

Q. Yes. Was there a time when you learned that the roads west
El Paso which had been operated by the Central Pacific Railro Company began to be operated by the Southern Pacific Company?

A. I could not tell you when that time was.

Q. Was there some time when that happened?

A. Yes; there must have been some time; but when it was, I not know. It didn't make any difference.

Q. At the time it happened, you were informed of the fact?

A. Yes; there were notices stuck up on the bulletin boards, everybody was notified.

Q. On some day that you do not now recall?

A. No, sir; I could not.

Q. You were told by notifications from headquarters that on and after such a date those lines west of El Paso, as well as the lines east of El Paso, would be operated by the Southern Pacific Com-1068 pany and not by the Central Pacific Railroad Company; is that correct?

A. No; I do not know of any such notice as that. I never saw one. Usually a notice of that kind, where they were separating, they would get out a notice and say that after such a date a certain general manager will have control up to a certain place, and a certain general manager will have control west of there or east of there, as the case may be. Those would just be printed notices sent out and stuck on the bulletin board.

Q. And you never would know that that general manager that had been the general manager of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company had become the general manager of the Southern Pacific Company? You would not know anything about that?

A. Why, yes; that circular would mention that.

Q. That circular would tell you that you were shifted over from operating under one company to operating under another company?

A. I don't know about that; it might be. Those are matters that I didn't pay any attention to.

Q. As a matter of fact, through all this time you did not 1069 particularly know which of these various railroad companies or other companies were employing you, or operating these various railroads, did you?

A. When I first came to work for the company, of course there was no S. P. to speak of, but it was C. P. Everything was C. P., C. P., and as long as I worked for them, if anybody asked me where I was working, I would say I was working for the C. P., and I might have been working for the S. P. It was all one company, one set of officers, bosses.

Q. Which would you say that you were working for?

A. I will say the latter part of my service I was working for the S. P., not exactly the latter part, because there were three years of the latter part of my service, or two years and a half, that were with the Oregon Short Line.

Q. Suppose somebody asked you whom you were working for in 1893; who would you say you were working for?

A. I might say C. P. and I might say S. P.

Q. It just happened, and you would not know which it was?

A. I don't know anything about it.

Q. You did not even know that the officers of those companies were in fact different, did you?

1070 A. I didn't see any change.

Q. I mean you did not even know that in the year 1893, for instance, the president of the Southern Pacific Company was a different man from the president of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, did you?

A. Yes; Mr. Huntington was president—no; he was dead then. He died around 1890 or 1891.

Q. I have not asked you who was president; I have asked you if you knew enough about this operating by these companies to be able to say whether or not the same man, whoever he was, was president of the Central Pacific Railroad Company and the Southern Pacific Company in 1893.

A. I couldn't say.

Q. You can not say?

A. No, sir.

Q. And you could not say but what there was a different man president of one from the other?

A. I do not think there was but one for the two of them.

Q. I am not asking you what you think; I am asking you what you know.

A. I do not know.

1071 Q. You did not know that the vice president of those two companies was different at that time, did you?

A. No, sir.

Q. You did not know that the treasurers were different, if they were, at that time, did you?

A. No, sir.

Q. Or the secretaries?

A. No, sir.

Q. Or the directors?

A. No; I did not.

Q. You did not know at that time whether or not the Central Pacific Railroad Company had any general manager?

A. No, sir; not at that time.

Q. You did not know at that time whether the Southern Pacific Company had any general manager?

A. Oh, yes; Mr. Kruttschnitt was general manager then, I think, in 1893.

Q. When do you think Mr. Kruttschnitt became general manager of the Southern Pacific Company?

A. When he came up here from New Orleans, or the Atlantic system. He was on the Atlantic system before he came here.

1072 Q. When do you think he became a general manager on the Pacific system of the Southern Pacific Company?

A. I don't know just when he came here.

Q. Well, about?

A. I think he came here along in 1891 or 1892; '91, possibly.

Q. Who succeeded Mr. Towne in the Southern Pacific Company?

A. Mr. H. E. Huntington was quite prominent then, and Mr. W. G. Curtis, and Mr. Kruttschnitt came pretty soon after Mr. Towne's death.

Q. Did Mr. Kruttschnitt take Mr. Towne's place?

A. Yes; he was general manager.

Q. Do you know whether Mr. Kruttschnitt was ever any kind of an officer or employee of the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. No, sir; I do not.

Mr. McCLENNEN. That is all.

Redirect examination by Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Mr. Luckett, you spoke of the Oregon Short Line. Don't you remember that arrangement occurred during the time that the Union Pacific controlled the Southern Pacific?

1073 A. Yes, sir.

Q. And all the lines, then, including the Union Pacific, the Southern Pacific, and the Central Pacific, were all called the Harriman Lines, were they not?

A. Yes.

Q. And this arrangement cutting off the Central Pacific at Sparks, throwing all lines east of Sparks into the management of the Oregon Short Line, was a part of that general management which was put in by what we call the merger?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is what you were referring to?

A. That is what I was referring to.

Q. When you said you were getting pay from the Southern Pacific and working for the officials of the Oregon Short Line?

A. Yes, sir; we always got our pay from the same pay car.

Q. Before you built locomotives you had to assemble materials for that purpose, did you not?

A. Yes.

Q. You would have the iron parts or anything that was necessary to construct the locomotives——

1074 A. Yes; we would get our boiler plate, and so on.

Q. What company would order that material prior to the Southern Pacific Company coming in?

A. Huntington, Hopkins & Company.

Q. I know; but what railroad company? The shops there were the shops of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, were they?

A. The shops?

Q. Yes; at Sacramento.

A. Yes; the shops belonged to the Central Pacific; they were built by it.

Q. For what company would that material be ordered, generally, for building locomotives and doing your repair work?

A. The S. P. shops; the Sacramento shops.

Q. The Sacramento shops?

A. Yes.

Q. I am speaking of the time before the Southern Pacific came in. What company was it?

A. That would be for the Central Pacific.

Q. The Central Pacific?

A. Yes; the C. P.

1075 Q. You would get an order to build, say, fifteen locomotives?

A. Yes.

Q. You would take from the materials that had been assembled there by the Central Pacific Railroad Company what was necessary to build those locomotives?

A. Yes.

Q. After they were completed you would get instructions to letter them, you say?

A. Yes.

Q. And you might be instructed to put "S. P. of Cal." or "S. P. of Arizona", or "S. P. of New Mexico" on your locomotives, might you not?

A. Yes; or Oregon road or C. P.

Q. But during the construction of these locomotives you would simply——

A. (Interposing.) They were built as one; so many locomotives.

Q. As one job.

A. That is, the job; yes.

Q. And that would be the Central Pacific, would it not, until you distributed them to other lines?

1076 A. Yes.

Mr. McCLENNEN. That is objected to as leading.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. You never assembled any materials there in the first instance for the Southern Pacific of New Mexico, did you?

Mr. McCLENNEN. That is objected to as leading.

The WITNESS. No, sir.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. You did not know, until the job was over, what marks would be ordered to be put upon the——

Mr. McCLENNEN. That is objected to as leading.

The WITNESS. We would get orders to letter engine so and so.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. After they were completed?

A. Yes, sir. We would get that from the general master mechanic.

Mr. HERRIN. That is all.

Mr. MCCLENNEN. That is all.

1077 SEYMOUR JOHNSON was called as a witness on behalf of the defendants and, having been duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. HERRIN:

Q. What is your age?

A. I will be seventy-nine in August coming.

Q. What is your residence?

A. 1929 Fiftieth Avenue, Oakland.

Q. Did you ever work for the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. Yes.

Q. When did you begin?

A. In 1864.

Q. What were you doing?

A. Running a locomotive most of the time.

Q. Locomotive engineer?

A. Yes.

Q. Where did you run the locomotive?

A. All the way from Sacramento to Ogden.

Q. You mean, as the road was completed, you ran the locomotive down the line that was opened for operation?

1078 A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever work on the line of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company down near Visalia or Tipton?

A. Yes, sir; I was appointed master mechanic on the Visalia division of the Central Pacific in 1872.

Q. What did that include, that division, at that time?

A. At that time it included the road from Lathrop to Tipton.

Q. And as the road was constructed south to Tipton, extended southerly from Tipton, did it take in that road; and if so, how far?

A. It took it in by sections to Mojave. That was the extent of my jurisdiction.

Q. Do you remember when the Southern Pacific Company took possession of these lines for operation?

A. As nearly as I can remember it was 1885.

Q. Before that time what company was operating the line from Lathrop down to Mojave?

A. The Central Pacific, so far as I ever knew.

Q. The Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. Yes.

1079 Q. Do you remember the Central Pacific engines Nos. 229 and 237?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you have anything to do with them?

A. Yes, sir; they were sent to my division for Tehachapi Mountain service.

Q. Where were they operated?

A. Between Bakersfield and the summit of the Tehachapi Mountains.

Q. How long were they used there?

A. They were used up to the time that I left the service of the company in that capacity, and I think ever since, as far as I know.

Q. Do you remember seeing any engines lettered "G. H. & S. A."?

A. Well, we had a few of them, four or five. I think we had five, for passenger service. We used them between Lathrop and Tulare for several months. I do not think they were there a whole year. As near as I can remember it was somewhere in the neighborhood of a year.

Q. Did you ever see engines lettered "Southern Pacific of California"—"S. P. of Cal."?

A. I have seen them, but I do not know that we ever had 1080 any on our division.

Q. Did you ever notice engines lettered "S. P. of A."—"Southern Pacific of Arizona"?

A. Yes; I have seen them.

Q. Do you remember any engines lettered "S. P. of N. M."—New Mexico?

A. Yes; I have seen them.

Q. Were they operated on this line, any of them?

A. I do not think we had any of those engines on that line.

Q. But you operated Central Pacific engines on this line, as you said?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. HERRIN. You may take the witness.

Cross-examination by Mr. McCLENEN:

Q. How long were you master mechanic on the Visalia division?

A. About seventeen years.

Q. That would be up to about 1889?

A. 1888 or 1889; yes, sir.

Q. Then what did you do?

1081 A. I took a leave of absence for pretty nearly a year—for a number of months—and was then appointed traveling road foreman of engines, and served in that capacity about three years.

Q. Over what part of the road?
A. Between Sacramento and Los Angeles and the branches.
Q. That would bring you up to about 1892. Then what did u do?
A. Then I retired again. I have been retired ever since.
Mr. McCLENNEN. That is all.
Mr. HERRIN. That is all.

WILLIAM HENRY NORTON was called as a witness on behalf of the fendants, and having been duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. HERRIN:

Q. What is your age?
A. Fifty-eight.
Q. What is your occupation?
A. Assistant superintendent of the Southern Pacific Company's electric lines in Oakland.

82 Q. Did you ever work for the Central Pacific Railroad Company?
A. Yes.
Q. When did you begin that work?
A. September 1, 1876.
Q. At what place?
A. Oakland Wharf.
Q. What were you doing?
A. The first two years I was telegraph operator, from 1876 to 1878
1879; from 1879 to 1887 I was train despatcher.
Q. At what place?
A. Oakland Wharf, excepting two months at Wadsworth. From 87 to 1901 I was chief train despatcher.
Q. At what place?
A. Oakland Wharf, the same place. From 1901 to 1906 I was vision train master at the same place.
Q. Of what division?
A. The western division. From 1901 to the present time I have en located at the same place, but the last year and a half I have been on the electric lines as assistant superintendent.

83 Q. While you were train despatcher at Oakland Wharf, how far did you handle trains beyond Goshen on the Southern acific Railroad line?
A. At night time the wires were cut through, and for about one ar I personally handled the trains from Oakland Wharf to Mojave.
hen, later on, when The Needles branch was cut in, I handled trains Needles—at night times only.
Q. What company were you working for at that time?

A. The Central Pacific Company.

Q. The Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember when the railroad was being constructed south of Goshen towards Los Angeles?

A. Well, I only remember that in a general way. That was completed, I think, along about 1878, or along in there. We were handling the trains, and we had short runs, a run down from Lathrop to Merced, fifty-six miles, and back again, and went on down. We always understood the line of the Central Pacific went as far as Goshen, if not farther, at that time.

1084 Q. After it reached Goshen, and as sections of the road south of Goshen were opened for operation, what company took possession?

A. The Central Pacific.

Q. The Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. Yes.

Q. It was operating its own lines, was it, at that time?

A. It appeared to be; yes, sir; to all purposes. We were operating the Central Pacific lines.

Q. Do you remember when the Southern Pacific Company was substituted in place of the Central Pacific Railroad Company as an operating company?

A. Yes; I believe that was April 1, 1885.

Q. You remember that time, do you?

A. Yes.

Q. Did that result in any change in the official or operating staff of the company?

A. No, sir.

Q. In other words, I understand that the same officials that were in office the day before the Southern Pacific Company took charge, and working for the Central Pacific Railroad Company, remained as such officials afterwards for the Southern Pacific Company?

1085 Mr. McCLENNEN. That is objected to as leading.

The WITNESS. Yes, sir.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. You remember no change whatever?

A. No; either with officials, or, I might add, employees.

Mr. HERRIN. You may take the witness.

Cross-examination by Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. Had the Southern Pacific Company ever operated anything up to April 1, 1885?

A. Well, if you mean on the Oakland Wharf, western division side, I may say no.

Q. You knew of the distinction between the Southern Pacific Railroad Company and the Southern Pacific Company, did you not?

A. Well, in a general way.

Q. I have not asked what that difference was, but did you know of there being two separate companies—one the Southern Pacific Railroad Company and the other the Southern Pacific Company?

086 A. The only way I can answer that, I would say prior to 1885 I did not know positively.

Q. Was this change of operation, when the Southern Pacific Company began to operate on April 1, 1885, applied over all the different lines?

A. That is my understanding; yes.

Q. That is, up to April 1, 1885, the Central Pacific Railroad Company had been operating all these various lines that you have described, both the Central Pacific Railroad and the Southern Pacific Railroad, and on that date the operation was changed over to the Southern Pacific Company. Is that correct?

A. The best way I can answer that is this: I am only on one division, and I do not know what is doing on the others; but my understanding was that on that date the line was turned over, in a matter of form only.

Q. Whether form or substance, what I have asked you is whether the turnover was of all the lines.

A. I do not know as I would be competent to say for all the lines, but my understanding was that it was.

Q. Up to April 1, 1885, was it your understanding that the Central Pacific Railroad Company was operating all the lines of the 087 Central Pacific Railroad and of the Southern Pacific Railroad and the Southern Pacific Railroad of Arizona?

A. I would say yes to that.

Mr. McCLENNEN. That is all.

Mr. HERRIN. That is all.

C. H. REDINGTON was called as a witness on behalf of the defendants, and having been duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Mr. Redington, will you state your age?

A. I will be seventy-three in a few days. I will be seventy-three the 15th of this month.

Q. And your residence?

A. Oakland; 468 Perkins Street.

Q. Were you ever employed by the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. I was.

Q. When, first?

A. I commenced December 20, 1866, at Sacramento.

Q. What were you doing?

1088 A. I was in the civil engineer department up to the time that they completed the road up to Promontory, in 1869.

Q. And afterwards, what did you do?

A. For a short time I was in the freight department in Sacramento and in San Francisco; for about two years.

Q. And after that?

A. After that, for a short time, I went back into the civil engineer department and had charge of the building of a short line from Hillsboro to Cloverdale. That was in 1871 and 1872. Then I was still in that department for some time longer. I was receiving and shipping ties from Oakland Wharf when they were constructing the road south of Goshen. I think it was in 1874 that I went to work in the secretary's office of the Contract & Finance Company in San Francisco.

Q. Who was the secretary?

A. John Miller.

Q. How long did you continue there?

A. As nearly as I can remember, two or three years.

Q. Were you ever, at any time, in the office of the paymaster of the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. Yes; I was made assistant paymaster of the Central Pacific Railroad Company.

Q. At what time?

1089 A. I think that was about 1875 or 1876.

Q. How long did you continue in that position?

A. Up to 1893.

Q. For the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. Yes, sir—well, until 1885, when it was the Southern Pacific Company; but in the same position with both companies.

Q. But you continued, technically, as assistant paymaster of the Central Pacific Railroad Company until the Southern Pacific Company took possession?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And thereafter what did you do?

A. I ran the same pay car, did the same work, the same pay.

Q. Until when?

A. Until 1893.

Q. And then what did you do?

A. I was made assistant to the treasurer of the Southern Pacific Company.

Q. How long did you hold that position?

A. I held that position up to 1907, when I was elected assistant treasurer of the Southern Pacific Company.

90 Q. How long did you hold that position?

A. I held that position until the 1st of August, 1912, when etired.

Q. What was the business of the Contract & Finance Company d the Western Development Company—or did you mention the estern Development Company?

A. I do not know as I did. John Miller at that time was secretary th of the Contract & Finance Company and the Western Develop- nt Company. The Contract & Finance Company was about clos- g up its affairs at that time, and my remembrance is that the West- n Development Company took over the Contract & Finance Com- ny.

Q. It was a sort of successor to the Contract & Finance Company?

A. That is my understanding.

Q. What was the business, as far as you know, of the Contract & nance Company, the Western Development Company, and the cific Improvement Company?

A. Constructing railroads.

Q. In a general way I will ask you to state the roads that you know ey constructed, or that were constructed through the instrumentali- ties of those companies.

91 A. The Central Pacific Railroad to Goshen; railroads, I think, south of Goshen; and I know they did south of Spadra. lso, they built the branch line from Saugus to Santa Barbara. ey built the line through Arizona and New Mexico and through xas to Pecos River. They built the lines to Needles from Mojave.

Q. While you were paymaster did you see that construction work, any part of it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was the occasion of your being out to the front, as we ll it?

A. I was assistant paymaster of the Central Pacific Company, but lso paid off the construction men for these construction companies. would go to the end of the track with the pay car, and then take ms and pay the construction men at sometimes thirty or forty les from the end of the track.

Q. How often did you go out to the front?

A. Sometimes once a month, and sometimes only once in two nths.

92 Q. Did you, at the same time this line was being built from Goshen south, go over the main Central Pacific line in the same way and pay off the men?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. During the construction of the road south of Goshen, all the way to El Paso, as I understand it, you were paymaster of the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. I surely was, since they built south of Bakersfield. There was a little time, while they were building between Goshen and Bakersfield, that I was shipping material.

Q. I wish you would just describe, in a general way, one of your trips—what you did on this southern road, what you did from the time you started until you got back. Just give us the procedure.

A. I was in the paymaster's office of the Central Pacific. I had the pay rolls, and I would look over the pay rolls and figure up how much money it would take to pay the trip; and from the construction company Mr. Douty would turn over the pay rolls of the construction company to me, with a memorandum that it would take about so much to pay the road. I would then obtain the money from the treasurer of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, and the pay car would start from Oakland wharf and go as far as the end of the line and pay the Central Pacific men. We still had enough money 1093 to pay the construction men. For instance, when I got to Bakersfield, a large number of men were working in the Tehachapi Mountains, and we would take a six-horse team—we were paying mostly in silver at that time—and we would go as far as we could that day, and camp, on what money I had left, and continue paying those men.

At the same time they were working on the tunnel—the San Fernando Tunnel. One trip it took a four-horse team from the summit of the Tehachapi, and we went and paid those men on the San Fernando Tunnel, and then came back by stage.

When I would return I would figure up that I had paid so much for the Central Pacific Company and so much for the construction company, and I would take the memorandum to Mr. Douty, who had charge of the construction companies, and he would check the pay rolls to see that my figures were correct. Then he would give me a draft or warrant for the part that I had paid for the construction company. I would turn that in to balance my account. I would usually bring back a little money. The money that I had brought back and the draft that I obtained from Mr. Douty and the money to the Central Pacific balanced my account. It would take, sometimes, as much as $500,000 to make the trip.

1094 Q. You got rid of most of it, did you not, before you got back?

A. Pretty nearly.

Q. Did you go as far as El Paso?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you go beyond El Paso?

A. Yes, sir; I went as far as Pecos River.

Q. Following this procedure you have detailed here as to every trip?

A. At that time I was the only assistant paymaster. We would make one trip to Ogden—that is, when we only paid once in two months we would make that trip to Ogden one month; there were very few construction men on that line—and the next month we would go south; and then repeat that until the road was completed.

Q. You were the paymaster all the way to the Pecos River until after the line was connected?

A. My title was assistant paymaster, but I was the one in charge of the car—the one that did the paying.

Q. I say, you were attending to the pay car?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Until after the connection was made at Pecos with 1095 the eastern end of the line?

A. Yes.

Q. And after that how far did you go, if at all, east of El Paso with your pay car?

A. Not any, after the connection was made.

Q. What was your eastern limit or point?

A. El Paso.

Q. Do you know how the men east of El Paso were paid, or from what point?

A. They were paid from a pay car that came from—I guess it was Houston—from the other end; Houston or New Orleans.

Q. From the other end?

A. Yes. I used to meet the car occasionally.

Q. Do you know to what company the sections of road south of Ogden were turned over for operation as they were completed?

A. To the Central Pacific Railroad Company up to 1885.

Q. Did that company operate these sections and this line at all times after they were opened for operation until the time when the Southern Pacific Company took them over?

A. Yes, sir.

1096 Q. Did you know Mark Hopkins?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What position did he hold in these companies?

A. He was treasurer of the Central Pacific Railroad Company.

Q. You had some business with him, then, if he was treasurer?

A. Yes; at different times.

Q. Did you ever receive instructions from him, as treasurer of the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember when Mark Hopkins died?

A. 1878, at Yuma.

Q. Did you know Charles Crocker?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Personally?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he have anything to do with these roads?

A. Yes, sir; he had more to do with the construction companies than any of the others.

Q. Any of what others?

A. Mr. Stanford, Mr. Hopkins—the Big Four we always 1097 called them—Mr. Stanford, Mr. Huntington, Mr. Hopkins, and Mr. Crocker.

Q. Did you know Governor Stanford, Leland Stanford?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you know Mr. Huntington?

A. Well, I did not know him as early as I did the others. When I went to Sacramento the others lived there. He was in New York. I did not get acquainted with him nearly as early as I did with the others.

Q. At all times prior to 1885, when the Southern Pacific Company took possession of these lines, from what source did you get the money which you used on these pay-car trips?

A. I got it from the treasurer of the Central Pacific Railroad Company.

Q. The Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. Yes.

Q. And after the Southern Pacific Company took possession, what was the source of your supply?

A. From the treasurer of the Southern Pacific Company.

Q. Mr. Redington, do you recognize this paper that I hand you?

1098 A. Yes, sir; I remember that there was such a circular issued.

Q. You remember that it was issued?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. HERRIN. I wish to have the paper which has just been identified by the witness marked as an exhibit, and I offer it in evidence.

(The paper referred to was received in evidence and marked "Defendants' Exhibit (Redington) No. 8, March 3, 1915", and will be found in the volume of defendants' exhibits.)

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Do you recognize that paper that I hand you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What do you know about it?

A. I know all the people mentioned there. I used to keep track of those, and to know who were the officials and when there were changes made.

Q. Do you remember that those changes were made, those appointments?

A. I remember those changes were made. If you asked me the date they were made, I could not tell you.

Q. This is a circular issued by Mr. Towne, general superintendent of the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

1099 A. Yes.

Q. Dated April 27, 1881. I wish to have that marked as an exhibit, and I offer it in evidence.

(The paper referred to was received in evidence and marked "Defendants' Exhibit (Redington) No. 9, March 3, 1915", and will be found in the volume of defendants' exhibits.)

Mr. HERRIN. Just for the purpose of identifying it here in the record I will state that it is a circular issued by A. N. Towne, general superintendent Central Pacific Railroad and leased lines, dated April 27, 1881, appointing W. G. Curtis superintendent of track, Mr. A. A. Bean to succeed Mr. Curtis as assistant superintendent of the Southern Pacific Railroad of Arizona and the Southern Pacific Railroad of New Mexico, with headquarters at Tucson.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Do you recognize the paper I hand you now, which purports to be a circular issued by Mr. A. N. Towne, as general superintendent of the Central Pacific Railroad and leased lines, dated San Francisco, October 8, 1881, appointing Mr. James Campbell assistant superintendent of the Rio Grande division of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company of New Mexico, also the El Paso division 1100 of the Galveston, Harrisburg & San Antonio Railroad, with headquarters at El Paso [handing paper to witness]?

A. I remember there was such a circular issueed and that Mr. Campbell filled that office.

Mr. HERRIN. I wish to offer in evidence the paper which has just been identified and to have it marked as an exhibit.

(The paper referred to was received in evidence and marked "Defendants' Exhibit (Redington) No. 10, March 3, 1915", and will be found in the volume of defendants' exhibits.)

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. I hand you a paper purporting to be a circular or announcement by Mr. J. A. Fillmore, under title of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, general superintendent's office, dated San Francisco, January 12, 1882, stating that on Monday next, January 16, the G. H. & S. A. Railway, El Paso division, will be opened for business to Marfa, 103.4 miles east of Sierra Blanca, stations, distances, and agencies east of Sierra Blanca will be as follows—stated.

A. Yes; I remember that such a circular was issued, and the names on there are all familiar.

Mr. HERRIN. I ask to have that marked as an exhibit and I offer it in evidence.

1101 (The paper referred to was received in evidence and marked "Defendants' Exhibit (Redington) No. 11, March 3, 1915", and will be found in the volume of defendants' exhibits.)

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. I hand you a circular purporting to be issued by J. A. Fillmore, assistant general superintendent of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, dated San Francisco, March 6, 1882, announcing the establishment of six new stations in Arizona, giving the names of the same, and I ask you if you recognize the circular or have any remembrance as to whether it was issued at the time it is dated.

A. Yes, sir; I remember such a circular was issued.

Mr. HERRIN. I ask to have that marked as an exhibit and I offer it in evidence.

(The paper referred to was received in evidence and marked "Defendants' Exhibit (Redington) No. 12, March 3, 1915", and will be found in the volume of defendants' exhibits.)

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. That was the original signature of Mr. Fillmore to that circular or was it a mimeograph copy of it?

A. That is his regular signature. I do not know whether it 1102 is a carbon copy of his signature or whether it was written on that paper.

Q. You recognize it as his signature?

A. I recognize his signature very well.

Q. Whether he wrote it or whether it was taken from a mimeograph copy, or something of that kind, you do not know?

A. No; I could not say.

Q. I hand you what purports to be a circular issued by J. A. Fillmore, assistant general superintendent Central Pacific Railroad Company, dated San Francisco, April 1, 1882, stating that on Saturday, April 8, 1882, the G. H. & S. A. Railroad would be open for business to Haymond, 74.4 miles east of Marfa, and also stating the agencies and location of stations, and ask you if you remember such a circular was issued at the time of the date?

A. I remember the same as the others. These stations are not as familiar to me now as they were twenty years ago, but the principal stations are still very familiar to me, and that is Mr. Fillmore's signature, or a copy of his signature, perhaps taken from a mimeograph.

Mr. HERRIN. I ask to have that marked as an exhibit, and offer it in evidence.

1103 (The paper referred to was received in evidence and marked "Defendants' Exhibit (Redington) No. 13, March 3, 1915", and will be found in the volume of defendants' exhibits.)

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. I now hand you what purports to be a printed circular purporting to be issued by Leland Stanford, president of the Central Pacific Railroad, dated San Francisco, May 3, 1882, stating that A. N. Towne is this day appointed general manager of the Central Pacific Railroad and leased lines, with headquarters at San Francisco, with some details as to his duties, and ask you if you remember such a circular having been issued at or about the date of the same?

A. Yes, sir; I remember that. He was general superintendent up to that time.

Q. Mr. Towne was?

A. Yes. His duties were somewhat enlarged by the issuance of that circular.

Mr. HERRIN. I ask to have that marked as an exhibit, and offer it in evidence.

(The paper was received in evidence and marked "Defendants' Exhibit (Redington) No. 14, March 3, 1915", and will be found in the volume of defendants' exhibits.)

1104 By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. I hand you what purports to be a circular issued by Mr. J. A. Fillmore, general superintendent of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, San Francisco, May 20, 1882, stating that on Monday, May 22, 1882, the G., H. & S. A. Railroad, El Paso division, will be opened for business to Strobridge, 314 miles east of El Paso, giving details as to stations and agencies, and ask you if you have any recollection that that was issued as a circular at or about its date.

A. I remember that. I remember the station of Strobridge, a very forlorn looking place.

Mr. HERRIN. I will ask to have that marked as an exhibit and offer it in evidence.

(The paper referred to was received in evidence and marked "Defendants' Exhibit (Redington) No. 15, March 3, 1915", and will be found in the volume of defendants' exhibits.)

By Mr. HERRIN:

Mr. HERRIN. I offer that in evidence, and ask that it be marked as an exhibit.

(The paper referred to was received in evidence and marked "Defendants' Exhibit (Redington) No. 16, March 3, 1915", and will be found in the volume of defendants' exhibits.)

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. I hand you what purports to be a printed circular issued by Charles Crocker, second vice president of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, dated San Francisco, January 1, 1883, stating that Mr. Timothy Hopkins has been elected treasurer of this company, vice E. W. Hopkins, resigned, and ask you if that was issued as a circular at or about its date, if you know?

A. I remember that was a circular of about that date. I did not know that Mr. Charles Crocker issued it. I know there was a circular issued.

1106 Q. You know there was a circular issued, making that announcement?

A. Announcing the appointment of Timothy Hopkins as treasurer.

Mr. HERRIN. I will ask to have that marked as an exhibit and offer it in evidence.

(The paper referred to was received in evidence and marked "Defendants' Exhibit (Redington) No. 17, March 3, 1915", and will be found in the volume of defendants' exhibits.)

A. Yes, sir; I identify it.

Mr. HERRIN. I will offer that in evidence and ask to have it marked as an exhibit.

(The paper referred to was received in evidence and marked "Defendants' Exhibit (Redington) No. 18, March 3, 1915", 1107 and will be found in the volume of defendants' exhibits.)

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. I hand you what purports to be a circular issued by J. A. Fillmore, general superintendent of the Central Pacific Railroad Company and leased lines, dated San Francisco, October 5, 1884, stating that the name of Vermillionville station on the G., H. & S. A. Railway system has this day been changed to La Fayette, and ask you if such a circular was issued, if you remember, at or about its date?

A. I am not so positive about that. I know that is the same signature, but I never went as far as that, and I am not so familiar with that. When that was issued I was not so much interested in that.

Q. Do you recognize Mr. Fillmore's signature?

A. Oh, yes; yes.

Mr. HERRIN. We will put it in, and I will call other witnesses who know about it. I will ask to have it marked as an exhibit and put it in evidence.

(The paper referred to was received in evidence and marked "Defendants' Exhibit (Redington) No. 19, March 3, 1915", and will be found in the volume of defendants' exhibits.)

Mr. HERRIN. You may take the witness. I notice, however, that the hour of adjournment has arrived.

Mr. MCCLENNEN. It will be necessary for Mr. Redington to return in the morning, then.

(Whereupon, at 4.10 o'clock p. m., an adjournment was taken until to-morrow, Thursday, March 4, 1915, at 11 o'clock a. m.)

FOURTEENTH DAY.

ROOM 921, FLOOD BUILDING,
San Francisco, Cal., Thursday, March 4, 1915.

The hearing was resumed, pursuant to adjournment, at 11 o'clock a. m., before Frank R. Hanna, special examiner.

Present on behalf of the United States: James W. Orr, Esq., Edward F. McClennen, Esq., and Edward E. Gann, Esq., special assistants to the Attorney General.

Present on behalf of the defendants: W. F. Herrin, Esq., J. P. Blair, Esq., P. F. Dunne, Esq., Garret McEnerney, Esq., and E. J. Moulds, Esq., for the Southern Pacific Company.

C. H. REDINGTON, the witness under examination at the taking of the adjournment, resumed the stand and testified further, as follows:

Cross-examination by Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. You were engaged at the general offices of the company in San Francisco at the time of the fire in 1906, were you not?

A. Yes.

Q. And at that time you were the assistant treasurer, were you?

A. At that time I was assistant to the treasurer.

Q. And in that position you were generally familiar with the treasurer's records?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you know anything about the secretary's records? I mean to the extent of knowing what sort of records were kept by him in San Francisco.

A. I do not think I am familiar with those.

Q. From your familiarity with the records of the company, will you tell us what sort of records were destroyed in the fire of 1906 in San Francisco?

1111 A. I can only tell about the treasurer's office.

Q. What would that include? What was destroyed? I do not mean paper by paper, you understand, or book by book, but the general character of the things that were destroyed.

A. I do not think there was anything of great value in the treasurer's office destroyed. For instance, we made a daily statement of the receipts and disbursements of that particular day. They were destroyed. They should have been put in the vault, but they were put in a desk. It caused considerable trouble in finding out who had paid their bills, and the remittances. Each agent remitted daily to the treasurer's office at that time; they sent so much money and there was a credit to show what it was for that particular day's work.

Q. Were those records of the treasurer which were put in the vault all saved?

A. Not all. The treasurer's office had three vaults. What were in two vaults were not destroyed, and in one vault they were.

Q. What were the things in the destroyed vault?

A. There was some coin; there was about $10,000 in silver 1112 that was melted together, and there were papers. Although, as I said, some of them were put in a drawer, some of them were put in this particular safe—counter money, what was in the tray—and there were some other things put in that safe. It was impossible to read anything that was in that safe; it was ashes and melted coin.

Q. In the two vaults that were saved, what sort of records and papers and books were there?

A. Check books, cash books—they were all saved.

Q. And ledgers?

A. Well, the treasurer didn't keep a ledger.

Q. Were those vaults that you have described, those three, the vaults of the treasurer exclusively, or were they used by other departments of the company?

A. Also used by the paymaster; he was part of the treasurer's office, though. That is the one that there was some silver destroyed in.

Q. But those three vaults that you have just described were exclusively treasurer's department vaults?

A. Yes; treasurer and paymaster.

Q. Did the treasurer's department have custody of any of the contracts of the company?

A. No.

1113 Q. In whose department would the contracts of the company ordinarily be found?

A. The auditor's office.

Q. Do you know anything of what happened as to the auditor's office in that fire?

A. I remember the morning of the fire that I was in the building, and the auditor had a great many papers in our vault, such as contracts. They were in a tin case, I think, about six feet high and two or three feet wide, contracts, and so on. They were somewhat charred, but they came out all right. And he had some vaults himself; I do not know what the condition of those vaults was.

Q. In what department were the stock-holding records kept?

A. I suppose in the secretary's office.

Q. Do you know what happened with respect to those in the fire?

A. I do not.

Q. Do you know whether or not there is in existence anywhere any records showing the names and holdings of the stockholders in the Central Pacific Railroad Company for any part of the period between 1880 and 1900?

1114 A. I do not. I had always supposed that they were kept in New York. They were not kept in the treasurer's office here.

Q. And you have nothing beyond the supposition to guide you?

A. That is all.

Q. And would the same be true with respect to the stockholders and their holdings in the Southern Pacific Railroad Company and the Southern Pacific Company?

A. That was my understanding.

Q. Were the San Francisco offices of the Southern Pacific Company, the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, and the Central Pacific Railway Company, in 1906, at the time of the fire, all in one building?

A. As to the Southern Pacific Railroad Company and the Southern Pacific, I think all the business attended to in San Francisco was in the same building.

Q. So far as the Central Pacific Railway Company had any office in San Francisco, that was also in the same building?

A. Yes.

1115 Q. Were the vaults of the several companies a battery o vaults, or were they distributed about the building?

A. Distributed about the building. Securities were all kept in safe deposit vault outside of the building.

Q. That is, those would be the stocks and bonds and such paper that were owned by any of the companies in other companies?

A. Yes; bonds.

Q. Were they saved?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You have spoken, on your direct testimony, of operations o these various lines of railroad prior to April 1, 1885. There is little uncertainty in the testimony of some of the witnesses as t whether the Central Pacific Railroad Company, up to April 1885, operated all of the lines of the Southern Pacific Railroad Com pany. Can you make that definite?

A. The road from San Francisco and beyond was Southern Pacif Railroad property. For a time that was operated separately; the were separate officers.

Q. Was that road from San Francisco to Gilroy and beyond ev covered by any lease to the Central Pacific Railroad Compan

1116 or did the Southern Pacific Railroad Company always operat that, up to the time that the Southern Pacific Company begu April 1, 1885?

A. I think it had always been run separately up to that time.

Q. That is the first end of what has since become known as th coast line, is it not?

A. Yes.

Q. Were there any other of the lines of the Southern Pacific Rai road Company of California or New Mexico or of Arizona whi were not operated by the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. The Central Pacific Railroad Company operated its own lin the lines which it owned itself, as an owner, did it not?

A. The Central Pacific?

Q. The Central; that is, the main line from Ogden to San Fra cisco Bay, and the line from Lathrop to Goshen, and the line nor from Roseville Junction as far as it had been constructed up April 1, 1885, were all operated by the Central Pacific Railroad Co pany as the owner of those properties?

1117 A. Yes, sir.

Q. The lines of the Southern Pacific of California, or Arizona or of New Mexico, so far as they were operated by the Ce tral Pacific Railroad Company, up to April 1, 1885, were operat by that company as a lessee?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And on the stationery that has been put in, the significance of the words "Central Pacific Railroad and leased lines" was the lines which I have described, which were owned by the Central Pacific Railroad Company and the lines of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company which had been leased to the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then, as of date of April 1, 1885, all those leases were canceled and the Southern Pacific Company took up the operation of the various lines as a lessee company?

A. Yes, sir; I am not familiar with the leases, but that was the operation.

Q. Were you familiar with the methods of accounting which were employed between the various lessee companies and lessor companies, either before or after April 1, 1885?

A. Not any more than I suppose that the Southern Pa-1118 cific Company was really the banker for all these other companies.

Q. And prior to April 1, 1885, did the Central Pacific Railroad Company occupy the same position as bankers for all the companies?

A. So I understood; yes.

Q. As the payments were made, they were made more or less after a clearing-house method, and charged to the various companies to which the particular payments were chargeable?

A. Well, I don't know; I am more familiar with the Pacific Improvement Company. I do not think they had any bank account themselves. At times they borrowed a large amount of money and would turn it over to the Central Pacific, and later the Southern Pacific; that is, if they wanted money, they would draw on the Central Pacific or the Southern Pacific Company, and if they had any amount of money, they would turn it in to the treasurer of the Central Pacific, until after 1885, and then to the Southern Pacific.

Q. And when any payments were made on these lines under construction, for account of the constructing companies, those payments were either charged on this so-called banking account to those 1119 construction companies or else a draft was drawn by those construction companies on that account to cover the payments so made?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know anything, Mr. Redington, with reference to what has been done by way of the duplication or near duplication of such of the records of the various companies as were destroyed in the San Francisco fire of 1906 or in the Equitable fire in New York?

A. The stock, you mean?

Q. Yes.

A. I do not think there was any destroyed in San Francisco.

Q. Do you know whether any were destroyed of the records i New York?

A. I was informed at the time that there was.

Q. Do you know to what extent there was a restoration of th stock records?

A. I do not.

Q. Do you know whether it went back of the current stockholding of the company and reproduced anything as to the holdings in earlie periods?

A. I could not say.

1120 Q. You do not know at all about that?

A. No. I know at the time that Mr. Mahl, the comptroller said that they had met with a loss and wanted us to send a copy o all the stock held here.

Q. That was after the Equitable fire in New York?

A. Yes.

Q. Which was subsequent to the San Francisco fire of 1906?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know whether there was sent on to New York such ma terial as there was here that would assist in the reproduction o records?

A. Yes, sir; we formulated lists of the stock we had in differen companies owned by the Southern Pacific Company.

Q. Did those go back of 1900?

A. Oh, yes; I think some of them.

Q. Did they relate to the holdings in the Central Pacific Railroa Company prior to 1900?

A. No.

Q. Was anything restored, as far as you know, of the record showing the stock holdings in that company prior to 1900?

1121 A. No; we never had had those records in San Francisco not in the treasurer's office. They had the directors' share here, and in many cases the stock of the different companies, in a the companies owned by the Southern Pacific.

Q. Are you referring now to the securities themselves or to boo entries and memoranda showing them?

A. To the stock itself.

Q. I see. That is all.

Redirect examination by Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Mr. Redington, you did not keep the stock transfer books o the Central Pacific Railroad Company in your office?

A. No, sir.

Q. And what you speak of here as stocks were the stock certificates which were held in your office, representing stock certificates to qualify directors, and securities that the company might have in other companies?

A. The treasurer's office kept a record of the shares of that character, and also had the stock. When Mr. Mahl sent for them, we went and looked at our records which were saved, and also checked back the stock to see if everything was all right.

1122 Q. So that your efforts were devoted to looking up the certificates which you held?

A. That is all.

Q. And if they were destroyed by seeing that you got new certificates in place of them?

A. None was destroyed that we had. We did not have to get any new certificates.

Q. You had nothing to do with the stock transfer books themselves?

A. Nothing at all; nothing.

Q. You do not know what was done to replace those books, if anything?

A. I do not.

Q. And what you have said here does not refer to the stock transfer books?

A. No, sir; not at all.

Q. Who was the auditor that you spoke of at this time?

Mr. McCLENNEN. This is in 1906?

Mr. HERRIN. In 1906, yes; at the time of this fire.

The WITNESS. Mr. Seger.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. C. B. Seger?

1123 A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know what Mr. Seger is doing now?

A. I think he is vice president and comptroller of the Union Pacific.

Q. And his office is where?

A. In New York City.

Mr. HERRIN. That is all.

Mr. McCLENNEN. That is all.

EDWARD M. RAILTON was called as a witness on behalf of the defendants and, having been duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Will you please state your age?
A. Sixty-four.
Q. And your residence?
A. Oakland, California.
Q. And your occupation?
A. I am an employee of the Standard Oil Company.
Q. Did you ever have employment with the Central Pacific Railroad Company?
1124 A. I did.
Q. At what time?
A. I commenced employment with them in December, 1868.
Q. In what capacity?
A. Telegraph operator.
Q. At what point?
A. Battle Mountain, Nevada.
Q. How long did you continue there?
A. Until the latter part of May, 1869.
Q. Did you continue there until the line was opened between Ogden and San Francisco?
A. Yes; the line was opened between the 10th of May and the time I left there.
Q. From Battle Mountain where did you move to?
A. Sacramento.
Q. Were you a telegraph operator there?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. How long did you remain there?
A. I remained in Sacramento from approximately the 1st day of June until the 1st of September.
Q. Then where did you go?
A. Upon the completion of the Western Pacific Railroad
1125 which connected Sacramento with San Jose, I was transferred to San Jose; on the 16th of September, 1869, they completed the bridge across the San Joaquin River.
Q. Then you may continue and narrate your service, please.
A. From San Jose I returned to Sacramento. I remained there until the 1st day of January, 1870, when we came to Oakland, with the headquarters of the division superintendent that was established at Oakland on that date.
Mr. MCCLENNEN. That is, still as telegraph operator?
The WITNESS. Yes; continuously as a telegraph opertor.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. How long did you continue in Oakland in that capacity?

A. In the capacity of telegrapher, train despatcher, and assistant to the superintendent, I remained there until the 2nd day of August, 1880.

Q. And after that, what did you do?

A. I was master of transportation of the combined roads until the 1st day of July, 1885.

Q. And where was your office?

A. Fourth and Townsend Streets, San Francisco.

1126 Q. And as master of transportation, over what lines did you have jurisdiction?

A. All the lines that were operated by the Central Pacific and its successor, the Southern Pacific.

Q. That included the lines operated by the Central Pacific Railroad Company, did it?

A. It did, sir; yes.

Q. And also the line owned by the Southern Pacific Railroad Company southerly from Goshen to Yuma?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And other lines in California owned by the different corporations?

A. All other lines in California, with the exception of what we knew as the northern division, which was operated by Mr. A. C. Bassett as superintendent.

Q. Of what company?

A. The Southern Pacific Company.

Q. The Southern Pacific Railroad Company?

A. Well, that I can not be positive about, whether it was the Southern Pacific Railroad. We recognized it as Southern Pacific; but it was a distinct and separate organization, so far as the administration of the operating officials of the Central Pacific was concerned.

1127 Q. Did that remain separate until 1885?

A. Yes; Mr. Bassett was still in charge of the northern division.

Q. And the Central Pacific Railroad Company had nothing to do with that line?

A. Evidently not, because he did not consult either with the manager of the Central Pacific or with the general freight agent at that time. Mr. Bassett was his own general freight agent.

Q. Do you remember how far the line extended from San Francisco southerly to Gilroy and beyond in 1885—July, 1885?

A. I can not say positively, but it is my impression that it extended as far south as Tres Pinos Junction—is it, that goes to Monterey?

Q. No, Castroville.

A. Well, that junction there; possibly a little farther south than Castroville.

Q. But it did not go to Santa Barbara?

A. No, sir; it did not go to Santa Margarita, either.

Mr. McCLENNEN. And that is the line that the witness means is the northern division?

1128 By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. That line, from San Francisco down to the point beyond Castroville, is what you have called the northern division, which was operated by Mr. Bassett?

A. Yes; A. C. Bassett.

Q. You terminated your service with the Central Pacific Railroad Company or the Southern Pacific Company, its successor, July 1, 1885?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. As I understand it, you were, from 1872 to 1876, inclusive, train despatcher on the western division?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. At Oakland Pier?

A. At Oakland Pier, or at that time what was known as Oakland Wharf.

Q. In 1872 had the line, if you remember, from Lathrop to Goshen been built?

A. Not as far as Goshen, sir. Construction had been commenced south from what was then known as Wilson Station, subsequently called Lathrop.

Q. And do you remember about when the road was completed to Goshen?

1129 A. As my memory serves me, I would say along about the fall of 1873 or early in 1874.

Q. And do you recall the building of the road beyond Goshen towards Los Angeles?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did your jurisdiction as train despatcher of the western division extend southerly of Goshen?

A. It did; as the road was constructed from Lathrop south, it was designated as the Visalia division. The Visalia division extended as far as Tulare. When we passed Tulare, beyond there it was known as the Tulare division. All of that territory was under the jurisdiction of Mr. E. C. Fellows, who was the superintendent at Oakland, and I was the train despatcher on that division.

Q. How far did your jurisdiction extend, at any time between 1872 and 1876, as train despatcher—how far south?

A. We had charge of the line as far south as Lang, where the connection was made from the Los Angeles and the San Francisco ends.

Q. Where was Lang with reference to some other station that we may know better?

1130 A. Let me see. Lang is about sixty miles south of Mojave.

Q. It is this side of——

A. It is this side of Newhall.

Q. I see. You had jurisdiction to Lang?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know what company operated the road south of Goshen when it was opened—that road from Goshen to Lang?

A. It was the continuation of the operation of the balance of the road, sir.

Q. What company operated it?

A. The Central Pacific Railroad. Everything was Central Pacific at that time.

Q. The Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. Yes.

Q. What time in 1880 was it that you became master of transportation?

A. The second day of August, 1880.

Q. You were master of transportation for all the lines then operated by the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. Yes.

Q. Whether owned by it or leased?

A. Yes.

1131 Q. How far south, if you remember, had this Southern Pacific Railroad between Los Angeles and El Paso been constructed when you took charge as master of transportation?

A. The end of the track the 1st of August was at or about what is now known as Benson, Arizona, beyond Tucson.

Q. And you remember the progress of the construction of that road while you were master of transportation, do you?

A. I do.

Q. Who was in charge of construction?

A. The physical construction?

Q. Yes.

A. J. H. Strobridge.

Q. Do you remember about when this road made connection with the Santa Fe at Deming?

A. In the month of March, 1881.

Q. Do you remember about when it reached El Paso?

A. Within a short time after that. We got down as far as the Rio Grande River. There we were hung up for a while on account of bridge construction.

Q. And it was about when that it reached El Paso, if you remember?

A. I should say along about June or July.

1132 Mr. ORR. 1881?

The WITNESS. 1881. I will not be absolutely positive in regard to that, but that is my impression. I know it was mighty hot.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Were you down there at that time?

A. Yes; I was down there several times during 1881.

Q. Do you remember the construction that was continued beyond El Paso, through Texas, of the Southern Pacific Railroad line?

A. I do; yes, sir.

Q. How far did it extend along, that jurisdiction?

A. Up to the connection with the G., H. & S. A.

Q. At or near what point?

A. I do not remember the exact point, but it was beyond Sanderson.

Q. Was it not the Pecos River, or near there?

A. I will not say positively as to that, because they were held up at Pecos River a long time on account of that bridge construction.

Q. As sections of these lines all the way south from Goshen 1133 were constructed and made ready for operation, they were turned over to what company to be operated?

A. Turned over to the Central Pacific Railroad Company—the officials of the Central Pacific.

Q. And after the junction of the line at or near Sanderson, that you spoke of, or the Pecos River, as other witnesses have mentioned, do you know whether the Central Pacific Railroad Company took control of the operation of the line through to New Orleans?

A. The officials of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, located in San Francisco, took charge of the operations after the connection through to New Orleans, and our official names were published on the official time-tables.

Q. Do you remember when the Southern Pacific succeeded the Central Pacific Railroad in the operation of these lines?

A. Yes.

Q. About what time was that?

A. That was early in 1885.

Q. What change, if any, was made in the operating officials or general officials that were operating the road when the Southern Pacific Company took possession?

A. So far as the individuals were concerned, there was no change. The title of the individuals was changed. Mr.
1134 Towne, I think, was made general manager.

Q. Mr. Towne was made general manager some little time before that?

A. Prior to that.

Q. But aside from that, the change of title of Mr. Towne, you remember no other change of title?

A. General superintendent, assistant general superintendent, and master of transportation were the operating officials.

Q. And continued as such?

A. Continued as such.

Q. For the Southern Pacific Company, just the same as they had for the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. Yes.

Q. I suppose while you were master of transportation you made frequent trips over these lines?

A. Yes, frequently.

Q. Did you personally know C. P. Huntington, Leland Stanford, Charles Crocker, and Mark Hopkins?

A. Yes, I knew each and every one of them.

Q. Did they have anything to do with these roads we have been talking about?

1135 A. Yes; we recognized them as being the practical owners.

Mr. McClennen. I object to the answer as not responsive, containing an opinion and conclusion of the witness, and ask that the answer be stricken out.

By Mr. Herrin:

Q. How did you recognize them?

Mr. McClennen. The question is objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, asking for an opinion by the witness, and based upon an answer of the witness which in itself is not competent.

The Witness. By knowing them.

By Mr. Herrin:

Q. What did they have to do, these gentlemen or either of them with these roads, the Central Pacific Railroad Company and the Southern Pacific Railroad, that you know of your own knowledge?

A. Well, I know that their instructions as regards operations of any kind were followed.

Q. What did Charles Crocker have to do especially, if anything?

A. Mr. Charles Crocker, more particularly than any of the others, took charge of construction and operation.

1136 Q. Do you remember about when Mr. Mark Hopkins died?

A. I do; yes.

Q. About what year was that?

A. I know he died at Yuma.

Q. What?

A. He died while he was at Yuma. He died in a private car, if my memory serves me; it was along, I should say, about 1882. My memory is vague as to the time Mark Hopkins died.

Q. Do you remember when Charles Crocker died?

A. Yes; I do.

Q. When was that?

A. He died in either 1887 or 1888. I was in Mexico at the time, but I remember distinctly the death of Mr. Crocker. Pardon me; I will just revise my memory on that. The last time I saw Mr. Charles Crocker was at Lathrop, in July, 1888. I came with him in his private car from Lathrop to San Francisco; it was later than that, of course, that he died, because I know I was in Mexico at the time of the old gentleman's death.

Q. Mr. Hopkins died before Mr. Crocker, did he not?

A. Yes; he did.

1137 Q. Prior to Mr. Hopkins' death, who, within your knowledge, exercised the final authority of deciding any questions, operating or otherwise, concerning these lines; what individuals?

Mr. McCLENNEN. That is objected to as calling upon the witness for a statement of an opinion and conclusion, as to matter in itself immaterial.

The WITNESS. Why, Mr. Charles Crocker more particularly, although Governor Stanford also gave orders. I have received instructions from both of them personally, as regards certain movements.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. What did Mr. Mark Hopkins have to do with these roads?

A. Mr. Hopkins was the treasurer.

Q. And C. P. Huntington?

A. Was vice president.

Q. Where was his residence?

A. In New York.

Q. Did you ever see him on the line?

A. Yes, a number of times.

1138 Q. After Mr. Hopkins' death, who continued to exercise this controlling authority, so far as you observed it, or know?

Mr. McCLENNEN. The same objection, that it calls for an opinion and a conclusion, and is in itself immaterial.

The WITNESS. The same individuals.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Well, of course, Mr. Hopkins did not do anything after his death. I asked you, after his death.

Mr. McCLENNEN. The same objection.

The WITNESS. The surviving individuals.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. And after Mr. Crocker's death, did any one represent him, that you remember, or his interests?

A. His son, Fred Crocker.

Q. Colonel Fred Crocker?

A. Yes.

Q. When the Southern Pacific Company took possession of these lines in 1885 you say there was no change whatever in the official organization of the Central Pacific Railroad that was turned over and continued by the Southern Pacific Company?

A. That is the condition.

1139 Q. I would like to ask about the creation of what they call the Atlantic system and the Pacific system. Would you know about that?

A. Well, at the time of the formation of the Southern Pacific Company, when the Southern Pacific Company took possession, the line was divided at El Paso. The Rio Grande River, as a matter of fact, was always regarded as El Paso, and the operating officials from the New Orleans end took charge of that, while the officials from San Francisco retained charge as far as the Rio Grande River.

Q. But the Southern Pacific Company extended itself over the whole line from New Orleans to San Francisco?

A. Yes.

Q. As master of transportation, was it any part of your duty to supervise the freight and passenger train schedules of those lines?

A. That, more particularly than anything else.

Q. What was the practice of routing trains? Did you consider the ownership of the lines, or did you take the most practicable and best route for trains, without reference to ownership?

Mr. McCLENNEN. That is objected to as extremely leading.

1140 The WITNESS. There was no regard paid to the ownership of the various companies. We routed trains by whichever was the best and most direct route.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Can you give instances where that was done?

A. Yes; trains were diverted, directed to go, if you please, v
Port Costa and Benicia to Sacramento, or via Antioch and Trac or, if you please, by way of Livermore and Tracy. Train servi was maintained without any regard to the actual mileage made, order to meet the exigencies of the occasion.

Q. To meet the public demands?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember when the Benicia cut-off, as we call it, w opened—about when?

A. I think that was along about 1877 or 1878.

Q. Now, before that time the trains between San Francisco a Sacramento ran over what line?

A. Both lines, via Livermore and via Antioch; the heavy trai went by way of Antioch so as to avoid the Livermore grades.

1141 Q. But after the Benicia cut-off was opened, being connect with Benicia and Port Costa by the boat Solano, how we the main trains run then?

A. Via Benicia and Suisun, on account of the decrease of mileag

Q. That is, the Central Pacific trains that were formerly sent Stockton and those two routes you mentioned were then sent over t short route?

A. Yes; by way of Benicia and Suisun.

Q. Was the same rule observed as to taking the most direct rou for freight trains also?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know where the general repairs were made to cars a locomotives on all these lines under your jurisdiction from 1880 1885?

A. Sacramento, principally, construction and general repairs, ov hauls; also at Oakland.

Q. That is, the Sacramento shops of the Central Pacific Railro Company?

A. Yes.

Q. The Southern Pacific Railroad Company had no shops there?

A. No, sir.

1142 Q. And those shops made repairs for the Southern Paci Railroad line all the way to El Paso, just as it did for the C tral Pacific line to Ogden?

A. Those were our general repair shops for both cars and locom tives.

Q. Now, as to the equipment purchased for use on those lines, w they allotted to the ownership of different companies?

A. As far as the marking of the cars was concerned, some were marked "Southern Pacific" and some of them marked "Central Pacific."

Q. Did you ever see any G. H. & S. A.?

A. Freight cars, yes; and, occasionally, passenger cars. So far as freight cars were concerned, there were innumerable markings.

Q. Did you ever mark any cars "S. P. of A.?"

A. S. P. of A. and S. P. of N. M.

Q. Were those cars and locomotives marked in this way used on the particular line for which they were marked, or were they used indiscriminately?

A. Indiscriminately; locomotives marked "S. P. of New Mexico" would haul trains between Sacramento and Oakland, and 1143 engines marked "Central Pacific" would be hauling trains out of Los Angeles, in both passenger and freight service.

Q. So the equipment was used wherever it was suitable?

A. Indiscriminately.

Q. Without reference to its marking?

A. Without any reference to it whatever.

Q. And all these lines were operated as one system?

Mr. McClennen. That is objected to as so leading as almost to raise the blush of shame.

Mr. Herrin. You furnish the shame.

The Witness. Yes.

Mr. Herrin. You can take the witness.

Cross-examination by Mr. McClennen:

Q. Mr. Herrin has not done you the justice that he has the other witnesses; he has not asked you what your age is.

A. That is the first question he asked me, sir. Where is the blush now?

Q. My notes are not as good as your memory. In routing trains, making up schedules, did you deal as freely with the northern division as you did with the other part of the system?

1144 A. No, sir.

Q. Did you route any trains over the northern division?

A. No, sir.

Q. Or make any schedules for the northern division?

A. No, sir.

Q. The Southern Pacific Company took possession in 1885. Can you tell me whether the date was April 1st?

A. It was during April. Whether it was the 1st day of April or not, I do not know.

Q. Mr. Huntington and Mr. Stanford and Mr. Hopkins and Mr. Crocker during their lifetimes, so long as you were connected with any of these companies, occupied some official position in them?

A. Yes.

Q. Mr. Hopkins generally was connected with the treasurer's office, wasn't he?

A. Entirely so, sir.

Q. Mr. Crocker's duty was more that of construction and operation?

A. Yes.

Q. Mr. Huntington was situated in New York?

A. Principally.

1145 Q. And did not come as directly in contact with daily operations as Mr. Crocker, for instance?

A. No, sir.

Q. Mr. Stanford was president of the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. He was.

Q. In the operations of your department you recognized their respective official positions and their authority therein?

A. Yes.

Q. You had no personal knowledge of the names of the stockholders in the Southern Pacific Railroad Company or the amount of their holdings?

A. No, sir.

Q. And the same was true of the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. Yes.

1146 JOHN E. FOULDS was called as a witness on behalf of the defendants, and having been duly sworn testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. HERRIN:

Q. You may state your age.

A. Sixty-five.

Q. Your residence?

A. 2331 Bancroft Way, Berkeley.

Q. Were you ever in any way connected with the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. Yes.

Q. You may state, in your own way, when you went into the service of that company, what you did, and how long it continued.

A. In August, 1871, under a written agreement with the then head of the law department of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, I came to California and accepted employment with that company as a reporter and stenographer, and for the performance of such clerical services as might be required of me when my services as reporter were unnecessary. I remained in that position 1147 until January, 1876. I had studied law and was admitted to the bar. I then and thereafter acted as attorney for the Central Pacific Railroad Company and its allied and subordinate corporations.

At the time of the assumption of the Central Pacific properties by the Southern Pacific Company I continued my relations as attorney with that company and its allied corporations. For a short time I was in general practice, and during the whole of that period conducted business for all of the companies I have mentioned, and returned to the service of the Southern Pacific Company, in its law department, about the beginning of the year 1893 and continued therein until September, 1911, when I retired on pension.

Q. Did you know Leland Stanford, C. P. Huntington, Charles Crocker, and Mark Hopkins?

A. Very well.

Q. In your work that you have mentioned, did you meet those gentlemen?

A. I met them frequently.

Q. What did you do for them or with them?

A. Well, I furnished them with advice and performed various legal services as were from time to time required.

1148 Q. Did you draft any articles of incorporation of companies that were to be formed?

A. Quite a number.

Q. Do you remember the formation of the Pacific Improvement Company?

A. Yes; I drew those articles.

Q. Do you remember consolidations that were made by the Southern Pacific Railroad Company subsequent to your employment? Did you have to do with them?

A. Yes.

Q. Consolidations of the Central Pacific Railroad Company subsequent to that time; did you have to do with them?

A. I knew of them, but whether I personally handled that matter I do not remember just now.

Q. Did you have to do with the articles of incorporation of the Southern Pacific Railroad of Arizona?

A. I think not, directly.

Q. Or with the Southern Pacific Railroad Company of New Mexico?

A. I organized the Southern Pacific Railroad of New Mexico, and went to Santa Fe for that purpose.

Q. Under whose instructions did you do that work?

1149 A. I believe it was under the instructions of Mr. Charles Crocker.

Q. Did you meet the gentlemen you have mentioned at any time for purposes of conference or in your work as attorney for the Central Pacific Railroad Company, and afterwards the Southern Pacific Company?

A. Quite a number of times; sometimes there were two or three of them present, at other times I conferred, perhaps, with but one of them.

Q. Do you know whether or not they gave instructions or directions concerning the corporate action of any of those companies?

A. I very frequently got instructions from them as to business that they desired to execute, and in proper cases, where it required some action by the board of directors of those companies, I would draw the necessary resolutions and advise their adoption.

Q. But ordinarily was the practice to put those matters before the board of directors, or were they disposed of by these gentlemen or some of them?

Mr. McCLENNEN. That is objected to as leading and calling for a conclusion of the witness; as too general, and calling for a matter not in itself material.

1150 The WITNESS. Well, practically they were disposed of by these gentlemen personally, or some of them.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Who exercised, if you know—what individual or individuals—the final authority in deciding all matters that arose concerning the Central Pacific Railroad Company, the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, or the Southern Pacific Company, so far as you know?

Mr. McCLENNEN. The same several objections, and the further objection of calling for a statement of an opinion and a conclusion by the witness.

The WITNESS. The authority was very largely exercised by Mr. Stanford and Mr. Crocker; sometimes jointly and sometimes separately. Mr. Huntington, of course, was almost entirely in New York.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Mr. Hopkins died first, did he?

A. Mr. Hopkins died first.

Q. Some time in the seventies?

A. 1878, I think.

Q. As I understand your testimony, if corporate action was 1151 necessary, you drew the resolutions for the directors of the corporation to pass; if it was not necessary, these gentlemen ou have mentioned disposed of what there was to be done?

Mr. McCLENNEN. That is objected to as leading, calling for an pinion by the witness, and as purporting to be a comprehensive tatement of the witness's prior testimony, and more comprehensive han the testimony so given.

The WITNESS. Yes.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Do you remember when Mr. Charles Crocker died?

A. 1888, I think.

Q. Do you remember when the Southern Pacific Company took ossession; about the time?

A. Yes.

Q. It succeeded what company?

A. It succeeded the Central Pacific Railroad Company.

Q. Before that time what company operated all of these lines, all f the companies mentioned except the northern division?

A. The Central Pacific Railroad Company.

Q. And what you have said concerning the control or author-
152 ity exercised by the four gentlemen you have mentioned, or their successors, refers to the Southern Pacific Company as well s the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

Mr. McCLENNEN. Objected to as leading, calling for an opinion and onclusion of the witness, too general in form, and as to matter in- ompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.

The WITNESS. Yes.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. And does it also refer to the construction companies, the Con- act & Finance Company, the Western Development Company, and e Pacific Improvement Company?

A. All of those companies.

Q. And the Southern Pacific Railroad Company?

Mr. McCLENNEN. The same objection as stated to the three pre- ding questions.

The WITNESS. Yes.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Under whose instructions were you acting when you organized e Pacific Improvement Company?

A. I think under the instructions of Governor Stanford.

Q. Did you attend to business arising on all these lines and any of them, the Southern Pacific Railroad, the Central Pacific, or 153 any of these corporations in California, or the Pacific Improve- ment Company?

A. Oh, yes; we treated them as all belonging to our regular law department business.

Q. The law department covered all of the lines?

A. All of those lines.

Q. And you were just as much attorney for the Southern Pacific in Arizona as you were for the Central Pacific Railroad in Nevada?

A. Practically.

Mr. HERRIN. Take the witness.

Cross-examination by Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. In your position from 1876 on, did you have knowledge of who were the stockholders in these various companies from time to time?

A. No personal knowledge of the amount of stock held by any particular person, but I will complete that answer by saying that we assumed that the four gentlemen named——

Q. (Interposing.) I did not ask for an assumption; I am asking for knowledge.

A. Well, cut that out.

1154 Mr. HERRIN. Complete your answer, and Mr. McClennen may make his objection.

Mr. McCLENNEN. Before the answer is completed I would like to call to the witness's attention the fact that he is a lawyer, and to observe the extent of the question, and to consider how far, as a matter of his own dignity, he wants to go beyond the question. With that suggestion I would like to have the question read to the witness.

(The question and the unfinished answer were read as above recorded.)

The WITNESS (continuing). Were in practical control of these various companies.

Mr. McCLENNEN. I move that the answer of the witness beginning "We assumed", and all thereafter, be stricken out as not responsive to the question.

By Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. Did you know anything about the reports that were filed by the Central Pacific Railroad Company showing the number of stockholders that there were in the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever know about any of those reports?

1155 A. I may have seen some such report at some time, but have no recollection of it at the present time.

Q. You knew the requirement of the California laws with reference to filing with the railroad commissioners of California, after 1879 or 1878, of a report of the number of stockholders in railroad corporations in California, did you?

A. Well, at this time I have no recollection of that requirement.

Q. You have no recollection of that?

A. Not at this time.

Q. Do you know whether or not in 1880 the Central Pacific Railroad Company had 411 stockholders, or thereabouts?

A. I do not.

Q. Did you know that at somewhere about that time, or then beginning, substantial quantities of the stock of the Central Pacific Railroad Company were sold to the general public, either in the United States or Great Britain or on the Continent?

A. I had no personal knowledge of that fact.

Q. Did you know, from your relations with the companies, that stock was being sold and in large quantities?

A. No; my relations with the companies did not call for any such knowledge on my part.

1156 Q. Did you know that in 1881 the Central Pacific Railroad Company had something like 1,340 stockholders?

A. I did not.

Q. There was nothing, in your knowledge at that time, inconsistent with there being that number of stockholders, was there?

A. I have no recollection that I had any occasion to determine what the exact number of stockholders was at that time, or any other time.

Q. And in the same way, then, you do not know whether or not, in 1882, the Central Pacific Railroad Company had something like 1,880 stockholders?

A. No; any information I would get upon that point would be mere hearsay. I knew nothing, of my own personal knowledge.

Q. And in the same way, you do not know whether or not, in 1883, the Central Pacific Railroad Company had something like 2,198 stockholders?

A. No.

Q. In the same way, you do not know whether or not, in 1884, the Central Pacific Railroad Company had something like 2,600 stockholders?

1157 A. I have no personal knowledge on the subject.

Q. Did you know of the fact of the proceedings of the Railway Commission of Congress in 1887?

A. Nothing, of my own knowledge.

Q. Did you ever read the testimony before that commission?

A. I do not think I was present when any of the testimony was taken.

Q. Did you ever, at any subsequent period, read it?

A. I think I have perhaps read some portions of it, but I do not remember whether I have or not.

Q. Do you remember whether you read the testimony of Governor Stanford before that commission in 1887?

A. I may possibly have done so, but I have no recollection of it.

Q. Such portions of the testimony before that commission as you did read were first read by you about when?

A. I do not know that I ever read that testimony. I say it is possible that I may have done so; but if I did, it has passed my memory.

Q. Do you remember ever reading any testimony of Mr.

1158 Huntington, to the effect that in 1885 he did not own more than 6,000 shares of the stock of the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. I have no recollection of reading any such testimony.

Q. Do you remember whether you ever read any testimony of Governor Stanford to the effect that about 1880 they began to get the stock of the Central Pacific Railroad Company on the market, and that large blocks of it were then sold?

A. No; I can not remember that I ever read such testimony.

Q. Do you remember the form of the stock certificate which the Central Pacific Company had?

A. I think I have seen some of those old stock certificates, but I can not remember the purport of them at this day.

Q. Do you remember the special feature of them, that they had attached to them dividend warrants, by number, which could be cut off for a dividend in the same way that a coupon on a bond is commonly cut off?

A. No; I haven't any recollection of it.

Q. Did you ever have anything to do with advising on the form of stock certificate that was used by the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

1159 A. I do not think I had. I have no recollection of it.

Q. Did you know anything about the form of stock certificate that the Southern Pacific Company, organized in Kentucky, had in those early days?

A. No; I think not.

Q. Do you remember ever seeing any certificate of either the Central Pacific Railroad Company or the Southern Pacific Company having dividend warrants attached to it?

A. Well, I can not recall seeing any of those stock certificates, now.

Q. Did you ever see any of the transfer books or the stock-record books of either of those companies, the Central Pacific Railroad Company or the Southern Pacific Company?

A. I think not.

Q. Did you ever receive from any person connected with the company any statement, written or oral, as to the number of shares of either of those companies that any one of them held?

A. No; I can not recall having received any such statement.

Q. Did you occupy the position of director in the Southern Pacific Company?

160 A. I think not.

Q. Or of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company?

A. I think I have been a director of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company of New Mexico, but I do not recall being on any of the other Southern Pacific directories.

Q. Were you ever a director in the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. I think I was a director after the Central Pacific Railroad Company had disposed of its property, in 1899.

Q. But never before that?

A. I do not recall it.

Q. And when you refer to being a director, possibly after 1899, you have reference to the old company, the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. The old company.

Q. Were you counsel or attorney in any of the cases which were brought by stockholders in the Central Pacific Railroad Company against either Mr. Stanford, Mr. Huntington, Mr. Hopkins, or Mr. Crocker, or any or all of them?

A. No; I think not.

Q. You did not appear for the company, or any of the defendants, in any of those cases?

161 A. Well, I do not recall having done so, at the present time.

Q. You have spoken of authority being exercised by Mr. Huntington, Mr. Hopkins, and more particularly Mr. Crocker and Mr. Stanford. Do you recall any instance where they exercised authority in excess of that inherent in the positions which they respectively held as officers and directors of the corporation?

A. The authority referred to by me was the exercise of the power to cause certain operations to be performed in connection with the properties or business of various corporations, and such exercise was usually made personally by one or both or several of the gentlemen named.

Mr. McCLENNEN. Now I will ask that the question be read. See if you do not find that you can answer it by yes or no.

(The question was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

The WITNESS. I can not now say if much of the authority exercised by them was within or without their powers as officers or agents of those corporations.

By Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. Whenever anything was to be done that required corpo-1162 rate action, or for which corporate action was desirable, you had action taken by the stockholders or directors of the corporation, did you not?

A. Personally I had nothing to do with the functions of the stockholders or directors of the corporation; but as I stated, I think, in the former part of my examination, whenever I believed that corporate action was necessary, I usually or commonly prepared proper resolutions for adoption, either by the board of directors or stockholders, as the case might be, and presented those to the gentlemen named, who took such necessary steps to have them adopted as they deemed proper.

Q. You did not observe, did you, in your connections with these several corporations, any disposition on the part of anyone to disregard the appropriate corporate obligations and duties of the different corporations to each other?

A. I can not say that I did.

Q. You did not observe, in the control exercised by the Central Pacific Railroad Company prior to April 1, 1885, over the properties of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, anything in excess of that which was appropriate to be exercised by a lessee corporation over the property which it was operating as a lessee?

1163 A. I can not say that I did.

Q. After April 1, 1885, you did not observe that the Southern Pacific Company, or its officers, desired to or did, in fact, exercise or attempt to exercise any powers over the property of the Central Pacific Railroad beyond those powers which they would have had if the lease from the Central Pacific Railroad Company to the Southern Pacific Company was a valid lease?

A. I did not.

Q. In those instances to which you have referred, in which, in your judgment, it was desirable that corporate action should be taken, do you recall whether corporate action was taken?

A. No; the lapse of time has been so great that I can not recall that specifically.

Q. That is, you can not recall one way or the other, whether your advice was followed or not on those occasions?

A. I can not say that it was followed absolutely on every occasion; I think, generally speaking, it was followed.

Redirect examination by Mr. HERRIN:

Q. There were a good many companies here involved in 1164 this Central Pacific-Southern Pacific combination, were there not?

A. Yes.

Q. And Mr. Stanford, Mr. Crocker, Mr. Huntington, and Mr. Hopkins were not directors or officers of all of those corporations, were they?

A. Not all of them.

Q. You would find a lot of subsidiary companies without those men being in them at all?

A. Yes.

Q. As officials?

A. Yes.

Q. According to the views presented by Mr. McClennen, it would seem that if you got an order from Mr. Huntington, you would immediately look it up to see if he was an official of the corporation involved, and if you found that he was not, you would not observe his order. What was the fact about it? Didn't they give orders and directions concerning each and all of those properties, without reference to the fact as to whether or not they were officials of that corporation?

Mr. McCLENNEN. That question is objected to as containing a statement not accurate, of the questions put or the testimony elicited in the cross-examination, as too comprehensive and too general in form; as extremely leading, as calling upon the witness for a statement of opinion and a conclusion, and for an answer so general as not to be of assistance in determining the facts upon which the witness based his answer.

Mr. HERRIN. I will withdraw that, but let it all stand, because it is very interesting.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. I will ask you whether the actions of those men had any reference to whether they were an officer or director of any particular corporation.

Mr. McCLENNEN. That is objected to as leading, particularly in the emphasis put upon the word "reference" and the accompanying gesture, and also calling for a conclusion and opinion of the witness, too general, and as calling for a matter immaterial, incompetent, and irrelevant.

The WITNESS. I can not say that they had, but it was always assumed that they had the necessary authority to order the operations effected by them.

Mr. McCLENNEN. The answer beginning with the words "but it was always assumed", is objected to as a statement of opinion by the witness, and as not responsive to the question, and the petitioner moves to strike out that part of the answer.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. For instance, I remember that neither one of those gentlemen was an officer at all of the Pacific Improvement Company, and yet within your knowledge did not those gentlemen control and direct that corporation just as much as any other of those corporations mentioned?

Mr. MCCLENNEN. That is objected to, because upon a casual regard of it it appears to be leading and argumentative, a compound question, a statement of fact by the redirect examiner when not under oath, as calling for an opinion of the witness and a conclusion, and too general in form, and incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, and for other reasons.

The WITNESS. Yes.

1167 By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Do you or do you not recall that neither one of these gentlemen were directors of the Pacific Improvement Company?

A. I can not recall that positively, but assuming that they were not I know that they did exercise very powerful acts of dominion over that company.

Mr. MCCLENNEN. The part of the answer beginning "but assuming that they were not" is objected to as containing an assumption by the witness and as irresponsive to the question and petitioner moves to strike it out.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. You remember that Mr. Strobridge was president of the Pacific Improvement Company, do you not?

A. He was first.

Q. And Mr. Douty and Mr. Brown and some others were directors I want to know if you recall that neither one of these four men were directors in the Pacific Improvement Company. Do you recall that?

A. Not at the first organization of the company. Whether they came in afterwards as directors, I do not remember.

1168 Q. Yet there is no question but that they exercised jurisdiction over the Pacific Improvement Company from the start as much as did any of these other companies?

A. There is no question about that. There is no doubt about that.

Mr. MCCLENNEN. This question is objected to as leading, particularly because of the emphasis put upon the "Yet" and the accompanying gesture of the redirect examiner, and as calling for an opinion and conclusion of the witness, and as matter which is immaterial, incompetent and irrelevant.

Mr. HERRIN. Is that all?

Mr. McCLENNEN. That is all I think of at the moment. I strongly suspect that there are several other objections to which the question is subject that I have overlooked in the hurry of the moment.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. As a matter of fact, these men were not directors or officers of all of these companies, these railroad companies, were they? Take the Northern Railway and the California Pacific and the South Pacific Coast, and all of these subordinate companies that you know existed; they were not directors or officers of all those corporations, were they?

1169 A. There were some of which they were not directors.

Q. There were a good many of them of which they were not?

A. I think there were quite a number.

Q. And yet was there any distinction in the supervising control or authority of these men exercised as to the corporations they were directors or officers in as compared with those in which they were not?

A. They controlled them all in the same way.

Mr. McCLENNEN. This is objected to as leading and calling for a conclusion; particularly leading because of the emphasis placed upon the words "any distinction", and calling for an opinion by the witness.

Mr. HERRIN. You left out my gesture this time.

Mr. McCLENNEN. Because the objection was effective in excluding any gesture from this particular question. Thus far I have succeeded. What was the answer?

(The answer was read as follows:)

"A. They controlled them all in the same way."

Mr. McCLENNEN. The answer is objected to as not responsive, and as containing a statement of opinion, and a conclusion by the 1170 witness; and the petitioner moves to strike it out.

By Mr. BLAIR:

Q. During the lifetime of Mr. Huntington, Mr. Crocker, and Mr. Stanford, did you notice any lessening of the control or influence they had over the Central Pacific or the Southern Pacific?

Mr. McCLENNEN. That is objected to as incompetent and immaterial, calling for an opinion and statement of a conclusion by the witness and as leading because of the assumption of a prior control.

(By request of the witness the question was read as above recorded.)

The WITNESS. No; I can not say that I did.

By Mr. BLAIR:

Q. Such control or influence as they had when you first became associated with the properties they continued to exercise during their lifetime?

A. So it appeared to me.

Mr. McCLENNEN. The same objections are repeated as to this la question.

Mr. HERRIN. That is all.

1171 Recross-examination by Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. Did you chance to know anything about the meeting o the Central Pacific Railroad Company in 1898, during the lifetime o Mr. Huntington, when the majority of the stock at the meeting sto in the name of and was voted by the Central Pacific Railroad Sha Holding Company, a British corporation?

A. I was not present at that meeting.

Q. Do you recall the fact?

A. I do not recall the fact. It may have been the fact, but I d not recall it.

Q. Was your relationship to the company so intimate that yo knew anything about the visit to this country of Sir Rivers Wils in the early nineties, representing the British shareholders in th Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. I knew nothing about his visit, except what I saw in the new papers.

Q. Was your connection with the company sufficiently intima so that you were aware of the fact that after you had seen of h visit in the newspapers you saw that the directorate of th 1172 Central Pacific Railroad Company was materially chang in its personnel?

A. Well, I do not recall it. I may have known it at the time.

Q. You do not recall it?

A. No; I do not recall it.

Q. Do you remember that there were some periods after the vi of Sir Rivers Wilson when the directorate of the Central Paci Railroad Company was wholly diverse from that of the Southe Pacific Company?

A. I have no recollection on the subject.

Q. Were these directors in these various subsidiary companies which Mr. Huntington, Mr. Stanford, Mr. Hopkins, or Mr. Crock were not directors, what are commonly known as dummy director

A. That I could not say.

Q. Did you know anything about the incorporation of the We ern Development Company?

A. I knew of it at the time of its incorporation.

Q. Do you remember about when that was?

A. Not positively; but I think it must have been somewhere abo 1875 or 1876.

1173 Q. Do you know of the date of the incorporation of the Pacific Improvement Company, to the incorporation of which you attended?

A. I think that must have been about 1878. My memory is not good as to dates.

Q. Were the activities of the Contract & Finance Company over at the time you became connected with the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. I think not. I think they continued for some time after I became connected with the Central Pacific.

Q. Were they still constructing?

A. What is that?

Q. Were they still doing construction work—that is, the Contract & Finance Company?

A. Well, just this time I can not remember; but the corporation, I think, was still in existence and exercising some degree of activity.

Mr. McCLENNEN. That is all.

Mr. HERRIN. That is all.

(Whereupon a recess was taken until 2.30 o'clock p. m.)

1174 AFTER RECESS.

PATRICK SHEEDY was called as a witness on behalf of the defendants and, having been duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Mr. Sheedy, I will ask you to please state your age.

A. I will be sixty-seven very soon; the 8th of this month.

Q. What is your residence?

A. Los Angeles.

Q. And your occupation?

A. I am superintendent of motive power, at the present time, of the Southern Pacific Company.

Q. At what point?

A. Los Angeles.

Q. Your headquarters are at Los Angeles?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you ever employed by the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. I was.

1175 Q. Where first?

A. I first entered the service August 1, 1868.

Q. In what capacity?

A. As machinist.

Q. At what point?

A. Rockland, California.

Q. How long did you continue there?

A. About a year and nine months.

Q. Where did you go then?

A. I came to Sacramento.

Q. What did you do there?

A. I served as machinist there for a short period.

Q. At what place?

A. At the Sacramento shops; in the Central Pacific shops at Sacramento.

Q. How long did you remain there?

A. I remained there until October, 1885.

Q. And what were you doing from the time you went there until 1885?

A. The first few months I served as a machinist. Afterwards I filled various positions as foreman there, gang foreman, foreman of machine shops, and so forth.

1176 Q. What did you do after 1885, or after October, 1885?

A. I was sent out on the line as master mechanic.

Q. Of what division?

A. The Salt Lake division.

Q. That is, of the Central Pacific Railroad?

A. Of the Central Pacific Railroad.

Q. Where were your headquarters?

A. My headquarters were at Carlin, Nevada.

Q. Later what did you do?

A. There was a change in the organization of divisions, and they introduced the Humboldt division, or reestablished it, rather, and my headquarters remained the same for a period, and then I went on to the Salt Lake division later on and remained there until 1893.

Q. Just continue to state your employment. State what you did after that.

A. In 1893 I was transferred to San Francisco as master mechanic of what was termed the Coast Division, with headquarters at this point.

Mr. Orr. When was that?

The Witness. 1893. In June, 1894, I was transferred to Los Angeles as master mechanic of the Los Angeles division 1177 and San Joaquin, and I continued as master mechanic of these divisions until July 1, 1902, when I was appointed to the position I now occupy as district superintendent of motive power.

By Mr. Herrin:

Q. Have you since held that position?

A. I have.

Q. Do you remember when the Southern Pacific Company, the company at present operating these lines, took possession and succeeded the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. I do.

Q. What year was that?

A. In 1885.

Q. Since that date you have been working for what company?

A. Since that date I have been working for the Southern Pacific Company.

Q. And before that date what was your employer?

A. I was employed by the Central Pacific Railroad Company.

Q. Did you have to do with the setting up of engines and 1178 the repair of engines, locomotives, in the shops at Sacramento while you were there?

A. I did.

Q. Do you remember whether, at any time, you set up engines labeled "G., H. & S. A." in the shops at Sacramento?

A. I do.

Q. Where were those engines used after they were put into commission?

A. Well, they were used indiscriminately. They were sent on lines to which they were marked, and, if occasion required it, they were used in any line that was controlled by the company.

Q. Were any of those engines used in California?

A. Yes; a number of them.

Q. Do you remember the time when the line from Goshen was being constructed southerly to El Paso and beyond?

A. I do; yes, sir.

Q. Did you have anything to do with the construction of that line, in those shops?

A. Nothing more than to attend to such work as came to the Sacramento shops and fell to my lot to care for as foreman of shops.

Q. The question is whether you performed the same func-1179 tions, or similar functions, with respect to that line as you performed for the Central Pacific main line.

Mr. McCLENNEN. That is objected to as leading and as calling for a conclusion by the witness and for an opinion.

The WITNESS. Identically the same.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Did you or did you not repair engines that were used on that line in Arizona, New Mexico, and even in Texas?

A. I do not recall any coming from Texas; but I repaired engines from west of El Paso. We sent engines into Texas.

Q. There was a period of time when there was no connection through to New Orleans?

A. Yes.

Q. And the construction from El Paso was southerly from that point?

A. Yes.

Q. And do you know about where they made a junction with the line that was being built from the east?

A. I do not.

Q. You do not know where that was?

A. I do not.

Q. Do you remember whether it was east of El Paso?

1180 A. I understood it was east of El Paso. I have never been in that country and had nothing to do with that construction work.

Q. Did you or did you not furnish any material that was used in the construction of the Sunset line, we will call it, from Goshen to El Paso?

A. I had nothing to do with the furnishing of material. I did not furnish any.

Q. Do you remember whether any engine men were detailed from the shops to go to that line?

A. I remember engine men were detailed to go with the engines and take them down there.

Q. Do you remember the engines labeled "229 C. P." and "23 C. P."?

A. I do.

Q. Where were those engines built?

A. They were built in Sacramento.

Q. At the shops in Sacramento?

A. At the Central Pacific shops in Sacramento.

Q. And where were those engines used?

A. They were used on the Tehachapi Mountain.

Q. On the Southern Pacific line?

1181 A. Yes; on the Southern Pacific line.

Q. To what company did those engines belong?

A. They were marked "Central Pacific".

Q. Did you notice any engines marked "S. P. R. R. of Cal." at any time?

A. I did; yes, sir.

Q. Do you know to what company those engines belonged?

A. I presumed they belonged to the same company that owned all the engines, and were simply marked that way to designate them from others that were assigned to other districts.

Mr. McCLENNEN. The answer is objected to as not responsive and as containing an assumption or opinion of the witness, and petitioner moves to strike it out.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Your knowledge consisted merely of the marking of the engines? Did you have occasion to go further and to know exactly where the ownership of those engines resided, whether in one company or another?

A. No, sir; I never did.

Q. Do you remember any engines marked "S. P. of A."?

A. I do.

1182 Q. What did that label mean?

A. Southern Pacific of Arizona.

Q. Do you remember any engines marked "S. P. of N. M."?

A. I do.

Q. What did that label import?

A. Southern Pacific of New Mexico.

Q. Were those two last-mentioned engines used on the California lines in California?

A. They were, when required.

Q. Do you know about the distribution of this rolling stock, as to how it was distributed; whether or not there was any regard paid to the ownership of the lines?

Mr. McCLENNEN. That is objected to as calling for an opinion and a conclusion of the witness.

The WITNESS. I never knew that there was any distinction made in distributing the engines.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Were any engines marked "S. P. of Cal." and "S. P. of A." and "S. P. of N. M." used on the Central Pacific line?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You have seen them in use there?

A. I have. That is my recollection.

1183 Q. Did you make any distinction in your repairing of engines marked "S. P." of these different designations and "C. P."?

A. No, sir.

Q. So far as your shops were concerned?

A. So far as the shop practice was concerned, there was none.

Q. The Sacramento shops were what we call the general shops?

A. Yes; the Sacramento shops were the general shops.

Q. What work would ordinarily be done in those shops as compared with other shops which were division shops?

A. All of the heavy important work would go to the Sacramento shops.

Q. And will you state whether or not there were what we call division shops at different points on the line?

A. We had division shops on each division.

Q. What repairs were done there?

A. What was termed lighter or running repairs.

Q. The Sacramento shops were owned by what company?

A. The Sacramento shops were owned by the Central Pacific Company.

1184 Q. The Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. The Central Pacific Railroad Company.

Q. And for how long a time did those shops do the work for this Sunset line as far as El Paso?

A. Until the Los Angeles general shops were established in 1904.

Q. Were the Los Angeles shops general shops?

A. General shops; yes, sir.

Q. Similar to the Sacramento shops?

A. In a measure, similar to the Sacramento shops.

Q. What company owns those shops at Los Angeles?

Mr. McCLENNEN. That is objected to as calling for a matter of record concerning which this witness could not have first hand knowledge.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Do you know what company owns those shops?

A. The Southern Pacific Company.

Q. The Southern Pacific Company, or the Southern Pacific Railroad Company?

A. Well, the Southern Pacific Company, as the term is now understood, as the title now stands. That is my understanding.

1185 Q. When those Los Angeles shops were put in operation in 1904, for what sections of these roads did those shops do repairs?

A. They aimed at doing general repairs for what was known as the southern district.

Q. Did that district at any time include part of the lines of road owned by the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. Yes.

Q. That is, north of Goshen?

A. At all times since the creation of the district it has cared for Central Pacific lines, a portion of them, and does at the present time.

Q. If repairs are needed for engines in use on the line at any point south of Fresno, for example, where would those repairs be made now?

A. It would depend altogether on the distribution of work and the amount of work we had to do. We send engines at the present time, disregarding entirely the district—we send them to Sacramento or make repairs at Los Angeles, as is most convenient.

Q. That is to say, if the Sacramento shops were fully occu-1186 pied and you had more room for work, you would do the work at Los Angeles?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And vice versa?

A. And vice versa.

Q. Do you remember when the Southern Pacific Company, the company that is now operating these lines, took possession of them?

A. I do.

Q. What year was that?

A. 1885, as I remember it.

Q. Prior to that time what company operated these lines?

A. The Central Pacific Railroad Company.

Q. Was there any change in the official organization, as far as you know, of the Central Pacific Railroad Company when the Southern Pacific Company took charge in 1885?

A. The only change I recall was the introduction of another system; that is, dividing up the total mileage into two systems, the Atlantic and the Pacific.

Q. What did the Atlantic system comprise?

A. The Atlantic system would be the Southern Pacific lines east of El Paso.

Q. What did the Pacific system comprise?

1187 A. The Pacific system would comprise all other lines west of El Paso, to Portland, Oregon, and east to Ogden.

Q. West of Ogden, you mean?

A. Yes. I say, east to Ogden.

Q. Yes.

Mr. HERRIN. You may take the witness.

Mr. MCCLENNEN. No questions.

GEORGE T. KLINK was called as a witness on behalf of the defendants, and having been duly sworn testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Will you please state your age?

A. Fifty-two.

Q. What is your residence?

A. San Francisco.

Q. And your occupation?

A. Public accountant.

Q. Were you ever in the employ of the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. I was.

1188 Q. When did you enter that employ?

A. In 1883.

Q. In what capacity?

A. As a clerk in the accounting department.

Q. What was the title of the officer in charge of that department?

A. The general auditor. I entered as a clerk in the general auditor's office.

Q. How long did you continue in that capacity?

A. For four years, until about 1887, when I was transferred to the office of the secretary and comptroller. There I remained for a period from 1887 to about 1895. In 1895 I was appointed auditor of disbursements of the Pacific system of the company.

Q. Of what company?

A. Of the Southern Pacific Company; and in 1900 I was appointed general auditor of the Southern Pacific Company, and continued in that capacity, the latter capacity, until 1904, when I resigned from the service.

Q. During the time you were chief clerk to the comptroller, I think you have mentioned, did you have any authority, at any 1189 time, to represent him during his absence or incapacity?

A. During the period from about 1892 to 1895 I was the chief clerk in the comptroller's office, and was authorized to represent him during his absence or incapacity.

Q. And did you do it?

A. I did.

Q. Do you remember when the Southern Pacific Company, the present company operating these lines, took possession of them?

A. Yes, sir; it was in 1885.

Q. And in what employ have you been since that date?

A. From 1885 until 1904 I was in the employ of the Southern Pacific Company.

Q. And prior to that date?

A. From 1883 to 1885 I was in the employ of the Central Pacific Railroad Company.

Q. What papers and records did the secretary of the company keep, so far as you observed, when you were there?

A. The secretary of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, as well as the secretary of the Southern Pacific Company, was the chief accounting officer of the company, as well as the secretary, 1190 for the purpose of keeping the records of directors' meetings; and he was also custodian of the company's contracts. The minutes of the proceedings of the board of directors were maintained n that office, and also a record of the corporate affairs of the com-anies. He had jurisdiction generally over the accounting of the ntire system.

Q. Who was the chief of that office?

A. Mr. E. H. Miller, Jr., from 1883 to 1885. I should say from 883 until the time of his death he was the secretary of the Central acific Railroad Company. Mr. Miller was also the secretary of he Southern Pacific Company from 1885 to 1887. In 1887 G. L. ansing was appointed the secretary and comptroller of the Southern acific Company and acted in that capacity until the time of his eath.

Q. Is Mr. Miller still alive?

A. No; Mr. Miller died about 1892. Mr. Lansing died about 1895.

Q. Was the comptroller chief of the auditing department?

A. Yes.

Q. The auditor was under him?

A. Yes; he was the chief of the auditing and accounting depart-ment of the system.

191 Q. Over what lines of railroad did the secretary and comp-troller exercise jurisdiction while you were in the office?

A. Over all of the lines which comprised the Pacific system of the outhern Pacific Company in 1885, which constituted the lines west f El Paso and of Ogden and as far north as Portland. The lines Oregon did not become a part of the system, as I recall it, until me time in 1887. Generally speaking, the secretary or the comp-oller exercised jurisdiction over the accounting methods of all the nes constituting the system.

Q. The Oregon lines were separate until the connection was made the Siskiyou Mountains with the lines in California?

A. Yes; there was a physical separation there until, I believe, out the end of 1887, when connection was made.

Q. After that connection?

A. After that connection the lines in Oregon became a part of the acific system.

Q. Of the Southern Pacific Company?

A. Of the Southern Pacific Company.

Q. Now, prior to 1885, when the Southern Pacific took 92 possession, will you state what lines the Central Pacific Rail-road Company was operating?

A. You wish them in a general way?

Q. Yes.

A. The Southern Pacific Railroad Company of California, the rthern Railway, the California Pacific, the Central Pacific Rail-ad line itself, the Southern Pacific Railroad of Arizona, the Southern Pacific Railroad of New Mexico, the Stockton & Copperopolis Railroad, and various other small lines in the southern part of the State, the Amador Branch Railroad, and the Berkeley Branch Railroad.

Q. Do you remember whether they operated lines east of El Paso also?

A. As I recall it, they did for a short time. My recollection is not clear upon that. I entered the service in 1883, and I believe it was in that year that the physical connection was made in Texas.

Q. It was in that year that the through line to New Orleans was completed?

A. It was in that year; yes.

Q. Now, what you call the northern division, what did that include prior to 1900, for example?

1193 A. That consisted of a line running south from San Francisco, and prior to 1885 was not operated by the Central Pacific Railroad, but it was operated under a separate management. It constituted a line from San Francisco south as far as Tres Pinos, with several branches like the one from Pajaro to Santa Cruz, a branch to Monterey, and a small branch out of San Jose. It was operated by a separate operating organization up to 1885, and when the Southern Pacific Company was formed it became a part of the Pacific System.

Q. And the Central Pacific Railroad never had anything to do with the operation of that line officially?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. That is, the northern division, I mean.

A. Yes.

Q. Can you give, in a general way, a description of the lines owned by these different companies, and I will ask you to give the names of them so that you can indicate them. Do you need a map to do that?

A. I would have to have something to refresh my memory.

Q. Take the Central Pacific Railroad; do you know exactly what lines were owned by that company in 1885?

A. Yes.

1194 Q. Have you at hand data from which you can give us the ownership of those different companies in 1885?

A. Yes. And the physical description by terminals?

Q. Yes; from one point to another.

A. Central Pacific Railroad, consisting of the following: San Francisco to Ogden; Niles to San Jose; Roseville to Delta; Lathrop to Goshen; Oakland to Alameda, local lines.

Southern Pacific Railroad of California, consisting of a line from Huron to Yuma: Los Angeles to San Pedro.

Q. Is that Southern Pacific Railroad?

A. Yes; that is, exclusive of the northern division.

Q. You had better give that, too, and say northern division.

A. Northern division, San Francisco to Tres Pinos; Carnadero to Soledad.

The Monterey Railroad, Castroville Junction to Monterey.

1195 Pajaro & Santa Cruz Railroad, Pajaro to Santa Cruz; Aptos to Monte Vista.

Southern Pacific Railroad of Arizona: Yuma to the New Mexico line.

Southern Pacific Railroad of New Mexico: New Mexico and Arizona line to El Paso, Texas.

Mr. GANN. That is the Rio Grande?

The WITNESS. Yes. Los Angeles & San Diego Railroad: Florence to Santa Ana, California.

Los Angeles & Independence Railroad: Los Angeles to Santa Monica, California.

Stockton & Copperopolis Railroad, two lines: Stockton to Milton; Peters to Oakdale.

Amador Branch Railroad: Galt to Ione.

Berkeley Branch Railroad: Shell Mount to Berrymans.

California Pacific Railroad, consisting of the following: Vallejo Junction to Vallejo; Vallejo to Sacramento; Davis to Knights Landing; Napa Junction to Calistoga.

1196 Northern Railway: West Oakland to Delaware Street; West Oakland to Martinez; Port Costa to Suisun; Woodland to Tehama.

San Pablo & Tulare Railroad: Near Martinez to Tracy.

Those corporate properties, in the lines which I have mentioned, constituted the Pacific system of the Southern Pacific Company in 1885.

Mr. MCCLENNEN. What date in 1885 are you speaking of?

The WITNESS. At the time of the lease, under date of February 1st to March 1st, 1885.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. You remember, as you have said, when the Southern Pacific Company took possession of those lines in 1885?

A. Yes.

Q. State whether or not there was any change in the operating organization which was in charge, under the Central Pacific Railroad Company, after the Southern Pacific Company took possession.

A. No, sir; there was no change in the organization.

Q. Did the individuals who were officials of the Central 1197 Pacific Railroad Company continue in their positions under the Southern Pacific Company?

A. Yes.

Q. Was there any change made at the time the Southern Pacific Company took possession that is worth noting?

Mr. McCLENNEN. That is objected to as calling upon the witness to draw a conclusion as to what is worth noting.

The WITNESS. No, sir.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. What I had in mind was about the creation of the Atlantic system and the Pacific system.

A. The lines east and west of El Paso?

Q. Yes. Was that division created at that time?

A. Yes.

Q. You can state what was included within the Pacific system and what was included within the Atlantic system.

A. At the time of the Southern Pacific lease, March 1, 1885, the Pacific system and the Atlantic system were created, the Pacific system consisting of the lines west of El Paso and Ogden, and the Atlantic system, consisting of the lines owned, controlled, and operated east of El Paso.

Q. As you understood it, the Southern Pacific Company took 1198 a lease of the line between Goshen and New Orleans in 1885?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever see the lease of those lines?

A. Yes; I have.

Q. Have you read it often?

A. A number of times I have read it.

Q. Will you examine this copy and see if you are able to say that that is the lease?

A. I can identify that as the lease.

Q. Did you ever see the original of that lease?

A. Yes.

Q. Where was it when you saw it?

A. It was in the custody of the secretary of the Southern Pacific Company.

Q. At what time was it in that custody?

A. During the period from 1885 to 1895, at which time I was employee of that office.

Q. Do you know what became of it after that?

A. No; the office of the secretary was changed at that time. There was a new secretary elected and the custody of those documents [illegible] in my hands, and I have every reason to think that the [illegible]

1199 was destroyed in the fire which destroyed most of the records of the Southern Pacific Company later.

Q. What secretary was elected?

A. E. C. Wright was elected secretary to succeed G. L. Lansing.

Q. At what time?

A. In 1895.

Q. 1895?

A. 1895 or 1896.

Q. And that was a separation of the office of secretary from the accounting department?

A. So far as it affected my immediate duties, it was a separation.

Q. And to that office, the secretary's office, was given the custody of the original of that lease?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you see it after that time?

A. I can not state positively, but I think that I had occasion to refer to it on more than one occasion subsequent to that time. I think I have seen it.

Q. What do you know about its destruction?

A. I do not know.

1200 Q. You do not know whether it was destroyed or not?

A. No, sir; I can not testify as to that.

Q. But the copy I gave you is, according to your recollection, a copy of that original?

A. Yes; it has that appearance, and I think I can identify that. I should say that is a copy of the lease; yes.

Q. You had frequent occasion, while the original was in your custody, to examine its provisions in order to make a correct account of the transactions under the lease, did you?

A. Yes; it was necessary to divide the revenues under the lease among various corporate properties, under the provisions of the lease, and that was a part of the duty of the office in which I was employed.

Q. How far did you become familiar with the provisions of the lease in that respect by those examinations?

A. There were certain percentages which were used in distribution of the net income, and not only that, but in the entry of this lease in the minutes of the Southern Pacific Company, I have had occasion to compare the original with the copy on more than one occasion, and I have also handled the document when it was called for by 1201 people who wished to make use of it, to examine it, and it became necessary for me to take receipts for it and pass it from the office records, temporarily.

Mr. HERRIN. I will offer this copy and ask to have it marked as an exhibit.

Mr. McCLENNEN. Petitioner notes and reserves the right to obje to the authenticity, materiality, and legality of this lease.

(The lease referred to was received in evidence and marked "D fendants' Exhibit (Klink) No. 20, March 4, 1915", and will be fou in the volume of defendants' exhibits.)

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. What change, if any, did you make in the books and bla forms used in your office after the time that the Southern Paci Company took possession in 1885?

A. I remember that at the time the change was made and t Southern Pacific Company assumed control that the stock of statio ery in the auditor's office was used, as far as possible, by eliminati the words "Central Pacific Railroad" and stamping over them t words "Southern Pacific Company, Pacific system". I also kn 1202 and remember that at that time a new ledger was started f recording the transactions of the Southern Pacific Compan and the forms which were observed and the new books whi were used were substantially along the same lines as those which h been used, except that we labeled them "Southern Pacific Company instead of Central Pacific Railroad Company.

Q. Were the earnings or revenues from the Sunset line kept sep rate from those of the Central Pacific line, in the matter of ben handled as deposits, or as a banking matter? I do not refer to t mere keeping of books or accounts, but to the actual custody of t money.

A. All receipts of the company from the operation of its lines w forwarded to one treasurer.

Q. And before 1885 that was the treasurer of the Central Paci Railroad Company?

A. Yes.

Q. And after the Southern Pacific Company took possession it w the treasurer of the Southern Pacific Company?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember, at the time of the lease of the South Pacific Company, a copy of which is marked "Exhibit 20", and a

1203 of the lease of the Central Pacific lines to the Southern Paci Company, a copy of which is annexed to the bill or petiti and which took effect April 1, 1885, if there was any invent or schedule prepared of property, rolling stock, or other phys property, which was taken over by the Southern Pacific Company

A. Yes; there was a very complete inventory taken at that time.

Q. Did you have occasion to refer to that inventory afterwar and if so, in what connection?

A. The inventory was placed for safe keeping in the custody of the secretary, and I have had occasion to refer to it.

Q. For what purpose?

A. To determine the property which had been leased and to take into consideration, possibly, replacements.

Q. Well, it was necessary always to refer to it when you were replacing these properties, was it not?

A. More particularly as regards rolling stock; yes, sir.

1204 Q. Did you add to the inventory? When there were additions to the rolling stock and replacements, would you add to or amend this inventory, or supplement it so that you could have a list of the property at any date which was in the possession of the Southern Pacific Company?

A. As far as rolling stock is concerned, yes. There was a very complete list kept of the additions to the equipment. But as far as all other details were concerned, in the inventory of property, the record remained as it was when the property was turned over. This original inventory, as we viewed it, was the property for which the lessee was responsible, and which it would be expected to restore to the lessor at the termination of the lease.

Q. After the lease to the Southern Pacific Company, was this rolling stock owned, any part of it, by the Southern Pacific Company itself, or was it owned by the lessor company?

A. The lessor companies retained their ownership. There were times when the Southern Pacific Company did own, for a time at least, considerable equipment, but the equipment which formed the property of these different corporations still remained their property; it was so considered.

1205 Q. And if you added new engines, were they allotted in ownership to these lessor companies, or some of them, or was the ownership taken and held by the Southern Pacific Company?

A. No; they were allotted to the lessor companies; so far as it was necessary to replace equipment which had been destroyed, it was charged against a renewal fund carried for that purpose. If it were necessary, for any reason to add to their equipment, it was charged against their capital account.

Q. When a locomotive, for example, or a car was labeled "C. P." with a number, what would that import as to the ownership, if anything?

A. It would imply that that was the property of the Central Pacific Railroad Company.

Q. Did that fact correspond with that labeling?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That if it was labeled in the name of one of these lessor companies, that property was owned by that company?

A. Yes, sir; that was the fact.

Q. If you remember, there was some amendment made, at different times, to this lease of the Central Pacific lines, which is 1206 dated February 17, 1885, and annexed to the petition as Exhibit A.

A. I recall that there were amendments; yes.

Q. Was there at any time, in any of these amendments, any new inventory or schedule of this rolling stock and other property made or taken?

A. No, sir.

Q. You never had occasion to make any new inventory of that property?

A. Not of the property as a whole; no, sir.

Q. What distinction do you make between that inventory and the current inventory you kept of the materials and supplies on hand, for example?

A. An inventory was taken annually, and sometimes semiannually, of the current materials and supplies which were needed for the operation of the road, such as rails, ties, and shop supplies, and which supplies were required for replacements and repairs of every kind. This inventory was taken for the purpose of checking the actual physical count with the book record, and was for the protection of the company's accounts, as well as to see that none of the supplies disappeared. That inventory was essential as a matter of current accounting, to properly safeguard the company's 1207 interest in its operations.

Q. As materials or supplies were needed, were they purchased by the operating company and held by it until they were used and distributed, or were they purchased in the names of the lessor companies and owned by them from the start?

A. All supplies were purchased by the operating company, the lessee.

Q. And owned by it?

A. And owned and held by it, the Southern Pacific Company.

Q. Until what time, if there was any change?

A. Until such time as the supplies and materials were consumed in operations or in the requirements.

Q. Then how were they charged?

A. Then they were charged against the property of that section of the road where they were used. There is an exception in the matter of repairs to cars. In that instance the materials as well as the labor incident to the repairs of the cars was distributed among the various lessor lines on an arbitrary basis, such as car mileage, and the same with supplies and repairs of locomotives.

1208 Q. In the distribution and use of rolling stock, was there any attention paid to the ownership of the rails upon which it was run?

A. The rolling stock was used and assigned to the traffic needs of the system. The record was kept of the mileage of the cars and locomotives of the various companies, and the service was paid for. If a Southern Pacific locomotive was used by the Northern Railway, or a Southern Pacific of New Mexico locomotive was used by the Southern Pacific of California, or if the cars of any one of these properties ran upon the roads of any other of the properties, it was allowed to them in the way of compensation on the basis of the mileage at fixed rates.

Q. This lease and this amendment covered that, did it not? The provisions of the lease covered that allotment?

A. Yes.

Mr. ORR. That is objected to for the reason that the lease is the best evidence.

Mr. HERRIN. You will find it there.

Mr. ORR. I did not, and I looked at it carefully.

Mr. HERRIN. It is in some amendment to it, I know. It is in 1209 the Central Pacific lease. You will find it there—the one you have annexed to the bill.

Mr. ORR. Yes.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Was this practice continued during and after 1893, that you spoke of, as to allotting the charges to be made for use of rolling stock upon lines other than that of the company owning it?

A. Yes; it was continued during the entire period of my service with the company.

Q. And the amendment to the lease which is set forth in the bill, as dated December 7, 1893, did not require, as you understood it, any difference in that practice? You might look at that for a moment [handing paper to the witness].

What I want to know is whether that amendment made any change or caused any change in your accounting as to the use of rolling stock.

A. No, sir; it did not.

Q. You continued the practice after that time, just as you had done it before, and as you have described it?

A. Yes.

Q. Then the rolling stock was assigned wherever it was needed, or wherever it was suitable?

1210 A. Yes, sir. The treatment of freight cars, for instance, in that respect would be, in a smaller way, precisely what is done with the freight cars between different railroad properties.

Q. That is the practice generally among all the railroads of the country, to interchange freight cars?

A. Yes.

Q. And use them on different lines?

A. Yes.

Q. But it is not the practice, is it, to interchange locomotives?

A. No. The interchange of freight cars was much more extensive than the exchange of locomotives, but I merely mentioned the similarity of the treatment of freight cars as between other lines, or what are known as foreign lines, to show that the use of freight cars was according to the destination and the origin of the freight—that the use of the car itself was allowed for to the owner on a basis of mileage compensation.

Q. What I am trying to get at is this—you do not seem to get it exactly, and I want to have you understand my question, which is:

1211 If you wanted a car to be operated between San Jose and San Francisco, or between San Francisco and Los Angeles, did you take cars belonging to the Central Pacific Railroad Company for that use?

A. There would be no distinction made as to whether they were Central Pacific or any other line. The car which was available for that purpose would be assigned to that run.

Q. Irrespective of the ownership of it?

A. Irrespective of the ownership of it.

Q. It was not usual, was it, in practice for a Union Pacific locomotive to come on over the Central Pacific and be used on that line?

A. No.

Q. Or for a Central Pacific locomotive to be used on the Union Pacific?

A. No, sir; that was very rare.

Q. And that would be so with all your connections; the locomotives would be retained upon the lines owning them?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was the rule with respect to the locomotives owned by these different companies composing this Southern Pacific 1212 Company's Pacific system? Were they kept upon the lines of the companies owning them, or were they used indiscriminately?

A. They were used where they were needed, according to their power and the requirements of the track, irrespective of their corporate ownership.

Q. Was there any more attention paid to the ownership of the locomotives than to the ownership of a car, for example, on the Pacific system?

A. No; I should say not.

Mr. HERRIN. You may take the witness.

Cross-examination by Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. The interchange of freight cars between independent carriers is brought about by the origin or destination of the freight carried and is practically universal, is it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And it is customary between the different railroads to charge and credit for the use of the car in accordance with the mileage traveled or some other factor adopted for the accounting?

A. Yes, sir.

1213 Q. This same plan prevailed between the various subordinate companies whose rolling stock was operated by the Southern Pacific Company or the Central Pacific Railroad Company in its day?

A. As between this Central Pacific Railroad and a foreign line?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And also as between the Central Pacific Railroad Company and the Southern Pacific Railroad Company?

A. No. The Southern Pacific Railroad Company was never an operating company. The Central Pacific Railroad Company operated the line of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company.

Q. Did not the Southern Pacific Railroad Company operate the northern division running from San Francisco down through Gilroy, as far as the line ran?

A. Yes; but, as I recall it, there was no physical connection there between the two lines.

Mr. HERRIN. No track connection?

The WITNESS. Well, the only place that we touched was at San Jose. Yes; there was a physical connection at San Jose and also a physical connection here in San Francisco.

1214 By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. Was there any interchange of rolling stock between the Central Pacific Railroad Company and the northern division of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company in those days prior to April 1, 1885?

A. I believe that there was, to a limited extent, anyway.

Q. Was that charged and credited on some per diem or mileage basis?

A. No, sir; I think not.

Q. How was it arranged?

A. There was no payment made, as I recall it, between the various interrelated lines prior to the time of the lease to the Southern Pacific Company. I do not recall it, and my impression is that there was no arrangement of that kind.

Q. After the lease to the Southern Pacific Company; that is, after April 1, 1885, there were debits and credits when the rolling stock of one of the owning companies was used upon the line of another of the owning companies?

A. Yes.

Q. To put it specifically: When the G. H. & S. A. locomo-
1215 tives were brought up from Texas and used on the lines in California, the G. H. & S. A. got a credit for the use of those locomotives?

A. Yes.

Q. The accounting system of the Southern Pacific Company has been a matter of growth and improvement?

A. Yes.

Q. Your first association with any of these companies was in 1883?

A. In 1883; yes.

Q. And the accounting systems then prevailing were crude in their comparison to those which developed later?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The failure to make the debits and credits for the use of the stock was one of the deficiencies in the system that existed prior to 1885?

A. Well, it might be so described; but in addition to that it was possible that the fact that the operating company was also the owner of a railroad might have prevented that being instituted.

Q. When the Southern Pacific Company began its operations you opened an entirely new set of books?

A. Yes.

Q. And from that time on the operating books were exclu-1216 sively the books of the Southern Pacific Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Those books began with April 1, 1885?

A. Yes; as far as the operations were concerned.

Q. That is, the Southern Pacific Company never did anything until April 1, 1885?

A. March 1, 1885.

Q. March 1, 1885?

A. Yes.

Q. Was there a distinction between different parts of the system in respect to that?

A. Yes; the lines south of Goshen were operated by the Southern Pacific Company from March 1, 1885, and the Central Pacific lines were operated from April 1, 1885.

Q. And the accounting distinctions were made to conform to what you have just stated?

A. Yes; one set of lines reported their operations for ten months and the other set for nine months of the year 1885.

Q. Then, conversely, the Central Pacific Railroad Company accounted for operations south of Goshen, as a lessee, for two months only of the year 1885?

1217 A. Yes.

Q. And accounted for operations of its own owned lines for three months of 1885?

A. That is correct; yes, sir.

Q. In giving the list of railroads owned, when I interrupted to ask you the date, you used the expression either "February 1st and March 1st" or "February 1st or March 1st", I am not sure which. What you had in mind was, in fact, March 1st and April 1st, 1885?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Receipts and disbursements, as a matter of the physical handling of money, were into and out of one treasury, you have stated?

A. Yes.

Q. And that was always the treasury of the lessee operating company?

A. Yes; the operating company.

Q. The final instance of the receipts and disbursements was determined by the accounting department, just as might be done in any clearing house?

A. Yes, sir.

1218 Q. The new equipment bought for the lessor lines was paid for in the first instance by the lessee?

A. Yes.

Q. And the amount of payment, if it was new equipment in the truest sense, was charged to the lessor line for which it was purchased?

A. Yes. At the time that all of the payments were complete and the equipment had been received upon the lines during that interim there was a very considerable sum accumulated and was carried in what might be called an unadjusted account on the books of the lessee.

Q. That was a matter of temporary detail, which did not affect the final instance of the charges?

A. Only to this extent, that a record was kept of the rolling stock, locomotives, and cars, by numbers; these numbers were replaced from time to time as the occasion required or the exigencies of the operations of the system warranted. It might be that one road had lost fifty freight cars. They might be replaced in value by some other kind of equipment, and while that matter was being determined the lessee acted as the holder, you might say, or the banker, for this equipment. That, however, was a temporary arrangement, and was always adjusted within the fiscal year.

1219 Q. The lessee company was practically in all fiscal matters the banker for all the different companies?

A. Yes.

Q. The expenditures for replacements of equipment were charged to a replacement account?

A. Yes.

Q. And there was an operating account?

A. Yes.

Q. That was a charge to expense?

A. Well, if you would like, I will detail the practice to you.

If cars were destroyed, or locomotives were destroyed, or rendered obsolete for any reason, the operating expenses were charged and a credit account styled a renewal fund was created. When the new equipment was bought, sufficient to replace that, the renewal fund was first assigned to that particular property, according to its needs, and according to its requirements. In that way the operations of the property were charged at the time of the condemnation or at the time of the destruction, but the replacement might be delayed some months.

1220 Q. Through the clearing process of your accounting system the financial relations between the lessor companies and the lessee company were kept with the same attention to scrupulous care that would exist according to the best accounting systems in the relations between any lessor and lessee railroads?

A. Yes.

Q. You have spoken of the continuance in office of the operating officials of the Central Pacific Railroad Company when the Southern Pacific Company took up the operation. You did not mean by that answer, did you, to convey the idea that the corporate officers of the two companies were the same?

A. No.

Q. There were material differences in the personnel of the officers and directors of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, and the Southern Pacific Company?

A. A great many of them were the same individuals. There were exceptions. For the most part, the directors or the owners of the property, the Central Pacific Railroad Company, were also directors of the Southern Pacific Company.

Q. There were always some directors that were not com-1221 mon to the two companies, were there not?

A. I think so; yes.

Q. Just when the noncommon directors were a majority, and just when were they not, you would not be able to say without refreshing your memory from the records?

A. I would have to look at some of the records in order to determine it; but in 1885 my recollection is that they were substantially the same people.

Q. Were you in a position to know about the stock holdings in the various companies in 1885?

A. Yes; as regards the Central Pacific Railroad Company and the Southern Pacific Railroad Company and the Southern Pacific Company.

Q. You were conversant with who were the record stockholders at that time?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you have to do with the annual reports that were made to the California Railroad Commission, showing the numbers of stockholders?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you have enough to do with it so that you knew as to 1222 their correctness, with respect to the number of stockholders that were reported therein?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Would it fit with your recollection that in 1885 the Central Pacific Railroad Company had something like 2,237 stockholders?

A. I should think that that would be about right. If you had said 1,237, it would have meant just about the same. I know that there was quite a considerable list.

Q. And the same way, in 1884, 2,600?

A. There should not be a great variation between the years. The numbers of stockholders, I presume, is correctly reported. Of course that does not represent the stock ownerships, perhaps, in its entirety. In other words, there might be a very large number of small stockholders and a very small number of large stockholders.

Q. And the reports did not, as you recall it, purport to state the extent of the holdings of the different stockholders?

A. No; the list of stockholders, I think, would assign one number to the holder of one share or a thousand shares, and would not discriminate, or differentiate, rather.

1223 Q. Do you know whether there are in existence any of the original records which would show the stockholders during the period from 1880 to 1900, or any part of it, of the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. I think there is no such record in existence—in this city, anyway. I had control of those records; they were in my custody for a number of years; and at the time that I left the service of the company they were in the office of the company here, and, to the best of my knowledge, they were destroyed in the fire of 1906.

Q. Do you know whether there are any secondary evidences of those holdings during that period in existence?

A. Well, none that I am sufficiently familiar with to state positively. I think that there are some records, but that is only a matter of impression and not of actual knowledge.

Q. What is the last time that you have ever seen any records or memoranda touching the stock holdings during any part of that period?

A. I should say 1904.

Q. You do not know whether there have been any reproductions of any part of the records for the period from 1880 to 1900?

1224 A. As regards stock ledgers?

Q. Either as regards stock ledgers or certificate books.

A. No; I do not.

Q. You were aware that by 1884 large quantities of the stock in the Central Pacific Railroad Company had become widely distributed in America and in Europe, England, and on the Continent?

A. I may not have known it in 1884, but I heard of it subsequently.

Q. When you heard it, it was as of the condition that existed in 1884?

A. Yes; that is what I meant to imply.

Q. And by the first of 1885 more than a majority of the stock of the Central Pacific Railroad Company in actual ownership had become generally distributed to investors, members of the public, in the United States and England and on the Continent of Europe?

Mr. HERRIN. That is objected to unless the witness is confined to his knowledge. I object to his answering as to repute or hearsay.

1225 The WITNESS. The record of the stock ledger would not necessarily disclose the actual ownership, but the greater part of the stock of the Central Pacific Railroad Company was held in the names of employees of the Central Pacific Railroad Company.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. That is, the record ownership was in the names of office employees and such of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, persons who, presumably, were not themselves the beneficial owners of the stock?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were familiar with the form of dividend warrant certificates of stock that was in existence?

A. Yes.

Q. And the peculiarity of that stock as compared with ordinary railroad stock was that it had attached to it a large number of numbered warrants for the collection of dividends somewhat similar to the coupons attached to an ordinary railroad coupon bond?

A. Yes; I remember it quite well.

Q. And when dividends were declared they were paid on presentation of these dividend warrants without inquiry into the name of the owner of the stock from which the dividend warrant had been cut?

1226 A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the dividend warrant would bear no name upon it?

A. No.

Q. The votes at the meetings of the corporation, the Central Pacific Railroad Company, were cast either by these employees or other record owners, or by their proxies?

A. Usually by proxies. Proxies were forwarded by the parties in whose name the stock stood to the secretary, and the secretary cast the ballot.

Q. This stock that stood in the names of various employees in the offices of the company was cut up into a very large number of certificates?

A. Yes; usually in ten share and one hundred share lots.

Q. You had, in fact, had you not, three series; one a ten share, one a one hundred share, and one an irregular?

A. Yes; that is my recollection.

Q. And there were comparatively few certificates out, single certificates, representing in excess of a thousand shares?

A. Comparatively or relatively few; yes. There may have been as many as fifty or a hundred.

1227 Q. This Central Pacific Railroad Company stock was regularly dealt in upon the stock exchanges as early as 1883, when you came with the company?

A. To the best of my knowledge it was.

Q. The records of the company contained nothing that would disclose the changes of ownership, as these certificates were sold in the market, except as a purchaser might care to transfer the stock into his own name?

A. Yes; that would be the only instance.

Q. Do you remember the occurrence of the visit of Sir Rivers Wilson to this country as representative of the British or European stockholders, in the early nineties?

A. I remember the occasion; yes, sir.

Q. After, or some time after, his visit, did any considerable number of the British and European held shares come in for transfer?

A. Subsequent to 1900? I could not testify as to that, from recollection.

Q. Do you remember a time when, finally, a majority of the stock was transferred into the name of the Central Pacific Railroad Share Holding Company (Limited), a British corporation?

A. I do not seem to recall that; no; I do not recollect 1228 it. These transactions, I should have stated earlier in the course of this examination, all transpired in New York, and we were advised here of it by means of a transfer agent's report which usually came to us monthly. Exchanges of stock in San Francisco were very few, indeed, as my memory serves me. The bulk of the exchange was in New York, and, as I say, coming to us on a transfer statement, there would not be any incident connected with it which might impress it upon the memory. It was merely, you might say, a clerical occupation, transferring the charges and credits and opening of the new accounts.

Q. Was the stock ledger kept virtually in duplicate?

A. No.

Q. Where was the stock ledger itself kept?

A. In San Francisco, in my office.

Q. Just what books did they keep in New York relative to transfers?

A. Just a moment. You asked if they were kept in duplicate. I understood that they did have a duplicate of our records here. I did not understand what you meant at first by "in duplicate". I thought you meant to ask if we kept it in duplicate here. It was kept 1229 in duplicate, in this sense, that we had the ledger and also the transfer record.

Q. Now, putting it again: Is it a fact that practically a stock ledger was kept in San Francisco and another stock ledger in New York?

A. I think so. I think they did keep a stock ledger in New York, although I would not be sure. I have that impression.

Q. And the transfer books in the same way?

A. Yes.

Q. One set in New York and one here?

A. Well, the report which we received constituted our transfer. We posted direct to the ledger from this transfer record.

Q. And the certificate books were kept where?

A. In New York and in San Francisco, both. They kept the certificate books there so that they were enabled to issue new stock, but the stock certificates were all signed at this point by the secretary and forwarded in blank.

Q. Did you have any transfer agent in San Francisco; did the Central Pacific Railroad have?

A. Only the secretary's office.

Q. Was there a transfer agent in New York?

1230 A. Yes.

Q. Who was the transfer agent there?

A. Mr. George Watkins.

Mr. HERRIN. At what time was that?

The WITNESS. About 1885 or 1884.

By Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. How long did Mr. Watkins continue to be the transfer agent?

A. Well, I should say as far along as 1890, anyway.

Q. Is he living or dead?

A. That I do not know.

Q. What was the last that you knew of him, and where?

A. I find his name is here as transfer agent in 1890—the report for 1890.

Mr. ORR. That is George Watkins?

The WITNESS. George Watkins. My impression is that he was transfer agent as far along as 1895.

By Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. And located in New York?

A. Yes; but I can not say whether he is still living.

Q. Is that the last you know of him—1895?

A. That is about the last I would have any dealings

1231 with him; yes, sir.

Q. Was he connected with an independent concern or was he an employee of the Central Pacific Railroad Company in its offices there?

A. I do not know. The fact that his address is given as 23 Broad Street, New York, which was the company's office, would lead me to suppose that he was connected with the company.

Q. Did you know Charles Babbidge?

A. Not personally.

Q. Did you know of him as a name connected with the company?

A. Yes.

Q. And in what capacity, and where?

A. He was an officer of the Galveston, Harrisburg & San Antonio Railway Company.

Q. And where did he have his headquarters?

A. I think his headquarters were in New York.

Q. Do you recall that as early as 1884 the number of shares of stock of the Central Pacific Railroad Company standing in the names of Mr. Huntington, Mr. Stanford, Mr. Crocker, Mr.

1232 Hopkins, or the Hopkins estate, on the records of the company was considerably less than a majority of the stock of the Central Pacific Railroad Company.

A. In 1884?

Q. Yes.

A. I think that is correct. I think that the transfer or the stock standing in the names of the employees which I have mentioned was about that time.

Q. Was about what?

A. About 1884. I would not say that positively, but that is my impression. Perhaps I should not testify positively as to that; but the books came into my custody in 1887 and I had occasion to refer to them very often, and that is my impression. It was along about that time. It may have been a year later or it may have been a year or two earlier.

Q. Do you bear in mind that by 1887 the Stanford stock was something like 32,000 shares?

A. I do not recall.

Q. Do you remember that when the books first came into your custody, in 1887, the stock standing in Governor Stanford's name was, as compared with the whole stock, a comparatively small amount?

1233 A. Yes; I think that was true of all of the owners.

Q. That would be true of Mr. Collis P. Huntington?

A. That would be true of Mr. Huntington, Mr. Hopkins, Mr. Crocker, and Governor Stanford.

Q. And also of the Hopkins estate?

A. Yes.

Q. And that had been true, at least since 1884?

A. That is my impression. I would not care to be positive about that. I know that it was so in 1887.

Q. As to who were the true owners of the quantities of stock standing in the names of the office employees of the company, you did not know, and had no means of knowing?

A. No.

Q. Take it in 1884; about how many employees of the company were there in whose names stock was standing?

A. Perhaps fifteen or twenty.

Q. Fifteen or twenty employees?

A. Yes.

Q. If this figure that you have mentioned is correct, 2,600 for 1884, apart from perhaps twenty-five employees, record owners, was there anything by which you could identify in any way the remaining holders of the stock, perhaps 2,575 shareholders?

1234 A. No; I think not. I could not say.

Q. They were the ordinary scattered public stockholders, so far as you knew?

A. Yes; brokers and others. The stock which was held in the name of the twenty-five, to which reference has been made, was a very considerable majority of the stock of the company, as was evidenced by the fact of its being voted at stockholders' meetings when proxies were forwarded at our office.

Q. That is, the record voting control of the corporation was in the office employees?

A. Yes; I should say so.

Q. And so remained for a long time after the stock which stood in their names had been sold through the community and in Europe?

Mr. HERRIN. I object to that question unless it calls for the knowledge of the witness. I object to what he supposed or heard.

The WITNESS. It so remained, up to 1888 or 1890. As to whether it may or may not have been sold in Europe, I have no knowledge.

1235 By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. Were you one of those in whose name stock, not in fact stock beneficially owned by you, stood?

A. No, sir.

Q. Those employees in whose names the stock stood were, many of them, in positions not of control or importance?

A. Yes.

Q. Some of them got down to the grade of porters and elevator boys?

A. No; I think not. There were no porters or elevator boys. They were, for the most part, employees of the New York office, as I recall it, and occupied positions of greater or less responsibility.

Q. When the certificates did come back for transfer, was there anything about the certificates from which you could tell when the stock represented had been sold to the members of the general public?

A. No; my recollection is that the stock certificates did not come back; I may be mistaken as to that, but I think they were retained in the New York office.

Q. So that the certificates for the stock that had been issued 1236 to the members of the public in 1884, or the office employees, you think never came back to San Francisco?

A. I think it did not.

Q. As dividends were declared, how did the dividend warrants used to come back; through what channels?

A. They were forwarded by express from the New York office to the office here, and the coupons were arranged in numerical order, similar to the manner in which coupons from bonds would be arranged, in numerical order, and placed in a box convenient for the purpose. There was a very considerable quantity of them. As you have intimated, with ten-share lots, they ran up into the thousands, and it took quite a good-sized box to contain them. Those were usually forwarded about three months after the dividends had been paid.

Q. You mean that they had been honored in New York?

A. Honored in New York.

Q. And came here just as canceled checks would come back?

A. Yes; that is what I meant to say, if I did not. The payment was made in New York, for the most part. We paid very few of them here in San Francisco.

Q. Was there anything about those dividend warrants, when 1237 they reached San Francisco, that would give any clue to the holder of the stock, or his location, whether in Europe or in this country?

A. None whatever.

Q. Did they used to bear banking stamps upon them, such as you are familiar with on checks that go through?

A. Very rarely. There was very rarely any mark whatever. Sometimes there would be a rubber stamp impression, but I think it was more an inadvertence than intention.

Q. You spoke of the creation of the Atlantic system and the Pacific system in 1885. The date of that creation was coincident with the date of the beginning of operations by the Southern Pacific Company, was it not?

A. Yes.

Q. That is, as you said, March 1, 1885?

A. Yes, March 1st.

Q. Did the Atlantic system, in this division, include the steamship lines from New Orleans to New York?

A. Yes.

Q. And subsequently that system included the steamship lines from Galveston to New York when they were put into operation?

A. Yes; although I could tell better if I knew that 1238 latter date, but I will answer yes to the question. The original steamers which were taken over in 1885 were the property of Morgan's Louisiana & Texas Railroad & Steamship Company. Subsequently there were some steamers built and put on that line which were owned by the Southern Pacific Company as a corporation, but their operations, however, were included still as a part of the Atlantic system operations, if that answers your question.

Q. Yes. About the time you severed your connection with the company in 1904, all the steamship property had come into the ownership of the Southern Pacific Company, had it not? I mean all of the Atlantic system steamship property.

A. No, I think the M. L. & T. Company still owns some steamers.

Q. And those continue to be operated by the Southern Pacific Company as lessee?

A. Yes.

Q. Can you tell me whether either one of two agreements of the Transcontinental Association of September 28, 1883, and November 8, 1883, were among the papers of the department with which you had to do?

1239 A. I do not recollect those specific papers. I doubt if they were in my custody. They sound to me like traffic department agreements.

Q. Explaining to you that they were, or purported to be, agreements between the several transcontinental roads, with reference to the method of dividend rates, or changes in rates, etc., could you then tell me where, in the ordinary course, those papers should be found, if anywhere in the possession of the Southern Pacific Company?

A. I think those papers would have been in the custody of the secretary, but I do not recall such documents as being in my custody. Still, I will not say that they were not, as we did have some traffic agreements on file there.

Q. And if they remained in the secretary's custody, they would be in a position that would likely have caused their destruction in 1906?

A. I should say so.

Redirect examination by Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Can you tell us whether the Southern Pacific Company acquired, about the time it began operations, substantially the entire capital stock of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company of California?

1240 A. Yes; it did.

Q. And, so far as you know, has since continued to own that stock?

A. Yes.

Q. How about the capital stock of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company of Arizona? Did the Southern Pacific Company ever acquire or own that stock to your knowledge?

A. The Southern Pacific Company acquired substantially the entire capital stock of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company of Arizona in 1885 or thereabouts.

Q. That was also true of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company of New Mexico?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And, so far as you know, it has since continued to own th same, or during your connection with the company?

A. During my connection with the company it remained the owne

Q. I will ask you whether or not the Southern Pacific Compan at any time acquired the capital stock of the Galveston, Harrisbur & San Antonio Railroad?

A. Yes; it acquired the greater part of the Galveston, Harrisbur & San Antonio Railroad in 1885.

1241 Q. And thereafter continued to own the same, as long you were connected with the company?

A. To the best of my knowledge and belief.

Q. Was that true also of the capital stock of the Texas & Ne Orleans Railroad Company?

A. Yes; it was true of that company.

Q. At what time was that stock acquired by the Southern Pacif Company, if you know?

A. In 1885.

Q. About the date of its lease?

A. Yes.

Q. And did the Southern Pacific Company continue to own th stock, so far as you know?

A. Yes.

Q. Until after you left the company?

A. Until after I left the company.

Q. Do you know whether or not the Southern Pacific Compan at any time acquired the capital stock of the Louisiana We ter Railroad Company?

A. The Southern Pacific Company acquired the stock of the Lou siana Western Railroad Company in 1885 and remained th 1242 owner thereof until after the time I left the service of th company to the best of my knowledge and belief.

Q. Was that true also as to the capital stock of the Morgan's Lou siana & Texas Railroad & Steamship Company?

A. Yes; it was; the Southern Pacific Company acquired the stoc of that company, or the greater part of it, in 1885, and remained th owner thereof until the time I left the service of the company.

Mr. HERRIN. That is all.

(Whereupon an adjournment was taken until to-morrow, Frida March 5, 1915, at 10.30 o'clock a. m.)

1243 FIFTEENTH DAY.

ROOM 921, FLOOD BUILDING,
San Francisco, Cal., Friday, March 5, 1915.

The hearing was resumed, pursuant to adjournment, at 10.30 o'clock a. m., before Frank R. Hanna, special examiner.

Present on behalf of the United States: James W. Orr, Esq.; Edward F. McClennen, Esq.; and Edward E. Gann, Esq., special assistants to the Attorney General.

Present on behalf of the defendants: W. F. Herrin, Esq.; J. P. Blair, Esq.; P. F. Dunne, Esq.; Garret McEnerney, Esq.; and E. J. Foulds, Esq., for the Southern Pacific Company.

1244 ROBERT A. DONALDSON was called as a witness on behalf of the defendants, and having been duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. HERRIN:

Q. What is your age?

A. I will be seventy-five next July.

Q. And your residence?

A. San Francisco.

Q. Were you ever employed by the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. I was.

Q. At what time?

A. My employment began in 1870, about the middle of November.

Q. Just state what you did thereafter, and how long you remained in the employ of that company.

A. In November, 1870, I entered the employ of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, in the office of the secretary, Mr. E. H. Miller, Jr., at Sacramento.

1245 When the special work I had in hand was finished, I was given work for part of the day in the ticket office in the passenger station in Sacramento. That continued until about the 5th of July, 1871, when I became a clerk in the office of the general passenger and ticket agent, Mr. T. H. Goodman.

Mr. Goodman appointed me assistant general passenger and ticket agent in December of 1877. I held that position—that is, general passenger and ticket agent of the Central Pacific Railroad Company—until the 1st of April, 1885, when the Southern Pacific Company, under a lease, took control of and operated the Central Pacific Railroad and its branches.

From that date, April 1, 1885, under the terms of a circular issued by the general manager, Mr. Towne, I continued as assistant general passenger and ticket agent but for the Southern Pacific Co pany, Pacific system, and served in that position until my retireme on the 30th of April, 1912.

During the month from March 1, 1885, to April 1, 1885, I w practically in that position as concerning the Southern Pacific Co pany, which was operating the Southern Pacific lines south Goshen; that is, in common with other officers of the Central Paci road. Our jurisdiction continued over the lines south of Goshe which the Southern Pacific Company was operating during th time.

1246 Q. At what place were you located prior to December, 187

A. I was located in Sacramento until the general offic were moved to San Francisco on September 1, 1873. I was then l cated here in San Francisco, although personally I did not co down until thirty days later; I came down October 1, 1873.

Q. Thereafter your office was in San Francisco?

A. From 1873 until my retirement.

Q. Do you remember the time when the Southern Pacific Railro line, from Goshen south to Los Angeles and Yuma and beyond, w being constructed?

A. I do.

Q. Do you know what company took over that road for operati when sections of it were completed from time to time?

A. From a point at or near the Goshen station the Central Paci Railroad Company operated the lines as they were ready for op ation.

Q. The Central Pacific Railroad Company was operating its o lines from the beginning?

A. The Central Pacific Railroad Company operated its own li during all that time, up to the opening of the line south Goshen.

1247 Q. How far south, if you know, did the operation of t Central Pacific Railroad Company extend over this line so of Goshen?

A. It extended over its own line to Goshen, and over the lines the Southern Pacific Railroad of California, the Southern Paci Railroad of Arizona, the Southern Pacific Railroad of New Mex to the Rio Grande, at El Paso, and also over a portion of the l from El Paso, when it was completed—the line from El Paso San Antonio, say.

Q. Did or did not the Central Pacific Railroad Company or officers control or have jurisdiction of the line all the way to N Orleans when it was opened?

A. They did, for a time.

Q. Did you, in your capacity, act for those lines all the way to New Orleans?

A. We acted all the way to New Orleans for a short period.

Q. For how long?

A. I can not tell exactly.

Q. Do you remember when that line was opened to New Orleans, the New Orleans Sunset line; about what time?

A. It was opened, I think, in the latter part of 1882.

1248 Q. From that time did the Central Pacific Railroad Company or its officials have jurisdiction of the entire line between San Francisco and New Orleans?

A. They did, for a period.

Q. For how long?

A. I think possibly six months or a year's time.

Q. When was that jurisdiction terminated? What was the occasion of it?

A. After the completion of the line to San Antonio and the opening of the line to service to and from New Orleans and from and to El Paso, the road between El Paso and New Orleans was handled by officials of the G. H. & S. A., the Louisiana Western, and the Morgan Line. I will not undertake to say just what date that took effect, but my remembrance is that it was either late in 1883 or early in 1884.

Q. I am asking you when the Central Pacific officials exercised jurisdiction over that entire line.

A. They exercised jurisdiction over that entire line from the time it was completed.

Q. When it was opened?

A. When it was opened.

Q. And how long thereafter did they continue to do that?

1249 A. My remembrance is that it was not much over a year, if it was that.

Q. Did they not continue until the Southern Pacific Company took charge of these lines in 1885?

A. The operating officers may have done that, but the general passenger agent did not.

Q. Did not Mr. Towne exercise jurisdiction all the way through to New Orleans until 1885, when the Southern Pacific Company took possession?

A. My recollection is that he did.

Q. You remember when the Southern Pacific Company took possession of these lines?

A. I do.

Q. And thereafter, after the Southern Pacific Company took possession, what was the southern limit of your jurisdiction on the Sunset line?

A. It ended at the Rio Grande River.

Q. Did you have to do with the formulation of tariffs for passengers over these lines?

A. When the line was completed and opened for traffic from El Paso towards San Antonio our office prepared the tariffs for passenger fares.

1250 Q. Did you have to do with the routing of passenger trains over what lines they would run?

A. Only in a very general way. There was our own line—you mean east of El Paso?

Q. I mean over the lines that were included in the Pacific system.

A. Over the lines that were included in the Pacific system?

Q. Generally.

A. Our office was concerned in that, in a certain way, as being familiar with the necessities of traffic, and so forth, the best points that needed service, and so on.

Q. And you collaborated with the operating department, did you?

A. We worked in connection with the operating department in that particular matter.

Q. In routing your trains, what considerations governed you?

Mr. McCLENNEN. That I object to, in view of the witness's testimony. I understand him to say that he did not have to do with routing trains, but merely followed the routings that somebody else laid out.

1251 Mr. HERRIN. The witness says he knew about it, and cooperated with the operating department to determine time schedules, and so forth.

I ask to have the question read.

(The pending question was read as above recorded.)

The WITNESS. In the routing of trains the main consideration was the best service to the public concerned, with reference to the volume of the traffic, how it could best be handled, and the physical character of the roads that would give that best service; that is, a road that was level, against one having grades.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Did you take the shortest or the longest routes, preferably?

A. We preferably took the shorter lines, although there were cases in which it was necessary to take a longer line with certain of our trains, so as to meet the wants of our passenger traffic.

Q. Did you regard the ownership of these different lines within that system in routing the trains, or did you disregard the ownership?

1252 A. We paid no attention to the particular corporate ownership.

Q. You considered only the needs of the service, the best service to be given?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you have personal acquaintance with Leland Stanford, C. P. Huntington, Charles Crocker, and Mark Hopkins?

A. I knew each of them by sight. I saw them every day when they were in town, or nearly every day, and occasionally had something to do in a business way with Mr. Crocker and Mr. Huntington, but very rarely with Mr. Stanford or Mr. Hopkins.

Q. Do you remember the operating officials of the Central Pacific Railroad Company at the time the Southern Pacific Company took possession?

A. I do.

Q. Will you name them?

A. Mr. Towne, Mr. Fillmore——

Q. What was Mr. Towne?

A. Mr. Towne at the time the Southern Pacific took possession was general manager.

Q. General manager of what?

A. General manager of the Central Pacific Railroad.

253 Q. The Central Pacific Railroad Company and leased lines?

A. And leased lines or branches.

Q. Who were the other officials?

A. Mr. Fillmore.

Q. J. A. Fillmore?

A. J. A. Fillmore was, as I remember, general superintendent of the Central Pacific Railroad Company and its branches and leased lines. They were the two chief operating officials.

Q. Who was the general passenger agent?

A. T. H. Goodman.

Q. Were they the same officials for the Southern Pacific Company when it took possession?

A. When the Southern Pacific Company took possession, on the 1st of March, 1885, of the lines south of Goshen the persons I have named continued in the same capacity with reference to the Southern Pacific Company.

Q. They became officials for the Southern Pacific Company?

A. Yes.

Q. That was what date?

254 A. March 1, 1885.

Q. Then, as to the lines north of Goshen, those gentlemen were officials of the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. They were.

Q. And south of Goshen they were officials of the Southern Pacific Company?

Q. After it was opened for operation, how far did your jurisdiction extend toward New Orleans?

A. To New Orleans.

Q. How long did that jurisdiction continue?

A. I believe until the formation of the Southern Pacific 1259 Company and the division of the line into the Pacific system and the Atlantic system in 1885.

Q. Do you remember when you first went over the line, after its opening, to New Orleans?

A. Shortly after its opening I went to Houston and New Orleans to install our system of handling passenger business.

Q. Was the system that you installed followed afterwards?

A. It was followed afterwards; yes.

Q. In making the time tables and routing passenger trains, what consideration governed you?

A. The best service to the public and economical handling.

Q. Was any reference had to the ownership of any particular section of the road over which the train would move?

A. It never entered into consideration.

Q. In other words, you would not have acted differently if the lines had all been owned by one company?

Mr. McCLENNEN. That is objected to as leading, calling for a conclusion, and containing an assertion by the direct examiner.

The WITNESS. No.

1260 By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Did you know Leland Stanford?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you know C. P. Huntington?

A. Yes.

Q. Charles Crocker?

A. Yes.

Q. Mark Hopkins?

A. Yes.

Q. Did they have anything to do with these lines?

A. We considered them the owners; all instructions came from them.

Mr. McCLENNEN. I ask to have that answer stricken out as not responsive, and containing a conclusion and opinion of the witness.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Did you receive instructions from those men or any of them?

A. Yes; from each of them.

Q. Do you know what men, what individuals, exercised final jurisdiction and authority in all matters concerning these lines?

261 Mr. McCLENNEN. That is objected to as calling upon the witness to draw a conclusion and state an opinion, and in view f the context it is leading and too general and immaterial.

The WITNESS. Leland Stanford, C. P. Huntington, Mark Hopins, and Charles Crocker; later, Charles F. Crocker.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Do you know that? I would like to have you state what you ase your answer on as to your observation.

A. That was the general impression, and when instructions were iven us by the general manager as a finality, it was said, "Well, the overnor wants that."

Q. Who was the governor?

A. Governor Stanford. They would say, "That has to be done."

Q. Have you completed your answer?

A. I was just going to give one instance. When the commutation ate between San Francisco and Oakland was established, three dolars, Governor Stanford said to Mr. Towne and Mr. Goodman that e wanted to make it easy for the people living in San Francisco to ive across the bay, that they might get land cheaply and have homes and live comfortably, and he thought he would like to make 262 just about a street carfare for them. Mr. Towne and Mr. Goodman said it could not be done, that it was a rate away elow cost, and that it would return to plague him as long as it was road, and it would be used by other people.

"Well," he said, "I want to do it for the workingmen of San rancisco", and he said "Put the rate in"; and that was final. They ut the rate in, of course.

(At the request of Mr. McClennen a preceding answer of the witess was repeated, as follows:)

"A. That was the general impression, and when instructions were iven us by the general manager as a finality, it was said, 'Well, the overnor wants that.'"

Mr. McCLENNEN. The petitioner objects to the beginning of the nswer, containing the words "That was the general impression", s not responsive, as being a statement of an opinion and hearsay, nd a conclusion, and the petitioner moves that that part of the nswer be stricken out.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. So far as your department was concerned, as to matters in which ou were interested officially, do you or do you not know that the nal decision in those matters was exercised by those men or some f them?

Mr. McCLENNEN. That is objected to as leading, as calling for a conclusion, as calling for matter a large part of which must of necessity have occurred in the absence of the witness and be unknown to him.

The WITNESS. It was known in our department that the final decision came from those men.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Did you know it?

A. I knew it.

Q. Do you remember when Mr. Mark Hopkins died?

A. 1878, I think.

Q. 1878 is correct. Was his interest in the property thereafter represented by anyone?

A. By Timothy Hopkins.

Q. Who was Timothy Hopkins?

A. His adopted son.

Q. Do you remember when Mr. Charles Crocker died?

A. In the eighties some time.

Q. In 1888. Do you remember who represented his interest afterwards?

A. Charles F. Crocker.

Q. A son of Charles?

1264 A. Eldest son of Charles.

Q. Commonly called Colonel Fred Crocker?

A. Colonel Fred.

Q. Do you know when the Southern Pacific Company took possession of those lines in 1885?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember if there was any change in the operating or traffic officials of the road when that change occurred?

A. No change whatever.

Q. What officials were acting for the Central Pacific Railroad Company became corresponding officials for the Southern Pacific Company?

A. It continued just as before.

Mr. HERRIN. Take the witness.

Cross-examination by Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. Do you know of any instance, in this railroad or any other where the assistant general passenger agent has disputed the authority of the president of the railroad to issue any directions?

A. I don't think he would be assistant passenger agent

1265 very long if he did.

Q. It is not customary in railroading?

A. But he would be at perfect liberty, and always has been at perfect liberty on this road, to express his opinion, even if it might be contrary to the instructions of the president.

Q. But ever since 1873, down to the present day of grace, you have always followed the instructions of the president of the road?

A. Yes; his instructions are final.

Q. Governor Stanford was a considerable property owner about here, wasn't he?

A. I presume he was.

Q. He owned quite a large amount of property in Oakland?

A. I do not know that he did.

Q. Did you ever know of property that he owned in Oakland?

A. I did not—never did. His property, principally, as I understood it, was in the Santa Clara Valley around Palo Alto, and in the Sacramento Valley around Vina.

Q. And you never knew of his interest in any property in Oakland yourself?

1266 A. No, sir.

Q. Did you hear this conversation between Mr. Towne and Mr. Stanford when Mr. Towne was objecting to the low rates to Oakland?

A. No; I did not.

Mr. McClennen. In view of the answer of the witness, petitioner moves that the answer of the witness on direct examination relative to a conversation between Mr. Towne and Mr. Stanford be stricken out as something of which he did not have personal knowledge, and therefore is nothing more than hearsay.

Redirect examination by Mr. Herrin:

Q. How did you happen to have any knowledge of the conversation you detailed on your direct examination?

A. It was told me by Mr. T. H. Goodman, my superior.

Q. At what time?

A. Shortly after it occurred.

Q. Was it not in connection with what you were doing in putting in an order?

Mr. McClennen. That is objected to as leading.

1267 The Witness. No; I did not put in the rate. It was not an instruction to me.

By Mr. Herrin:

Q. What I want to know is whether it was narrated to you weeks or years afterwards, as a sort of gossip or history, or whether it was told you at the time you were taking action concerning those particular rates.

being known thereafter as the Atlantic system and those west of E Paso as the Pacific system.

Q. And what officers had jurisdiction over the Pacific system

1271 A. Those that I have just named.

Q. What officers had jurisdiction over the Atlantic system
That is, where were they located?

A. They were located at New Orleans and Houston.

Q. You are familiar, are you, with the interchange of traffic be tween the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific at Ogden?

A. Yes.

Q. Just state, generally, how trains have been operated in pas ing through that junction point; what delays or what expeditio there is there—just state generally how it has been done since yo have known about it, since 1883.

A. They have been operated substantially the same as they woul be through a terminal on any one line. The passenger trains ha been, and are now, made up at Oakland Pier and go through solid the Union Pacific; and the same in the other direction. Freig trains are merely made up there, the same as they would be at a other terminal. There is no delay on account of being another li
It is operated substantially as one through line.

Q. A through continuous line?

A. A through continuous line.

1272 Mr. McCLENNEN. This last question is objected to as lea ing, by containing in it, in the direct examiner's words, t language of the Pacific Railroad acts of 1862 and 1864.

Mr. HERRIN. I was simply copying the eminent counsel for t Government, who, in his examination of witnesses in Chicago, us language from the railroad acts and decisions. I did not know was objectionable.

Mr. McCLENNEN. It is not made objectionable by reason of bei a copy of the conduct of counsel for the Government. The obj tion was another one.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Was there any difference between the interchange of traffic transfer of traffic through Ogden and its passing through, say, Paso?

A. None whatever.

Q. Or any other division point of junction between two divisi of a road?

A. It is substantially the same.

Q. State whether or not the officials of the Union Pacific, as as those of the Central Pacific first, and afterwards the South Pacific Company, have cooperated in this interchange of traffic, or has there been friction.

1273 A. I think they have always cooperated.

Q. As to the routing of freight and passenger trains over the lines included within the Pacific system, did you regard the ownership of those lines; did that form any part of your consideration for determining the route, or was the route determined by other considerations, and if so, what?

A. Wholly by other considerations. That is, by the directness of the route, by the volume of business to be accommodated, and to no extent whatever by reason of different corporate properties.

Mr. HERRIN. That is all.

Cross-examination by Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. Mr. Richardson, will you define what the duties of superintendent of transportation are, as that office has been exercised in this railroad?

A. I have charge of the handling and distribution of cars, general supervision of the arrangement of schedules, and train movement, and the multitude of things that are connected with such matters.

Q. Do you have anything to do with keeping up the equipment, the rolling stock?

1274 A. Maintaining it?

Q. No. Do you have anything to do with determining the routes which trains shall take, passenger and freight?

A. I have not the authority to determine that, but have something to do with it in conference with other officials.

Q. When the question arises as to whether a train shall be put on or taken off, from San Francisco to Ogden or from San Francisco to New Orleans, whether it be a passenger train or a freight train, do you exercise any authority or discretion in the matter?

A. Those things are generally arranged by conference between the general manager and the officials of the traffic department. I am frequently present at such conferences.

Q. To contribute your ideas to them?

A. Yes.

Q. There is considerable interchange of traffic at El Paso with the Rock Island Railroad, is there not?

A. With the El Paso & Southwestern.

Q. With the El Paso & Southwestern?

A. Yes.

1275 Q. That is in some way a railroad that is allied with the Rock Island?

A. Yes.

Q. And is the means by which the Rock Island reaches El Paso?

A. Yes.

Q. When shipments are going through from Chicago to San Francisco over the Rock Island and El Paso & Southwestern and Southern Pacific to San Francisco is there a coöperation between the officials of the El Paso & Southwestern and the Southern Pacific?

A. There is.

Q. To facilitate the transfer at El Paso?

A. Yes.

Q. And those freight trains come through just as if they were running over one continuous line from Chicago through El Paso to San Francisco?

A. Substantially; yes.

Q. And at Ogden there is an interchange of traffic between the Southern Pacific and the Denver & Rio Grande?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. And the officials of that road cooperate with the officials 1276 of the Southern Pacific to pass the traffic through Ogden without delay?

A. Yes.

Q. And they are run as one continuous line to the eastern destination?

A. Yes.

Q. And in this respect there is no difference between the treatment accorded the Union Pacific and that accorded the Denver & Rio Grande or the El Paso & Southwestern by the officials of the Southern Pacific?

A. So far as I know, no.

Q. And in assenting to Mr. Herrin's proposition that the operation through Ogden was as of one continuous line, that is all you meant?

A. That was all I meant.

Q. When a railroad is operated as one continuous railroad it is the universal effort of railroad officials to route as much traffic over that road as is possible, is it not?

A. I suppose that would be true; yes.

Q. That is, if you were operating a railroad from San Francisco to Omaha through Ogden, it would be a part of the ordinary 1277 course of business for you to endeavor to put as much traffic over that road as you could?

A. Naturally.

Q. And, indeed, in operating the continuous railroad from San Francisco through El Paso to New Orleans, it has been your effort and that of your brothers in the service to route as much traffic over that railroad as is possible?

A. The routing of traffic is handled by the officials of the traffic department, and I presume that is their effort.

Q. You have, from your relation with the company, known for years of the effort that has been put forth by the Southern Pacific Company to route as much freight as possible through El Paso?

A. Well, I know of that feature of the business only incidentally.

Q. But, even though it comes to you incidentally, you are well aware of that fact?

A. I believe they make every effort to route as much business as they can by both lines.

Q. They prefer their long haul, do they not?

A. I presume so; yes.

1278 Q. And you do not bear in mind any instances where they have sought to route any freight through Ogden that could be influenced to go through El Paso—transcontinental freight?

A. That is a matter I can not testify to, because I do not know what the conditions have been surrounding that feature of the business.

Q. How long have you been familiar with the way in which freight has moved through Ogden to the Atlantic seaboard and to Central Freight Association territory?

A. I have been more or less familiar with it for about twenty years.

Q. Has it moved that way without any substantial delays?

A. By either line?

Q. By either line.

A. Why, there have been delays from time to time, but nothing in the nature of a general stoppage, if that is what is meant.

Q. The delays have been the exception rather than the rule?

A. Yes.

Q. And only such delays as from time to time are inevitable on any railroad?

1279 A. That is what I mean.

Q. Just as you have had them on the Sunset Line?

A. Yes.

Q. You spoke of the Central Pacific Railroad operating all the different lines in 1883. You did not mean to include in that, did you, what is now called the coast division and was then known as the northern division, running from San Francisco through Gilroy?

A. At that time that particular piece of line was operated under a separate organization—operated independently.

Q. And was operated under the name of the Southern Pacific Railroad?

A. Yes.

Mr. McClennen. That is all.

Mr. HERRIN. That is all.

(Whereupon an adjournment was taken until Monday, March 1915, at eleven o'clock a. m.)

GEORGE ROSS JACKSON was called as a witness on behalf of t defendants, and having been duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. HERRIN:

Q. What is your age?

A. I shall be sixty-two years old next June.

Q. And your residence?

A. 1646 Fell Street.

Q. And your occupation?

A. I am assistant chief clerk in the treasurer's office.

Q. Of the Southern Pacific Company?

A. Of the Southern Pacific Company.

Q. You may state if you ever worked for the Central Pacific Ra road Company, and if so, give the dates, and narrate in a general w what you did.

A. I worked for the Central Pacific in December, 1875, a 1282 worked up with the Central Pacific until it was leased to t
Southern Pacific Company in 1885.

Q. What did you do after 1885?

A. I worked for the Southern Pacific Company.

Q. And since have continued with that company?

A. Yes.

Q. During 1885 did you have any work which related to the of of the secretary of the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. In the year 1885 I was in the secretary's office—Mr. Miller.

Q. Mr. E. H. Miller?

A. Mr. E. H. Miller, jr.

Q. What were you doing in the secretary's office?

A. My first piece of work there was to strike a balance of the Central Pacific Railroad Company's stock.

Q. And did you have the stock ledgers?

A. At the meeting at Fourth and Townsend Streets in April, 1885, I handled the stock ledgers at the meeting and verified the stock voted by the proxies by the ledger.

Q. That was in April, 1885?

A. April, 1885. I can not call to memory the date.

1283 Q. What was the business, if you remember, that passed on at that meeting, or any of it?

A. It was the lease to the Southern Pacific Company of the Central Pacific Railroad Company and the lines which had been leased to the Central Pacific Railroad Company.

Q. It was the meeting at which was considered the lease of the lines owned by the Central Pacific Railroad Company to the Southern Pacific Company?

A. To the Southern Pacific Company for ninety-nine years, yes.

Q. Did you attend the meeting?

A. Yes.

Q. What did you do at the meeting?

A. I had to verify the proxies by the stock ledgers, and the ones who were there and had the right to vote the stock.

Q. You were what you might call in charge of the list of stockholders and proxies?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember what the vote was?

Mr. McCLENNEN. Just a moment. I do not know whether it has definitely appeared—it has by inference—but I understood you 1284 to say that there is no question but what the stock ledger and all duplicates of it of that time and the records of the meeting and all duplicates are out of existence.

Mr. HERRIN. There is no question about that; no.

Mr. BLAIR. Do you want to stipulate that, or will you take that as an answer to the question?

Mr. McCLENNEN. Yes; if we have your assurance.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Where were the books that were there at that time sent?

A. At that time they were shipped to New York and they were burned up in the Equitable Life Assurance Building fire, as I understand it; even the minutes of the meeting which I put in the book.

Q. But you do not know that?

A. I do not know that. I understand they were, but I do not know it; it is only hearsay.

Q. Do you recollect what the vote was or about what it was?

A. I think approximately about 550,000 shares, but I can not say offhand; probably a little more.

Q. It was voted how?

1285 A. Voted in favor of the leasing of the Central Pacific to the Southern Pacific Company.

Q. Was there any vote against the lease?

A. None whatever; no, sir.

Mr. McCLENNEN. About 550,000 shares?

The WITNESS. Of course I can not tell offhand, but approximately that. I think there were about 560,000; between 550,000 and 560,000 if my memory serves me correctly.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. They were voted for the lease?

A. Voted for the lease; yes.

Q. What were you doing in the years 1882–1884?

A. In 1882–1884 I was in the auditor's office.

Q. With what particular duties?

A. Clerk in the auditor's office and on the pay car.

Q. Did you travel with the pay car?

A. I traveled with the pay car from, I think, about February 1882, almost up to the time the pay check system was established in 1893.

Q. What lines did that pay car traverse from 1882 to 1884?

1286 A. From 1882 to 1884 it covered all of them, or nearly all with the exception of a few of the branches, and we paid until the connection was made at the Pecos River, in Texas.

Q. It covered the lines of the Central Pacific Railroad then in existence?

A. All of them; yes.

Q. And it covered the lines of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company south of Goshen?

A. South of Goshen.

Q. To what point southerly? How far did you go south?

A. Which way do you mean—beyond Goshen?

Q. Yes; south of Goshen.

A. We went all the way to the end of the road.

Q. Where was that?

A. The end of the road when I first started in was at Willcox, Arizona, and we continued to the Pecos River.

Q. You continued until you reached the Pecos River?

A. Until we reached the Pecos River and made a connection.

Q. In Texas?

A. Yes.

Q. Was that the point of junction between the eastern and western construction of the through line?

1287 A. Yes.

Q. And about what year was that made? I do not know that you can remember.

A. I think it must have been in the latter part of 1882 or the early part of 1883.

Q. You are correct. Now, did you, in this pay car, pay the operating employees of the lines?

A. Yes; all of them.

Q. Did you, in addition, pay any other employees?

A. We paid the construction men. They were paid out from that car.

Q. During this time you went out to what they called the front and paid the men engaged in construction work?

A. We paid the men on the construction work, away out where the grading camps were; we went out to the end.

Q. Do you remember who was in charge of that construction?

A. J. H. Strobridge.

Q. You made several trips east of El Paso, did you?

A. Yes; as I say, we went all the way to the Pecos River, which was approximately, I think, about 300 miles. I am not quite 1288 sure as to the distance, but approximately that.

Q. Other witnesses have said it was 418 miles east of El Paso.

A. Well, I say approximately that.

Q. During the time of the construction of that road from El Paso to the Pecos River, you made trips how frequently?

A. I used to go down there about every two months.

Q. And during that time you made these bimonthly trips and paid off the construction forces as well as the operating forces?

A. Yes.

Q. After the line was opened as a through line, how far did you go with the pay car?

A. El Paso.

Q. You did not go east of El Paso after that?

A. No, sir.

Mr. HERRIN. Take the witness.

Cross-examination by Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. Is the exact text of the vote or resolution of April, 1885, 1289 relative to this lease in existence anywhere, so far as you know?

A. I do not know; I can not say.

Q. Have you had occasion to see whether it could be found anywhere?

A. No, sir.

Q. Was it a long resolution?

A. What do you mean?

Q. I mean in phraseology.

A. I think so; yes.

Q. Was it a paragraph, or a page, or two pages?

A. Probably several pages.

Mr. HERRIN. We have made very diligent search, Mr. McClennen, and we have not been able to find any original or any copy of the resolution authorizing this lease referred to in the questions.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. Would it be possible for you to come anywhere near reciting that resolution?

A. No, sir; it would not.

Q. Was that the only business done at the meeting?

A. That was the only business done at the meeting.

Q. Do you bear in mind about how many proxies covered 1290 this some 550,000 shares?

A. I can not say offhand, but there were a great many of them; probably a couple of hundred or more.

Q. How many voting persons were there at the meeting? That is, stockholders of record.

A. I do not think to exceed a dozen.

Q. Who were those persons, as far as you can now recall?

A. I can not call the names to memory.

Q. Was Mr. Huntington present, Collis P. Huntington?

A. Yes, sir; I think he was.

Q. Was Governor Stanford present?

A. I think he was also.

Q. And Charles Crocker?

A. Charles Crocker, and Charles F. Crocker and E. H. Miller; I can not call to memory whether W. V. Huntington and H. E. Huntington were there or not. They were also directors.

Q. And Timothy Hopkins?

A. I met Timothy Hopkins and H. E. Huntington. I think Timothy Hopkins was there. He was treasurer at that time.

Q. And Mrs. Searles, who had been Mrs. Mark Hopkins?

A. No; I think Mr. Searles' stock was voted on proxies 1291 which were handled by Mr. E. H. Miller.

Q. Can you contribute any more names?

A. Oh, I could not; no, offhand, I could not.

Q. The majority of the stock was voted by proxy?

A. The majority of the stock was voted by proxy; yes.
Q. Mr. Stanford at that time did not have over 33,000 shares?
A. I think the Big Four had between 30,000 and 35,000 shares.
Q. Apiece?
A. Approximately, apiece; and the bulk of the stock was held by eople in the New York office.
Q. That is, office employees?
A. I do not say office employees, but officers there probably.
Q. I suppose it is clear, but by the "Big Four" you mean——
A. I mean Mr. Huntington, Mr. Crocker, Mr. Stanford, and Mrs. earles, representing, of course——
Q. Representing the Mark Hopkins interest?
A. Representing the Mark Hopkins interest.
92 Q. By the way, was Mrs. Searles the sole beneficiary of the Mark Hopkins estate?
A. To the best of my knowledge; yes.
Q. It has appeared that Mark Hopkins died in 1878. Do you member when Mrs. Searles remarried?
A. It must have been in 1882 or 1883. I can not say offhand. I o not recollect.
Q. Timothy Hopkins was not the born son of Mark Hopkins?
A. No, sir.
Q. He was adopted by Mrs. Hopkins?
A. By Mark Hopkins.
Q. Oh, by Mark Hopkins?
A. Yes.
Q. Were you one of the proxies at the meeting?
A. No, sir.
Q. You were at that time about thirty years of age?
A. Well, I was a little more than thirty. I will be sixty-two on y next birthday.
Q. So that you were thirty-two, approximately?
A. Thirty-two or thirty-three. I was probably in my thirty-third ear.
Q. At that time were you a prominent clerk or a subordinate clerk?
93 A. I was a prominent clerk in one sense of the word. I was taken from the auditor's office and put into the secretary's fice to do this work. I was there approximately during the year.
went up there early in January.
Q. Put in another way, were you the first man under Mr. Miller?
A. No, sir; I was not the first man under Mr. Miller. There was
. L. Lansing and Mr. Miller's brother, Lash Miller.

Q. Can you fix, with some accuracy, the number of shares that were distributed among the New York office people?

A. No; I can not.

Q. Did you know about the sales of stock that had taken place at that time?

A. You mean Central Pacific stock?

Q. Central Pacific stock.

A. No; that was all done in the New York office. D. S. Watkins was transfer agent there.

Q. You did know, did you not, at that time that the stock had been sold in considerable quantity in the public market?

A. No; I can not say that I did.

Q. You mean prior to the meeting?

1294 A. No, sir; I can not say. Of course, there were a good many transfers from time to time, but I do not recollect whether they were large quantities or small now.

Q. Did you know of the fact that sales were taking place more extensively than transfers on the books were being made?

A. No; I can not say to that, either.

Q. Did you have anything to do with the making up of the reports that were made to the California Railroad Commission showing the number of shareholders?

A. Yes, sir; I worked on them.

Q. Mr. Jackson, what is the first year of those reports that you had to do with? Did you have to do with those of 1882?

A. No; I did not have to do with those of 1882. I did not work on them at all.

Q. Or 1883?

A. It might have been after 1885. I do not think it was prior to that.

Q. You do not think you had anything to do with those prior to 1885?

A. No, sir. When I got into the pay car I was put on 1295 some special work which fell to my lot, and I worked on these reports to the railroad commission.

Q. Do you bear in mind that in 1884—or 1885, at this meeting, to put it precisely—the total stock-holding list was some twenty-six hundred-odd shareholders?

A. I should say about that.

Q. That would be the first date when you would have any decently accurate information as to the number of shareholders?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Your knowledge of the number of shareholders ran from that time down to when?

A. It ended with that year, 1885, because that was the only year that I was in the secretary's office.

Q. I see; just that one year?

A. Yes; I had no other year at all there.

Q. You think, of the something like twenty-six hundred shareholders, that there were something like two hundred in number represented at the meeting?

A. Oh, there were more than that; there were more than that. Of course, it is a pretty hard thing to say just how many there were. It is a good while ago.

1296 Q. What is your best recollection?

A. There were more than two hundred there, surely.

Q. Were there more than three hundred?

A. I should say, proxies and all, there were probably five or six hundred.

Q. Were the proxies all, or substantially all, voted by one man?

A. By Mr. Miller.

Q. By E. H. Miller, jr.?

A. Yes.

Q. I will put it in double form: Were they all voted by him?

A. The proxies were all, to the best of my recollection, voted by Mr. Miller; yes, sir.

Q. Would it be possible for you to give us any idea of the number of shares held outside of the Big Four and the New York office men?

A. I do not think to exceed thirty per cent.

Q. And when you say not to exceed thirty per cent you mean to approximate thirty per cent, as about what was held outside of the Big Four and the New York office?

A. Yes, sir.

1297 Q. Were you enough conversant with the affairs of the company to know that these New York office men were chiefly, so to speak, straw men for the real owners?

A. That, of course, I could not say.

Mr. McCLENNEN. I think that is all.

Redirect examination by Mr. HERRIN:

Q. E. H. Miller is not living, is he?

A. No, sir; he is dead.

Q. And Gerrit Lansing is also dead?

A. He is also dead; yes, sir.

Q. Mr. Miller held the secretaryship?

A. Yes. He was secretary of the Central Pacific Railroad Company.

Mr. GANN. Is Mr. Miller's brother dead—Lash Miller?

The WITNESS. Yes; he died before Mr. Miller did.

Mr. HERRIN. That is all.

Mr. MCCLENNEN. After conference between counsel, it was agre as follows:

The stock ledgers and transfer books of the Central Pacific Rai road Company were all destroyed in the San Francisco fire 1298 1906, and those ledgers and transfer books, so far as th showed the old holdings of this stock, have never been r produced.

In 1899, or thereabouts, pursuant to a reorganization agreemen the then existing stockholders in the Central Pacific Railroad Co pany, substantially all, deposited their stock with the reorganizati managers, in carrying out the reorganization. These certificates, deposited, were transferred into the name of the Southern Paci Company, except a scattering few for a few shares, that were p into the names of individuals to qualify them as directors; and t stock in the Central Pacific Railroad Company has remained, sin that date and to the present time, in substantially that condition.

After the fire, a stock ledger was opened to show the holdin evidenced by these certificates, but this ledger did not cover anythi prior to 1899.

(Whereupon, an adjournment was taken until to-morrow, Tuesd March 9, 1915, at 11 o'clock a. m.)

Direct examination by Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Where do you reside?

A. Menlo Park.

Q. Did you ever live with Mark Hopkins, who was one of t founders of the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. Yes; from three years of age until his death.

Q. From the time you were three years of age?

A. From the time I was three years of age. I was his adopted son.

Q. You remember the year that he died?

A. He died March 29, 1878.

Q. Did you at any time have anything to do with the Central Pacific Railroad Company; and if so, what?

A. Yes; I started in the service of the Central Pacific Railroad Company as a clerk in the western division at Oakland and served there during the year 1881.

Q. How long did you remain there?

A. I went there to learn the details of the operating 1301 service; I remained there a little over a year.

Q. And afterwards did you continue in the service of the company; and, if so, in what capacity?

A. I was elected treasurer of the Central Pacific Company in 1882, to succeed Mr. E. W. Hopkins, and continued as treasurer and as a director until 1892.

Q. Of the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. The Central Pacific Railroad Company.

Q. Were you also a director at any time of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company?

A. Yes; for the same period I was a director of the Southern Pacific Railroad of California.

Q. Mr. E. W. Hopkins was a relative of Mark Hopkins?

A. A nephew.

Q. He resigned as treasurer in 1882, and you succeeded him?

A. I succeeded him.

Q. As treasurer of the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember when the Southern Pacific Company was organized?

A. Yes.

1302 Q. Were you an official of that company?

A. I was a director and its treasurer from its organization.

Q. In what year?

A. 1885.

Q. And continued until when?

A. I continued as a director until 1889, and as treasurer until 1892.

Q. Your jurisdiction as treasurer of the Central Pacific Railroad Company extended from 1882 to 1885, over what lines of railroad?

A. Over the Central Pacific main lines and its leased lines; all of the property of the Central Pacific Railroad.

Q. Generally, what lines did the Central Pacific Railroad Company lease?

A. Various subsidiary lines; a line from Goshen down the San Joaquin Valley to the south.

Q. How far did the line extend from Goshen south?

A. To Yuma; likewise, the Northen Railway or California from Oakland to Lathrop, and quite a number of other subsidiary lines. The reports will show.

Q. The Central Pacific Railroad Company, during that time
1303 until the Southern Pacific Company took possession in 1885 was also operating all these lines as lessee?

A. It was the operating company for all the lines.

Q. Was it lessee of the lines south of Yuma, or east of Yuma?

A. Yes.

Q. How far did its jurisdiction extend as lessee?

A. Its jurisdiction extended as lessee through the Central Pacific Railroad Company of Arizona, the S. P. of New Mexico, running through to El Paso. During the first years of my connection with the company the line was finished through to New Orleans, and I think the Central Pacific operated the line as far south as the Pecos River, and perhaps a little beyond. I do not now recall whether we went through to San Antonio on that operation or not.

Q. As treasurer, did your jurisdiction extend over the lines to New Orleans?

A. As treasurer of the Southern Pacific Company, yes.

Q. You do not recall as to how it stood when you were treasurer of the Central Pacific Railroad Company prior to 1885?

1304 A. I had no connection with the lines in Texas and Louisiana previous to their completion as a through line.

Q. Do you remember what year they were completed as a through line?

A. In the spring of 1883.

Q. After the opening of that line as a through line, and prior to 1885 when the Southern Pacific Company took charge, did your duties as treasurer extend to the line between El Paso and New Orleans?

A. Well, it extended as far as the operations of the Central Pacific Company's lease extended. Just where that breaking-off point was, I do not now recall; but it was probably west of San Antonio, but previous to 1885 there was an interregnum there, and I think the officials in San Francisco for a short time controlled the operation. Afterwards the line was so long that for operation convenience they created the Atlantic and Pacific divisions, the Atlantic division being east of El Paso and the Pacific division west.

Q. You remember the northern division of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company in California?

A. Yes.

Q. Did the Central Pacific Railroad Company have anything to do with that?

1305 A. No; that was operated as a separate division, for convenience of operation.

Q. And finally that came under the jurisdiction of the Southern Pacific Company, did it?

A. Yes; when the line was completed through to Los Angeles, the northern division was abolished and became part of the Southern Pacific Company's operation under its general manager.

Q. And under its lease?

A. Under its lease.

Q. Did you, as treasurer of the Central Pacific, have anything to do with the Pacific Improvement Company?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember that that company, the Pacific Improvement Company, was engaged in constructing the Central Pacific Railroad line from Redding north to the Oregon State line?

A. Yes; they were constructing that at the time I became treasurer.

Q. Who was in charge of the operations for the Southern Pacific Company at that time?

A. F. S. Douty was its secretary and manager. I think 1306 Mr. J. H. Strobridge was superintendent of construction, and maybe president of the company.

Q. Did you have anything to do with obtaining moneys for the Pacific Improvement Company to pay its expenditures?

A. Yes. Do you want the process, Mr. Herrin?

Q. Yes.

A. The Pacific Improvement Company was the constructing company and had large expenditures to make. Money was deposited with me as treasurer of the Central Pacific Railroad Company up to 1885, and as treasurer of the Southern Pacific Company thereafter. They drew drafts against these amounts deposited with me, and they generally had a large balance on hand, running into heavy amounts. Occasionally they might run short, but the drafts were paid just the same; and in these rare instances when the money would not be on hand to meet the drafts, I personally would go out and borrow the money of somebody in San Francisco to make good.

Q. You would borrow the money for what company?

A. For the Pacific Improvement Company. I had no official connection with that company, nor was I an officer of it, but it was a part of my duty to keep alive the notes that were outstanding. At 1307 one time in San Francisco there were four or five million dollars, and it was my duty to keep them alive.

Q. The notes of what company?

A. The Pacific Improvement Company; and this money was deposited with me as treasurer, and I would notify Mr. Douty that I had secured a loan and had deposited those moneys with myself as treasurer; I would notify him to that effect, likewise reporting the fact to the secretary of the company, who kept the books. I kept nothing but the cash transactions.

Q. The secretary was Mr. Douty?

A. The secretary was Mr. Douty; and likewise the secretary of the railroad companies, who kept my books, the treasurer's books. I kept no books but cash transfers in my office. These moneys were kept on deposit. We used them in the affairs of the railroad company to pay our obligations, just the same as if they had been turned in to us by railroad receipts. I say "kept on deposit." I meant kept on deposit in our banks. We used the money.

Q. You kept advised, then, as I understand it, of the financial condition of the Pacific Improvement Company?

A. Yes.

1308 Q. And to what amount or amounts did you negotiate, yourself, loans for the Pacific Improvement Company, in the way you have mentioned?

A. That is pretty hard to say.

Q. Well, in a general way?

A. I kept alive four or five million dollars' worth of loans on this market, personally; negotiated the loans for the Pacific Improvement Company. Of course they would vary in amount from year to year, according to the condition of the money market, and there would be short time notes—so that I can not give you any of the totals. I did that business until my other duties were such that they appointed a financial agent, in the person of N. K. Masten, who relieved me of the duties.

Q. Is Mr. Masten living?

A. He is deceased. Mr. Masten, however, reported to me, in his operations, and acted under my direction.

Q. He acted as financial agent, to look after the active details, but you still supervised his work?

A. Yes.

Q. But you had no official position, yourself, with the Pacific Improvement Company?

A. None whatever.

1309 Q. Who were the owners of the capital stock of the Pacific Improvement Company?

A. Leland Stanford, C. P. Huntington, Charles Crocker, and Mr. Mark Hopkins.

Mr. McCLENNEN. This is speaking of what date? What date is covered by this last?

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. At all times, as far as you know?

A. At all times. Either they or their successors in interest.

Q. Was C. P. Huntington an officer or director of the Pacific Improvement Company?

A. No.

Q. Was Leland Stanford?

A. No.

Q. Was Charles Crocker?

A. No.

Q. Is Mr. Douty, the secretary, living?

A. He is deceased.

Q. The Southern Development Company has been mentioned in this testimony here. Do you remember that company?

A. Yes.

1310 Q. That was a company engaged in constructing railroad lines where?

A. In Texas, largely.

Q. Do you know, during the time you were treasurer of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, who were the stockholders of that company, generally?

A. I do not recall now.

Q. Did the Hopkins estate have any stock in the company?

A. Yes.

Q. Did C. P. Huntington?

A. Yes.

Q. Did Leland Stanford?

A. Yes.

Q. Did Charles Crocker?

A. Yes.

Q. What stockholders, within your knowledge, controlled the operations of that company during the time you were treasurer?

Mr. MCCLENNEN. That is objected to as calling upon the witness to draw a conclusion, rather than to state the facts, and to express an opinion.

1311 The WITNESS. I can state as a fact that the entire control, during the time that I was a director and treasurer of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, resided in and was exercised by the four interests of Stanford, Huntington, Hopkins, and Crocker. I know this from my associations with them. In fact, during part of the time I was one of them. Likewise, I know it from attendance at directors' meetings, stockholders' meetings, and from transactions in which the voice of the interests dominated and was put into effect by the companies involved.

Mr. McCLENNEN. The petitioner moves to strike the answer out as being an expression of opinion, not responsive, and in excess of the question.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Did you have consultations or conferences from time to time with Messrs. Huntington, Stanford, and Crocker concerning the business of the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you attend the stockholders' meetings of that company at any time?

A. Yes.

Q. Were you a director of that company?

A. Yes.

1312 Q. Did you attend the directors' meetings?

A. Yes.

Q. Was there at any time in any of these meetings any adverse vote or votes in opposition to the wishes of the Huntington, Stanford, and Crocker interests?

Mr. McCLENNEN. That is objected to as too general in form, leading, and calling upon the witness to draw a conclusion and an opinion, and also as immaterial, incompetent, and irrelevant.

The WITNESS. During the time that I was a director there was never a meeting of the stockholders or directors in which there were adverse interests. Everything was unanimous and directed by the four parties in interest.

Mr. McCLENNEN. The part of the answer beginning "and directed by the four parties in interest" the petitioner moves to strike out as not responsive, and as the statement of a conclusion and opinion of the witness.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Coming down to 1885, just prior to the organization of the Southern Pacific Company and its taking charge of these lines, do you know who owned the capital stock of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company of California?

1313 A. That was owned by the four parties in interest, Stanford, Hopkins, Crocker, and Huntington.

Q. Was that also true of the capital stock of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company of Arizona?

A. Yes.

Q. And of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company of New Mexico?

A. Yes.

Q. There were other companies that had some lines, sections of lines, that were being operated under the leased lines of the Central Pacific Railroad Company. Do you recall any of them? There was the Northern Railway Company?

A. The Northern Railway Company of California; yes.

Q. Who owned the capital stock of that line, if you remember?

A. Stanford, Huntington, Hopkins, and Crocker.

Q. That was also true of other of these lines owned by subordinate companies?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember having a series of meetings in New York in the summer of 1884?

A. Yes.

1314 Q. Please state how you came to attend those meetings.

A. I received a telegram from Senator Stanford, then in New York, asking me to go on, in the summer of 1884. I think it was in the latter part of July when I proceeded to New York. I found there Senator Stanford, Mr. Huntington, and Mr. Crocker, and it was explained to me that the meeting was desired in order to go over our affairs generally, and likewise to take up the question of the organization of a new company for the purpose of holding and operating the railroad companies that were owned by the interests and controlled by them, both those under the management of the Central Pacific and those east of El Paso in Texas and Louisiana.

Q. Do you know if any record or minutes was kept of the transactions at those meetings?

A. Yes; we appointed William E. Brown our secretary and requested him to keep a record of our proceedings from day to day. These meetings ran over—well, there were thirty or more of them, and they ran over until the middle of November, and there was a record kept.

Q. Mr. Brown kept that record?

A. Mr. Brown kept the record.

Q. I will hand you a document, and you may state what 1315 it is, if you recognize it [handing paper to witness].

A. This is Mr. Brown's handwriting, and is the record of those proceedings.

Q. What is that paper that I handed you?

A. That is the record of the proceedings of our meetings in New York in 1884, kept by our secretary, William E. Brown.

Mr. Herrin. I offer in evidence this record, and ask to have it marked as an exhibit. I will say that it contains, preceding the record proper, what purports to be an index of the different subjects considered, with the reference to the pages of the record, and I will ask that in copying it into the record it be copied page for page so that the index will apply correctly.

Mr. McCLENNEN. Before looking at the record, the petitioner objects to its introduction as immaterial, incompetent, and hearsay, not the best evidence; and other objections, if any, are reserved until petitioner has had an opportunity to see what the offer is.

(The record referred to was received in evidence and marked "Defendants' Exhibit (Hopkins) No. 21, March 9, 1915", and will be found in the volume of defendants' exhibits.)

1316 Mr. McCLENNEN. I suppose I shall have to go through this in order to understand it before you go on.

Mr. HERRIN. I want to call attention to different parts of it. I want to ask some questions about it first.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. At these meetings Mr. Brown was present and made a record of what was done, did he?

A. Yes.

Q. And at subsequent meetings was it the practice to read that minute or record and approve it, as you would the record of a directors' meeting?

A. Yes.

Q. You have examined this record from time to time, have you, afterwards?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you find it correct?

A. As far as my recollection went, yes. I would like to ask you to explain that question, Mr. Herrin. Of course, I am answering it as having examined it. It was absolutely correct at the time, and was acted upon, of course, as being correct. To the best of my recollection, it is correct now.

Q. If it was correct then, it could not become incor-1317 rect afterwards?

A. I did not understand the import of your question exactly. I have not examined the details of it.

Q. I wanted to know whether or not those minutes were not kept substantially as the secretary of a corporation would keep the minutes of the acts of the board of directors.

A. They were; and approved.

Q. The first minute here is of a meeting, New York, August 28, 1884, in which it is stated:

"At a meeting of Leland Stanford, C. P. Huntington, Charles Crocker, and Timothy Hopkins, representing Mrs. M. F. S. Hopkins, it was mutually agreed to meet together from day to day for the purpose of discussing and deciding business matters in which all were interested.

"W. E. Brown was appointed secretary, and requested to keep minutes of meetings and a record of transactions.

"The first business was to formulate a basis of settlement with Thomas W. Pierce, and it was agreed to purchase from Mr. Pierce 5,747 shares of the capital stock of the Galveston, Har. & San Antonio R. R. Co. and 548 shares of the capital stock of the Texas & New Orleans R. R. Co. and to give him credit for the same on 1318 the books of the Southern Dev. Co. It was then agreed to make up the interest on all the accounts of the stockholders of the S. D. Co. to August 30th, 1884.

"S. H. H. & C. to assume payment of the bills payable of the S. D. Co. & the amount due to the P. I. Co. on the books of the S. D. Co.

"Notes of the S. D. Co. payable in one year to be executed in favor of the five stockholders, drawing interest at 6% pr. annum, for the balance due to each. Mr. Pierce places in the hands of the four others, one-quarter to each, notes given for his balance as collateral security for his proportion of indebtedness to them; he also places in their hands his 10,000 shares of capital stock of the S. D. Co. as further collateral security for his indebtedness.

"The secretary was instructed to make up a statement embodying these points of agreement.

"Adjourned.

"The letters S. H. H. & C. used in these minutes refer to Leland Stanford, C. P. Huntington, Charles Crocker, & Mrs. M. F. S. Hopkins.

"S. D. Co. refers to Southern Development Co. P. I. Co. refers to Pacific Improvement Co.

1319 "W. E. BROWN, Secretary."

Do you recall the facts stated in those minutes, so far as they relate to Thomas W. Pierce?

A. I do.

Q. And this correctly states what occurred at that meeting?

A. Yes.

Q. Who was Mr. Pierce?

A. Mr. Thomas W. Pierce was of Boston. He was largely interested in Galveston, Houston & San Antonio and Louisiana Western Railroads as a stockholder; likewise, a stockholder in the Southern Development Company, holding one-fifth of its capital stock, the other four-fifths being held by Huntington, Stanford, Hopkins, and Crocker, one-fifth each.

Q. The Southern Development Company was a construction company organized to do construction work on the lines east of El Paso, was it?

A. Yes.

Q. And Mr. Pierce was interested in that construction company because of his interest in the railroad companies owning parts of that line?

A. Yes.

1320 Q. I next refer to the minutes of a meeting on September 26th, in which it is stated:

"Meeting with Mr. Pierce to discuss values of the several roads in the through line contemplated between New York and San Francisco.

"It was agreed that the P. I. Co. exchange S. P. of California stock for Galveston, Harrisburgh & San Antonio stock (on road between Houston & San Antonio) on same basis of value as is embraced in the Southern Pacific organization.

"Then P. I. Company to exchange with T. W. Pierce so that he will have two shares of Southern Pacific stock for every share he owns of G. H. & S. A. old stock.

"Adjourned. W. E. BROWN, Secretary."

Then I refer to the minutes of the meeting of October 3rd, in which it is stated:

"Met at 11 a. m. All present. A proposition was submitted to Mr. Pierce to give him 150 shares of stock of the Southern Pacific Co. for each 100 shares he holds of the old stock of the Galveston, Har. & San Antonio Company.

"Mr. Pierce accepted the proposition and agreed to put in his 28,059 shares on the basis proposed.

1321 "It was then agreed (Mr. Pierce being present) that certificates of stock of the Southern Pacific Company be printed for temporary use and be issued to parties in accordance with the basis agreed upon. It was further agreed that certificates of stock with coupon warrants attached be ordered made from steel plates to be exchanged when ready for the printed certificates.

"Adjourned."

Do you recall the transactions stated in those minutes?

A. Yes.

Q. Then I refer, further, to the minutes of the meeting of October 13, 1884. I read a part only of the minutes of that meeting:

"It is agreed by all parties that the liabilities of all the companies in which they are interested be provided for as far as leaving sufficient securities to provide collaterals for their payment. After such provision is made it is agreed that all bonds and stocks belonging to the various companies be divided among the stockholders.

"It is agreed to pay into P. I. Co. $1,244,200 in S. P. of Cal. stock, to meet the trade with T. W. Pierce for exchange of stocks. Stock to be paid in as follows:

L. S.	$311,100
C. P. H.	311,000
C. C.	311,100
Mrs. H.	311,000
	$1,244,200

"Adjourned."

Do you recall that transaction?

A. Yes.

Q. Was that agreement performed?

A. Yes; all these transactions that you have mentioned there were necessary in the adjustment of the interests between Mr. Pierce and Mr. Stanford and his associates, arising out of the workings of the business of the Southern Development Company and of the railroad company, G. H. & S. A. It was an equalizing of interests.

Q. Now, I refer to a meeting of October 24, 1884, which reads:

"Memorandum of proposition for equalizing accounts was suggested and submitted by the secretary, as follows:

"Use bonds belonging to S. D. Co. to the extent of $14,000,000 to pay on account of notes due S. H. H. & C. from that Co. at a valuation of, say, 85¢ on the dollar.

1323 "This would give $3,500,000 to each of the four, in bonds. Then let the P. I. Co. buy and sell these bonds at same rate from the parties interested, until the accounts are made equal, as follows:

L. S. has due to him	$12,471,390.78
Cr. $3,500,000 bonds, at 85	2,975,000.00
	15,446,390.78
C. P. H. has due to him	14,502,341.71
Cr. $1,100,000 bonds, at 85	935,000.00
	15,437,341.71
C. C. has due to him	16,266,454.99
Dr. $1,000,000 bonds, at 85	850,000.00
	15,416,454.99
Mrs. H. due to her	17,088,585.70
Dr. $2,000,000 bonds, at 85	1,700,000.00
	15,388,585.70

"This leaves $1,600,000 in treasury of P. I. Co."

Do you recall that transaction?

A. Yes; that was an equalizing of the accounts between Stanford, Huntington, Hopkins, and Crocker. It had nothing to do with Mr. Pierce.

Q. I refer to an extract from the minutes of October 28th, which reads:

1324 "The question of using the bonds of G. H. & S. A. Co. belonging to the S. D. Co. for making payments on the notes of S. D. Co. was discussed with Mr. Pierce and all agreed that the proposition was a good one."

Do you recall that?

A. Yes; that was done; afterwards carried into effect.

Q. I read an extract from the minutes of October 30th:

"It was agreed (Mr. T. W. Pierce concurring) that assets of the Southern Dev. Co. may be divided pro rata in kind as far as may be advisable, Mr. Pierce desiring that his proportion of said assets be kept intact as collateral security for his portion of the indebtedness of the company until said indebtedness was paid."

Was that done?

A. That was done.

Q. The last meeting, November 7th—I read the entire minute which is:

"Met at 11 a. m.

"It was agreed to divide all the stocks of the Southern Dev. Company. And the Atlantic & Pacific stock—the proportion due to T. W. Pierce to be held as collateral."

Do you recall that transaction?

1325 A. Yes; that was for the purpose of liquidation of the Southern Development Company.

Q. I will not call attention to much more of this, because the minutes speak for themselves and, as you have stated, they are correct; but I will call attention to the minutes of September 10th which read:

"I. E. Gates and W. E. Brown were appointed a committee to examine all securities on hand in New York and all that are used as collaterals for the payment of the liabilities of S. H. H. & C.

"To ascertain what securities are available, and generally to make such an examination of the properties of S. H. H. & C. in New York as they would make if examining for an executor of one of the parties, and to make out a schedule of all securities belonging to S. H. H. & C. in New York, so that the several parties in interest can sign the schedule as of date as being correct on that date."

Do you recall that transaction?

A. I recall that action.

Q. Will you state what it was? What was the purpose of it?

A. Well, this meeting was primarily for the purpose of organizing the Southern Pacific Company. There were a lot of 1326 preliminary matters which were first taken up, and an inventory of securities in New York was one of those preliminary matters, in order to ascertain what our resources were and where they were. The four interests—by that I mean Stanford, Huntington, Hopkins, and Crocker—were large borrowers of money, and as the money market was in New York they always maintained there a large number of securities in order to take care of the collaterals upon these loans. These matters were all in Mr. Huntington's hands, and he operated them, and at this meeting and while we were all together, it was one of the times when we checked up to see where we stood.

Q. To see what you had to borrow on?

A. To see what we had to borrow on or to sell.

Q. Moneys that you were borrowing in New York were borrowed for what purpose?

A. They were borrowed for the Pacific Improvement Company, and likewise, in part, for the obligations of the railroad companies, the four parties in interest loaning their personal credit for the financing of the railroad companies.

Q. It is stated here that the committee was to examine all 1327 securities that "are used as collateral for payment of the liabilities of S. H. H. & C."

A. Yes.

Q. That is, the individuals mentioned there, those four, gave their notes, did they?

A. They gave their individual notes, with their own collateral.

Q. Did you give the notes for the Hopkins interest, or did Mrs. Hopkins?

A. Not in New York. Mr. Huntington had a power of attorney for his associates, and he signed for all of us. In San Francisco I signed for my mother. I want to say, of course, if I happened to be in New York, as I was often, and the notes came in, I signed them also there for my mother.

Q. But Mr. Huntington was authorized to act in your absence?

A. Yes.

Q. And did so act?

A. Yes.

Q. I call attention to the minutes of September 11th:

"It is agreed that the order of consideration of affairs shall be as follows:

1328 "1st. Consolidation of all the lines of Southern Pacific system in one company.

"2d. Separation of Central Pacific business from the Southern Pacific business.

"3rd. Leasing of Central Pacific system to Southern Pacific s tem. (New organization.)

"4th. General consolidation of lines from San Francisco to N port News."

Do you remember that meeting?

A. Yes.

Q. You said a while ago that the main object was to consider th

A. The organization of a new holding company to take over operate the through line from New Orleans to California.

Q. What was the reason for doing that? Was not the Cen Pacific Railroad Company and leased lines a satisfactory organi tion, or what reason was there, as you recall it?

A. The Central Pacific leased lines system had become very m smaller than the Southern Pacific Company interests had become; fact, the Southern Pacific lines, when completed through 1329 New Orleans, were at least twice as long as that of the Sou ern Pacific main lines, and we considered it advisable that long as the larger interests were concentrated in the Southern Pac Company, it should be the operating line, and accordingly we cussed and arranged what was considered a fair and equal man of doing it, and we put it into effect.

Q. As we go along in these minutes I find a meeting of Septem 25th, in which it is stated:

"It was agreed that the Southern and Central Pacific Compan terminate their present leases, and that the Central lease from Southern that portion of road between Goshen and Mojave. Th a running arrangement be made between the Central and the Sou ern Pacific Company (new organization) between Mojave and S Francisco and other points in California, as now exists between Central Pacific R. R. Co. & the Atlantic & Pacific R. R. Co."

Do you recall that?

A. I recall that. I think that was one of the suggested plans th arose in the discussion of the matter, but it was not carried into eff

Q. Not as made then?

A. Not as made then.

1330 Q. I was just calling attention to the progress of the mat as it went along. I call your attention to the minutes September 29th, where you appear to have got a little nearer to wh was done:

"Meeting assembled, all present.

"It was decided that the general offices of the Southern Pac Company be located in San Francisco.

"It was also decided to sell to the Central Pacific and Southe Pacific Railroad Companies the property owned in San Francis by S. H. H. & C. that is now used for the terminal facilities of those roads.

"The question of leasing or selling the bridges at Yuma and El Paso belonging to the P. I. Co. was discussed, but no conclusion reached."

Do you recall those matters being decided upon or agreed to?

A. Yes; they were discussed, and some, as shown there, were postponed for further action and some were decided.

Q. But you did decide to locate the general offices of the Southern Pacific Company at San Francisco?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that was afterwards done?

1331 A. That was afterwards done.

Q. And you did decide to have S. H. H. & C., those four interests, convey to the Central Pacific and Southern Pacific Companies the property in San Francisco owned by them which was used for terminal facilities?

A. Yes; and that was done.

Q. The bridges were discussed, but no action taken. How did the P. I. Company happen to own the bridge at Yuma and the bridge at El Paso, for example, if you recall?

A. Under the law, at that time, corporations were confined to State lines, so that the Southern Pacific Railroad Company of California could only run to the west bank of the Colorado River, and on the other side, the Southern Pacific of Arizona began and ran to the west side of the Rio Grande. The Galveston, Harrisburg & San Antonio Railroad started on the east bank of the Rio Grande at El Paso and proceeded eastward. Those gaps, therefore, could not be covered by the ownership of any one of those roads, therefore they were built by the Pacific Improvement Company and belonged to it until they were finally sold to the reorganization company which was authorized to run a through line.

Q. I call you attention to the minutes of October 1st,

1332 which state:

"Assembled at 11 a. m.

"Leland Stanford was appointed a committee of one to formulate his proposed method of leasing the several roads forming the through line of Southern Pacific Company.

"It was decided to take immediate action towards raising the capital stock of the Southern Pacific Company to 100 millions, and to have temporary certificates of stock printed, to be exchanged hereafter when steel plate certificates can be prepared."

Did you increase the capital stock of the Southern Pacific Company to one hundred millions?

A. Yes; the Southern Pacific Company had been organized previous spring in Kentucky. At that meeting it was agreed u that it should be raised, and it was afterwards so done, and temporary stock certificates issued.

Q. Then I refer to the minutes of October 6th, in which i stated:

"The organization of Southern Pacific Company was further cused and it was agreed to pay in one million dollars cash into treasury in accordance with the terms of the charter, an 1333 was further agreed to obtain by telegraph the resignation Mr. Echol and Mr. McHenry in order to substitute new rectors in their places."

Do you recall that matter?

A. That was done.

Q. And the meeting of October 6th—there seem to be two m ings here under that date. What is the date you have there?

Mr. ORR. October 6th.

Mr. HERRIN. And what is the next date?

Mr. ORR. October 6th.

Mr. HERRIN. Yes. This meeting is half an hour later, I no Anyhow, it is the second meeting of October 6th.

Mr. MCCLENNEN. They put that million dollars through in a short time.

Mr. HERRIN (reading): "It is agreed that the directors of Southern Pacific Company, when permanently organized, shall sist of seven, viz: C. P. Huntington, of New York; T. W. Pierc Boston, and five others to be selected, from San Francisco, and the general offices be located in San Francisco."

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. You recall that meeting, do you?

1334 A. Yes; that was done.

Q. In the record of the meeting of October 8th the date the bottom of the minute:

"It was unanimously agreed to pay into the Southern Pa Company $950,000 cash, so as to make up one million dollars actu paid in on the capital stock of the company.

"It was further agreed to invest one million dollars of cash longing to Southern Pacific Company in the six per cent 2d mort bonds of the Galveston, Harrisburgh & San Antonio Railroad C pany at the rate of ninety."

Do you recall that that was done?

A. How many?

Q. Agreed to invest one million dollars in the six per cent second mortgage bonds of the Galveston, Harrisburg & San Antonio Railroad.

A. I feel certain that it was done, but just for the moment I do not recall it.

Q. Then, in the minutes of October 9th—they are very short, and I will read them:

"General discussion of business matters, particularly of Central Pacific affairs, as connected with the organization of the new Southern Pacific Company.

1335 "Secretary instructed to hasten all matters in connection with organization of the Southern Pacific Company. Adjourned."

Then, meeting of October 20th:

"It was agreed that at meeting of stockholders of the Southern Pacific Company to-morrow that the order of business should be:

"1st. Raising capital stock to one hundred millions.

"2d. Changes in by-laws.

"3d. Fixing location of general offices.

"4th. Increase in number of directors."

You recall that?

A. Yes; that was done.

Q. It is unnecessary to go through these minutes in detail, because they speak for themselves, I think. I will ask you, however, as to the minutes of November 5, which read:

"The question of leasing the Central Pacific system of roads to the Southern Pacific Company came up.

"It was agreed to lease the properties and temporarily to fix the lease at fixed charges, and a guarantee of 2% interest on cap-1336 ital stock, and all the earnings of the Central Pacific system over and above that percentage, until the amount reached 6% on its capital stock per annum. After 6% all profits to go to the Southern Pacific Company."

Was that the basis upon which you finally made the lease of the Central Pacific to the Southern Pacific Company?

A. Yes. That was afterwards carried out by proper corporate action.

Mr. HERRIN. There are some references here to matters which apparently do not concern this particular case, and I shall not refer to them if Mr. McClennen does not.

(Whereupon a recess was taken until 2.15 o'clock p. m.)

1337 AFTER RECESS.

TIMOTHY HOPKINS, the witness under examination when recess was taken, resumed the stand and testified further as follows:

Direct examination (continued) by Mr. HERRIN:

Q. I called your attention this morning to the minutes of a meeting of September 10th, where I. E. Gates and W. E. Brown were appointed a committee to examine the securities on hand in New York and those were used as collaterals, and to ascertain what securities were available, and so forth. Do you remember whether or not there was any report made by that committee on those matters?

A. I do not recall it, but I presume a report was made. It was a usual thing to do from year to year, when we met in New York to make an inventory of what we had and where it was.

Q. In the minutes of the meeting of October 10th, where the secretary makes up a statement of Central Pacific stock on hand as follows—giving the amounts—held by these four interests

1338 and also the P. I. Company, making a total of 157,535 shares, the minutes continue:

"Some discussion with Mr. Huntington as to the Chesapeake & Ohio matters and their connection with other joint interests."

Do you remember that discussion about the Chesapeake & Ohio?

A. I do.

Q. Will you state what that was?

A. Mr. Huntington had a large interest in—in fact, controlled the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad; and it was a suggestion of his that uniting those interests and those his associates in the Chesapeake & Ohio held through to Kentucky and to the Mississippi River combined with those which his associates on the Pacific coast owned might make a transcontinental route from the Atlantic to the Pacific. He presented the matter to his associates, and that is what this refers to. It was discussed, and then it was decided that his western associates did not feel that they could go into the scheme, that they preferred to keep their development in the lines that they already possessed, from California to Louisiana.

1339 Q. So they declined to go into the Chesapeake & Ohio with Mr. Huntington?

A. Yes.

Q. Was there any talk about the collaterals that were used? The collaterals were in the hands of whom in New York?

A. Mr. Huntington. One of the reasons for that inventory that there mentioned and for Mr. Gates and Mr. Brown being appointed a committee was to define or to inventory the securities which we had. There was no reflection, of course, intended upon Mr. Hunti ton's management of the use of our power of attorney, but it was desirable for us to learn just how much collateral we had left. Mr. Huntington, in his financial matters, believing that a variety of securities was always best to support a loan sometimes used Chesapeake & Ohio securities with ours and ours with Chesapeake & Ohio. Wherever he could get the money in the best possible way he did, to produce the results that he was after and what we wanted. This simply meant that Mr. Gates, representing Mr. Huntington, and Mr. Brown, representing the western associates, were to ascertain where everything was. It is unnecessary to say that they found everything.

1340 Q. And this report or statement made up by the secretary, which is recorded in the minutes of October 10th, as to the amount of Central Pacific stock on hand—do you know whether or not that was all of the stock of the Central Pacific Railroad Company that your interests had at that time?

A. I do not; but the mere drawing up of the list of stock on hand would not mean that it was all we had. The expression used there was "on hand and available". Undoubtedly the other stock might have been used as collateral, and likewise, there were blocks of stock that did not stand in the name of the associates.

Q. That was owned by them?

A. That was owned by them. The stock was used as collateral, and sometimes it was more convenient to have some stock in somebody else's name, rather than in the names of those who were actually making the loan.

Q. Am I correct in assuming that this list or statement would mean, then, that that amount of stock was free and on hand for use as collateral?

A. That is the way I take it, sir.

Q. And if you had other stock in the Central Pacific Rail-1341 road Company that was used in another place, and was not free, it would not be included in this list?

A. It would not be in that list, but it would have been in the list which the Gates and Brown committee were requested to make.

Q. I find no record in these minutes that Mr. Gates and Mr. Brown made any formal report, unless this was a part of it.

A. As I said before, I presume they did make it; but I do not know. It was the usual thing to make at intervals.

Q. There is mention made in the minutes of October 6th about T. Wilson coming in to discuss the project of putting up a levee between points on the Memphis and New Orleans Railroad. Does that have anything to do with this Southern Pacific line?

A. No, sir.

Q. What did that refer to?

A. It referred to a line of road running from Memphis to New Orleans along the Mississippi, through the Yazoo country. It was really a connection intended to be made from the Huntington lines in Kentucky, a continuation of the Chesapeake & Ohio lines, and likewise an egress from New Orleans through into Cincinnati 1342 and Chicago for the freight that might be delivered to them by the Southern Pacific; but it never was included within the Southern Pacific system.

Q. Mr. Huntington had some interest in that line, did he?

A. Yes.

Q. Did the other interests have any interest in it?

A. Yes; we took it over. We bought the line; but I think it was afterwards sold.

Q. You disposed of the interest?

A. It was after my time. I do not know what became of it.

Q. Do you know who had custody of those minutes that were produced here, marked Exhibit No. 21, from about the time they were made until the present time?

A. Mr. Brown was very close to Mr. Charles Crocker. He was the financial secretary of all four, but his relations were closer with Mr. Crocker and his affairs than they were with the other three; and this memorandum was kept by Mr. Brown, and evidently it was turned over to the Crocker interests, and they placed it in the safety vaults of the Crocker-Woolworth Bank, where I understand it has laid for years.

1343 Q. It was not destroyed by the 1906 fire?

A. It does not look it.

Q. Did any person, except the four interests mentioned, attend those meetings in New York and take part in the discussions or decisions?

A. No; they, and they alone, attended the meetings; and they discussed among themselves and decided the matters between them without conference or consultation with anybody else—with the exception of Mr. Pierce and the interests which he had.

Q. His interests were entirely confined to the line east of El Paso?

A. Yes.

Q. He had no interest on this side of El Paso, in the line?

A. No.

Q. And so far as the lines west of El Paso or west of Ogden and south of Portland were concerned, there was no one else that took any part in these discussions?

A. No; the decisions which the four parties mentioned came to were decided among themselves, and then absolutely carried out afterwards by the companies involved.

1344 Q. With respect to the subsidiary companies here that held pieces of railroad and other properties that concerned this system of road you have mentioned the Pacific Improvement Company, of which no one of these people was an official or director, or anything of that sort?

A. Yes.

Q. And generally was it the custom for these four gentlemen, the four people named there in those minutes, to be in the boards of these subordinate companies? How was that? What was the fact about that?

A. No; it was not at all general. There were a great many of those subsidiary companies. Mr. Stanford, Mr. Huntington, Mr. Hopkins, and Mr. Crocker generally belonged to the other companies—the Central Pacific and the Southern Pacific or the Southern Pacific Railroad of California—but the subsidiary companies were made up with other boards of directors. It is probable that I belonged to more of them than any of the other associates during my term of office there, since as treasurer everything pertaining to money matters centered in the treasurer's office, and so I was put in all these companies.

1345 Q. Then your office as treasurer was treasurer for all these companies?

A. I would not dare to say how many I belonged to, but I was, in the case of a great many of them, put there for the convenience of having things come through one channel in regard to money matters, to the treasurer's office.

Q. Did the fact that Messrs. Stanford, Huntington, Crocker, and yourself were not directors in any of these subordinate companies affect in any way your control or management of the property owned by those companies?

A. Not at all. The companies were managed as a unity. The directions given by the four parties in interest were irrespective as to whether they were directors in that corporation or not. I know that it was my action. I never stopped to consider whether I was a director of any company. When there were things to be decided and done I gave my instructions, and they were followed accordingly.

Mr. McCLENNEN. Petitioner moves to strike out the answer after "not at all", and particularly the part which says "The companies were managed as a unity", and so forth, as not responsive and containing an expression of opinion and a conclusion of the witness.

1346 By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Was there any other management of these companies, or any of them, except that included in the four interests you have mentioned?

Mr. McCLENNEN. That is objected to as leading.

The WITNESS. No.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. And that control was exercised as to all these companies, wi out reference to the fact of whether or not these gentlemen, or of them, were directors or officers of the subordinate company?

Mr. McCLENNEN. Objected to as leading and calling for a con sion and opinion of the witness.

The WITNESS. Yes.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Do you recall any effort that was made by this Sunset line fr
San Francisco to New Orleans to carry grain from California to Gulf of Mexico, there to be shipped to European ports, after it opened in 1883?

A. Yes; there was one instance that made an impression on mind. At that period, 1883–1884, the ship charters for grai 1347 the port here were very high, were over seventy shillings, the farmers were, of course, getting just so much less for th grain, and it was really Governor Stanford's idea that in the upl ing of the State we could ship that grain over to the Atlantic through to Liverpool and save the farmers a good deal of mo
His scheme, likewise, was to bring back, if that line were successfu inaugurated, to bring back to California immigrants who wo settle in the State and form a laboring class for the development California. We built a small warehouse; I think it was at Algier

Q. That was right opposite New Orleans?

A. Right opposite New Orleans.

Q. On the river?

A. Yes; big enough to hold a cargo of grain, and we did s across a few shiploads, which were sufficient to demonstrate the that it could be done, and effectually broke the heavy charters wh existed here at that time, and reduced them down to somewhere n a third, and, as far as I know, they have never been back there ag
I find my memory on that matter is supported by a report of railroad commission for 1884, which tells that same incident 1348 Q. I call your attention to the annual report of the Bo of Railroad Commissioners of California for the year 18 which you have mentioned, and I will read an extract therefrom, page 32, as follows——

Mr. McCLENNEN. This reading is objected to on such grounds it appears to be objectionable upon when we know what it is t is to be read.

Mr. HERRIN. I will read this report from the State printing o of California, the fifth annual report of the Railroad Commissio of the State of California for the year ending December 31, 1884. The subtitle in the report is as follows:

"The Southern Pacific Railroad and ocean freights.

"It is said that the 'southern desert road' is a burden upon its owners. Because any desert road is such burden the commission has given this one the benefit of differential rates. But with all its costly mountain and desert divisions the Southern Pacific Railroad is a work of public economy by which the State has gained infinitely more than its owners have lost. The year it was completed it took from the grain crop of California more than a third of the tax levied upon it by ocean carriers. The cost of transportation by sea has always been and now is the subject of special 1349 contract between thirty or forty shipping firms or individuals, and the grain fleet frequenting the harbor of San Francisco. Hence it has fluctuated. But prior to the year ending June 31, 1883, it had seldom if ever gone below an average of 68s. per ton. Thus, for the year ending June 31, 1881, the average was 68s. 10d. For the year ending June 31, 1882, the average was 69s. 3¾d.; and this was the ruling rate when, in that year, the Southern Pacific Railroad was complete to New Orleans. It was a tribute to foreign carriers that had been for years reaping a harvest they had not sown. And when, in April and May of 1882, it was demonstrated by actual experiment that there was a new and competing route via New Orleans and Galveston to the grain markets of Europe, the rate by sailing carriers sunk from 69s. 3¾d. to 43s. 4d., at or below which it has since remained. The cost of grain shipments aggregating from four to five hundred thousand tons per annum, and more than eighty per cent of which were and are made in foreign bottoms, was thus reduced more than thirty-seven per cent. The reduction was made and is continued under stress of threatened competition, for which, if honor be due, it is to the men who built the Southern Pacific Railroad."

1350 By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Do the facts stated in that excerpt that I have read from this report accord with your recollection of the facts?

A. They do.

Mr. MCCLENNEN. This question is objected to as leading; calling for an opinion and conclusion of the witness; immaterial, irrelevant and incompetent; too general, and as including in the question an apparent eulogium the office of which does not appear, and as assuming the existence of facts of which there is no evidence, and as incorporating a large amount of hearsay into the record.

Mr. HERRIN. If it were odium instead of eulogium I suppose the objection would not have been made, but I will ask the witness to answer the question.

The WITNESS. I answered it before I knew it was loaded.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Was there ever any distinction made between the lines of the Central Pacific Railroad Company and the Southern Pacific Railroad Company on account of their ownership? What I mean by that is, were they operated separately or were they operated together, as if they were in one ownership?

Mr. MCCLENNEN. That is objected to as leading, and a 1351 little more explanatory of what the questioner desires the witness to answer, and as calling for an opinion and conclusion of the witness, and as too general in form.

The WITNESS. They were operated as one company; no distinction made as to which line was which.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Do you know who were the owners of the capital stock of the Southern Pacific Company at the time it began its operations in 1885?

A. Stanford, Huntington, Hopkins, and Crocker, owned most, if not all, of the stock. I, for the moment, do not recollect whether Mr. Pierce, through the Galveston, Harrisburg & San Antonio Company and eastern lines there, received some of that stock or not.

Q. I think these minutes show that he did.

A. That is my impression, that he did, and that it was owned by S., H., H., C., and Pierce, and I think some of the Morgan people took a little of the stock also, but I will not be certain as to that feature of it.

Q. State whether or not at all times that you have mentioned the H., H., S., & C. interests were the owners of a clear majority of the Southern Pacific Company's stock.

1352 A. Yes, undoubtedly; a great majority.

Mr. HERRIN. Take the witness.

Cross-examination by Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. By "the Morgan people" you mean whom?

A. The owners of the Morgan Louisiana & Texas Railroad & Steamship Company, running from New Orleans westward.

Q. At this time, in 1885, was the stock of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company all held by Mr. Huntington, Mr. Stanford, Mr. Crocker, and Mr. Hopkins, or the Hopkins estate?

A. Which one do you mean?

Q. I mean of California.

A. Of California; yes.

Q. Now, of Arizona?

A. Yes.

Q. And now of New Mexico?

A. Yes.

Q. What was the condition of the stock holding of the Galveston, Harrisburg & San Antonio Railroad at that time?

A. I am not as familiar with that eastern end. We built the road from El Paso as far east as San Antonio. In fact, that 1353 branch of the road is called the San Antonio extension. Mr. Pierce owned, as stockholder, the eastern end. The exact proportions of stock outstanding at this period of time I am not able to answer, but that it was a clear control and that Mr. Pierce turned over enough to us to consummate the control and keep it where it was, with our people, is shown by that statement here. Twenty-eight thousand shares at least came with Mr. Pierce's interest.

Q. Was the building of the road east of the Pecos River and into New Orleans all accomplished without any of these four taking part in it?

A. No; the road, I think, was constructed westward as far as San Antonio. It was the extension from San Antonio westward that the four interests came into, together with Mr. Pierce. Beyond that the road was constructed; the Louisiana Western was an old road, and the Morgan road was still older.

Q. The Texas & New Orleans?

A. Yes.

Q. Those roads were all constructed by entirely independent parties?

A. Yes.

Q. Then the stretch from El Paso to what point is the Galveston, Harrisburg & San Antonio?

1354 A. It runs to Houston.

Q. Is there some portion of the eastern end of that road with the construction of which those four gentlemen had nothing to do?

A. From San Antonio eastward, I think, was the part with which they had nothing to do, the G. H. & S. A.

Q. Then the G. H. & S. A. from El Paso to San Antonio was constructed by the Southern Development Company, was it?

A. I think so.

Q. The road west from San Antonio was being constructed contemporaneously with the road east from El Paso, was it?

A. Yes.

Q. Were they both being constructed for the Galveston, Harrisburg & San Antonio Company?

A. Yes.

Q. Under a single franchise?

A. Yes; I so understand it.

Q. At what point east of El Paso did Mr. Pierce become interested in the construction?

A. Well, if I understand your question correctly, the El Paso end was built eastward and the San Antonio end was built west-1355 ward, and they met at the junction of the Pecos River and the Rio Grande.

Q. Do you mean that Mr. Pierce was, either alone or with associates other than the "big four", interested in the development westward, while the "big four" were interested in the development eastward, until they met?

A. Well, to be perfectly exact, the construction of the eastern end was done before I was connected officially with the company. I am giving you the best of my impression that it was done for the same interest and under the same franchise. The Southern Development Company worked from both ends, but it is really just one year ahead of me.

Q. In 1885 what stockholders, other than the "big four" and Mr. Pierce, did you know of connected with any of the roads on this so-called Sunset line east of El Paso to New Orleans?

A. I recall none.

Q. What is the earliest date at which you have first-hand knowledge of affairs connected with these various railroads?

A. You mean the Central Pacific?

Q. The Central Pacific, or the Southern Pacific Railroad of California, or any of the other lines connected with them.

1356 A. Officially not until 1880; but I was brought up on the road, you might say, and probably absorbed a good deal of the history and legends connected with it from childhood.

Q. You were born when?

A. 1859.

Q. And I think you said you were adopted when you were three years old?

A. Yes; I lived in the family of Mark Hopkins after I was three years old. I was an adopted child.

Q. When Mr. Hopkins died, in 1878, who took up the active management of his affairs.

A. Well, there was an interim, of course, in the probate of the estate. Mr. E. W. Hopkins, who was treasurer of the company at the death of his uncle, had part of the actual management. My mother was executrix for a short time—most of the time—and then her brother-in-law, Mr. Moses Hopkins, a brother of Mark Hopkins, filled out a term as executor, but the matters rested in statu quo in the affairs of the estate, of course, while it was being settled. There were also some legal troubles which prolonged it.

Q. There came a time, did there not, when you knew practi-1357 cally all about the Mark Hopkins estate that the owner of that estate would know?

A. I would know some of it, not all.

Q. How early did you know just what securities and properties were owned by Mrs. Hopkins as administratrix and beneficiary of the estate?

A. About 1882, at the time I took charge of the treasurer's office.

Q. And that intimate knowledge continued up to what date?

A. 1888.

Q. When did Mrs. Hopkins remarry?

A. In 1888. I ought to have said 1889 there, because I did not get out of things until 1889.

Q. You knew of the fact of the stock of the Central Pacific Railroad Company being sold upon the market?

A. There were some stocks sold; yes.

Q. And you knew of the fact that it was being sold substantially at the time it was being done?

A. Sometimes I did and sometimes after it was done.

Q. As that stock was put upon the market it was sold practically for common account of "the big four", was it not?

A. Yes; pooled.

Q. So that at all times, we will say from 1880 to 1889,
1358 the holdings of each one of the four in the Central Pacific Railroad Company were substantially the same?

A. I suppose so, practically.

Q. It was as early as 1880 that the stock began to be sold on the stock exchange, was it not?

A. I don't know that, just when it started.

Q. When you came into more familiar acquaintance with the affairs in 1882, considerable quantities had already then been sold?

A. As to that I could not answer.

Q. You have no recollection of that?

A. No recollection; and I have no papers to which I can refer. All my papers were destroyed in the fire.

Q. Did you, at the time, keep records of the holdings of the estate?

A. Yes; those records were kept in my office, and likewise the pooling stock and the collaterals which were used by the "big four" interests were kept by Mr. William E. Brown. There was very little of that Central Pacific stock ever in my possession.

Q. When you ceased to have more direct connection with the 1359 Hopkins estate in 1889, a very large part of the holdings of that estate in the Central Pacific Railroad Company had been disposed of, had they not?

A. I do not recall how much had been disposed of.

Q. If it is true that on October 4, 1889, according to the inventory, the estate of Charles Crocker held 34,049 shares and no other, of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, would that help you at all toward stating what amount the Hopkins estate held at that time?

A. No; I do not think it would. The Hopkins estate was divided in kind among three heirs, seventy-five per cent to my mother and twenty-five per cent to the two brothers of Mark Hopkins. I am not certain, after this lapse of time, whether they took some of the Central Pacific stock in distribution as their share of the estate or not; it is too far back for me to remember.

Q. Was not the Hopkins estate held as an entirety as late as 1889?

A. No.

Q. Distribution was earlier than that?

A. Distribution was earlier than that; the Hopkins interest that evidently is in your mind was the interest of Mrs. Hopkins 1360 after the estate had been distributed by the probate court.

Q. Is it not probable that the total interest of Mrs. Hopkins and of Mark Hopkins's two brothers would amount, at any given time, in the aggregate to about the interest of the Crocker estate at the same time?

A. That might be so; yes. I would not say so definitely, if that is what you wish me to answer.

Q. You say, do you, that these inventories of the holdings of Mr. Stanford, Mr. Crocker, Mr. Huntington, and the Hopkins estate used to be made up a matter of once a year or so?

A. Yes.

Q. And you knew on those occasions what stocks were held by the Hopkins estate?

A. Yes.

Q. As you look over this record, Exhibit No. 21, and see this note on September 10, 1884, that "Mr. Gates and Mr. Brown were appointed a committee to examine all securities on hand in New York, and all that are used as collaterals for payment of the liabilities of S. H. H. and C. to ascertain what securities are available, and generally to make such an examination of the properties of 1361 S. H. H. and C. in New York as they would make if examining for an executor of one of the parties, and to make out a schedule of all securities belonging to S. H. H. and C. in New York, so that the several parties in interest can sign the schedule as of date as being correct on that date."

Does it not recall to your mind that what was sought to be obtained was a complete inventory of all the securities, whether they were in pledge or in hand?

A. I presume that was so; yes.

Q. And it is probable that such an inventory was prepared and signed, is it?

A. I think so; I think it follows. I have no recollection of it, but I think it follows that it was prepared and was signed. It was the custom to do those things in that way.

Q. Now, it appears from these minutes that Mr. Pierce, who held apparently a substantial interest in some of these companies, was invited into the meetings and his agreement obtained to certain propositions which should take care of his interests; and that is in accordance with your recollection?

A. Yes.

Q. The only one of these companies in which any one besides 1362 the "big four" and Mr. Pierce had a substantial interest was the Central Pacific Railroad Company, was it not?

A. Well, the two companies were different, naturally; the Southern Development Company was a construction company, in which Mr. Pierce had an interest. The Central Pacific Railroad Company had outside stockholders, if that is an answer to your question.

Q. My question was a little more: That it was the only one of these railroad companies that had any outside stockholders substantially?

A. I will not be certain as to that. I do not recall just how the Morgan people came into that proposition. There is a reference in these minutes to Mr. Quintard's discussions and joining and afterwards a retirement on his part, I know; but whether they took stock or not, I can not for the moment recall; but, with the exception of the lines east of San Antonio, the only outside interests that I can recall were in the Central Pacific Railroad Company.

Q. At the meeting of October 10th, according to this record, Exhibit 21, it appears that the secretary makes up a statement of Central Pacific stock on hand as follows—after which follow a number of items of shares in ink, footed at the bottom in pencil as 157,535, 1363 against which, in pencil, are total shares, 592,755. Do you not think it probable that that was intended to be a statement of all the shares which any of the "big four" owned or continued to control at that date in the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. It would be a surmise on my part; I do not know what those pencil figures are.

Q. You do not know one way or the other?

A. No; I do not recall them.

Q. So far as your recollection goes at the present time that may or may not be a complete statement of all of the stock which remained in the ownership, either nominally or substantially, of the "big four"?

A. I do not know anything about it. May I look at it to see what it is?

Q. Certainly [handing Exhibit 21 to the witness].

A. That is in Mr. Brown's handwriting all right, but I do not know just what it refers to.

Q. So far as the exact ownership of the stock of the Central Pacific Railroad Company at that particular date is concerned, you really know nothing except the fact that it is in Mr. Brown's handwriting?

A. Yes. I do know this, that the control of the Central 1364 Pacific was in the hands of the "big four" interests, Stanford, Huntington, Hopkins, and Crocker. The exact number of shares that each held in their own name, or in the names of others, I can not recall; but that there was a control of the company by those four interests, there was never any question as to that.

Q. You mean a voting control?

A. A voting control, absolute control, and a managing control.

Q. How far that control was dependent upon proxies representative of stock which the "big four" did not own, you have no present knowledge?

A. No; there were always a good many proxies coming in for these annual meetings.

Q. About 1885 the number of stockholders in the Central Pacific Railroad Company had got up as high as 2,600 or thereabouts?

A. I could not say; but that there were many was evident. Of course many of those were small certificates. The European investor was a small investor, and a certificate would be cut up and then cut up again through the European houses who peddled this 1365 stock among the small holders in Europe.

Q. Do you bear in mind that the ordinary American certificates were 100-share certificates, and the European were 10-share certificates?

A. Well, there was some such proportion as that; the European shares were very small certificates. I was trying to place it in my mind. It seems to me that we had three classes of certificates of the Central Pacific stock.

Q. One was 100, one was 10, and one was irregular?

A. Yes, I think that is it; but I have forgotten.

Q. It was years after that stock was sold abroad in considerable quantities before the purchasers registered their transfers to any considerable extent, was it not?

A. I would not know so much about that, because those transfers were generally handled in New York. I do know that in some of those European 10-share certificates there would be four or five in terests, four or five owners in one 10-share certificate, or a greater number; it was a sort of community pool to buy some shares of stock, so that when it came to the registration, that was handled by the New York office through the registrar there; we had very little of that in San Francisco.

1366 Q. And the stock, to a very considerable extent, was in the names of New York office men, who were understood not to be the real owners of it themselves?

A. Some was in their names; yes; and some in other associates.

Q. You remember the form of certificate that was adopted by the Central Pacific Railroad Company, with the dividend warrants attached?

A. Yes.

Q. So that a man could get his dividend by presenting the warrant without any inquiry as to whether he was a stockholder of record or not?

A. Well, it was a coupon.

Q. Just like a coupon on a bond?

A. Yes; a dividend coupon.

Q. And when a dividend was declared it would be dividend No. 3, for instance?

A. Yes.

Q. And when warrant No. 3 was presented by an individual he would receive his dividend?

A. Yes; that was one of the usual forms of the day in stock certificates.

1367 Q. Do you remember when that form of certificate was first adopted by the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. No; I do not.

Q. It antedated your treasurership?

A. I would rather not say. They came, some of them, into my office as treasurer; yes; but I do not know the date of that.

Q. Do you remember whether the great majority of the sales abroad had been made prior to 1889, when you ceased to be directly familiar with the Hopkins estate?

A. No; I do not. Those sales of stock were made through Mr. Huntington's office, and through his administration of the pool an option might be given. It might be some time before the option ran out, but as to when the sales took place I do not remember.

Q. Do you remember whether the sales to the public had begun at the time—I am not referring to the original public that might have subscribed for shares in the beginning, but whether the sales to the public of the interest of the "big four" had begun at the time of Mark Hopkins's death?

A. I would not dare to say. It would only be guesswork; I not recall it.

1368 Q. Did you have occasion to go over or verify the prox for any of the meetings of the Central Pacific Railroad Co pany?

A. No, sir; not that I now recall.

Q. Do you remember that in 1885 the voting control was in New York office employees?

A. I would not say that. I think it was in the New York offi that is, the proxies and their control came through that; that cluded some of our own stock, naturally, but the heavy voti strength came from New York.

Q. By your own stock you mean some of the stock that the " four" still retained?

A. Yes.

Q. The New York office stock was largely the stock which had b sold to the public in this country and in Europe?

A. Some of it was; yes.

Q. Well, the major part of it was?

A. Perhaps I do not understand the question. You mean proxies that were sent to us that represented most of the stock t was sold outside and in Europe?

Q. Yes.

1369 A. No; I think not. I am speaking now from recollecti We had proxies, of course, from friends and associates, they likewise. I suppose proxies came, but I doubt whether m European proxies came over.

Q. I did not make my question clear. There were certain sha of stock that stood in the name of either Huntington, Stanfo Crocker, or Mrs. Hopkins, and there were certain other shares t stood in the names of independent members of the public, either this country or in Europe, were there not?

A. Yes.

Q. Then there were still other shares that stood in the name of New York office men, were there not?

A. Some of the shares; yes.

Q. And those New York office men were understood not to be real owners of that stock, to a considerable extent?

A. Yes.

Q. The controlling voting proxies in the meeting of 1885, for stance, were the proxies of these New York office men?

A. Together with our own, and whatever stock came in to vote that occasion. How many shares were voted on that occasion I h no means of ascertaining, and I do not know.

1370 Q. Don't you bear in mind that those New York office men, this third class that I have spoken of, themselves held a voting control in the corporation?

A. No; I do not recall that. I recall that together with what they held and what we as the four interests held there was a clear majority; but I can not differentiate the classes and the number of shares in the manner in which you have presented it.

Q. Now, recurring to the stock standing in the name of the New York office employees, you were aware, were you not, that some part of that stock was really the property of American, English, and European investors?

A. I do not know that I knew anything about that.

Q. You do not know that you knew anything about it one way or the other?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you recall whether up to 1889 any of the European investors had recorded transfers for shares?

A. No; I was not in a position to know that. That was done in New York; they would record it there.

Q. Do you remember that some apprehension had been expressed lest stockholders of record in a California railroad 1371 corporation might be held personally liable for the debts of the corporation?

A. That has always been with us, as I understand the law.

Q. Do you remember that in consequence of that a good many of the investors in Central Pacific Railroad stock kept their holdings in what we call street certificates, without having them transferred into their own names?

A. Yes; that was done not only in railroad corporations, but in all corporations. There are so many legal gentlemen here that, of course, they can check me up, but I suppose I could hazard an opinion that it was not particularly railroads, but a law applying to corporations generally, as to the consequences of liability.

Q. And the consequence was that those office employees remained the record owners of this Central Pacific stock for some considerable period of time after it had been sold to the British and European investors?

Mr. BLAIR. The witness has said repeatedly that he does not know anything about it.

The WITNESS. I do not know anything about it.

Mr. HERRIN. And I object to it as calling for an opinion
1372 as to the consequences of the stockholders' liability law; I do not think that is competent.

The WITNESS. I can not answer the question; I don't know anything about it.

By Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. Do you happen to remember when the Central Pacific Railroad Company ceased to pay dividends?

A. I would rather refer you to the record there.

Q. You remember that there was a period during which the Central Pacific Railroad Company paid pretty regular dividends?

A. Yes; it did for a while, I understand.

Q. And then there was a period when they paid no dividends?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall that the sales of the stock to the outside investors in England and in Europe and in America took place more largely during the period when the company was continuing to pay dividends?

A. That would be the most natural thing to occur, but I do not recall it.

Q. The sales of the stock to the public were conducted largely through the office of Speyer & Company in New York, 1373 were they not?

A. Well, those sales were made through Mr. Huntington in New York. I would not dare to say how many were made through Speyer & Company and how many through other houses, but Speyer was a well-known dealer in Central and Southern Pacific securities.

Q. Were any sales made through Fisk & Hatch?

A. I would not know. I think early in the life of the Central Pacific—well, that is hearsay; I would not dare to quote that. I do not know whether there was any through Fisk & Hatch or not.

Q. Have you exhausted every possible way of stating definitely, from any records or memoranda, what the holdings of the Hopkins estate in Central Pacific Railroad Company stock in 1885 were?

A. Yes. My papers—every paper I owned in the office relative to old business transactions—was destroyed by the fire of 1906, and I have nothing to refer to at all.

Q. Do you know anything more authentic on which to rely than this memorandum of Mr. Brown's of October 10, 1884?

A. No; I do not. I might say for your information that I 1374 have not seen the Hopkins estate papers since 1889. All the papers belonging to the estate were transferred by Messrs. Stillman and Hubbard, who assumed charge of my mother's affairs, to New York, and I had no access to them or anything to do with them since that time, which may account for some of my unfamiliarity with the figures you asked me to give.

Q. Stillman and Hubbard were located where?

A. In New York City.

Q. During the period when you were treasurer of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, was the Central Pacific Railroad Company a large borrower of money outside of its bonded indebtedness?

A. No; not that I know of.

Q. Did it borrow any money during that period?

A. At periods we borrowed money; yes.

Q. The Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. The Central Pacific Railroad Company. You mean from 1882 to 1885?

Q. From 1882 to 1885.

A. Yes; we borrowed money here in San Francisco. At least I have borrowed money here for the Central Pacific.

Q. That is, outside of the bonded indebtedness?

A. I do not quite understand what you mean when you say 1375 "outside of the bonded indebtedness". Of course the indebtedness had already accrued.

Q. During the period that you were treasurer of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, did that company issue any bonds?

A. No. Now I understand your question. It seems to me that we had some of the California & Oregon Railroad branch running up from Redding to Oregon, to the Oregon line, that we issued about that time. I will not be certain as to when that series of bonds was issued. That was Central Pacific.

Q. Were those bonds guaranteed by anyone?

A. Not that I recall. I would have to see the bonds in order to refresh my memory on it. I think they were Central Pacific California & Oregon division bonds.

Q. What form of security, or evidences, did you give when you borrowed for the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. That was largely bank notes, in order to meet interest charges and other charges that came in faster than the receipts came in to cover them.

Q. They were ordinary short-time notes?

A. Ordinary short-time notes.

1376 Q. And those were the notes of the Central Pacific Railroad Company alone?

A. Yes; they were short-time notes.

Q. Were those guaranteed in any way?

A. No.

Q. During the period that you were treasurer the Central Pacific Railroad Company financed itself in these ways that you have described?

A. Yes. Well, in the ways I have described—you mean in the payment of interest?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes; that was done here in San Francisco. There were bonds redeemed. There was a million and a half of land grant bonds came in during my treasurership there that, I think, was handled by money borrowed in New York for the time being until it could be absorbed or placed out in other directions or other ways.

Q. Have you, then, any specific instance in mind where any one of the four interests—Huntington, Stanford, Crocker, or Mrs. Hopkins—pledged their own credit for any obligations of the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. Well, in a general way. In a specific way I can not cite any one instance. We had a common treasury. Any-1377 thing we had went into it, and everything came out of it, whether it was Central Pacific or P. I. Company—Pacific Improvement Company—it came out of the same financial pot. If the Central Pacific needed money to send on to New York to pay its interest ahead of its receipts, and the Pacific Improvement Company's deposits were on hand that we had borrowed by the Pacific Improvement Company, they went right on to New York as Central Pacific money.

Q. That was a mere matter of a banking or clearing-house arrangement?

A. Yes; we made no separate deposit of the Pacific Improvement money, but we put it all together and used it as it was necessary, for both the railroad and the Pacific Improvement Company.

Q. That is, the Central Pacific Railroad Company used the money of the Pacific Improvement Company, or of any of these other concerns, just as a bank uses the money of its depositors?

A. I suppose you might make that parallel; yes.

Q. Did you know anything about any plans to combine this system of railroads with any other system, apart from this 1378 Chesapeake & Ohio suggestion of Mr. Huntington's—and, of course, prior to the so-called Harriman merger?

A. No; I never heard of any. There was a time, in the early history of the road, when the holders of the Central Pacific were offered the control of the Union Pacific at eleven dollars per share, and they were too poor to take it up; but that was pretty far back.

Q. Was the construction company that constructed from El Paso to the Pecos River or to San Antonio the Pacific Improvement Company or the Southern Development Company?

A. I always supposed it was the Southern Development Company. Mr. Strobridge was in charge of the whole thing, but I do not know that I ever made any particular inquiry. I don't know whether I should dare to say yes or no; but I think it was the same force, operating under the name of the Southern Development Company. It may have been that the Pacific Improvement Company went right along on that westerly end and constructed that piece of road to the Pecos River. I will not be certain; it is so far back.

Q. That construction was practically completed before you became treasurer?

A. Yes; that was completed the next spring after I was treasurer. I went down that line when the road was being 1379 constructed at the Pecos River; that was in October, 1882.

Q. Were there any stockholders in the Pacific Improvement Company except Stanford, Hopkins, Huntington, and Crocker?

A. No.

Q. In the operation of the Southern Pacific Railroad and of the Central Pacific Railroad up to the spring of 1885 the Central Pacific Railroad Company acted as the operating company, did it not?

A. Yes.

Q. It operated the Central Pacific Railroad as its own and the Southern Pacific Railroad as a lessee?

A. Yes; it was the Central Pacific Railroad and Leased Lines.

Q. And the Central Pacific Railroad Company, in operating those lines, operated them as one railroad, would naturally operate any several railroads over which it held a lease or leases?

A. It operated it as one system, if that is what you mean.

Q. And no differently from what any lessee railroad corporation would operate a series of different railroads which were all being run at the same time by the lessee?

1380 That does not naturally follow, because there are different forms of leases, and roads would be run in different manners. They were run as if there were an ownership in all of the roads, so that it made no difference as to which road was favored.

Q. Did not the Central Pacific Railroad Company keep accounts of its operations?

A. It had to.

Q. And kept separate the different lines, so that it could conform to its leases?

A. Yes; it had to. Bonds were outstanding on all those lines. The corporate existence had to be maintained and accounts kept.

Q. And the Central Pacific Railroad Company, as far as you observed the matter, followed out scrupulously its obligations as a lessee?

A. Oh,, yes.

Q. You became treasurer of the Southern Pacific Company in the spring of 1885?

A. On the organization. I was the first treasurer.

Q. And the Southern Pacific Company operated these various lines ostensibly as a lessee under its leases?

1381 A. Yes.

of having the dog wag the tail rather than the tail wag the dog, if I might put it in that way.

Q. That is, you put the dog, so to speak, in one lease and the tail in the other?

A. It depends upon which way you face the dog.

Q. Approaching it as you were in giving your answer just now. That is what you meant, was it not?

A. The smaller corporation, we thought, had better be subsidiary to the larger corporation.

Q. In one lease there was included the Southern Pacific Railroad of California, the Southern Pacific Railroad of Arizona, the Southern Pacific Railroad of New Mexico, and the Galveston, Harrisburg & San Antonio?

1386 A. Going through to New Orleans it would be the Louisiana Western.

Q. The Louisiana Western and the Texas & New Orleans?

A. Yes; and the Morgan Line.

Q. And the Morgan Line?

A. If you are going through——

Q. Yes; that is what I meant. Those were all put in one lease?

A. Yes.

Q. And the Central Pacific Railroad was put in under a separate lease?

A. Yes.

Q. To use your analogy a little further, any one of those lines, viewed alone, might have been called the tail, rather than the dog. What I am inquiring is how it happened that all these subsidiary companies except the Central Pacific Railroad Company were put in one lease, and that was put in another.

A. The conditions of the leases were different, were they not?

Q. What was the reason for making them different?

1387 A. I suppose one reason was that the ownership of the entire issues of stock of the lines other than the Central Pacific was in the hands of the four interests S., H., H., and C., practically; that there were other stockholders, undoubtedly, in the Central Pacific, and the terms of its lease were more favorable to the stockholders of the Central Pacific than the other lease was to those of the other railroads. They had a dividend assured, earnings assured, up to the extent of six per cent, in the Central Pacific, and there were no such assurances given to stockholders of the other lines.

Q. That is, all the southern lines, meaning the lines from San Francisco to New Orleans through El Paso, were so owned by these common interests that they could make, practically, such arrangements as they pleased with the lessee company, while it was recognized that in the relation between the lessee company and the Central Pacific Railroad Company the other stockholders in the Central Pacific Railroad Company were entitled to consideration and to treatment as to which they would have no right to complain in any way?

A. That is putting it rather broadly.

Q. Is not that about the situation?

A. The control of the Central Pacific was likewise in the 1388 hands of the four interests at the time. The Central Pacific had been the leasing company, and in the changing of those relations, which were of course satisfactory to the stockholders at the time—or it would not have been done—I think that it was considered to be a proper thing to put that company beyond any peradventure of criticism upon a change that might have appeared sudden to some of the outside stockholders. To that extent your question is pertinent and right.

Q. That is, the southern lines, using that to describe the line through El Paso which I have mentioned, was not only controlled as a corporate voting matter but was very nearly entirely owned by these same interests that were coming into the Southern Pacific Company?

A. Yes.

Q. So that they were, so to speak, the whole thing on both sides of the trade, so far as the lease was concerned?

A. All of those companies were controlled by the same parties, including the Central Pacific.

Q. But the Central Pacific Railroad Company having these independent stockholding interests, it was recognized to be desirable to make a lease in the case of that road which was more favorable 1389 to the Central Pacific Railroad Company than the other lease was to the other subsidiary lines?

A. I suppose that could be so construed. There was more minority in the Central Pacific. They certainly had no occasion to complain of the lease.

Q. Mr. Hopkins, bearing in mind that you are speaking after a period of nearly thirty years from the event and twenty-five years from the last time you had immediate connection with the holdings of the Hopkins estate, do you want to leave it as your definite statement that the outside independent stockholders in beneficial interest in the Central Pacific Railroad Company constituted a small minority?

A. No; I do not, because I do not recall what they were; but they were in a minority; yes. I recall that they were small, because I do not know just how many they were.

Q. They may well have been at least thirty per cent?

A. Thank you for the opportunity of withdrawing it, because I do not recall it.

Q. And it is very likely, is it not, that they financed that in same way that they financed the P. I. Company and all these othe

Mr. McCLENNEN. The objection is not to the success of the le ing, but to the effort which it betokens.

Mr. HERRIN. I asked the question in that form for the purpose getting along, and to avoid taking up too much time.

If I am in any respect incorrect in my questions, Mr. Hopkin want you to correct me. That is all.

Mr. McCLENNEN. That is all.

Direct examination by Mr. BLAIR:

Q. Your full name?

A. R. P. Schwerin.

Q. Where do you live?

A. San Mateo.

Q. What is your occupation?

A. Steamship manager.

Q. Of what steamship line?

A. The Pacific Mail Steamship Company.

Q. How long have you been connected with that company?

A. Since 1893.

Q. In what capacity?

A. Vice president and general manager.

Q. During all that time?

A. During all that time.

Q. Do you know when the Southern Pacific Company acqui its stock and a controlling interest in the Pacific Mail Steamsh Company?

1396 A. About 1901.

Q. Do you know for what purpose that acquisition made?

A. The company was very much interested at that time in development of oriental traffic. It seemed to be growing into ve large magnitude, and there was a desire to continue steamship ope tion out of this port in connection with the Central Pacific, t Union Pacific, and the Chicago & North Western. They owned stock in the steamship company, and the officers of the company ascertained that Mr. Harriman was buying largely of Pacific Mail Steamship Company stock, and in order to prevent the control of the property going to the Union Pacific the officials of the Southern Pacific Company bought a controlling interest in the market.

Q. Do you know what they apprehended Mr. Harriman would do if he acquired a controlling interest in the Pacific Mail Steamship Company?

A. There had been general discussion about Mr. Harriman's demanding position on the directorate of the Pacific Mail, and an 1397 intimation that he would remove the line from here to Puget Sound and operate it in connection with the Union Pacific Railroad Company and the Oregon Short Line.

Q. Do you know whether that apprehension had a controlling influence on the purchase by the Southern Pacific Company of a controlling interest in this stock?

A. My impression is that it had a very large influence.

Q. Were you present at any discussions, or did you take part in any discussions, of the managers of the Southern Pacific Company at that time?

A. Yes.

Q. And your understanding as to the motive was gathered from what you heard at those discussions?

A. Yes.

Q. That was shortly after the death of Mr. Huntington?

A. He died in the summer of 1900.

Q. In what business is the Pacific Mail Steamship Company now engaged?

A. In operating a line between San Francisco and Balboa and from San Francisco to the Orient.

Q. Is it engaged in the transportation of any traffic from the Pacific coast to the Atlantic coast and vice versa?

A. No, sir.

1398 Q. What is the business in which the fleet of steamers that ply out of San Francisco is engaged?

A. From San Francisco to the west coast of Mexico and South America, Balboa, and interport business, and business from Central America to Europe.

Q. Has it withdrawn from the coast-to-coast business?

A. Yes.

Q. Permanently?

A. Yes.

Q. I suppose it is useless to say that that is on account of what is known as the Panama Canal amendment to the interstate commerce act.

A. Yes.

Mr. BLAIR. The witness is yours.

Cross-examination by Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. Your personal connection with the Pacific Mail Steamship Company began when?

A. 1893.

Q. In what capacity?

A. Vice president and general manager; I have been that ever since.

1399 Q. And prior to that your busines associations were wh

A. One year prior to that I was manager of the purch and supply department of the Southern Pacific Company; and pr to that I was an officer in the United States Navy for nineteen ye

Q. When you first began with the Pacific Mail Steamship Company by whom was the stock in that company held?

A. I suppose there were a thousand different stockholders; it held entirely by the public.

Q. No part of it in any conspicuous hands?

A. It was suposed that Mr. Huntington, who was president of company—went in that year as president—held the controlling int est of proxies.

Q. Was he supposed to have any substantial stock-holding int est?

A. That I could not teli you, of my own knowledge.

Q. Did Mr. Stanford, or the Stanford estate, hold any stock in company at that time?

A. Not to my knowledge; but he apparently had no interest i whatever.

Q. And the Mark Hopkins estate, or Mrs. Searles?

1400 A. The same answer.

Q. And the estate of Charles Crocker?

A. The same answer; in fact, I might say that after I got i the company, I understood that those gentlemen had no stock int est whatever in the company.

Q. So that of the so-called "big four", Mr. Huntington was only one?

A. Mr. Huntington was the only one that would have had ownership in the property.

Q. And when you went in there he had a control of the proxies

A. He had the proxies, yes.

Q. You have no information as to the extent of his ownership

A. No, sir.

Q. It was at his instigation that you went from the South Pacific Company to the Pacific Mail Steamship Company?

A. I did not go from the Southern Pacific Company to the Pacific Mail; I continued in both companies.

Q. It was at his instigation that you went to the Pacific Mail?

1401 A. I suppose so. I was advised that I was elected vice president and general manager. I never knew who nominated me.

Q. Were you a stockholder yourself in the Pacific Mail Steamship Company at the time?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever become one?

A. Simply to qualify as a director.

Q. No substantial beneficial holding?

A. No.

Q. Do you know whether there was any substantial change in the stock holding in the Pacific Mail Steamship Company up to 1901, from 1893?

A. You mean in the buying and selling of the stock?

Q. I do not mean where one outsider sold a few shares to another outsider, but had there been any accumulation of the stock of the company in any particular holding from 1893?

A. My impression is that from the time Mr. Huntington died, it was anybody's stock.

Q. You mean that he did not have a substantial stock-holding interest at the time of his death?

A. That is my belief.

1402 Q. When was it that it began to be whispered that the Union Pacific or Mr. Harriman was engaged in an effort to get control of the stock of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company?

A. 1901.

Q. Was that before or after these interests had acquired a large interest in the Southern Pacific Company's stock?

A. Before.

Q. A substantial time before that?

A. Yes. Mr. Harriman did not come into the Pacific Mail until after he acquired the Huntington interest in the Southern Pacific Company, and that was subsequent to the purchase by the Southern Pacific Company of a majority of the Pacific Mail.

Q. Who were the individuals connected with the Southern Pacific Company that were influential in laying out the policy to acquire the stock of the Pacific Mail?

A. D. O. Mills, Charles H. Tweed, and Mr. Speyer.

Q. How much stock did the Southern Pacific Company acquire in 1901?

A. I could not tell you, but I think the annual report of the Southern Pacific would show it; it was a little over a majority.

1403 Q. That was picked up in small lots?

A. No; it was bought in about two days.

Q. From almost numberless sellers?

A. Yes.

Q. Did the Southern Pacific Company subsequently acquire m of the stock of the Pacific Mail?

A. I think about a year or two ago they acquired some more of i

Q. And how large is the holding now?

A. I think it is about 50,000 shares over a majority.

Q. What is the total stock?

A. A capitalization of $20,000,000.

Q. All issued?

A. All issued.

Q. You mean, in round numbers, that the corporation has 200 shares, of which the Southern Pacific Company owns approxima 150,000 now?

A. I will have to qualify that; I do not remember exactly w they have over a majority. I am confusing the number of share stock with the money value of the stock.

Q. You mean that they have something like 5,000 shares ov majority, then?

1404 A. Something like that; yes.

Q. How is the balance of the stock held?

A. Scattered. There are about 1,100 stockholders in the Pa Mail altogether.

Q. No one prominent interest other than the Southern Pa Company interest?

A. Not that I know of.

Q. Did Mr. Harriman or the Union Pacific Company or an its allies purchase any of the stock of the Pacific Mail Steam Company?

A. Not that I know of.

Mr. BLAIR. What time do you mean?

Mr. MCCLENNEN. At any time.

The WITNESS. You mean prior to Mr. Harriman's purchase of Southern Pacific stock?

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. I mean to exclude that form of acquiring it.

A. Mr. Harriman was buying stock at the same time that Sp was buying stock.

Q. Personally buying stock?

A. Yes.

Q. In the Pacific Mail Steamship Company?

1405 A. No; individually E. H. Harriman was buying stock.

Q. In the Pacific Mail?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know how much he acquired or how much there was acquired in his interest?

A. I know that the Speyers got more than he did, and the result was that the Speyers had control.

Q. Did he buy at that time up near to a majority?

A. I could not say how many shares he had; I do not believe anybody knew except Mr. Harriman.

Q. Well, so far as the information came to you, was it a large holding?

A. A substantial holding.

Q. Was that holding dissipated again?

A. Yes; I think he sold some of it to the Speyers during the transaction.

Q. What was the basis, as far as you knew, of the apprehension of the removal of the line to Puget Sound?

A. Nothing except discussions as to what Harriman would do or would not do; they were quite prevalent on the street in New York. Stories had been abroad as to what he would do if he got the Pacific Mail.

1406 Q. Stories that might or might not have a foundation to them?

A. Except that a great many things that Mr. Harriman said had a foundation to them, if he let them go out that way, by rumor.

Q. The Pacific Mail Steamship Company was doing business from San Francisco to the Atlantic coast by its connections over Panama at the time you became manager?

A. Yes.

Q. And it continued in that business up to when?

A. It was running its own line on the Atlantic when I went in, operating a line of steamers from New York to Colon and New York to San Francisco, using the railroad across the Isthmus.

Q. The Panama Railroad across the Isthmus?

A. Yes.

Q. Was the railroad independently owned?

A. Yes; owned by the French stockholders of the Panama Canal Company.

Q. That through transportation was dependent upon an arrangement with the railroad?

A. Yes.

1407 Q. How long did the Pacific Mail Steamship Company continue to run steamers on both sides of the Isthmus?

A. In 1895 I made a contract with the Panama Railroad by which we abandoned the Atlantic service and had through billing arrangements from coast to coast, they operating the railroad and also th steamship line from Colon to New York.

Q. How long did the Panama Railroad Company continue t operate the line from Colon to New York?

A. Up to the present time.

Q. They still do that?

A. Yes.

Q. How long did the Pacific Mail Steamship Company continu to do a through business by arrangement with the Panama Railroa through business from San Francisco to New York?

A. We stopped about three months ago.

Q. At the present time are there any lines doing a through bus ness from the Pacific coast of California to the Atlantic coast, eith through the Panama Canal or over the Isthmus?

A. Yes.

Q. Which are they?

A. The Grace Line, American-Hawaiian, Luckenbach, an 1408 a number of outside independent vessels.

Q. Are those lines complete lines or are they dependent upo connections?

A. As I understand you to say, passing through the canal?

Q. Either passing through the canal or over the Isthmus.

A. They will not permit any freight to be transferred over th Isthmus; the railroad will not touch a pound of freight, or a throug passenger, over the Isthmus; it must be transported through th canal.

Q. What lines are there plying from the Pacific coast to Hawa or the Orient?

A. From San Francisco, or the Pacific coast generally?

Q. The Pacific coast.

A. The Canadian Pacific, the Nippon Yusen Kaisha, the Toy Kisen Kaisha, the Bank Line, the Royal Mail, the Russian Volu teer Fleet, the Pacific Mail, the Standard Oil Company, the Doll Steamship Company, the Matson Steamship Company, the Ocean Steamship Company, and the Australian Steamship Company.

Q. Which of those are from San Francisco?

A. The Pacific Mail, the Toyo Kisen Kaisha, the Doll

1409 Steamship Company, the Matson Steamship Company, Oc anic Steamship Company, and the Australian Line, and th Standard Oil.

Q. How many of those San Francisco lines are competitive wi the Pacific Mail?

A. Toyo Kisen Kaisha, the Matson Line, the Oceanic Steamshi Company, and the Dollar Steamship Company. Do you mean b that, competition outward or homeward?

Q. Do they all reach the Orient?

A. For instance, the Standard Oil Steamship Company takes oil out and brings general cargo home. They are competitors homeward bound, but not competitors outward bound. The Dollar Steamship Company takes lumber out and brings general cargo back; they are competitors outward and noncompetitors homeward.

Q. And the remainder—should a distinction be made as to the outward or homeward competition in the case of the remainder?

A. No; they are competitors both ways.

Q. Those lines all reach the Orient?

A. All except the Australian Line. That goes to Australia.

1410 Q. Only?

A. Only, via Honolulu.

Q. Did you participate in the application that was made for leave to have the Pacific Mail Steamship Company conduct business through the canal?

A. No; the application was made by the Southern Pacific Company.

Q. Did you have anything to do with that?

A. In what way? I do not understand the question.

Q. Did you personally take any action looking to that?

A. In my official position?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes.

Q. What?

A. In discussing the question as to what policy the company should pursue in withdrawing from all business that might be considered competitive with the railroad.

Q. The American-Hawaiian Line now operates through the Canal?

A. Yes.

Q. Thus following the same course that the Pacific Mail-Panama Railroad route heretofore has followed?

1411 A. Except that the American-Hawaiian Line serves more ports on the Atlantic coast than the Panama Railroad Company did. The Panama Railroad line was operated merely between Colon and New York, and the American-Hawaiian Line, I believe, touches at Charleston, Philadelphia, New York, and Boston.

Q. Before the opening of the canal the American-Hawaiian Line crossed from the Atlantic to the Pacific in what way?

A. In connection with the Tehuantepec Railway.

Q. Does any of the eastbound traffic of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company travel out of San Francisco via El Paso?

A. Very little, I should say. It would be an unusual shipment, and a local shipment to some point in Texas or beyond.

Q. Is all the business destined east of the Missouri River which comes via the Pacific Mail Steamship Company routed through Ogden?

A. No, sir; it is routed either via Western Pacific or the Santa Fe or Southern Pacific—the Central route.

Mr. BLAIR. By "Southern Pacific" you mean via Ogden?

1412 The WITNESS. What we call the central route.

By Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. So far as it travels over the Southern Pacific, it travels through Ogden?

A. It is all fast freight—all fast freight, practically, goes that way.

Q. What is the reason for its travel through Ogden only, so far as it goes into the hands of the Southern Pacific Company?

A. It is all fast freight.

Q. What is the great bulk of that eastbound business?

A. Tea and silk and curios. We compete with the Canadian Pacific and the northern lines, and the date of arrival of practically all this fast freight is cabled back to the Orient the day of its arrival at destination; twenty-one, twenty-two or twenty-three days from point of origin to destination; and whether you get subsequent freight, or otherwise, depends upon that. You have to make the shortest possible time between Japan and China and points in the United States; so we force the freight, naturally, over the rails that will give us the best rail connection.

Q. That situation has existed how long?

1413 A. Ever since I have been in the company.

Q. Since 1893?

A. Since 1893, yes.

Q. Westbound business from east of the Missouri River which is to travel by the Pacific Mail Steamship Company to Hawaii or the Orient comes chiefly what way?

A. By all-rail lines that serve San Francisco. They are all competing for that business.

Q. Does the Pacific Mail Steamship Company do anything by way of influencing the route of that freight?

A. No, sir.

Q. So far as the rails are concerned?

A. No, sir.

Q. It simply accepts it as tendered by the different roads?

A. Yes.

Q. As to that business, so far as it is handled by the Southern Pacific Company, how is it moved?

A. The bulk of it goes by the Central route. Practically the only business we get through the Southern gateway is Government freight from Atlantic seaboard, and cotton. The Government con-1414 tract is divided practically equally between the Southern Pacific and the Santa Fe, and it leaves New York by water, goes to Galveston, and by either the Santa Fe or the Southern Pacific to San Francisco. Cotton is the only other commodity we have out of that southern territory.

Q. That is, cotton originating in the southeastern part of the United States?

A. Originating in Texas, Oklahoma, and Arkansas—raw cotton.

Q. If you disregarded that cotton and Government freight, what percentage of the Southern Pacific Company handled freight comes through Ogden; that is, originating east of the Missouri River?

A. I should say 100 per cent.

Q. Approximately what Pacific mail eastbound tonnage passes through Ogden annually?

A. In volume?

Q. Yes.

A. I do not know.

Q. Could you approximate it?

A. No; I could not. The freight is split up between three different lines. I would not attempt to remember what amount of 1415 freight the Southern Pacific Company got. In fact, I would not give it any attention.

Q. Approximately what amount of freight coming from east of the Missouri River, through the Southern Pacific Company, is delivered to the Pacific Mail Steamship Company at San Francisco annually?

A. Well, for more than five years neither the Santa Fe nor the Southern Pacific published proportional rates, and the result was that they had no outward business whatever. Whatever business we did, the freight originating in the United States destined to the Orient passed over the Western Pacific. It was only last summer that the Santa Fe and the Southern Pacific published proportional rates and went back into the oriental business. I should say that during that period the Southern Pacific Company has originated and turned over to us as much freight as the other two lines put together. I remember more in percentages than I do in the gross. I could furnish you with those figures, if you desire to have them. I do not carry them in my mind.

Q. If you could conveniently let us have what that tonnage has amounted to, I should be obliged; that is, the tonnage from east of the Missouri River delivered to the Pacific Mail Steamship 1416 Company by the different railroads for a year.

A. I would not be able to give you the tonnage that might or might not originate east of the Missouri River, for the reason that I do not know where the railroad tonnage originates. All I know is that the three railroads delivered so much tonnage to us. Just where it originated, I would not know, unless I went to the railroads and asked them. I can give you the amount of tonnage that each one of the railroads has given us since the proportional rates have gone into effect.

Q. Can you tell me, from your knowledge of the character of the country and the character of the commodities, whether a substantial part of that originates east of the Missouri River?

A. I should think so; from Chicago and Pittsburgh territory I should say the bulk of it originated.

Q. Is substantially all of the eastbound tonnage which is destined east of the Missouri River, which is handled by the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, taken on a through route?

A. All of it.

Q. How do you divide that tonnage as between the different railroads from San Francisco?

1417 A. We try to pay them back according to the percentage of business they develop for us. In other words, we hold out an incentive for the eastbound business equivalent to the division of what they originate for the westbound business.

Q. What is the approximate amount of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company's tonnage eastbound from the Orient for a year and destined east of the Missouri River?

A. It would amount to 25,000 or 30,000 tons.

Q. In practice, about how much of it moves through the Southern Pacific Company?

A. Pretty nearly 33⅓ per cent to each railroad line.

Q. Does the Southern Pacific Company send anything to the Orient by way of the other steamship companies?

A. By way of the Toyo Kisen Kaisha.

Q. And so forth?

A. What steamer is on the berth gets it; yes. The freight is given to the first steamer on the berth by all three railroads.

Q. How long has that been the practice?

A. Ever since the railroads published proportional rates. They had no freight before that and the Western Pacific gave the 1418 two steamship lines their freight, as the ships were on the berth.

Q. Prior to the opening of the Western Pacific in 1910, was the Pacific Mail Steamship Company's eastbound freight divided about half and half between the Santa Fe and the Southern Pacific?

A. No; it was about twenty-five per cent to the Santa Fe and about seventy-five per cent to the Southern Pacific.

Q. And that had prevailed for how long?

A. For some time.

Q. For some years?

A. Yes.

Q. What is the average ton revenue from the Orient to points east of the Missouri River?

Mr. HERRIN. Is that material in any way? It seems as if you are going pretty far outside of cross-examination.

Mr. MCCLENNEN. I think it probably means nothing more than the tonnage figures do, but it is a convenient way to have it converted into dollars. That is all I had in mind.

The WITNESS. I could not answer that question.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. You have no idea?

A. In the steamship business we do not pay any attention
1419 to ton revenue; as far as the railroads are concerned, we get our proportion out of the through rate and only deal with that. We have no concern in what the railroads do. They publish their rates for the Interstate Commerce Commission. We have to take the rates they publish and add to that our local to make the through rates. We deal only with our ocean transportation.

Mr. MCCLENNEN. I think that is all.

Redirect examination by Mr. BLAIR:

Q. At the time Mr. Huntington died had he not disposed of his stock holdings in the Pacific Mail Steamship Company?

A. That was the impression.

Q. That is your information?

A. Yes.

Q. At the time the Southern Pacific Company, in 1901, acquired the stock which it acquired in the Pacific Mail Steamship Company had it prior to that time any interest in the Pacific Mail Steamship Company?

A. None whatever.

Q. Nor anyone for it?

A. Not to my knowledge.

1420 Q. This eastbound traffic which you bring to San Francisco and which passes over the railroads across the continent, as I understand it, consists almost entirely of tea and silk?

A. Tea, silk, and curios.

Q. And that requires expedited service?

A. Fast freight.

Q. Is it not given practically passenger service across the c tinent?

A. All of the silk is passenger train service.

Q. As to the westbound traffic?

A. All the rest is given fast freight service.

Q. As to the westbound traffic, with the exception of the co which you have spoken of, and with the exception of the Governm freight, where does that originate—in what territory?

A. The great bulk of that originates in the Chicago and Pi burgh territory.

Q. A very large proportion of it?

A. In Chicago and Pittsburgh and the manufacturing centers tween those points.

Q. In what might be called the middle west territory?

1421 A. The middle west territory.

Q. And the great bulk of the traffic from the Atlantic board territory passes through the Suez Canal?

A. Yes.

Q. And the traffic you get from outside of the middle west te tory consists of cotton from the Southern States and freight ow by the United States going to the Philippines?

A. Yes.

Q. Are you able to give us more definitely the stock owned the Southern Pacific Company in the Pacific Mail Steamship C pany?

A. According to the annual report of the Southern Pacific C pany for June, 1914, the outstanding capital stock of the Pa Mail Steamship Company is $20,000,000. The total owned by Southern Pacific Company is $11,080,000.

Mr. BLAIR. That is all.

Mr. MCCLENNEN. That is all.

(Whereupon, at 5.05 p. m., an adjournment was taken until morrow, Wednesday, March 10, 1915, at 11 a. m.)

1422 EIGHTEENTH DAY.

ROOM 921, FLOOD BUILDING,

San Francisco, Cal., Wednesday, March 10, 191

The hearing was resumed, pursuant to adjournment, at 11 o'cl a. m., before Frank R. Hanna, special examiner.

Present on behalf of the United States: James W. Orr, E Edward F. McClennen, Esq., and Edward E. Gann, Esq., spe assistants to the Attorney General.

Present on behalf of the defendants: W. F. Herrin, Esq., J. Blair, Esq., P. F. Dunne, Esq., Garret McEnerney, Esq., and E Foulds, Esq., for the Southern Pacific Company.

1423 JULIUS KRUTTSCHNITT was called as a witness on behalf of the defendants, and having been duly sworn testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. BLAIR:

Q. Will you give your full name to the stenographer?

A. Julius Kruttschnitt.

Q. Where do you live?

A. In New York. I suppose more properly I should say in Connecticut; New Canaan, Connecticut.

Q. Will you give your railroad biography?

A. I entered the railroad service in 1878 as engineer on construction of the Morgan's Louisiana & Texas Railroad & Steamship Company. From 1878 to 1883 I occupied that position and the position of assistant to the chief engineer and general roadmaster. From 1883 to 1885 I was superintendent of the same road, and also assistant chief engineer. From 1885 to 1889 I was assistant general manager of what was known as the Atlantic system of the Southern Pacific Company. In 1889 I was made general manager of the Atlantic system, and in 1895, on the death of Mr. Towne, who was general manager of the Pacific system, I was made general 1424 manager of the entire Southern Pacific Company, both Atlantic and Pacific systems, with headquarters at San Francisco. From 1895 to 1904 I occupied that position, and was also one of the vice presidents of the Southern Pacific Company. From 1901 to 1904 I was also assistant to the president. In 1904 I was given charge of the operation, maintenance, and construction of both the Union and Southern Pacific systems, with headquarters at Chicago, with the title of director of maintenance and operation. I occupied that position until the unmerging of the Southern and Union Pacific, in January, 1913, when I was made chairman of the executive committee of the board of directors of the Southern Pacific Company, which brings my record down to date.

Mr. ORR. Which position you now hold?

The WITNESS. Which position I now hold.

By Mr. BLAIR:

Q. Do your remember the opening of the through line from San Francisco via El Paso, San Antonio, Houston, and New Orleans and thence by steamship line to New York?

A. I do.

Q. Being the line which is now know as the Sunset-Gulf Line?

1425 A. Yes.

Q. About what time was that line opened?

A. On the 1st of February, 1883.

Q. What was your connection at that time with Morgan's Louisiana & Texas Railroad & Steamship Company?

A. Before the opening I was general road master and assistant chief engineer, and shortly after the opening, about two months after the opening, I was made superintendent.

Q. Who was the president of the Morgan Company—we will call it for short—at that time?

A. Mr. Charles Whitney.

Q. Was he alive in 1883?

A. Well, Mr. Whitney was president when I first went to the Morgan Company. He died shortly after I went with the company I do not remember the date.

Q. Who succeeded him as president?

A. A. C. Hutchinson.

Q. He is also dead, is he?

A. Yes.

Q. State briefly the location of the railroad of the Morgan Company at the time of the opening of this through line.

1426 A. The Morgan Company had a rail line from New Orleans through Vermillionville, Louisiana, to Cheneyville, and it had trackage rights over the Texas & Pacific from Cheneyville to Alexandria, and it had some local branches east of Morgan City, the Houma branch and the Thibodaux branch, and one or two other small branches, the St. Martinsville branch and the Cypremort branch.

Q. What part of its line formed a part of the through line that we have been speaking of?

A. One hundred and forty-four miles from Vermillionville, Louisiana, to New Orleans.

Q. What is the present name of Vermillionville?

A. La Fayette. It was changed shortly after the opening of the through line.

Q. What steamship line did the Morgan Company own and operate at that time?

A. A line of steamships from New Orleans to New York.

Q. At or about the opening of this through line, in 1883, had you any reason for believing that Mr. Huntington and his associates owned or controlled the Morgan Company? And if so, state what those reasons were. By "Mr. Huntington and his associates" I 1427 mean Mr. Huntington, Leland Stanford, Charles Crocker, and the Hopkins estate.

A. The first time I had any reason to suspect ownership or control by Mr. Huntington and associates was a visit of Mr. William Mahl, who was one of his confidential men, in the spring of 188[illegible] Mr. Mahl came and looked over the property, which he did in gen-detail, and I was detailed to go over the property with Mr. Mahl and show him everything he wanted to see. From that I inferred that something was going to happen, or possibly had happened. Shortly after that I met Mr. Charles F. Crocker and went over part of the road with him, and also met Governor Stanford; I think it was probably the only time, or the second time, that I had ever seen him. I was also detailed to go over the line with him. The first time I ever saw Mr. Huntington himself was in 1884. There was some trouble on the Mississippi River. I was working on closing a crevasse, known as the Davis Crevasse, that occurred in the spring of 1884, and Mr. Huntington came up on a tug with Mr. Hutchinson to see what was going on, and I was introduced to him then.

Q. How did Mr. Huntington act with reference to the road; as an outsider or as one interested in it?

1428 A. Of course I never came in direct contact with him, except on this one occasion, but I was in continual conference with Mr. Hutchinson, and I knew by instructions that he gave me and letters that he showed me that he was receiving instructions from Mr. Huntington.

Q. The letters he showed you were from Mr. Huntington?

A. Yes.

Q. And Mr. Huntington was not at that time an officer of the Morgan Company?

A. No.

Q. Did Mr. Hutchinson obey the instructions of Mr. Huntington?

A. Yes; he did.

Q. That was in 1883 and 1884?

A. And 1884.

Q. After this through line was opened, state any facts which you may know going to show that this through line was under a unified management or control.

Mr. McCLENNEN. That is objected to as calling upon the witness to state facts in the nature of a conclusion, and thereby to express an opinion.

1429 The WITNESS. Well, shortly after the through line was opened we had some very acrimonious discussions about the condition of the rolling stock that was being sent east with through freight. The box cars had very bad roofs, and when they got in Texas and Louisiana, where the rains were frequent and heavy, the freight would be damaged; and we protested against the use of this equipment, first to Mr. Towne, who had charge, and when that availed nothing, Mr. Hutchinson took it up with Mr. Huntington, and I saw numberless letters from Mr. Huntington to Mr. Hutchinson about this matter, showing that he had control over Mr. Hutchinson, and of course he had control over Mr. Towne.

Mr. McCLENNEN. This was 1883?

The WITNESS. Yes; shortly after the opening of the through li Then there were frequent discussions with Mr. Stubbs as to the w the freight should be loaded on steamships from New York to N Orleans and how it should be transferred to the cars. Mr. Stub wanted a great deal of extra expense incurred on the Atlantic end assorting this freight for the benefit of the Pacific end, and M Hutchinson objected to it, and the matter was referred to Mr. Hu ington for decision.

By Mr. BLAIR:

Q. And he decided it?

1430 A. He decided it. Then, again, the employees on the Paci system, particularly on the sleeping cars, treated the rules the Atlantic system with contempt. They were insolent, and wh they were on the line of the Morgan road the question came up as whether or not they should obey those rules, and that matter w referred again to Mr. Hutchinson and taken up by him with M Huntington, and Mr. Huntington settled the matter.

Q. What other men at that time, besides Mr. Towne and M Stubbs, did you come in contact with in connection with the manag ment of this through line?

A. I came in contact with the officers of what was known as t Galveston, Harrisburg & San Antonio system. At the time M Towne was made general manager of these roads in Texas from Paso to La Fayette, or Vermillionville, Mr. Fillmore was made ge eral superintendent. He appointed a Mr. E. G. Thompson superi tendent of the Galveston, Harrisburg & San Antonio, and he h jurisdiction to La Fayette, and our dealings as to detail matters we with Mr. Thompson, and if we got into any snarl that need straightening out Mr. Hutchinson would take it up with Mr. Hu ington.

Q. Mr. Hutchinson was in charge of what part of th

1431 through line?

A. In 1883 and up to 1885?

Q. I am speaking entirely between 1883 and 1885.

A. He had control simply over the Morgan steamship lines a railroad lines.

Q. As defined by you?

A. Yes.

Q. And Mr. Towne had direct charge over what part of t through line?

A. From La Fayette to San Francisco and also the Central Paci

Q. Do you know of any facts tending to show that the Cent Pacific Railroad had anything to do, in 1883 and 1884, with t management and operation of the roads composing the Sunset-Gulf line? If so, state what those facts were.

A. This is 1883 and 1884?

Q. Yes; from 1883 to 1885.

A. Well, the jurisdiction of a number of Central Pacific officers was extended over the lines in Texas. Stevens, who was general superintendent of motive power and general master mechanic, exercised authority all the way to La Fayette. The superintendent 1432 of bridges, a man named Adams, was an old Central Pacific man, who was sent over to fill that office. There was a division engineer named Lindburg, a Central Pacific man, sent over to take a position on the El Paso end of the Galveston, Harrisburg & San Antonio. There was a man named Seymour, who was sent over as superintendent of the Galveston, Harrisburg & San Antonio.

Q. And there was also Mr. Towne?

A. Mr. Towne, of course, was general manager, and Mr. Fillmore general superintendent.

Q. Do you remember seeing, during this period, any bulletins posted at La Fayette?

A. Yes; the bulletins of the west end were always posted on the bulletin boards at La Fayette.

Q. How were they headed?

A. They were headed generally "Central Pacific Railroad Company and leased lines."

Q. And generally what was the purport of instructions or orders contained in those bulletins? What was the nature of the bulletins?

A. They were notices of appointments or general orders issued for the guidance of employees.

Q. Prior to 1885 did you ever meet with Mr. Huntington, 1433 Mr. Stanford or Mr. Crocker on any inspection trips over the east end of the Sunset-Gulf route?

A. Between 1883 and 1885?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes; I was on several inspection trips with Colonel Charles F. Crocker, meeting him at El Paso and going over the lines with him; and I was on one or more with Mr. C. P. Huntington, one with Governor Stanford, and several with Mr. Timothy Hopkins.

Q. Did they give any instructions in regard to the operation of this through line?

A. They would not to me, but they would comment on work that was going on and ask for information about it, as to what was being done; and of course their commands and orders would be issued to my superior officer, Mr. Hutchinson. I knew of numerous instances where, after going over the road, they would take these matters up with him and give instructions.

Q. And how did he regard those instructions?

A. As a subordinate. He would obey them—after argument a good many cases. Mr. Hutchinson was a very argumentative tleman. He did not like to give up his position, but he would yie positive instructions.

1434 Q. He was a man who would not yield to anything except higher authority?

A. That is it.

Q. Was there anything in those early times in the constructio the G. H. & S. A. which you observed, the materials used or ot wise, to show a connection with the Central Pacific Railroad C pany? If so, what were those evidences of connection with the tral Pacific?

A. Well, they were very numerous and apparent at once railroad man. For instance, the G. H. & S. A. had on its lines, o ating them, a number of Central Pacific locomotives. It ha number of its own of exactly the same design, and the most stri feature of the design was a very exaggerated and clumsy loo smokestack, which was known as a Stevens smokestack, designe Mr. Stevens, the general master mechanic of the Central Pacific, which was used on the Central Pacific locomotives and the G. H S. A. locomotives. Then, as to box cars, there was a box ca Central Pacific box car, of Mr. Towne's own design, of which was very proud, which he said was an equally good stock car box car. He ought to have put it an equally bad stock car 1435 box car, because it was neither. It had about twelve openi in it to protect against thieves and dust and rain, and al the new G. H. & S. A. box car equipment—which at that time quite new—was built on that plan. The trucks were identica design with the Central Pacific trucks. The method of hanging brakes, the draw heads, the wheels—a great many wheels were a ally made in Sacramento; and, again, in the style of architectur the buildings—the buildings put up on the west end of the G. H S. A. were identical in design with buildings on the Southern Central Pacific lines; the depots were the same design.

Q. How about the rails?

A. A great many of the rails were rolled by the same mak There was one maker in particular that I heard Mr. Hunting speak of—Cammel, of Sheffield—who, he said, had made him the rails for the Central Pacific he had ever gotten, and that he ordered rails from him for the G. H. & S. A. They were the s weight, the same cross section, and the same length as the Cen Pacific rails. The switches and frogs were actually Central Pac because they were made in Sacramento and were shipped down the line of the G. H. & S. A.

1436 Q. How about the train rules?

A. The train rules for the lines west of La Fayette were the Central Pacific rules. In all of my correspondence with the officers of the lines west of La Fayette I never remember their using any letterheads except "Central Pacific and leased lines."

Q. Coming, now, to the period 1885 and subsequently, do you remember the lease to the Southern Pacific Company of the railroad companies which composed the Sunset-Gulf route?

A. I do.

Q. About what time was that lease?

A. February 1, 1885.

Q. That was about the time you remember it?

A. Yes.

Q. What changes, if any, took place a short time subsequent to that lease, in the positions of Mr. Hutchinson and yourself?

A. In February, 1885—I do not know that that is the exact date of the lease, but that is what is fixed in my mind—in February, 1885, the lines were divided at El Paso. The lines west of El Paso were known as the Pacific system, and those east as the At-1437 lantic system. Mr. Hutchinson was made general manager of the Atlantic system, and his authority was, therefore, extended from La Fayette westward to El Paso. Mr. Towne was general manager of the Pacific system, or lines west of El Paso.

Q. And what was your position?

A. Shortly after this circular, not over three or four or five months, or something like that, Mr. Hutchinson made me his assistant, which extended my authority to El Paso. I was made assistant general manager for the Atlantic system.

Q. What other changes, if any, were there in the personnel of the organization exercising control over the system?

A. I should say, before leaving that question, that Mr. Stubbs was at the same time appointed general traffic manager of the entire Southern Pacific system, and his supervisory and critical powers were extended over the Atlantic system and all the way to New York.

Q. With those exceptions, what changes, if any, were made in the personnel of the organization in charge of the Sunset-Gulf route or of the Southern Pacific system?

A. I do not know of a single change. The men who had been in charge on the Texas lines, on the lines west of La Fayette, 1438 were retained. There were no changes in personnel, and the whole concern went on as it did before, with the exception that the jurisdictional line between Mr. Towne and Mr. Hutchinson was shifted from La Fayette to El Paso.

Q. Was there any change in the general nature and extent of t common control and management of the system?

A. Absolutely none.

Q. Prior to the lease the authority over the entire system was e ercised by the head officers of what company?

A. By the head officers of the Central Pacific.

Q. And subsequent to the lease such authority was exercised by t head officers of what company?

A. Of the Southern Pacific Company, who were the same men the officers of the Central Pacific.

Q. Explain briefly the nature of the duties performed by you assistant manager and afterwards as general manager of the Atlan system part of the Southern Pacific system.

A. As assistant manager, Mr. Hutchison used me for the operati work altogether—construction and maintenance. He seldom we out on the line, and I looked after those matters when necessary a reported to him. Of course that was always done under his juri diction. I performed the same duties when I was general ma ager.

1439 Q. Did you change your residence at any time, say whi you were general manager?

A. In 1889, when I was made general manager, I thought, in co pliance with the laws of Texas, that I should live in Texas, and moved to Houston. I was so much of the time, however, in Louisia that I concluded the next year that I would move back to New O leans. There was, however, some objection made to that by the Tex authorities, who threatened suit if I did not go back, so I moved ba to Houston.

Q. And you remained a resident of Texas for how long?

A. From 1889, with the exception of one year, until 1895.

Q. How long did the Southern Pacific Company operate the lin in Texas under this lease which you have mentioned?

A. From the beginning of the lease, in the early part of 188 until 1889—I think July, 1889, or thereabouts. In July, 1889, th Southern Pacific Company, in compliance with laws passed by Texa had to give up its operations of the Texas lines. The Texas lin after that were operated by their own officers, elected by the stock holders, and the control of the Southern Pacific over those lines wa simply through its stockholding interest.

1440 Q. When was the lease over the Louisiana lines dissolved A. December 31, 1901.

Q. And such control as the Southern Pacific Company has ov the Louisiana lines has been exercised since that date in wh manner?

A. Through the holdings of stock. In other words, its relations to the Texas and Louisiana lines are the same now. It has a stock-holding interest only, and these lines are operated by their own officers.

Q. During the period from 1885 to 1895 did you come in contact with the "big four" interests—I mean Mr. Huntington, Gov. Stanford, Mr. Charles Crocker, while he was alive, and the representatives of the Hopkins estate?

A. In those years, yes; quite frequently.

Q. In what way did you come in contact with them?

A. Through visits to the property and accompanying them over the properties.

Q. What kind of interest or control, if any, did they show or exercise on those occasions?

Mr. McCLENNEN. That is objected to as calling for a conclusion and an opinion of the witness.

1441 The WITNESS. On trips that I would make over the line in company with Mr. Hutchinson I would hear the discussions between them and Mr. Hutchinson and instructions given by them as to what they wanted done. When I was alone they, of course, would not give instructions to me direct, but they would ask for information and frequently discuss matters with me, and then I would receive instructions, sometimes in line with these criticisms, from Mr. Hutchinson to vary our practice.

By Mr. BLAIR:

Q. And when you were general manager?

A. When I was general manager, from 1889 to 1895, my duties were not very different from what they were when I was assistant manager. That is to say, Mr. Hutchinson was retained by Mr. Huntington as his representative without any particular title, and as to traffic matters and general policy matters I still got instructions from Mr. Hutchinson as Mr. Huntington's representative. I did not get instructions from Mr. Huntington or any of the other owners of the property until I moved to San Francisco.

Q. Do you know how these instructions were regarded and acted upon by Mr. Hutchinson or yourself?

1442 A. Well, they were always respected. I say sometimes after considerable argument by Mr. Hutchinson, but when the instructions were finally given they were always obeyed.

Q. I understand you to say that you became a resident of California in 1895?

A. Yes; in the autumn of 1895.

Q. What was your official title at that time?

A. General manager of the Southern Pacific Company. Shor after that I was made fourth vice president.

Q. Just explain, briefly, the extent of your jurisdiction and nature of your duties in that capacity.

A. As general manager I had authority over the operating maintenance departments. Mr. H. E. Huntington, as the dir representative of his uncle, was living in San Francisco, and he charged with construction matters. Traffic matters were under J. C. Stubbs, and I never had anything to do with them. Land m ters were under a separate department, and the land agent repor to Mr. Huntington.

Q. I suppose I may assume that, on going to California, you m it your business to become familiar with the lines in being then of Southern Pacific system?

1443 A. Yes. I can remember that plainly, because it seemed me a matter that I never could get in my head. The syst was so intricate and there were so many branches and connecti that I almost despaired of ever getting it straight.

Q. You finally became familiar with the system west of El P and especially the lines in Oregon, California, and Nevada?

A. Yes; I made it a point, in the first year I was there, to be on the line almost all of the time.

Q. Did you pay especial attention to the recent additions and tensions, and the reasons therefor?

A. Yes.

Q. I mean by "recent" those that were recent at the time came to California.

A. Yes.

Q. Has your official connection since that time been such as to m you familiar with the subsequent additions and extensions to system?

A. Yes; because, in 1901, the Union Pacific interests had bo the interests of the Southern Pacific, and on Mr. Harriman becom president of the Southern Pacific he made me assistant to the p dent, and that threw under my jurisdiction the constructio 1444 new lines, in addition to the maintenance and operation existing ones; but other departments than the construc still reported to Mr. Harriman direct. In other words, my appo ment was as assistant to the president, with such duties as might f time to time be assigned.

Q. I exhibit to you a map which has been offered in evidence is marked "Defendants' Exhibit No. 7," and is also marked "No and purports to be a map showing in red the lines operated on 2, 1890, and subsequently, and in blue the new construction

July 2, 1890, and in hatched or dotted blue the lines acquired since July 2, 1890, and I would ask you to examine that map and state whether you are familiar with it and whether you have seen it before?

A. Yes; I am familiar with it. It was prepared in my office, under my direction.

Q. Does its representation of the lines as explained in the legend and as embraced in my question accord with your recollection and knowledge of the facts?

A. Yes; it does.

Q. I wish you would hold that map in your hand, or if you have a copy with which you are more familiar you can take that copy, 1445 and consider, first, the lines thereon shown of the Southern Pacific system in Oregon.

A. The numbers on the Oregon lines run in a series from 1 to 14.

Q. You mean the numbers in circles on the map?

A. Yes; alongside the lines.

Q. I take it from this map that on July 2, 1890, the road had been completed from Portland to the Oregon boundary line. Is that correct?

A. Yes; "lines operated on July 2nd colored red." The line was completed through to Portland.

Q. The numbers 1 to 14 on this map indicate additions and extensions to the Oregon line from July 2, 1890, to the present time; is that correct?

A. Yes. I said the line was built through to Portland at that time.

Q. So that the numbers are simply for the purpose of indicating the additions and extensions, the red lines having no numbers?

A. Yes; I can see, of course, that there might be some doubt, but with this explanation there should not be any. For instance, take the number 10. That circle is near the red line, but the red 1446 line is defined as being in operation at that time, so that the 10 represents a little line from Marshfield to Myrtle Point, on the left of the circle.

Q. Now, Mr. Kruttschnitt, take the addition or extension corresponding to No. 12 and state when that was constructed and its general purpose.

A. No 12 is a local line built from Hillsboro, Oregon, over to Tillamook. It was projected to tap the timber in that part of Oregon west of the Willamette River and south of the Columbia, which is, I suppose, the finest body of standing fir timber in the world; and that line was completed about eighteen months or two years ago. It is entirely local.

Q. Take, again, the line indicated by No. 9 and state its nature and purpose.

A. No. 9 is a local road running from Yaquina Bay across the main line of the Southern Pacific up into the Cascades. It was bought by the Southern Pacific Company from local owners as a feeder. From the ocean side they get excursion business from the bay valleys to the seacoast and fish from the seacoast to the interior, but the bulk of the traffic comes from that part of 9 east of the main line, where it runs into the timber. That is known as the Corvallis & Eastern. It is a corporate name.

Q. Without going into detail as to all the additions and extensions to the Oregon lines, what was their character?

A. They were all short local lines, intended to develop the country and to bring traffic to the main line.

Q. So that the additions and extensions to the system, so far as Oregon is concerned, since July 2, 1890, were of the character of branches and feeders?

A. Just ordinary, normal development of the country by short feeders.

Q. Now, Mr. Kruttschnitt, let us come to the additions and extensions to the system since July 2, 1890, in Nevada.

A. In Nevada the numbers run from 64 to 67. Shall I begin with 64?

Q. I wish you would begin with 64 and explain what that is.

A. The line from Mound House, which is just to the right of Carson City, down to Keeler, was a narrow-gauge line.

Q. Where is Keeler?

A. Near Owens Lake near the circle marked 64.

Mr. McCLENNEN. Right on the east shore of Owens Lake.

1448

The WITNESS. That road was bought as a feeder and also with the intention to incorporate it into a low-grade line on the east side of the Sierras, to run from Mojave all the way up about the Columbia lakes, and to make a short cut from southern California over to the line of the Central Pacific instead of running through Sacramento and then east. That is the dotted part that was purchased.

By Mr. BLAIR:

Q. What was its condition when purchased? What kind of road was it?

A. It was in very fair condition as a narrow-gauge road.

Q. It was a narrow-gauge road?

A. Three-foot gauge. That part of it in full blue lines from Mojave up to and on the left-hand side of Owens Lake was built a few years ago by us under contract with the Los Angeles Aqueduct

Commission. They had an enormous amount of stuff to carry up there for their aqueduct, and we made an arrangement with them, on special rates, to build that line for their use. We built it as a broad-gauge line. The full blue lines up near the Central Pacific——

Q. While you are on this 64: Is that still partly a 1449 narrow-gauge road?

A. Yes. I was coming to that.

Q. I beg your pardon. I thought you had passed that point.

A. The full blue lines near the Central Pacific make a connection from a station called Churchill over to Hazen on the main line that was built as standard gauge; and at about the same time that we built that the Tonapah mines were opened in Nevada, and there was such heavy traffic there that the gauge was widened from Churchill down to Tonapah Junction; so the line is at present standard gauge from Hazen through Churchill to Tonapah Junction. Then comes a piece of narrow gauge from Tonapah Junction down to Lone Pine, which is the junction with the Los Angeles Aqueduct line, and then broad gauge into Mojave. They never widened the gauge of the intermediate part, because there is a very high mountain summit there, with a great deal of curvature and a heavy grade, and the traffic does not warrant our going to that expense as yet.

Q. What is the gauge from Churchill to Mound House?

A. That we have widened also; that is standard gauge.

Q. You may now, if you please, describe the others.

1450 A. No. 66 was built according to the policy I just outlined; in other words, up to the point marked "Westwood Junction" it was located and built as part of the through line up to Klamath Lakes, where it was joined with this No. 14. There is a great deal of timber in that country, and particularly around Westwood Junction and the little town of Westwood, there is an enormous tract of timber, owned by the Red River Lumber Company of Minnesota, and we made a contract with them to build this line to Westwood under a guarantee of very large lumber traffic from their new mill.

Q. About what time was that line built?

A. Well, that line was opened within the last twelve months; it has just been completed.

Q. Now, the line you have been describing is No. 66, is it?

A. Yes. No. 65 is a little blue dot there, just a local branch of the Central Pacific, almost a switch.

Q. What is 67?

A. No. 67 is a little branch about seven or eight miles long, built to a little settlement called Metropolis; they put in a dam there and 1451 an irrigation system for reclaiming those desert lands, and that was built for their accommodation.

Q. While we are in the neighborhood, will you explain wh
No. 68 refers to?

A. No. 68, which is in Utah, is what is known as the Lucin cut-o
It is a line running from Ogden to a place called Umbria Junctio directly across Salt Lake; instead of deflecting around to the nort it saves, in distance, about twenty-two or twenty-three miles and a level track instead of going over the Promontory Range of mou tains there, which are about 1,000 feet high.

Q. When was that constructed?

A. The Lucin cut-off was completed, I think, in 1902 or 1903; think it was completed quite a little while before I left San Fra cisco.

Q. Those lines which you have just been describing, correspondi to Nos. 64, 65, 66, 67, and 68, now stand in what corporate name?

A. The Central Pacific.

Q. In what corporate name was the line 64 when it was bei constructed, and just afterwards?

A. No. 64, when we bought it, was known as the Carson Colorado Railroad, part of it. Then, after we bought i 1452 we changed the name to Nevada & California, because y will notice there is a road running from Carson City to Re which is also the Carson & Colorado. In other words, the Car & Colorado ran from Reno to Carson City through Mound House a Churchill down to Owens Lake, and we bought the part from Mou House to Churchill, so that that left two roads with the same na and we changed the name to Nevada & California; and it kept th name, and it has that name now; but it was sold to the Central P cific in 1912.

Q. What we will call, then, the Hazen-Mojave line was put in t name of the Central Pacific Railroad Company in 1912?

A. Yes; February, 1912.

Q. How about the line corresponding to No. 66?

A. That was built under the name of the Fernley & Lassen Ra road. The Fernley & Lassen Railroad was incorporated and bu from Fernley, on the Central Pacific line up near Lassen Peak, about the Klamath Lakes. The construction was built in the na of that company, but it was sold to the Central Pacific. I do n know just the date, but about the time of its completion.

Q. Were they put in the name of the Central Pacific 1453 the act of consolidation of February 27, 1912?

A. Yes; the road was not constructed at that time, but t surveys were finished, and they were transferred at that same time

Q. Why were they not originally constructed in the name of Central Pacific?

A. Well, it was the custom generally not to build those branches in the name of any one company until we determined just how they were going to be financed and how existing mortgages would affect them; and after they were completed those things would be considered, and they would be transfered to the property that they seemed to belong to naturally.

Q. They were constructed by the Southern Pacific Company?

A. They were constructed by the Southern Pacific Company always.

Q. And whether or not they should be constructed was determined by the officers of what company?

A. By the officers of the Southern Pacific Company.

Q. Now, let us turn our attention to the additions and extensions since July 2, 1890, to the Southern Pacific system in California.

1454 A. In further answer to that last question I would say that sometimes the charters of these companies did not permit of the construction of these branches, and changes would have to be made in the charters before they could be transferred.

Q. And that is the reason why they were brought into the name of the company by acts of consolidation?

A. Yes. The numbers from 15 to 19 cover additions and extensions of main lines in California, and from No. 20 to No. 63 of branch lines. There is a multitude of those.

Q. What does No. 63 cover?

A. No. 63 covers the line into the Imperial Valley, thence through the northern part of Lower California into Yuma, and also a little branch built for the United States Government from Yuma up to the Laguna Dam.

Q. I will not ask you to explain all these different lines, except those that involve additions to the system in California, which carry through or main line traffic, say, from No. 15 to No. 19.

A. You say you want me to describe those?

Q. Yes.

A. No. 15 is an extension of what is known as the West Side 1455 Line, on the west side of the San Joaquin River from Los Banos down to Armona. That completed the line on the west side of the San Joaquin, and with the completed line from Goshen up to Lathrop and Tracy gives a double track through the San Joaquin Valley.

No. 16 is the extension of the Southern Pacific coast line from Point Santa Margarita down to Ellwood.

Q. At what time was that coast line completed and opened for business?

A. It was completed and put into operation early in 1901.

Q. Which of those additions were eventually put in the name the Central Pacific Railway Company?
I mean the additions in California; I am speaking entirely of t
A. Well, part of No. 14, which runs from Weed up to the C fornia line; then this one marked No. 27, from Chico to Sterling C
Q. That is a little branch or feeder?
A. A little branch up into the timber.
Q. How about No. 26?
A. No. 26, which is the Sacramento Southern, a little running from Sacramento down alongside the Sacram 1456 River.
Q. And, I suppose, part of 64?
A. All of 64 has been made Central Pacific.
Q. With those exceptions?
A. With those exceptions; all the others are S. P.
Q. You may explain when the line corresponding to No. 14 constructed, and for what purpose.
A. The line from Weed, which is the south junction of No with the main line via the red line—that is, through Grant's and Medford—is a line with excessively heavy grades and a h curvature, and Mr. Harriman, on one of his visits over the sys asked whether it was not possible to get a line to substitute for with less grade and less curvature. We told him that surveys reconnoissances had been made east of Mt. Shasta and that a b route was practicable that way. At that time there was a lumber road running from Weed up to Grass Lake, a little sta there south of the Oregon line, a timber road, and we bought th the nucleus of this line east of the Cascades. Then we started b ing from Grass Lake northerly and built through Klamath up to a little place called Kirk. Then we started from Eu 1457 on the Oregon line, which is parallel 44, and built south around the line called 5, which was destined to meet this line through Kirk and to afford this low-grade line to Portland a line of good alignment as against very heavy curvature; but construction has been stopped where it is marked on this map, nothing is being done now, and probably never will until traffic very much better and conditions get better.
Q. Is traffic sufficient to justify the completion of that line, in opinion?
A. Not now.
Q. Why was No. 14 put in the name of the Central Pacific?
it built in its name?
A. No; this little line from Weed was a local line, and as mo the construction proceeded from the south end the whole line wa in the name of the Oregon Eastern, all the way from Eugene to Weed Junction, and as it had to be assigned either to the Central Pacific or the Southern, it was concluded to assign it to the Central Pacific, because it sprang from their part of the through line.

Q. With the exceptions you have mentioned, I understand all the other lines in California now stand in the name of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company?

1458 A. Yes; they belong to it. Some of them are still in the names of these local corporations.

Q. Most of them, however, are in the name of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company?

A. Yes. There was one omission. When I said the lines colored blue had been assigned to the Central Pacific I should have said there is one marked 19, which is the Dumbarton cut-off; that belongs to the Central Pacific.

Q. That extends from what point?

A. From Niles to Redwood City.

Q. What was the purpose of its construction and when was it constructed?

A. Its construction was determined upon by Mr. Harriman when he was in San Francisco at the time of the fire and earthquake in 1906. There was great demoralization of the ferry service through congestion, and he suggested to the people of San Francisco whether it would not be a good thing to have a crossing of San Francisco Bay that would be independent of trouble to the ferry system and fogs, which are very frequent here and annoying, and a company was formed and a franchise gotten from the United States Government to bridge the bay there; hence that line. We use that line now 1459 for bringing freight into San Francisco instead of transferring it slowly and dangerously when there are heavy fogs on the bay by ferry from Oakland over.

Q. It is an important part of the system?

A. Very.

Q. And you get into San Francisco and use that line by going from Niles across this blue line that you have been speaking of to what point?

A. To Redwood; thence northerly to San Francisco.

Q. Now, this Dumbarton cut-off stands in the name of what company?

A. The Central Pacific.

Q. And the line from Redwood to San Francisco in what name?

A. The Southern Pacific Railroad.

Q. So that to utilize that line for the purpose indicated you use a line standing in part in the name of the Central Pacific and a line standing in part in the name of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company?

A. Yes.

Q. At what times were the other lines put in the name of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company?

1460 A. That was by this act of consolidation.

Q. Was it at one time, or by different acts of consolidation?

A. It was by one general act of consolidation. I do not just remember when, but perhaps ten or twelve years ago.

Q. At what time was the west side line completed?

A. That was in 1891. No. 17 is also part of the completion of the coast line of the Southern Pacific Company. It gave a direct low-grade line from Montalvo, that junction, eastward to Burbank, and gave a low-grade line in place of a very heavy grade line via the red line between the two points.

Q. When was that completed?

A. That was completed about the same time, in 1901. No. 18 is what is known as the Bay Shore cut-off. It is our low-grade entrance into the city of San Francisco. That substitutes a water-grade line at no point exceeding about fifteen feet above tidewater for the red line that came up to over 300 feet above tidewater on very heavy grades and very crooked tracks through the streets and the residence part of the city, with every crossing almost at grade. The new line has no crossings at grade.

1461 Q. It is a substitute in part for the red line from San Francisco to Gilroy?

A. Yes.

Q. How long is that?

A. It is a little over ten miles.

Q. Now, 19 and 20?

A. No. 19 relates to the Dumbarton cut-off, and No. 20 is just a little spur there.

Q. What is this line from Famoso northeast?

A. Well, that is a branch line; that runs from Famoso to Porterville. It gives a loop line east of the main line running in the foothills of the mountains there, in a fruit country; and that part of it running from Porterville to the circle marked 47 is a little road known as the Porterville & Northeastern. That we built up there to tap some lumber country and fruit country.

Q. Now, the other lines; what is their general character and purpose?

A. The other lines are all nothing but branch lines, of greater or less length, built to develop some particular part of the country, to act as feeders to the main line.

Q. So that the additions and extensions of the lines in California since July 2, 1890, have been the additions to the main line which you have described and branches and feeders?

1462

A. Yes.

Q. Now, coming back to this west side line, as I understand the map, that for the first time created a through line from San Francisco to Los Angeles and beyond, standing in the name of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company?

A. The first time trains could be sent over Southern Pacific rails from San Francisco to Los Angeles.

Q. By "Southern Pacific rails" you mean rails or road belonging to the Southern Pacific Railroad Company?

A. Yes; and prior to that we sent them down from Tracy through Lathrop to Goshen, over the line of the Central Pacific.

Q. So that up to 1891 the line of the Central Pacific from Lathrop to Goshen formed a part of the Sunset-Gulf route?

A. Yes.

Q. An essential part?

A. A very important part, because the coast line had not been finished and the west side line had not been finished, and there was no way to get to New Orleans except to go by that piece of the Central Pacific.

1463 Q. Is the line from Goshen north still used as a part of the Southern Pacific system for transportation of traffic via El Paso?

A. Yes; the largest towns are on that line, but we use the two lines interchangeably as double track; we run some trains up one side and some up the other, to give both sides service, and we do the same with freight trains.

Q. What effect has the possession and use of those lines in the manner described by you upon the efficiency of the Sunset-Gulf route line?

A. It enables us to operate very much more economically and efficiently, because we give those towns more service than we otherwise could if we had to run separate trains.

Q. And so far as the through route is concerned you have practically a double track?

A. Yes.

Q. And since the completion of the coast line in 1901?

A. That gives us a third track. The coast line was built for the purpose of cutting out the very heavy grades from Burbank north, you might say, to Bakersfield. That is a very crooked road with a very heavy grade, and the coast line has a very light grade and 1464 is very straight. It is also a scenic line, and a favorite route for passengers. The low grades, the absence of curvature, and the beauty of the road were the controlling reasons why that line was built.

Q. To what point had that line extended when you moved to Cal fornia?

A. On the south Ellwood was the terminus, a little west of San Barbara, and on the north Santa Margarita. In other words, t termini shown on this map.

Q. We have been speaking of lines in Oregon, California, a Nevada, and we have gone over the changes since July 2, 1890, the system in those States. I will now ask you what railroads co posed a part of the Sunset-Gulf route east of El Paso?

A. In 1890?

Q. Yes.

A. What railroads composed the rail part of the Sunset-Gu route?

Q. East of El Paso.

A. Well, the Galveston, Harrisburg & San Antonio, that extend from El Paso to Houston; the Texas & New Orleans. from Houst to Orange, or the Louisiana State line; the Louisiana Weste 1465 from Orange to Lafayette; Morgan's Louisiana & Texas Ra road & Steamship Company, from Lafayette to New Orlea

Q. Do these same lines compose that part of the system or did the same lines compose that part of the system when the through li was opened in 1883?

A. Yes.

Q. Do they now compose that part of the system?

A. Yes.

Q. There have been, then, no material changes in the Sunset-Gu route east of El Paso?

A. None except the building of a few local branches and feede

Q. When the through line was opened in 1883 the steamship pa of the line ran between what ports?

A. New Orleans and New York.

Q. Between what ports is the steamship line now operated?

A. We operate a line of freight steamers from Galveston to N
York, a combined freight and passenger steamer service from N
Orleans to New York, and two steamers between New Orleans a Havana.

1466 Q. When was the change or when was the line put in betwe
Galveston and New York?

A. It was put in, roughly, I should say, ten or twelve years ago.

Q. For what purpose?

A. For the purpose of cutting out 362 miles of rail haul where t cost of operation was, of course, greater than the cost of operati by sea; and also because of certain restrictions put by the Texas co mission on cotton from Texas to New York via Louisiana. They p up a tariff wall there at the State line that made it almost impossi for us to get any New York cotton via rail lines, so we put on the Galveston line.

Q. What company now owns the steamships that compose the water haul of the Sunset-Gulf route?

A. The Southern Pacific Company.

Q. Now, referring to the additions to, or changes in, the Southern Pacific system since July 2, 1890, which we have been going over, who determined what additions or changes should be made?

A. They were always determined by Mr. Huntington or one of his associates; Mr. Charles F. Crocker; for a while after Mr. Crocker's death, Mr. George Crocker.

1467 Q. Upon what recommendations or information did those men act?

A. Well, those recommendations about building these lines would come up from all parts of the organization. Sometimes the recommendation would be started by a traffic man. Our usual policy was, when a traffic man started it, he would confer with the operating department, and together they would investigate the possibilities of the country, the amount of freight that might reasonably be expected, and the cost of construction. Then it would go from the head of the operating departments and the traffic departments up to Mr. Huntington.

Q. In determining the making of additions or changes was regard paid to the needs and requirements of the lines standing in the name of any particular corporation?

A. None whatever. Additions were made with respect to the system as a whole, and as I said, always after a careful investigation as to the possibilities of the country and the amount of freight that might be gotten, because very often those suggestions would come from local people who would be anxious to have a road. Of course they would be perfectly willing for us to build it and pay for it, but 1468 there might not be the traffic there to justify it.

Q. How were the lines in different corporate ownerships regarded and treated in the matter of extensions?

A. Absolutely the same; there was no discrimination or distinction between them.

Q. Were they treated as separate properties or as parts of one system?

A. Parts of one system, because frequently those branches, when built, might be in one corporation or the other and terminals would not be obtained in the name of that branch, but whatever property there was at the junction, no matter what corporate name it stood in, would be used by both corporations, both the Southern Pacific and the Central Pacific Railroad lines.

Q. What has been the character of the growth and development o the Southern Pacific system since July 2, 1890, to the present time?

A. There have been no additions to the system except additio very much in the nature of what we have been going over here branches built into some attractive territory or cut-offs to redu grade or give a better traffic line. It has been an ordinary, natura and normal growth.

(Whereupon a recess was taken until 2.15 o'clock p. m.)

1469 AFTER RECESS.

JULIUS KRUTTSCHNITT, the witness under examination when rece was taken, resumed the stand and testified further, as follows:

Direct examination (continued) by Mr. BLAIR:

Q. Mr. Kruttschnitt, are you familiar with the series of map which have been prepared showing the stage of development of th Southern Pacific system at different times? I refer to the map which have been offered in evidence and numbered 1 to 6.

A. Yes. These maps were prepared in my office, under my direc tion, and I am familiar with them.

Q. Are you familiar with a statement which has been offered i evidence as petitioner's Exhibit No. 42, showing when different par of the Southern Pacific system were constructed or opened for busi ness?

A. I do not remember seeing petitioner's Exhibit No. 42, but if i has been compiled from the printed statements numbered map No to map No. 6 that were prepared in my office and attached to th maps, it must be correct.

1470 Q. Those printed statements to which you refer show what

A. They show the construction in five-year periods.

Q. Giving the dates of construction or opening for business of di ferent parts of the system?

A. Yes.

Q. Over the period covered by the six maps?

A. Yes.

Q. And those were prepared in your office, under your direction

A. Yes.

Q. And you are familiar with them?

A. Yes.

Q. And they correctly show the dates of construction and openi of different parts of the system?

A. They do.

Q. So that you are familiar generally, in that way, with th growth and development of the Southern Pacific system?

A. Yes; I am.

Q. Will you please look at this map, which purports to show 1471 the stage of development which the Southern Pacific system had reached March 1, 1885, being map No. 5?

A. This shows the construction prior to March 1, 1885.

Q. While the map shows it, in order that we may get it in convenient shape, just state what were the principal changes or additions made between that date, March 1, 1885, and July 2, 1890. I do not mean that you should call attention to the little stems and branches, but state in a few words the material changes which took place between March 1, 1885, and July 2, 1890.

A. The line from near Redding to Ashland, in Oregon, was completed, completing the through route from San Francisco to Portland. The line from San Francisco through Gilroy had been extended down the Salinas Valley to Santa Margarita, and had been extended from Saugus to Ellwood.

Q. In the opposite direction?

A. In the opposite direction. And the line on the west side of the San Joaquin River had been extended from Tracy about to Los Banos.

Q. Does that include the principal changes, other than the growth of branches and feeders?

A. Yes. There were a great many small branches built, 1472 but those were the principal material changes in the through lines.

Q. Can you tell us, from your general knowledge derived in the way in which you have indicated, what material differences, if any, there were between the system on February 1, 1883, and on March 1, 1885?

A. There was no great change. They were substantially the same. In 1883 the line down the west side of San Joaquin Valley had not been built, and the coast line had not been built, and the line to Oregon had not been built. With those exceptions, the condition of the system was very much the same.

Q. I understood you to say that you were familiar with the other maps showing the growth and the development of the system since 1870?

A. Yes.

Q. Mr. Kruttschnitt, from your general knowledge and experience as a railroad expert and from your particular knowledge of the lines composing the Southern Pacific system, how would you characterize the growth and development of the Southern Pacific system?

A. I think I have already characterized it as being a 1473 normal and gradual growth, to meet the necessities of the territories served by these lines.

Q. Has it the characteristic of system growth?

A. Absolutely.

Q. Mr. Kruttschnitt, when you came to California in 1895 as general manager of the Southern Pacific system, what arrangements, if any, did you find in existence for the handling of through business over the Southern Pacific line west of Ogden and the Union Pacific line east of Ogden, in relation to through passenger service and in relation to the handling of through freight?

A. They were operated absolutely as one line. The through schedules were always made by conference between the officers of the two lines, for both passenger and freight, just as through schedules on our own Southern Pacific lines were made by conference between the officers affected.

Q. Did you have through passenger trains?

A. We had through passenger trains and through freight trains.

Q. Did you have through rates of freight and through passenger tariffs?

A. Yes.

1474 Q. And an agreed division of these rates?

A. I understand so. I had nothing to do with traffic; I had to do with the making of the schedules and the running of the through trains, but I knew that those divisions were in, and were arranged by conference between traffic officers of the two lines.

Q. Was there any expression to you of dissatisfaction on the part of the Union Pacific officials, when you came to the coast, with respect to the arrangements in existence for operation of the Southern Pacific part of this through line, in connection with the Union Pacific line, as one through, continuous line?

A. I never heard of a complaint. Of course those schedules were generally made by conference between the general superintendents and they would not come up to me unless there was some issue of disagreement; but I do not recall any cases where there were any disagreements. My recollection is that schedules were always arranged satisfactorily without being referred to me.

Q. Were those arrangements for through transportation via Ogden kept up by you during the time you were in California?

1475 A. Yes.

Q. What was the nature and extent of the cooperation between you and the Union Pacific in reference to those through schedules?

A. I do not see how there could have been any more harmonious action than we had; that is to say, if the Union Pacific had any suggestions to make as to schedules they made them, and they were generally agreed to by us, and vice versa. Sometimes the suggestion would come from them and sometimes from us.

Q. What material changes, if any, were made in the arrangements r handling through business via Ogden when the merger of the entral Pacific and the Union Pacific occurred, in 1901?

A. When the merger occurred I had control of the schedules on th sides of Ogden, and there were no changes made.

Q. After the unmerger, in 1913?

A. I want to qualify that by saying, not that there were no anges, but the policy was not changed.

Q. As arrangements for the handling of through transportation developed and improved generally, were there corresponding changes developed in the method of handling business via Ogden?

A. There were. We always maintained that service as good as any the country, and for long periods of time I think the trains that e had on there, and at the present time particularly, are better than y trains in the United States.

Q. You mean the through trains?

A. The through Chicago-San Francisco trains via the Union acific and Central Pacific.

Q. That is, with reference both to passenger and freight?

A. Yes.

Q. After the unmerger, in 1913, have there been any material anges in the arrangements for handling through business via the gden route?

A. None in policy. Of course, schedules are rarely kept in effect y great length of time. In other words, there are questions of mpetition with other lines that may determine the times of leaving r the times of arriving; but those changes were always reached by greement between the officers of the two roads.

Q. In your opinion, is the arrangement for operation of the through line via Ogden from San Francisco east over the Union Pacific as good now as it was during the merger eriod?

A. It is as good. I think it is better, because we have been making nprovements all the time, and my judgment about the matter is rne out by the judgment of the public, by the way they use the ne, by the amount of traffic, both passenger and freight, that we over it.

Q. During the whole of the period above referred to what have en the relations between the officials of the Southern Pacific Company and the officials of the Union Pacific Railroad Company with spect to the arrangements for the handling of through traffic via gden?

A. They were always perfectly cordial and cooperative.

Q. And that continues so to the present time?

A. Yes; I do not recall any complaints made since the unmerger

Q. What kind of through service has been produced by the a rangements for the handling of through business via Ogden?

A. Well, we have, as I said, I think, the best transcontinental service that way of any road in the United States, and m 1478 judgment is borne out by the verdict of the public in usi the line and from expressions we get from people who tra over the line and who make shipments over it. And, then, we ha the still better evidence of the traffic that we control that way.

Q. What has been the success of the Ogden route in competitio say, with the Western Pacific and the Denver & Rio Grande or t Santa Fe or any other all-rail route with which your line comes competition?

A. Well, as to the Santa Fe, we get a greater proportion of t traffic to and from northern California. The competition with t Western Pacific—I suppose the condition of the Western Paci to-day will show that; they have not handled much.

Q. In your opinion as an expert railroad man, what can you s as to the arrangement for the operation of the lines in questi using the language of the statute, for all purposes of travel a transportation as one continuous line, so far as the public and t United States are concerned?

Mr. McClennen. That is objected to as calling upon the witn to make a construction in law of the meaning of the words as used the statute and to express an opinion on a question of law, 1479 well as on the question of railroading, with no evidence qualification of the witness to express an opinion on so m as involves a question of law.

Mr. Blair. You may confine yourself to the railroad part of th language.

(The question was read as above recorded.)

The Witness. From my connection with the line, which dates fr 1895 to the present time, or twenty years, I do not recall a sin complaint from either the Union Pacific or any of the public or a of the officers of the United States Government that the lines w not operated according to law, and from my conference with t Southern Pacific officials when I came over here I understood th the relations with the Union Pacific had always been of the s character, entirely cooperative and cordial, and the schedules arranged as to cause no complaint whatsoever.

By Mr. Blair:

Q. Do you know of any other lines in the country under in pendent management which are operated more closely as a thro ontinuous line than the Southern Pacific part of the line west of Ogden and the Union Pacific line eastward?

A. I do not. We have connections with several roads at El 480 Paso and Ogden, but in none of them do we cooperate as fully as we do with the Union Pacific.

Q. You treat the Union Pacific differently from your other outside onnection?

A. I should say, in the running of a through line and the arrangements of schedules, yes. To make my meaning perfectly clear about hat, I will say, take the Texas & Pacific, for instance, with which we onnect at El Paso. The Texas & Pacific may very well at times suggest a certain train and certain arrivals, and if we can not meet their leas we tell them so flat-footed—"We can't do this; we can not fix . Sorry, but it can not be done." With the Rock Island it is much he same way; but with the Union Pacific we always get together and nd the means to do it.

Q. When you came to California in 1895 what lines were being perated under lease by the Southern Pacific Company?

A. Well, all of the lines that were in the Central Pacific corporaion and all the lines owned by the Southern Pacific Railroad and the outh Pacific coast roads.

Q. Would that include all the lines of the system?

A. Also the lines in Oregon, the Oregon-California line and its ranches and connections.

Q. And the lines in Arizona and New Mexico?

481 A. In Arizona and New Mexico also; and, at that time, the lines in Texas and Louisiana.

Q. According to that statement, the lines in Texas came out from nder the operation of the lease in 1889?

A. Yes; but you asked me as to 1885.

Q. No; I said 1895.

A. Yes; that is right; the Texas lines were taken out of the lease n 1889.

Q. And the Louisiana lines were taken out from the operation of he lease in 1901?

A. Yes.

Q. With that explanation, it would be true to say that the lines you ound being operated by the Southern Pacific Company under the ease included all the lines of the Southern Pacific system west of l Paso?

A. Yes.

Q. Referring, now, to the lines standing in the name of the Central acific west of Ogden, and to the lines of the system forming a part f the Sunset-Gulf route, what was your policy in respect to the upkeep of equipment and the general maintenance of those two sy of lines?

A. I prescribed the standards of maintenance, and the 1482 was no difference made between the lines at all. I exacted high a condition of perfection in track and in maintenance bridges and structures on one line as I did on the other. Indeed, m policy as to maintenance had already been established on the Sun lines east of El Paso, and I simply carried the same policy over in California on the Central Pacific.

Q. There was no subordination of one set of lines to the other?

A. Absolutely none.

Q. Was there any discrimination or difference between the Ce tral Pacific lines and the other lines of the system, or were they treated alike?

A. None, except such discrimination as was justified by the dens of the traffic. In other words, certain improvements might be jus fied on certain parts of the Central Pacific because the traffic wa ranted it, or might be warranted on other parts of the system b cause the traffic there was heavier.

Q. During all this period, from the time you came to Californi to the present time, to what degree of efficiency have the lin
1483 standing in the name of the Central Pacific been maintained

A. I think and know that the lines of the Central Paci are maintained in as good order as those of any railroad in th
United States.

Q. How does this standard of maintenance compare with th standard of maintenance of the lines composing the Sunset-Go route?

A. As a rule, the maintenance of the Central Pacific, because of th greater amount of money spent on it on account of the heavie denser traffic, and on account of the country it runs through, is ge erally better than the Sunset lines, part of which, east of San Anto and Texas, runs over low and wet countries where it is very diffic to keep the track up in as good condition as the tracks upon th deserts of Utah and Nevada. Up to a year ago it was our custom carry out an annual inspection, and to mark each section on th entire line, graded as you would grade examination papers at co lege. Each feature of maintenance was marked as a maximum ten, and the average cast up, and we gave prizes to the man who ke his section best. In looking over the last record we have, for 19 as we abandoned this practice on account of forced economie 1484 and on account of bad earnings in the last year, I find that th
Central Pacific lines from San Francisco to Ogden averag up 93.3 per cent.

A part of the Sunset line from San Francisco to El Paso was a point under that; it was about 92.3.

Q. Who made those markings?

A. They were made by a jury of operating officers, a jury of about twelve men, division superintendents and division engineers, the general superintendent and the general manager.

Q. Did the same jury mark the division which included the Central Pacific line, to which you referred, that marked the division of the Southern Pacific?

A. Not exactly, but the general manager would be a member of all the Central Pacific juries; the general superintendent of the northern division was a member of all Central Pacific juries; the general superintendent of the Southern lines was a member of all the Sunset juries, and so was the general manager. Now, below that the jury was composed of officers disconnected from that part of the track being inspected.

Q. What reasons exist for maintaining the Central Pacific 1485 line in question up to this high state of efficiency with respect to equipment, service, and so on?

A. The reasons are that if we do not maintain the line in the highest state of efficiency and give the best service we will lose the business.

The Atchison is competing strongly for California business; the Western Pacific has, and we have always had, competition in southern California with the San Pedro road.

Q. Is there any part of the traffic which you secure in competition with those lines which could not be induced to go over the Sunset Route?

A. Yes; quite a good deal. There is a great deal of traffic that is competitive with the Santa Fe that we could not get to go over the Sunset at all.

Q. What in your opinion would be the result if you allowed the service to be impaired on the western end of the Ogden route?

A. It would be loss of traffic and necessarily loss of earnings, and there is only one word that could characterize such a policy, and that is that it would be suicidal, because the Southern Pacific has such an interest in the Central through ownership of stock and through guarantee of bond issues that it can not afford to lose any traffic for the Central Pacific that it can possibly retain, and self-1486 interest alone makes us keep it up to the highest standard of excellence.

Q. In your opinion, would the loss of traffic which you say would result from impairment of service on the line west of Ogden inure to the benefit of the Sunset-Gulf route?

A. I do not think so; I doubt if any of it would go that way. It would be taken by the Santa Fe, which is our most vigorous and active competitor.

Q. You spoke of the interest of the Southern Pacific Company in the line standing in the name of the Central Pacific. Can you give us the amount of stock owned by the Southern Pacific Company in the Central Pacific?

A. Yes; the Southern Pacific Company owns all of the stock. The common and preferred aggregate, in round numbers, $85,000,000.

Q. What proportion of the dividends to the Southern Pacific stockholders is contributed by the earnings of the Central Pacific lines; do you remember—roughly?

A. About 30 to 33 per cent.

Q. You spoke of the guarantee of the bonds; can you give us what bonds of the Central Pacific are guaranteed by the Southern Pacific Company?

1487 A. Yes; they are four issues. First, the four per cent refunding mortgage bonds aggregating about ninety-eight and a half million dollars. Then the French, or European loan, aggregating about forty-eight millions and a half. Then there is the through short-line mortgage, which is the mortgage on the Lucin cut-off, $9,600,000. Then the three and one-half per cent bonds of the Central Pacific, $11,600,000. The total of all these issues is $169,000,000 or thereabouts.

Q. And the Southern Pacific Company is the guarantor of all those issues?

A. All those bonds.

Q. As a matter of fact, have you ever entertained the idea of impairing the service on the line west of Ogden or of failing to maintain that service up to the highest state of efficiency?

A. No. I consider that we would be incompetent railroad managers and unfit for our trust if we did. We require the traffic and we require the earnings to pay the dividends on this stock and the interest on these bonds.

Q. Have you ever seen any advantage to the Southern Pacific Company in doing so?

1488 A. In letting the Central Pacific run down?

Q. Yes.

A. No. As a matter of fact, the track, the locomotives, the cars, the signals, and the bridges are all of the highest standard. I know that there is no road in the country that has a higher one.

Q. What do you include in "service"?

A. There would be train service, the degree of safety and regularity with which it is conducted; the smoothness of the track, the comfort with which people are drawn over it, the regularity of freight schedules, and the delivery of freight. As to rates—well, of course, rates are the same now on all roads, so I don't suppose it is worth while to mention those.

Q. Do you include everything that contributes to the good will of the public towards the line?

A. Yes. That would be also in solicitation, cultivating pleasant relations, not only through freight solicitors, but through our entire staff, requiring the staff to mix with the public, get acquainted, find out how they are being served, and if there are any complaints, and anticipate them before they get to a condition where they 1489 cause irritation or appeals to commissions. We would rather settle these questions with the people direct, rather than have them go to the commissions, and I think the commissions prefer that themselves.

Q. Did you have anything to do with the settlement of the indebtedness of the Central Pacific to the United States?

A. No; nothing whatever.

Q. Do you remember when the Central Pacific Railway Company was created, and the transfer to it of the properties before that standing in the name of the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. I do, very well.

Q. What effect, if any, did that have upon the operation of the lines under your jurisdiction?

A. None whatever, so far as operations were concerned. I do not know that we would have known it, except that we had to discriminate in marking the cars and stationery between "Railway" and "Railroad".

Q. What changes, if any, took place in the operation and management of the property after 1898 or 1899, after the creation of this new company?

A. What changes in the operation?

1490 Q. If any.

A. There were no changes in the operating policies, but after the settlement of the Government debt we started making a great many improvements that had been held up pending this settlement and there was great change in that respect.

Q. Did you observe any changes in the extent of the common control or centralized management of the Central Pacific in respect to the lines standing in the name of the Central Pacific Railroad Company after the change of the name to "Central Pacific Railway Company"?

A. Absolutely none.

Q. During the whole time that you have been connected with the Southern Pacific system, since the lease to the Southern Pacific Company in 1885, has there been any break in the continuity of the lease-

A. I do not think so; I doubt if any of it would go that way. It would be taken by the Santa Fe, which is our most vigorous and active competitor.

Q. You spoke of the interest of the Southern Pacific Company in the line standing in the name of the Central Pacific. Can you give us the amount of stock owned by the Southern Pacific Company in the Central Pacific?

1490 Q. If any.

A. There were no changes in the operating policies, but after the settlement of the Government debt we started making a great many improvements that had been held up pending this settlement and there was great change in that respect.

Q. Did you observe any changes in the extent of the common control or centralized management of the Central Pacific in respect to the lines standing in the name of the Central Pacific Railroad Company after the change of the name to "Central Pacific Railway Company"?

A. Absolutely none.

Q. During the whole time that you have been connected with the Southern Pacific system, since the lease to the Southern Pacific Company in 1885, has there been any break in the continuity of the lease-hold operations except the taking out from the lease of the lines

Texas and Louisiana?

A. No; I do not recall any.

Q. As an operating man, if there have been any changes they wo not evidenced in the operation of the properties?

A. No.

1491 Q. In your opinion, are the lines of railroad standing the name of the Central Pacific Railway Company, considere by themselves, competitive naturally or otherwise with the other lin of the Southern Pacific system?

Mr. McClennen. That is objected to because it calls upon the wi ness to apply to "competitive" his own opinion of its meaning law and in the statutes governing or prohibiting combinations.

Mr. Blair. The same kind of questions were asked by the petition in examining its own witnesses.

The Witness. Certainly not.

By Mr. Blair:

Q. Disregarding the branches and feeders, how would you descri the Southern Pacific system as it now stands?

A. Disregarding branches and feeders?

Q. The branches and feeders being disregarded and considerin the main line, how would you describe the Southern Pacific syste by its termini we will say?

A. I would say that the Southern Pacific system termini were Ne Orleans, Ogden, and Portland.

Q. Could the lines from Portland to New Orleans be correctl characterized as a system of connecting lines extending between tho two cities?

1492 A. Yes. We always claim that, in soliciting the freight, th we have a through line from New York or New Orleans rig through to Portland, Oregon.

Q. And then you have this——

A. Then we have another line from San Francisco to Ogden.

Q. What is the total length of your line from Portland to Ne Orleans?

A. I remember it in installments; not together. I will have to ad it up. It is 3,262 miles.

Q. And add the mileage of the water haul to New York.

A. That would make it, roughly, 5,068 miles. It is about 1,80 miles from New Orleans to New York by water.

Q. What is the length of this divergent stem or tangential of shoot from San Francisco to Ogden?

A. Known as the Central Pacific?

Q. Known as the Central Pacific.

Mr. McCLENNEN. The question is objected to as containing a manifest misuse of the term "tangential stem" when applied to a part of what has been described as the principal and best transcontinental railroad in the country.

The WITNESS. The distance from San Francisco to Ogden 1493 is 783 miles.

By Mr. BLAIR:

Q. Mr. Kruttschnitt, you are somewhat familiar with railroad terminology, are you?

A. Yes; but "tangential offshoot" is a new one on me.

Q. Well, that is a legal phrase, not a railroad phrase. Would you say that "divergent stem" would correctly describe the line from San Francisco to Ogden?

A. I should think it fairly would. It is certainly a line running generally at right angles with the main line through to Portland, and running east, whereas the other line is running north.

Q. Is it usual or unusual for a railroad system in this country to include a line, whether it be called a divergent branch or stem, which, in connection with other railroads, forms a through line which may compete for traffic with the parent system?

A. I would say that the use, by lines, of these divergent stems to build up new traffic routes and to secure traffic that they otherwise could not get is the most common practice imaginable. You might take the Railway Guide and the folders of the different rail-1494 road systems, and you could pick out enough to swamp the stenographer.

Q. That had what characteristics?

A. That used these divergent lines in connection with other lines to control traffic as against the main stem.

Q. Does that mean, then, that it is usual in the railroad systems of this country for there to exist branches or stems or divergent parts of the system, which, in connection with other lines, form through lines that offer alternative routes for traffic with the parent system?

A. Yes. A striking example of that is the Gould system of roads. They have a line from St. Louis in the same interest via the Denver & Rio Grande, Missouri Pacific, and Western Pacific right into San Francisco. They have another line via the Iron Mountain and the Texas & Pacific through Arkansas, northern Texas, and El Paso, where, in connection with the Southern Pacific, they have another line into San Francisco. They use this divergent Iron Mountain and Texas & Pacific system to build up another route, so a man can ship by their line from St. Louis either direct or via southwestern lines through El Paso and into San Francisco.

Another example in point: Take the Chicago, Milwaukee
St. Paul, which has a through line now of its own fr 1495 Chicago via Milwaukee and the Dakotas to Puget Sound, has a divergent stem from Chicago to Omaha, where it c nects with the Union Pacific, and has another line to Puget So that way, or it can connect with the Union and Southern Pa through Ogden and then via Southern Pacific's Portland lin Portland and the Union Pacific line, again, to Puget Sound, third line to Puget Sound.

Take the Baltimore & Ohio: It forks at Cumberland, and one runs direct to Chicago. Another line, divergent stem, makes of St. Louis. This main line from Baltimore to St. Louis is, of cou competitive with their line from Cumberland to Chicago and from Chicago to St. Louis, of which there are half a dozen that can use.

Take the Santa Fe: The Santa Fe was originally built from cago to Los Angeles. They have a divergent stem, which bought in about 1898 or 1899, that puts them into San Franci
They can either take freight in that way, direct, or they can junction points, use the Southern Pacific lines, or they can use Union Pacific lines into San Francisco.

Q. They have also a line, have they not——

A. They have also a line diverging at Newton, Kan 1496 running to the Gulf of Mexico, where they connect steamships and take New York freight via the Gulf route, north and south line into interior Kansas; or there is still ano line that diverges from their north and south line and connects their main line at Albuquerque, New Mexico, that they have cently been working, in competition with our Sunset line. Ye the same time, they have an overland line through Chicago, an connection with their connections at that point, compete with ocean and rail lines.

There is another striking example in the Pennsylvania. The P sylvania forks at Pittsburgh. They have one main line runnin St. Louis and another to Chicago. Those lines via the Chicago by means of the Chicago & Alton or the Chicago & Eastern Illi or any number of five or six lines at least, can be built up into a c petitive route, competing with the Pittsburgh-St. Louis line.
also have lake connections at Buffalo, at Toledo, at Cleveland, at Erie, where, by means of steamships on the Lakes, they can b up three or four different lines from Philadelphia or New Yor
Chicago, competing with their direct lines.

1497 Q. Does this part of your system from San Francisc Ogden, which we will not call by any name, form a thro line by connection with other railroads east thereof, which may pete for traffic with the line which we have called the Sunset-Gulf route?

A. Yes.

Q. What is the connection it forms at Ogden?

A. The principal one and the most important one is the Union Pacific. Another one is the Denver & Rio Grande.

Q. The Union Pacific carries it how far?

A. To Omaha; Council Bluffs.

Q. And thence it has its eastern connections?

A. From Council Bluffs it has a number of eastern connections—the Chicago & North Western; the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul; the Rock Island; the Chicago, Great Western; probably half a dozen lines by which it can reach St. Louis and Chicago from Council Bluffs.

Q. We will hereafter call that line the Ogden route. When you came to the Pacific coast in 1895 did you find actual competition between this Ogden route and the Sunset-Gulf route?

A. I did. There always has been.

1498 Q. What was the character of this competition as to vigor or weakness and inactivity?

A. There were certain parts of California, notably the northern parts, where shippers generally would exercise their right of routing by sending freight via Central Pacific. When you would get into southern California there were parts where they would almost always ship their freight via the Sunset. There is a territory in between that where it could be sent either way. We—I mean the Southern Pacific interests—had solicitors in there. Our policy was, naturally, to get the long haul on that freight. It was to persuade the shipper that we could give him good service via the Sunset line and would like him to send it that way. If we could persuade him to do it, it was all right. If we could not, he would order it sent via Central Pacific. In other words, we had two kinds of goods to offer him—transportation via the Central Pacific or transportation via the Sunset—and we would naturally try to sell the goods that were the most profitable to the company.

At the same time, in that territory, there were Illinois Central solicitors, Union Pacific solicitors, Chicago & North Western solicitors; Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul, Chicago Great Western, 1499 and Rock Island solicitors, all trying to get that freight to move via the Central Pacific, so that they would get a division.

Q. Since the unmerger in 1913 of the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific, has this competition between the Ogden route and the Sunset-Gulf route continued?

A. It has.

Q. What is its condition now?

A. It is active.

Q. Carried on in the same way in which you have indicated?

A. Yes.

Q. I believe you have already answered it, but I will ask you agai Have you ever considered it to the interest of the Southern Pacific influence this competition by impairing in any way the service ov the Ogden route?

A. We have not; and I could not conceive of any officer bei stupid enough or shortsighted enough to try to do it; because, as have said before, it would be suicidal for Southern Pacific interes to try to get freight to move away from the Southern Pacific and th lose it, and not get it for the Sunset but lose it to the Atchis 1500 Q. Would it be possible, in your opinion, to impair the ser ice on the Ogden routes west of Ogden and confine the effe of that impairment of service to business competitive with the Sun Gulf route?

A. No; it would be impossible.

Q. Please explain that.

A. It would be impossible for the reason that if the service wa not good on the Central Pacific people would decline to ship the and then we would have only a small chance of getting for t Sunset Route the freight that had been lost to the Central Paci The shipper would probably exercise his option to ship via San Fe or Western Pacific, and we do not want to risk that.

Q. Would any lessening of the efficiency of the service over t Ogden route be felt in its influence on traffic which was not co petitive with the Sunset-Gulf route?

A. Will you please repeat that?

Q. That is, would it affect the traffic which would seek to get ov the Ogden route, which is not competitive with the Sunset-Gu route?

A. It would affect it to this extent: If we lowered the efficiency the service, or the excellence of the service, we would los 1501 from the Central Pacific without any certainty of getting by the Sunset.

Q. Mr. Kruttschnitt, please state any facts that you may kn which would affect the question of whether or not the propo separation of the Central Pacific lines from the Southern Paci system would benefit the public in the matter of rates or service, otherwise.

Mr. McCLENNEN. That question is objected to on the ground th whether or not restraints upon competition between railroads a permissible or exert a beneficial or other influence upon the pub welfare is a legislative question not open to consideration by court, and therefore the inquiry is immaterial, incompetent, and irrelevant.

Mr. BLAIR. While counsel does not agree with the statement of counsel for the petitioner as to restraints of commerce, he states the object of the question is to bring out facts which will enable the court to determine whether there has been any restraint of commerce, and not to bring out facts justifying such restraint.

(By request of the witness, the reporter repeated the pending question as follows:)

"Q. Mr. Kruttschnitt, please state any facts that you may 1502 know which would affect the question of whether or not the proposed separation of the Central Pacific lines from the Southern Pacific system would benefit the public in the matter of rates or service, or otherwise."

The WITNESS. We have always considered the Central Pacific and the Southern Pacific lines as one and the same system. One set of lines has been considered as complementary to the other, and building them up as we have done and working them as we have done gives us two routes from San Francisco points to eastern points to offer to the public.

In presenting to the public the benefits of these two routes, we have got to consider the question of rates, of service, and of solicitation.

At the present time the fact that the Southern Pacific can offer these two routes has no effect whatever on rates, because there are seven or eight lines from California to the east, all of which are competitive with the Sunset line or with the through line made up of the Central Pacific, Union Pacific, and eastern connections.

For instance, take the two Southern Pacific lines to begin with. That is two. The Western Pacific gives a third; the Atchison is a fourth; the San Pedro line is a fifth——

1503 By Mr. BLAIR:

Q. The San Pedro line in connection with what line?

A. The San Pedro, in connection with the Union Pacific, is a fifth. The Union Pacific line to Puget Sound points and their steamship line to San Francisco is a sixth. The Union Pacific line to San Pedro and a steamship line to San Francisco, a seventh. Direct ships through the Panama Canal, an eighth; and ship connections over the Tehuantepec Railroad.

Now, if you go back to the time when the Southern Pacific was building up this system, and there were only two lines, you might say, reaching California, one the line via Ogden and one the Sunset line, and traffic managers had full control of the rates and could fix them pretty much to suit themselves, possibly the Southern Pacific might have had some influence on fixing rates in California. Year by year, however, that influence has lessened until at the present time with commission regulation of rates and with the competition of these other seven or eight carriers, that influence is absolutely nothing.

If the Central Pacific, either as an independent line or if con-1504 trolled by the Union Pacific, as has been frequently suggested that it should be, reduced rates from California, those reductions would be met at once by all of the other lines, and they would accomplish nothing; and they would adopt a rate policy, if separated or in connection with the Union Pacific exactly the same as is adopted now. In other words, they would simply maintain the rates that were fixed by the commission.

Q. In your knowledge and experience of the railroad business, that is what would rationally happen?

A. Yes.

Q. Please state what effects the separation would have in the matter of service.

Mr. McClennen. That question is objected to on the ground that whether or not restraints upon competition between railroads are permissible or exert a beneficial or other influence upon the public welfare is a legislative question, not open to consideration by the court; and therefore the inquiry is immaterial, incompetent, and irrelevant.

The Witness. The system as a whole, as it has been gradually added to and developed, has interwoven the Central Pacific lines with the Southern Pacific Railroad lines in such a way that 1505 the efficiency of both as means of transportation and with power to serve the public has been increased and is greater by working the properties together than by working them separately. The efficiency of both of the properties would be seriously impaired and lowered by separating them. There are quite a number of reasons that lead to that conclusion.

By Mr. Blair:

Q. Will you please state them?

A. In the first place, if the lines were separated, the Southern Pacific Company would have no line to Portland whatever. The line from Tehama to the Oregon State line is owned by the Central Pacific, and the Southern could not use it.

Q. The Southern Pacific lines in Oregon would be cut off, then, from the rest of the system?

A. From the rest of the system; yes. The Central Pacific, after separation, would be deprived of the use of the Benicia short line between Sacramento and San Francisco for the use of their passenger traffic.

Q. What effect would that have?

A. That is vital. It shortens the distance fifty miles, which is a great deal on a passenger trip; and at the time of the negotiations for the purchase of the Central Pacific that was one of the things most strenuously insisted on by the Union Pacific, at they should be allowed to continue the use of that line.

Q. We will get to that feature of the case afterwards, but speak thout reference to that now.

You mean vital to the operation of what line?

A. Vital to the Central Pacific.

Q. From——

A. From Sacramento to San Francisco.

Q. And as a part of the through line from Ogden?

A. And as a part of the through line from Ogden. All of the uthern Pacific branches springing out of the Central Pacific line tween Fresno and Sacramento would be cut off; they would be orced from the rest of the Southern Pacific system, and there uld be no means of getting the traffic picked up by those branches to the Southern Pacific main lines.

Q. How many such branches are there?

A. Here is a branch from Fresno to Pollasky and from Berenda Raymond, from Merced to Stockton, from Galt to Lodi, from Woodbridge to Valley Springs, and from Brighton to Placerville. Then all of the Southern Pacific's traffic from Oregon down into the interior of the San Joaquin Valley, and vice sa, would have to be carried by a very roundabout way instead of ough Sacramento, Stockton, and Lathrop down the valley. The uthern Pacific would have to carry it around by Benicia, Tracy, mona, and Goshen. In other words, it would be deprived of the of the Central Pacific all up the San Joaquin Valley.

Mr. HERRIN. And you would have to use the ferry?

The WITNESS. And we would have to use the ferry also. The rease in distance is about forty miles, and the equivalent handicap the ferry transfer about thirty more. In other words, it takes two rs between the time a freight train is brought into Benicia until s ready to leave Port Costa, so that it is equivalent to about enty miles in distance.

By Mr. BLAIR:

Q. Would that be a serious impairment of efficiency?

A. It would be a very serious impairment of efficiency, and a very ous handicap. Then, again, all freight, all traffic originating on San Joaquin Valley lines of the Southern Pacific destined to San Jose and the Salinas Valley would have to move around via Oakland and then down the South Pacific coast road into

San Jose, as against the direct route via Niles into San Jose. T difference there is about sixty-three miles.

Q. Would that be a serious impairment of the efficiency of tho lines?

A. It would be a serious impairment of the efficiency of those lin
It would be almost prohibitive.

The Central Pacific could not reach San Francisco at all exc by the bay ferries, which is a serious handicap.

Q. Why?

A. They could cross by the Dumbarton line and get into Redwoo which is a Southern Pacific point, but they could not get into S Francisco unless they had the use of that line.

That is as to the actual physical impediments. There are a gr many others. Take the question of operating expenses. At junctio points where, at present, the business is done by one set of employe if the lines were divorced, the employees would have to be doubl at all of those points. The expense would, therefore, be increas and the expense would finally have to be borne by the traffic or t public. The expenses of keeping operating accounts, passeng 1509 accounts, accounts of every description, would be double
There would have to be two sets of accounting officers.

The expenses of advertising and solicitation would be doubled.

The Southern Pacific has no general shops. The Sacramento sho have been used as the general shops for the entire system. T Southern Pacific would have to build new shops, and again the would be a large increase of expense there.

The service over these lines in the San Joaquin Valley and also i the upper Sacramento Valley, where both companies have lines, i conducted absolutely irrespective of corporate ownership, so that th public is given better service by running trains over these lines re gardless of the ownership than it could get if the lines were sep rated.

There would be numerous junction points, connections to be m with trains, that would be run by one road regardless of the othe
There would be increases of rates, because the commission alway allow a greater rate when two roads make up the route between tw points than where one does.

Q. And that is in consequence of the increased expenses?

1510 A. In consequence of the increased expenses. Then the is a much more efficient use of equipment, both locomotiv and passenger and freight car equipment, by using them regardl of the ownership of the rails, than if the ownership were separate
It requires a fewer number of locomotives and cars to equip the lines. We get more service out of them. If we had to buy mor there again the expense, both for capital and operation, would increased and the traffic would, somehow or other, have to bear it, and, ultimately, the public would have to pay the rates.

Then, there is another reason that would increase the expenses of operation very considerably. The Southern Pacific lines are operated on oil fuel almost exclusively now. The Central Pacific gets its oil fuel from the Southern Pacific lines, where the wells are, at a nominal rate of freight, or, I think now, the principle is, where the lines are operated together, that they do not pay anything. The Southern Pacific, on the other hand, gets its ties and lumber from the lines of the Central Pacific. All of those expenses would be increased by separation. The Central Pacific would have to pay tariff rates on its oil fuel, and the Southern would have to pay tariff rates on its lumber.

1511 Of course the greatest expense of all—which I was almost going to overlook—would be the expense of duplicating the terminals. The Central Pacific has no terminal in San Francisco. The Southern Pacific has no terminal in Oakland; and at these junction points where Southern and Central Pacific lines intersect, the normal condition is that one line owns nearly all of the terminals and the other owns little or nothing.

Q. And how are those terminals used?

A. They are used absolutely regardless of ownership. Take Fresno, for instance——

Q. Let us go over those terminals in detail. Have you a list of the terminals jointly used, which stand in the name, sometimes, of the Southern Pacific Railroad and sometimes in the name of the Central Pacific Railroad?

A. Yes; I have had a list made up here.

Q. Take the terminal at Tehama.

A. At Tehama the Central Pacific owns eighty-six per cent of the terminal and the Southern fourteen.

Q. What does that percentage mean?

A. It is the percentage of the expenditures in creating the terminal; that is, for real estate, buildings, switch tracks, and everything that constitutes a terminal.

1512 Q. Have you had those joint terminals valued so as to be able to state what they represent in money?

A. Yes. This statement that I am reading from was prepared by our valuation engineers, who were computing the reproduction costs of all of the lines of the company.

Q. When was that made?

A. June 30, 1912.

Q. Was it made with reference to this suit or was it prior to this suit?

A. No; it was made in reference to a general order that was given to find the reproduction cost of all of the properties.

Q. Have you sufficient information to be able to form an intelligent opinion as to the correctness of the valuation?

A. I understand, in a general way, that these valuations—some of them, at least—have figured in valuations made by the California commission, and our valuation engineer tells me that his figures have generally been accepted by the Commission's engineers. There is certainly no great difference between them.

Q. And you know the methods which have been adopted to arrive at these valuations?

1513 A. Yes. These methods were prescribed before the unmerging of the properties and emanated from my office.

Q. Are they correct?

A. As nearly as we could possibly make them.

Q. What is the amount of money represented in the terminals at Tehama credited to the Central Pacific?

A. Their property is valued at $129,000.

Q. You are using round figures, I suppose?

A. Yes. I did not think you wanted the odd dollars.

Q. That is right.

A. That is the nearest thousand. And for the Southern Pacific $21,000.

Q. Are those terminal facilities now used indiscriminately by the railroad, standing in the name of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company and the railroad standing in the name of the Central Pacific?

A. They are used absolutely as if they were one concern.

Q. Are they necessary for the use of both companies?

A. They are.

Q. Could the Southern Pacific Railroad be operated without the use of the part of the terminals credited to the Central Pacific Railroad?

1514 A. No; they would have to reproduce them.

Q. Are these shares an undivided interest, or are particular real estate and particular buildings standing in the name of the Southern Pacific Railroad, and particular real estate and particular buildings standing in the name of the Central Pacific?

A. Particular real estate and particular buildings are standing in the name of the Central Pacific, and particular buildings and particular real estate are standing in the name of the Southern.

Q. That would be true of all the terminals we are about to speak of?

A. Yes; it is true as to all that are on this list, and these are all of the common terminals.

Q. We are not offering the list in evidence, but we will bring it out as we go over the terminals, one by one, in your testimony.

You are not speaking of undivided interest in any of these cases, but of actual ownership of particular terminals, buildings, and real estate by these two companies?

A. Yes.

1515 Q. At Galt, what is the value of the real estate and buildings standing in the name of the Central Pacific and forming part of the terminal facilities at that point?

A. $113,000 Central Pacific, or ninety-six per cent; $4,600 Southern Pacific, or four per cent.

Q. By $4,600 Southern Pacific you mean that buildings and real estate stand in the name of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company valued at the amount you stated?

A. Yes.

Q. And that the proportion between the value of such buildings and real estate and the value of the buildings and real estate standing in the name of the Central Pacific is as four per cent to ninety-six per cent?

A. Yes.

Q. Are the facilities at Galt jointly used by the operation of the Southern Pacific lines and the Central Pacific lines?

A. Yes; just as at Tehama, as if they belonged to one concern.

Q. And such use is necessary for the operation of the two sets of lines?

A. It is.

1516 Q. And in case of a separation what would it be necessary for the Southern Pacific lines to do at Galt?

A. They would have to reproduce facilities that were sufficient for their business; that would be approximately what stands in the name of the Central Pacific?

Q. Now, at Merced.

A. At Merced the cost for the Central Pacific facilities was $889,000, or ninety-nine and one-half per cent. For the Southern Pacific, $4,660, or one-half of one per cent.

Q. And what you have stated applies to those?

A. What I have stated applies to those in the same way; it is not an undivided interest, but the title to the buildings and lines is in the names of the companies specified, and each one of the companies is using the facilities as if they belonged to them, and if the properties were separated, why the company that owned substantially no terminals would have to provide them.

Q. And that would be true of all the joint terminals to which I am calling your attention, and which are on the list that both of us have before us?

A. Yes.

Q. At Fresno.

1517 A. At Fresno, the Central Pacific terminals, $6,400,000, or 98.9 per cent of the total; the Southern Pacific terminals, $72,000, or 1.1 per cent.

Q. Go over this list and mention the joint terminals.

A. At Radum and Remillard: Central Pacific, $52,000, or 54.5 per cent; Southern Pacific, $43,000, or 45.5 per cent.

At Marysville: Central Pacific, $705,000, or 85 per cent; Southern Pacific, $124,000, or 15 per cent.

At Lodi: Central Pacific, $618,000, or 89 per cent; Southern Pacific, $78,000, or 11 per cent.

At Berenda: Central Pacific, $77,500, or 99 per cent; Southern Pacific, $933, or one per cent.

Goshen Junction: Central Pacific, $82,000, or 62 per cent; Southern Pacific, $51,000, or 38 per cent.

San Jose: Central Pacific, $25,000, or 1.5 per cent; Southern Pacific, $1,704,000, or 98.5 per cent.

Sacramento: Central Pacific, $26,870,000, or 88.5 per cent; Southern Pacific, $3,483,000, or 11.5 per cent.

Stockton: Central Pacific, $1,117,000, or 79 per cent; Southern Pacific, $298,000, or 21 per cent.

Madera: Central Pacific, $226,000, or 99 per cent; Southern Pacific, $807, or one-half of one per cent.

Tracy: Central Pacific, $432,000, or 46 per cent; Southern Pacific, $500,000, or 54 per cent.

1518 Elmhurst: Central Pacific, $60,000, or 98 per cent; Southern Pacific, $1,200, or 2 per cent.

Oakland: Central Pacific, $46,500,000, or 100 per cent.

The floating equipment; that is, the ferryboats on San Francisco Bay and at Benicia: Central Pacific, $1,412,000, or 69 per cent; Southern Pacific, $626,000, or 31 per cent.

Q. In case of a separation, would the Southern Pacific's floating equipment be sufficient?

A. No; it would have to provide additional equipment on San Francisco Bay. It owns the equipment at Benicia now.

Q. Under the system as it now exists, the floating equipment is sufficient for the needs of both sets of lines?

A. Both roads; both corporations.

Q. And that is true of the terminal facilities which you have included in your list?

A. Yes.

Q. At present they are amply sufficient?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, what is the sum total of the joint terminals owned by the Central Pacific?

1519 A. The sum total of all those I have read out is $85,715,000, owned by the Central Pacific Company, or 92.4 per cent; and $7,013,000, or 7.6 per cent, owned by the Southern Pacific.

This, you will observe, does not take in the San Francisco terminals, because this is simply at points where both roads reach. The Central Pacific having no line into San Francisco, the San Francisco terminals are not put in, but it would be just the reverse at Oakland; the Southern Pacific owns all in San Francisco and the Central Pacific nothing.

Q. The totals which you have mentioned include the floating equipment?

A. They do.

Q. Which are $1,400,000 Central Pacific and $626,000 Southern Pacific?

A. Yes; the totals do.

Q. Will you please explain your method of arriving at these figures?

A. I would say that in giving these amounts I have used the nearest thousand in all these valuations, except in giving the totals, where I have given the exact totals.

1520 Q. And the difference would be inappreciable, compared with the sum total?

A. Yes.

Q. Are those all the junctions, or the principal ones, where you have joint terminals standing in the name of one or the other of these sets of lines? For instance, my attention has been called to Redwood.

A. The Central Pacific has nothing at Redwood. Of course it might be put in there; I have not given the valuation of the Southern Pacific's land there because the Central Pacific's line there runs into the Southern Pacific's main line outside of Redwood at a junction switch, and it does not share the use of the terminals.

Q. Have you any idea as to the value of the terminals standing in the name of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company in San Francisco?

A. I do not remember it, but I can get it and give it to you if you wish. I can get it by tomorrow.

Q. If you can give it to us approximately, it would serve the purpose.

A. Well, I am afraid I can not. I have not looked at it 1521 lately. It is a very large sum, I know; paralyzingly large, and for that reason I do not want to quote it, I do not remember it nearly enough.

Q. And the Central Pacific Railway Company has no terminals in San Francisco or terminal property?

A. No. Am I to understand that I am to get that figure y asked for, and furnish it [referring to previous question asking value of terminals standing in the name of S. P. R. R. Co. in S Francisco]?

Q. Yes; please furnish it and put it in.

A. Very well.

Q. Have you ever estimated how many millions would have to expended, say, by the Southern Pacific Company in case of a sepa tion to supply the necessary terminals which now belong to the C tral Pacific Railway Company?

A. This statement shows it, and the total I read out shows th the Central Pacific owns, of this total, about $85,714,000, and proximately that much would have to be spent by the Southe Pacific to reproduce those facilities.

Q. That is what I wanted to understand.

A. But we have got to remember this, that there is a question a good many of those points whether the facilities are there to produce.

1522 Q. What do you mean by that?

A. I mean that whereas the estimated cost of reproduci the Oakland facilities is $46,500,000, there is no land in Oakland duplicate those; you can not find it. You would have to spend a v sum of money, certainly approximating those eighty-five millio and then probably would not get as good as you have now.

In the same way the Central Pacific could not come into S Francisco and find the room; it is not there, room to reproduce wh the Southern Pacific owns. Therefore, the reproductive value to-d of what the Southern Pacific owns is X-dollars. It does not foll at all that the expenditure of that amount would reproduce the faci ties for another road, because they could not find the location.

Q. And the reproduction of the facilities is, in your opinion, nec sary for efficient management and operation of the lines of the Sout ern Pacific system which would remain after the Central Pacific lin were taken away?

A. Substantially those sums would have to be spent to get t facilities for the Southern Pacific Company if it were robbed of t Central.

1523 Q. Do the properties standing in the name of the Southe Pacific Railroad Company—that is, lines and facilities—pa ticipate in this through line, which we have called the Ogden rou

A. They do.

Q. At the risk of repetition, will you state particularly how th contribute and participate in that through line, the Ogden route?

A. I mean that all of the points on the Southern Pacific lines i California and on their branches that they built to collect freig the Central Pacific has the use of those facilities just as much as if they owned them.

Q. Now, coming to the through line itself, without reference to the facilities for gathering in traffic and the branches and feeders, to what extent do the lines standing in the name of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company form part of the through line from San Francisco to Ogden?

A. Well, there is a line from San Francisco to Sacramento via Benicia; all of the passenger trains use that line and some of the freights.

Q. And the terminal facilities in San Francisco are entirely in the name of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company?

A. And are used by the Central for their traffic.

1524 Q. And if the through line via Ogden were deprived of the use of the Southern Pacific lines and properties, what effect would that have upon the efficiency of that through line and its value to the public?

A. It would reduce it by forcing them to use a roundabout way from Sacramento to get into Redwood or into San Fransisco via Oakland and the ferries; and the object of the Redwood line, as I have explained, was as a substitute for the ferries at times when there are heavy fogs on the bay, when we practically have to tie up the freight boats, and that means a congestion of traffic. The Central Pacific lines bringing traffic into Sacramento could not reach any of the branches north of San Francisco Bay—for instance, Rumsey or the Napa Valley branch or the Santa Rosa branch. There are Southern Pacific tracks intervening there that they would not have the right to use.

Q. Now, take the road which we have called the Sunset Line or the Sunset-Gulf route. Do the lines of railway and other properties of the Central Pacific Railway Company participate in that through line?

A. Yes; in shipping freight from the Oregon lines over the 1525 Sunset line. The Central Pacific line from the Oregon State line to Tehama, from Tehama down to Sacramento, from Sacramento through Stockton to Goshen, is all Central Pacific, and that would be used for Portland traffic going over the Sunset line. Traffic leaving San Francisco would have the choice of two roads—it could either go via Portland and down the west-side line to Goshen and thence over the Sunset line east; or it could go to Tracy, thence over the Central Pacific lines to Goshen. In other words, we would have a double track in the San Joaquin Valley by the use of the two lines there.

If we could not use the Central Pacific, we would be reduced to one track down the valley.

Q. What effect upon the through line from Portland via El Paso, or the through line from San Francisco via El Paso, would the separation of the Central Pacific lines from the Southern Pacific system have in the way of efficiency of the service or the value of the service that you could offer to the public?

A. It would decrease the efficiency of the Sunset line by being deprived of all the facilities, branches, and short cuts afforded by the use of the Central Pacific, and their efficiency would be materially reduced.

1526 Q. Now, Mr. Kruttschnitt, in respect to all these impairments of the service which you have referred to as likely to follow from a separation of the Central Pacific lines from the Southern Pacific system, could that be obviated by any practical cooperation between the Central Pacific Railway Company as an independent line and the Southern Pacific Company as an independent line?

A. Not practically. I suppose if the lines were separated there would be some tendency on the part of both to reproduce the facilities from which they had been excluded.

Q. (Continuing.) I do not mean whether they could be obviated by each line reproducing what it lost through the separation, but whether they could go on and operate as they are being operated now.

A. They certainly could not. I do not mean by that that they would not interchange freight; they would be compelled to do that, but the cost of interchanging freight and handling it would be materially increased over what it is now, and no kind of cooperation with the lines severed would make up for the absolute identity of use of the two properties that exists at the present time.

1527 Q. I call your attention to a pamphlet containing an agreement dated February 8, 1913, for the sale to the Union Pacific of the stock of the Central Pacific Railway Company, which was put in evidence by the petitioner as Exhibit No. 20. It was in the form of a printed pamphlet but is now typewritten in the exhibits. Are you familiar with that tentative agreement?

A. I am.

Q. Who represented, mainly, the Southern Pacific Company in the negotiations preceding that agreement?

A. A subcommittee of the executive committee of the Southern Pacific board of directors, composed of myself as chairman, Mr. H. W. DeForest, and Mr. J. N. Wallace, and all of the negotiations were conducted by us with a corresponding subcommittee from the executive committee of the Union Pacific.

Q. Without making you appear vain, may I say that you were the principal representative of the Southern Pacific in those negotiations?

A. I had to be on account of my office.

Q. You took part in all the negotiations?

1528 A. Yes; every one of them; every conference that was held.

Q. Please state whether or not this tentative agreement was entered into voluntarily so far as the Southern Pacific was concerned.

A. It was not only not entered into voluntarily, but it was entered into under the strongest kind of compulsion.

Q. What was that compulsion?

A. A threat by the Attorney General of the United States that if we didn't make the agreement he would at once enter summary proceedings to compel us to do it.

Q. To compel you to enter into the agreement or to secure a forced sale of the stock and the cancellation of the lease?

A. Well, to put us into court and force us to sell the stock if we did not reach an agreement with the Union Pacific. When this threat was made our committee went to Washington, and I personally protested to the Attorney General against being put in that position, stating that we were not the culprits or the defendants in this unmerger suit, and it seemed to the Southern Pacific stockholders to be very unjust to dismember property because of some offense committed by the Union Pacific, and Mr. Wickersham in reply stated that 1529 he appreciated the justness of our objection and protest, but he added "I am going to apply equal compulsion to the Union Pacific to make them give you good terms."

The difficult problem for them to solve was how to sell $126,000,000 of Southern Pacific stock, and Mr. Wickersham meant that in fixing up terms for the sale of this stock he would apply pressure on them so that we would not be the only ones coerced.

Q. So that the Union Pacific, in the price which they were willing to pay, was not altogether a free agent either?

A. No.

Q. Please state the reasons why the Southern Pacific yielded to the compulsion which you have spoken of and made the tentative agreement which they did not want to make.

A. The Southern Pacific, up to the time of the unmerger, had been financed by the Union Pacific. In other words, it had no cares of its own as to raising money for improvements; the Union Pacific was doing all that, acting as its banker. The Southern Pacific owed the Union Pacific a considerable sum of money at the time of the unmerger, and almost the first question that confronted the directors was what to do in the face of this threat of the Attorney Gen-

1530 eral; and, as the threat was to institute summary proceedings which would put us into court at once, we considered that the time was propitious for making a better settlement with the Union Pacific than we could probably make at any other time, because the Attorney General had it in his power at that time to exercise a very strong pressure on the Union Pacific that he would not have or might not have at some future time if a suit were brought for the dismemberment of the Southern Pacific properties.

Q. Now, besides the debt which you owed to the Union Pacific, had the Southern Pacific other financial obligations which it would have to meet in the near future?

A. Yes; quite a good many. The Southern Pacific was building a great many lines, and it had incurred obligations to the communities through which those lines were to run to build them. They were under construction, and they had raised large sums of money to meet construction expenses.

Q. What do you believe would be the effect of a suit to disrupt the Southern Pacific system by separating the Central Pacific lines upon the ability of the Southern Pacific to meet its financial requirements at that time?

1531 A. Well, we felt that it would be a cloud on the Southern Pacific's credit, and with this suit hanging above us, or pending, it would be practically impossible for us to raise money, and this sale represented an opportunity to get a large sum of money to finance the Southern Pacific for what we estimated would be probably two or two years and a half ahead.

Q. I believe you have already answered this, but I will ask you again, in this connection: What was your belief at that time as to the price you would obtain under the circumstances from the Union Pacific, as compared with the price you could expect from a forced sale if the Government was successful in the threatened suit?

A. Not only the sub-committee, but the entire executive committee, the entire board, and the Southern Pacific protective committee that had been formed outside of the board, with which the board cooperated and acted, were unanimously of the opinion that we could not, without the pressure exercised by the Attorney General, hope to get as favorable a price at the end of litigation for dismemberment.

Q. Does this tentative agreement contain any stipulations which were put in for the purpose of mitigating or avoiding some 1532 of the injurious consequences which would result from the separation of the Central Pacific from the Southern Pacific system?

A. Yes; all those points were very carefully guarded.

Q. Let me ask you to mention those points which were intended to mitigate loss and inconvenience to the Southern Pacific Company so far as that was possible.

A. I was just starting to answer that, that the Attorney General greed with us in insisting that the Central Pacific should allow the outhern Pacific Company to retain the line from Tehama to the regon State line; that maintained the integrity of its Portland ne.

Q. That is, the line of the Central Pacific Railroad Company om Tehama to the State line was to be retained by the Southern acific Company after the separation from the Central Pacific?

A. Yes; and all of the terminals were to be made joint. In other ords, the Southern Pacific Company would not be called upon to end this very large sum of money, some eighty-five millions of ollars, but would continue to enjoy the use of those common ter-inals.

Q. And would not depend upon the consent of whoever acquired the Central Pacific to give you the use thereof?

33 A. No. That was embodied in this agreement, that it was to be perpetual; and also we covered in that the use of the gen-al shops at Sacramento. We were to be given the use of those for e years, until the Southern Pacific Company could build shops of s own.

Q. Did the Union Pacific undertake to relieve the Southern Pa-fic Company of its obligations resulting from the guarantee of the nds of the Central Pacific, to which you referred in another part your testimony?

A. Yes; they agreed to assume all those obligations; the Southern acific Company was relieved altogether.

Q. What was the financial standing of the Union Pacific? Was such as to cause you to feel that you could be relieved by that ligation on their part of these immense obligations on your part?

A. We were thoroughly familiar with the standing of the Union acific, because several of us had been directors of the Union Pacific fore the unmerger, and we knew that its financial strength was obably greater than that of any other railroad in the country, d that they were amply able to carry out the arrangements they made in this tentative agreement.

34 Q. As to this issue of bonds, which is familiarly known, especially in Southern Pacific circles, as the European loan, do u know whether that was a loan secured by a mortgage on the rail-ad or real estate, or was it secured by collaterals?

A. It was secured by collaterals.

Q. Whose collaterals?

A. Southern Pacific collaterals, made up, in the main, of stock of e Houston & Texas Central, the Houston East & West Texas, the , H. & S. A.—you do not want those names in full, do you?

Q. Go ahead.

A. The Oregon & California, the Southern Pacific of Califor the Southern Pacific Terminal Company, and quite a number bonds of the G., H. & S. A. That was the collateral, aggregating I remember, about seventy-six millions, that was deposited to se those European bonds.

Q. Do you remember about the date of that loan?

A. Only by the year; it is known as the European loan of 1911.

Q. And when was it to mature?

A. I think it was a thirty-five year loan; that would mak 1946.

1535 Q. What was the rate of interest?

A. The rate of interest on the face of the bonds?

Q. That is all I am asking for now.

A. Four per cent.

Q. What were the undertakings of the Union Pacific with re ence to that particular loan?

Mr. McClennen. Do you refer to some undertakings outside?

Mr. Blair. No; just for convenience to put it in here. The ag ment, of course, speaks for itself; but as a basis for questions that not occur in the agreement, I will ask him to state it.

Mr. McClennen. Then, without my objecting, it may be und stood that all Mr. Kruttschnitt's testimony means, in reference this agreement, is his rephrasing of what appears in Exhibit 20.

Mr. Blair. That would be a little too broad. All that Mr. Kr schnitt says with reference to what appears as a part of this te tive agreement is made with reference to the copy in the record, the copy in the record is, of course, controlling. Does that sati you?

Mr. McClennen. Yes. It does not mean additional ag

1536 ments?

Mr. Blair. No.

By Mr. Blair:

Q. What were the undertakings generally of the Union Pacific w reference to this European loan?

A. The European loan was handled by a syndicate of Fre banks, and they undertook to get the consent of those bankers t substitution of collateral by the Union Pacific to take the place the Southern Pacific collateral, and also to get them to agree to abrogation of the Central Pacific lease by the Southern Pacific Co pany. They failed in getting their consent to the abrogation of lease, and then the other followed, that under certain conditi they would furnish collateral in lieu of what we would put up.

Q. It was a condition of that European loan that the bonds would fall due, and could be called, if you parted with the Central Pacific Railway Company, was it not?

A. If we either broke the lease or parted with the stock.

Q. And one of the agreements of the Union Pacific was that it would try to get the French banks to waive that?

A. Yes.

1537 Q. Do you know whether they succeeded?

A. No; they did not; they failed.

Q. I believe you have already stated that an alternative to entering into this agreement was to face an immediate suit by the Attorney General to subject the stock of the Central Pacific Railway Company to a forced sale?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you or your associates believe at the time that at a forced sale you could secure those conditions which were agreed to by the Union Pacific, to mitigate the consequences of a disruption?

A. No; I said that everybody connected with it, all of the directory of the Southern Pacific, and also the protective committee of stockholders that was acting with us and counseling with us, all thought that we never could get that price under a forced sale.

Q. I am not speaking of the price; I am speaking of the other conditions.

A. We thought we could not get a mitigation of those onerous conditions, because at a forced sale there would not be anybody to coerce the purchaser.

Q. Or to make the purchaser give you, for instance, the 1538 999 years' lease of the Tehama line?

A. Yes. In other words, all of this agreement was taken up, all the essential features were taken up, on several occasions with the Attorney General, because we were acting, really, pretty much under his orders, and this was discussed, paragraph by paragraph, with him by both committees.

Q. Were any conditions put in that tentative agreement at the instance of the Union Pacific?

A. Yes; a number. They started out without any mention of the Venicia cut-off, and after a few days they realized the importance of that line to them, and they insisted that they would not continue negotiations unless we would agree to give them such trackage rights over that line as were tantamount to a half ownership. They were also insistent upon the joint use of terminals, because the Central Pacific had none in San Francisco, and they would have to use the Southern Pacific Company's, and they were insistent upon trackage rights over the line from Redwood into San Francisco.

Q. Did they make those the conditions upon which they would enter into the agreements about which we have been speaking?

A. To use a pet phrase of their chairman, they were 1539 "fundamental". In other words, that meant that they would quit and would not come to see us any more unless we yielded those points.

Q. They did not want the Central Pacific lines except under those conditions?

A. No.

Q. Without going into details, please state whether this agreement was ever carried out, and why it was not ever carried out.

A. It was executed by the companies, but of course it was subject to the approval of the California State Commission, and they declined to approve it, so that it never went into effect.

Q. The European loan is still outstanding?

A. Yes.

Q. And the conditions forming part of the contract are still in force?

A. They are.

Q. Have you ever calculated what would be the financial loss to the Southern Pacific Company if that loan was called by reason of violation of the condition that the Southern Pacific Company 1540 should maintain its lease of the Central Pacific Railway Company and its ownership of the Central Pacific Railway stock?

A. I did, some time ago; I asked the comptroller for the cost of that money at maturity of the bonds and the cost at the present time in case the loan were called, because we wanted to do something that was forbidden by the agreement, and I wanted to see what the consequences would be.

Q. Just state generally.

A. The money will cost us, when the loan matures, 5.2 per cent. If the loan were called now, in 1915, it would cost us 8.2; that is, it would cost us three per cent per annum for four years that it has been alive, on, roughly, $50,000,000, or about $6,000,000 if the loan were called.

Then, if we had to borrow this money again in the open market we are told by banker friends that it would probably cost us at least one per cent more than the original cost; in other words, the cost at the present time, with discounts, commissions, and expenses would be about 6.2 per cent. Therefore, for thirty-five years less four—that is thirty-one years—we would have to pay annually one per cent more on $50,000,000. One per cent on that is $500,000, or $15,500,000 for the next thirty-one years.

1541 Q. That would be a loss suffered by the Southern Pacific Company?

A. Yes; through a call of that loan, plus the six million.

Q. And the call of the bonds could legally be made if you parted ith the Central Pacific Railroad Company, either the stock or the ase?

Mr. McClennen. That question is objected to as calling upon the itness to express a legal opinion as to whether an agreement to aintain a lease which operated as a suppression of competition is ch a legal agreement that it could be enforced by the purchaser of nds or others.

Mr. Blair. If counsel can find any way by which the bankers or the lders of those bonds could be prevented from calling that loan der the circumstances it would be very gratefully received by coun- l for defendants.

Mr. McClennen. I should be very glad to undertake the grounds pon which you could successfully resist such a call.

The Witness. Yes; if we part with the stock or the lease. There no earthly doubt of that; the language is too plain.

(Whereupon an adjournment was taken until to-morrow, Thurs- ay, March 11, 1915, at 11 o'clock a. m.)

542 NINETEENTH DAY.

Room 921, Flood Building,
San Francisco, Cal., Thursday, March 11, 1915.

The hearing was resumed, pursuant to adjournment, at 11 o'clock m. before Frank R. Hanna, special examiner.

Present on behalf of the United States: James W. Orr, Esq., Ed- ard F. McClennen, Esq., and Edward E. Gann, Esq., special assist- nts to the Attorney General.

Present on behalf of the defendants: W. F. Herrin, Esq., J. P. lair, Esq., P. F. Dunne, Esq., Garret McEnerney, Esq., and E. J. oulds, Esq., for the Southern Pacific Company.

543 Julius Kruttschnitt, the witness under examination when the adjournment was taken, resumed the stand and testified rther as follows:

Direct examination (continued) by Mr. Blair:

Q. What is the present number, about, of the stockholders of the outhern Pacific Company?

A. Nearly 33,000.

Q. Are there any controlling stockholders? That is to say, is here any group of stockholders who own a controlling amount of tock?

A. Not that I know of, and no actions that have been taken si
I have been in my present position indicate that such is the case.

Q. Does the Huntington estate own any stock?

A. I do not think they own any.

Q. Does the Crocker estate own any stock in the Southern Pac Company?

A. I am under the impression that some of the Crocker child may own a few shares, but the number is insignificant; I do think H. E. Huntington owns more than qualifying shares.

1544 Q. Does the Searles or Hopkins interest own any stock?

A. I think not.

Q. Does the Stanford interest, or do the heirs, own any stock?

A. I think not.

Mr. BLAIR. The witness is yours.

Cross-examination by Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. Under the nomenclature adopted by the Southern Pacific C pany, is the chairman of the board of directors the chief execut officer of the company?

A. There is no such office; the title is chairman of the execut committee of the board, and he is the chief executive officer.

Q. Your predecessor as chief executive officer was whom?

A. R. S. Lovett.

Q. He had occupied the position from the death of Mr. Harrim approximately?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you bear in mind when Mr. Harriman died?

A. In September, 1909.

1545 Q. Up to the year 1880 the Central Pacific Railroad was only means of access by rail to California for transcontine freight, was it not?

A. Up to 1880?

Q. Yes.

A. I think that is right.

Q. The first inroad on that monopoly came when the Texa Pacific reached a junction with the Southern Pacific line in Te in 1881?

A. I do not remember the date when the Texas & Pacific joined line building from the west in Texas. I know, of course, where t met; it was at Sierra Blanca, about ninety-three miles east of Paso, but the year I do not remember.

Q. Do you bear in mind that that junction was the first breal the monopoly?

A. As I say, I do not remember what date that was.

Q. Do you remember whether the Texas & Pacific junction preceded the Atchison junction?

A. No; I remember approximately when the Atlantic & Pacific, or the Atchison, got into California, but I do not remember the date of the junction that you refer to, at Sierra Blanca.

1546 Q. Approximately, when was it that the Atchison or the Atlantic & Pacific got into California?

A. That was about the same time that the Sunset line was opened, early in 1883.

Q. It preceded the Sunset line by a little, did it not?

A. I do not remember the month; it is impressed in my mind from going over my notes and records as simply the early part of 1883. Of course it would have to be very early to precede the Sunset line, which was completed, as I remember, about the middle of January and was opened about the 1st of February.

Q. Of 1883?

A. Yes. So far as my knowledge would go, I should say it was probably a little after the completion of the Sunset line.

Q. For convenience, the term "Atchison" or the term "Santa Fe"—either is intended to be the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe?

A. Yes; I understand what you intend to mean by it.

Q. When the Atchison first was in position to bring freight part way by rail to California, what junction point did it carry to?

1547 A. When it was first in position?

Q. The first time that any junction had been made, so that it could deliver to California rails; what was the junction point?

A. Well, on their rails it would have been The Needles on the Colorado River; but their advent to Southern California was marked by a lease from the Southern Pacific Railroad of the line from Needles to Mojave. I should say perhaps a more accurate answer to that question would be that they first delivered freight for California at the Mojave junction, where they delivered it, of course, to the Southern Pacific lines.

Q. The movement from The Needles to Mojave Junction was then made over the Southern Pacific rails?

A. Southern Pacific ownership, but leased to the Santa Fe.

Q. Do you bear in mind the date of that lease, approximately?

A. No; but of course it was prior, necessarily, to the early part of 1883, because their line was opened at that time. That line was leased to them up to, I think, 1911, when it was sold to them.

1548 Q. Did the Southern Pacific Railroad Company or the Central Pacific Railroad Company actually operate the line from Mojave to The Needles at some time?

A. That I do not know.

Q. That is, you do not know whether the lease was coincident w the opening of the line—the lease to the Atchison?

A. I do not know whether the Southern Pacific or the Cent
Pacific interests ever operated that line.

Q. Did the Atlantic & Pacific as a company ever operate its l to The Needles?

A. To The Needles?

Q. Yes.

A. I think so, but I can not be certain about that. In general t amongst railroad officials we used to allude to that as the Atlanti Pacific.

Q. The first time that that line became of consequence was a its operation was undertaken by the Atchison?

A. Yes; that is to say, after they reached Mojave and be operations into California.

Q. The Texas & Pacific has always remained depend 1549 upon the Southern Pacific rails to get into California, ha not?

A. We have gotten most of their traffic, but they are not depend upon us. At El Paso they connect with the Atchison. They co get in by the Atchison rails; and for a number of years they nected there with the Rock Island. They could have gotten a siderable distance farther west with the Rock Island and then joi up with us; but they had at El Paso a choice of two roads, the Sa Fe or our own.

Q. If they did employ the Rock Island, the freight would stil dependent upon the Southern Pacific rails to get to California?

A. Yes; from their junction point with us or from junction po of the Rock Island with the Santa Fe.

Q. What is the most westerly junction of the Rock Island with Southern Pacific rails?

A. By "Rock Island" I would understand that you mean
Rock Island interests. The junction is really of the El Pas
Southwestern, which owns, as I understand it, or controls the R Island at the present time. Their most westerly junction with Tucson.

Q. Then, unless otherwise noted, we may understand that "R Island" means the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific?

1550 A. With the El Paso & Southwestern. That is, it make what is known as the Rock Island system.

Q. Tucson is in Arizona?

A. Yes.

Q. Any delivery by the Texas & Pacific to the Atchison w necessitate, up to the nineties, a use of Southern Pacific rails to into California?

A. Yes; up to 1883, when they had their own line to Mojave.

Q. To go back, I asked you about the most westerly junction of the Rock Island with the Southern Pacific, which you said was Tucson. How long has that been a junction?

A. Eighteen months, perhaps.

Q. Prior to that, was the point Benson?

A. Yes; at Benson.

Q. That is also in Arizona?

A. Yes.

Q. As a practical matter, the Southern Pacific was not treating that as a gateway, was it?

A. Which—Tucson?

Q. No; Benson.

A. What do you mean, not treating it as a gateway? Not 1551 interchanging?

Q. It was not interchanging at Benson?

A. Yes; we have always interchanged. It has always been the policy of the Southern Pacific to interchange at connection with whatever point they connect.

Q. Were the joint through rates put in on that as a junction point?

A. I am afraid I can not go much into detail as to traffic matters, as I am not familiar with them. Of course I was entirely familiar with the interchange through establishing the interchange of cars at that point, and I know we were interchanging cars with them at Benson prior to the interchange at Tucson.

Q. Excepting the line from the Needles to Mojave, the Southern Pacific or the Central Pacific, or the two together, continued to have a monopoly of the rail communication to California up to the time that the Atchison extended its own line into San Francisco Bay?

A. Well, it did not extend its own line. A line was built from Stockton southerly, which the Atchison acquired about 1898, and a branch was built from Stockton to San Francisco, and at that 1552 time they got into San Francisco; I think about 1899, perhaps.

Q. Perhaps May 10, 1899, would not discord with your recollection?

A. No; I only remember in a general way that it was shortly after my moving to the Pacific coast that the Atchison acquired what was known as the Valley Road, the San Joaquin Valley Road, which was started by San Francisco local people and built down towards Bakersfield; and my recollection is that the San Francisco connection, involving the construction of their Franklin tunnel, which was quite a long tunnel and a difficult piece of work, was not built until after the Atchison had bought out this property. That would accord fairly well with the date that you name, which would be about a year or a year and a half after that.

Q. Up to that time, apart from the road from The Needles to Mojave, the Central and the Southern together continued to have a monopoly of the rail entrance into California?

A. No; Mojave itself was in California——

Q. I said with that exception.

A. Yes. There were no other rail lines from the east into California at that time.

1553 Q. In 1883 was Mojave the end of the Atchison operations?

A. No. My recollection is that there were local lines in California known as the Southern California Railway that had lines into Los Angeles, and that they built northward to Mojave; and shortly after 1883 that the Atchison got into southern California. They acquired the Southern California Railway.

Q. What points did those Atchison lines reach?

A. In southern California?

Q. In southern California. I do not care, of course, for the villages, but——

A. It is almost easier to tell you what they did not reach. They reached every point of importance in southern California.

Q. They reached Los Angeles?

A. They reached Los Angeles, they reached Pasadena, they reached Riverside, they reached Redlands, they reached Colton and San Diego.

Q. Did they reach out to the port of San Pedro?

A. No; they did reach Rodondo, which was a little north of San Pedro.

Q. Was that a shipping point?

1554 A. Yes; that is a seaport.

Q. After the advent of the Atchison at San Francisco by the next addition to the rail communication with San Francisco was the Salt Lake-San Pedro route, in 1905, was it not?

A. Yes.

Q. And the next was the Western Pacific from Salt Lake, in the summer of 1910?

A. Yes; but before that, say, from about 1884 or thereabouts there was a means of getting freight into California regardless of either the Atchison or the Southern and Central Pacific, and that was via Union Pacific route to Puget Sound and their steamers from Puget Sound into San Franscisco.

Q. That possibility came into existence about 1884?

A. As I remember it, yes; 1884. Then the old Oregon Railway & Navigation Company was completed.

Q. The Oregon Short Line breaks off from the Union Pacific at Granger and at Ogden?

A. At Granger and at Ogden, and runs to Huntington; and the Oregon Railway & Navigation Company, or, as it is known now, the Oregon-Washington Railway & Navigation Company, ran from Huntington to Puget Sound and Portland. It would be 1555 more accurate to say that in 1884 that competitive line was to Portland and thence by steamer to San Francisco instead of Puget Sound points, which I said at first.

Q. In practice, did that line carry much California freight?

A. I do not know much about that myself, but I remember it was urged in the Union Pacific unmerger suit that that was active competition, and I think the court itself said there was quite a considerable amount of freight carried that way.

Q. You refer to the printed opinion of the court?

A. The Union Pacific unmerger opinion. It is a shorter line by 475 miles from New York to San Francisco than the Sunset Line is, and it is handicapped with a sea mileage of only about 700 miles against 1,800 miles of the Sunset.

Q. Have you read that Union Pacific unmerger opinion recently?

A. No.

Q. So that you are speaking from some past recollection of it?

A. From past recollection; but that opinion made a very strong impression on me at the time I read it.

1556 Q. Really that opinion of the Supreme Court was the first time you had ever known that that was practically a competitive line, was it not, for California freight?

A. Not at all. When I came to California in 1895 the Southern Pacific was having a very, very strenuous time with that line. My recollection is that they were engaged in a very vigorous rate war with the steamers to Portland at that time, because we were called on to put on extra passenger service, and to quicken up passenger trains and to quicken up freight trains, and do all sorts of things to meet the competition of the Portland steamship line.

Q. Did you know of the scant courtesy paid to that line by the defendants in the merger suit when it was urged by the Government as a competitive line?

A. Did I know of the scant courtesy?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes; there were a good many positions of the defendants in that suit as to which we have had to change our views very radically, and we have had to adopt the views of the Supreme Court, because they would not adopt ours.

Q. How long did this rate war between the Union Pacific Portland and boats to San Francisco with the Central Pac keep up?

1557 A. My recollection is that it was quite vigorous shor after I came to California, and then there was a lull or co promise or patch-up of some sort, and then it broke out again lasted for several months, certainly. Then there was some sort an arrangement made by which the fight was patched up. I supp that the two periods of active warfare lasted, I should say, a y or eighteen months.

Q. The mileage from Ogden to San Francisco Bay is appro mately the same as from Ogden to Portland over the Oregon Sh Line and the Navigation Company's line, is it not?

A. From Ogden to San Francisco Bay it is 783 miles.

Q. That is by the Lucin cut-off?

A. By the Central Pacific line. By the other line from Og to Portland I think it is a trifle more, but they are not very m different.

Q. That line would undoubtedly be—that is, the line from Og through Portland to San Francisco—would undoubtedly be an economical means of moving freight, would it not?

A. Why?

Q. As compared with the Central Pacific lines. Would not?

1558 A. For the movement from Ogden—yes; from Ogde
San Francisco the distance would be greater, but from Atla coast points to San Francisco the distance would be greater than vi Central Pacific line, but much less than via the Sunset line. In o words, it is a shorter traffic route, made up of sea and land tr portation, than the Sunset line is. It is about 3,900 miles, as I member it, against 4,400 for the Sunset.

Q. When freight traveling westward had got as far as Ogden was destined to San Francisco nothing but the selfish rivalry of railroad against another would ever send it up through Portlan get it to San Francisco, would it?

A. The desire to get all of the revenue instead of a part of it m very well induce them to do that. As a matter of fact it did for a while induce them to do that.

Q. It nevertheless, as a matter of the ultimate economical car of freight, would be a more expensive route?

A. Yes; but you have to define what you mean by "the ulti economical handling of freight". For instance, a road may get of freight and it may at the beginning assume perhaps 1559 per cent of the expense of carriage; if after assuming per cent it has got very shortly to deliver it to a conne and divide the remainder it may get very little net out of it, whereas if by assuming the fifty per cent initial expense it can secure to itself the entire other fifty per cent of the earnings it may be very economical for them to take it around the long way.

Q. You would subscribe to the theory that the expenditures of the railroads, cost of doing the business, must eventually reflect themselves in the rates which the public pay, would you not?

A. I think so, but we have never been able to get the public to think that. Then you have got to define what you mean by "the cost of doing business". That varies very much with how the freight is handled. There are very many shipments of freight where the Southern Pacific makes a great deal more net money at the same through rate by carrying this freight around by its long line, the Sunset line to New York, than it gets by taking it over its short line, the short line to New York, of which the Central Pacific is a small part.

Q. So far as the actual expense of carrying the goods is concerned, however, when you have a train loaded with freight at Ogden 1560 destined, we will say, to Sacramento, whatever may be the more profitable to the particular railroad, there is much more expense involved in carrying that up to Portland and transshipping it by boat to San Francisco Bay and transshipping it by rail there to Sacramento than by carrying it from Ogden to Sacramento, is there not?

A. That supposition of yours is of course entirely theoretical. I do not know of any such case that would ever occur. If, however, a trainload of freight should leave New York to go to San Francisco, either via Portland and the steamship line or via Ogden and the Central Pacific, it is in exactly the same fix as a trainload of freight leaving a California terminal and having the option to go to New York via the Central Pacific-Union Pacific short line or to go via the Sunset long line. As I tell you, a great deal of freight business may be profitable to us by taking the long way; and that is why we solicit it that way, rather than to take it the short way and accept only a small part of the through rate. In the one case we get it all; in the other case we get a part only.

Q. That is, more profitable because you get the whole rate, and not more profitable because the carriage is less expensive? That is true, is it not?

1561 A. Well, it would be more profitable because, out of the through rate, we would get more net by the long haul than by the short; and, after all, it is the net earnings we are seeking, and not simply the gross.

Q. You spoke of my dealing with a theoretical occurrence. Has not the competition from Ogden through Portland and by boat to San Francisco been very largely theoretical only?

A. As I say, we thought that way, but the court differed from us and we have accepted the court's view of that competition.

Q. You have acquired no more knowledge of the subject than you had at the time when you thought that that competition was purely theoretical, before the court corrected you on the subject? Am I right?

A. But does not the correction of an error necessarily imply the acquisition of more knowledge? I think we have.

Q. The only new piece of information that you have obtained on that subject is the opinion of the court?

A. Yes; and we have obeyed that.

Q. Well, then, to correct my inquiry slightly, and apart from the competition of the court's over the Oregon Short Line and 1562 through Portland, and such competition as was furnished by the Atchison, the Central Pacific, and the Southern Pacific had a monopoly of the California railroad transportation in 1899, did it not?

A. Apart from the Portland competition and apart from the Atchison, you ask whether the Southern Pacific lines had a monopoly in 1899?

Q. Yes.

A. There was still the ocean route via Cape Horn, around Cape Horn. There were steamers and sailing vessels——

Q. I meant to say railroad competition. I will ask to have the question read.

(The question was read by the reporter as follows:)

"Q. Well, then, to correct my inquiry slightly, and apart from the competition of the court's over the Oregon Short Line and through Portland and such competition as was furnished by the Atchison, the Central Pacific, and the Southern Pacific had a monopoly of the California railroad transportation in 1899, did it not?"

The WITNESS. I should say yes.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. In 1899 did the Atchison have any branches or feeders north of Mojave?

1563 A. I think not, but they had the use of all of our branches from connecting points. Divisions were made with them by which they got into all of our branch points.

Q. Did you have running agreements for joint rates for transcontinental freight from all your branches over the Atchison through the eastern part of the United States?

A. If by that you mean whether the Atchison could get direct into all of our branch points, yes. They do that still. The arrangements have been so satisfactory to them that they have, up to ent time even, built few or no branches, finding it better to ize our rails, under traffic arrangements, than to build their own. y have in the last two or three years built some unimportant nches into some tracts of land that were being developed for nge culture or orchard culture, say, east and southeast of Fresno; y have built a few branches, but that was into country really that did not reach.

Q. With those exceptions, they are still depending upon your rails everything off of their main line from Mojave to San Francisco y?

A. I would say that they still find it to their interest to use our branch rails north of Mojave, rather than to build their own lines.

Q. To put it in another way: They have not, with the few exceptions that you have mentioned, built branch lines north of Mojave?

A. They have not.

Q. To go back: Is the interchange of transcontinental freight with Atchison conducted under joint through rates from your various al points to junction with their lines in California and thence by Atchison rails to eastern destination?

A. I understand, and know, from handling the cars for the two s, that the Atchison uses our branch points and local points for reception and despatch of freight precisely as if they were their n. They keep their cars standing on our sidetracks for the use their patrons, directions of their traffic officials and agents are sent ct to our transportation officials, and they are respected just as uthern Pacific instructions are.

Q. Does the Southern Pacific carry that freight to the Atchison ls on its local rates or does it put in a through joint rate with the Atchison?

A. I can not answer as to the details of rates, but I can not conceive of the Atchison consenting for a moment to pay the uthern Pacific local rates to junction points. They would certainly ild their own lines rather than do that. I am simply assuming that reversing the conditions that if we were in their place we would t do it for a moment; we would not stand it. However, our traffic n can give you exactly what those rates are.

Q. Have you any idea of the volume of tonnage originating on uthern Pacific rails that is carried transcontinentally by the Atchi-n?

A. If by that you mean tons, no; I have not.

Q. Or dollars?

A. Or dollars; no; because my duties have always required me to l in trains and cars. Measured that way, I know that it is substan-l. Take from such points as San Jose and other Santa Clara Valley points where they reach over our rails. I know that in the busy season we have hundreds of Atchison cars that they have sent in for their traffic brought on our tracks that we have to look out for and distribute for them.

Q. That is, westward bound?

1566 A. Eastward bound. Then, of course, whatever freight they take westward for those points we have to deliver for their account also.

Q. And you have no idea whatever as to what that would amount to in tons or dollars?

A. No.

Q. Such cooperation in the handling of traffic as occurs between the Southern Pacific and the Atchison is that which the natural business interests of the two corporations leads to?

A. Yes; naturally.

Q. If the Central Pacific and the Southern Pacific Railroad Company were operated separately in California, undoubtedly the same interests would lead to the same cooperation in the handling of traffic, would it not?

A. If the future owners of the Central Pacific should pursue as broad and liberal a policy as the present owners, I should say yes.

Q. That is, the natural business interests of the two concerns would dictate such arrangements if sensible counsel prevailed?

A. Well, different people might give a different construction

1567 to the term "business interests". I have tried to indicate to you what the Southern Pacific construction is, how we have treated our connections whenever they have built in to us, but it does not follow at all that that same construction of those words would be given by some one else. I think we have given the right construction to them, because we have maintained very pleasant relations with all our connections, and from the mere fact that as strong a company as the Atchison, financially and in other respects, has never built short branches into this local territory, leads me to believe that our policy has been broad and has been satisfactory not only to us but to them. It does not follow that any other company might do the same. I have known companies that did not do it at all that way, they try to build up tariff walls at junction points that could not be pierced by their competitors and connections.

Q. The new owners of the Central Pacific Railroad Company could be pretty sure of finding the present officials of the Southern Pacific Company open to arrangements of this kind on reasonable terms, could they not?

A. The new owners of the Central Pacific?

Q. Yes; assuming a separation.

A. If there were a separation, we should assume the same attitude towards the Central Pacific, which might then be a competitor, as we do towards other competitors; but, of course, that use of the Central Pacific by the Southern Pacific lines would be very different from its use of them at the present time.

Q. The terminals at junction points have had their extent determined largely by the volume of traffic handled at those points, have they not?

A. Yes; with liberal provisions for future expected increases.

Q. You would not expect an increased tonnage or traffic at the junction point to result immediately from the separation of the Central Pacific from the Southern Pacific?

A. No; I should not.

Q. The terminal facilities at these various junction points would, for some time to come, remain extensive enough to handle all the tonnage or traffic to be expected at those points?

A. No; because all those common points, both Southern and Central Pacific, would have to maintain yard crews, switch engines, and so forth, to handle their respective traffic; they would require, instead of the same tracks on which to load their cars—they would require other tracks; so that in the separation of the two lines, it does not follow that the adequacy of the terminal would be beyond question.

Q. Do the Atchison and the Southern Pacific maintain separate crews at the different junction points of those two roads?

A. At almost every one. I think at every one, except perhaps Mojave, where they have no yard division and they have contracted with us to do their work, but at all other junction points they do.

Q. Do you find that it results in an excessive duplication of agencies for handling traffic?

A. Why, if the Atchison and the Southern Pacific were under common management, I am convinced that in California alone hundreds of thousands of dollars in operating expenses would be saved by combining forces at all those junction points.

Q. Would you carry that theory to its logical conclusion, if applied to all the railroads of the country, and say if they were all combined under one control it would result in an enormous saving, in the elimination of duplications?

A. Yes; an incalculably large saving, assuming that the management were able and efficient.

Q. You have to assume that as a constant quantity in all these reasonings?

A. Yes; but what I had in mind, to come out with it plainly, was that this unified management should not be exposed to the withering effect of Government regulation, because the management of transportation concerns by the Government has been singularly u cessful.

Q. That is, the same considerations which would make it policy to keep together the Southern Pacific and the Central P would have made it good policy to keep together the Central P and the Union Pacific and other connecting and contributing of the country?

A. No; I do not agree with that at all. I think the reasons tating the separation of the Union Pacific and Southern P system were much stronger than the reasons that have prompte Government to institute this suit. I have never been able to se reason whatever for this, and I could see some reason for the

Q. What was the harm in the Union-Pacific Southern P merger to the public interests?

A. That, I think, has been pointed out very fully i 1571 Supreme Court decision. I should not like to trust my ory enough to quote from that the numerous reasons they Their reasons filled up, as I remember it, fifty or sixty or perh hundred pages, closely written.

Q. Have you no independent views as to the harm in that m of the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific? I am not askin to attempt to quote the opinion of the court, but only to give own reasons.

A. Well, suppose we put it on a simple mileage basis. The tention in the other case was that the Union Pacific and the C
Pacific, together making up about one-half of the through li
New York, stifled the competition of the Sunset line extending New York to San Francisco. There are a great many people believe that there is little or nothing in that; that the mere o ship of a fraction of a through rail line could not stifle compe the other way. In this case the Government goes still farthe says that the ownership of 783 miles would stifle it. Then if w the line to Sacramento, say 89 miles, that line to Sacramento stifle it. It is really a reductio ad absurdum.

Q. I am afraid I did not make quite clear my qu
1572 which was your reasons for saying that the Union P
Southern Pacific merger was injurious to the public inte

A. Well, suppose we go the other way. If, certainly, the o ship of 1,783 out of 3,400 is more nearly an ownership of 3,400 than is 783, and if we extend it further and assume that the Pacific combination owned 3,000 miles out of 3,300, that would very nearly owning the whole line. If they owned the whole then no one could deny that one line was in direct competitio the other and controlled it.

Q. Have you now stated all the reasons that occur to you why the Union Pacific-Southern Pacific merger was injurious to the public interest?

A. I have not said that it was injurious to the public interest.

Q. In your opinion, was it?

A. No; I think not.

Q. Then in that respect, at least, you would not differentiate that from the present situation, the situation in the present case?

573 A. Well, I have said—I will try to make it plain to you—that if the ownership of what has been called an offshoot line or tangential line of 1,700 miles—well, we will first say of 3,300 miles—is injurious, the ownership of 3,000 miles is less injurious, the ownership of 1,700 miles is still less so, the ownership of 783 miles is still less so, and the ownership of 80 or 90 miles is still less.

Q. Am I right in understanding you to mean that the present injury bears the relation to the other of 783 to 1,783?

A. No; I do not admit that the present arrangement injures the public in the least, because in this case the Government is trying to pull to pieces a system which was consistently built up as a whole from the very beginning. In the other case an outside corporation had purchased a system of more mileage than its own and added it to it. Now, in that respect the two cases are profoundly different. If the Government's contention is right in this case, in my opinion it could go down the line of the Southern Pacific lines in California and lop off first this and then that, by saying "You can hook up this line with some other line and make it a competitive line; 574 therefore chop it off at the junction", and so on down to New Orleans, until we would have nothing but a bare right of way and two rails leading from New Orleans to San Francisco, which would mean ruining the property. It could not exist.

Q. Do you considerately state this last as your understanding of the result of the contentions made in this case?

A. What I have just said?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes. If that were done, we would be reduced to-day to the condition of the Western Pacific, which is a line without branches and without support, and which is in a bankrupt court.

Q. Which do you mean would be so reduced—the Southern Pacific or the Central Pacific?

A. Either one; if you pursue this theory to its logical conclusion—that you have no right to own a divergent stem.

Q. Does it accord with your conception of strict accuracy to describe the Central Pacific Railroad as a divergent stem?

A. It seems to me that the language is quite accurate. Here 575 is a system, and its main stem is running from New Orleans through San Francisco to Portland, Oregon. Then, at a poi about one-third or one-fourth from one end runs a branch eastwa 783 miles.

Q. That is, a stem to your mind connotes a branch and a trun does it?

A. Yes; as a simile, take a tree. It is pretty exact that the ma or trunk line would be the line from New Orleans to Portland, a one of the branches extending at practically right angles to the trun is the Central Pacific Railroad.

Q. When did the Central Pacific Railroad Company acquire i characteristic of being a stem?

A. You might say when the main trunk had developed.

Q. An converted into terms of date, that would be when?

A. That simile to a tree is perhaps a little unfortunate, becau the branch does not grow before the stem; but you might make simile that would fit exactly by stating that the line from Ogden San Francisco was the trunk and two branches spreading one to t north and one to the south; that would be a more symmetrical tr than the other, because, in the first place, it would be a bran 1576 on one side, and, in the second place, it would be symmetri development, both northward and southward.

Q. It would be more consistent with railroad parlance to speak the line from San Francisco to Ogden as a main trunk line, wo it not, than to speak of it as a branch or stem?

A. I do not know; I rather think we are quibbling on the meani of words. I do not know that there is any strict construction th you can base on railroad parlance.

Q. Well, I wanted to see how seriously and how much for pict esqueness and how much for accuracy you had adopted these ter of stem and branch, and for that purpose I am asking you wheth
it would not be more accurate, using language in the more comm sense, and speak of the line from San Francisco to Ogden as a m trunk line?

A. I am quite willing, to get along pleasantly—as you say, " picturesqueness"—to take back what I said and speak of the l from San Francisco to Ogden as the trunk and the developm northward to Portland and southward and southeastwardly to N Orleans as the branches.

Q. This branch from San Francisco, through New Orleans
New York, do you regard that as competitive with the tru 1577 line made up of the Central Pacific, Union Pacific, and C cago & North Western or some of the other lines to Chica and the New York Central or some of the other lines to New Yo City?

A. Yes; certainly.

Q. They are no less competitive because the main trunk line is broken into sections, in different ownerships, are they?

A. No less so, treating the Ogden lines as a unit, and no less so as long as the rates are absolutely controlled by an agency outside of the roads themselves. The rates for the two roads are the same. No component part of the Ogden line has any influence whatever on those rates and can not control the competition.

Q. In 1899 the two lines, the one all-rail from San Francisco to New York and the other rail to New Orleans and thence boat to New York, were competitive systems of transportation?

A. Yes; I have just said that; but the Central Pacific, as a part of the Southern Pacific system, has no control over that competition whatever.

1578 Q. How did the power of the Central Pacific Railroad, had it chosen to exercise it over that competition, compare in your mind with the power of the Union Pacific Railroad over that competition?

A. I have already said, and I will repeat, that the line through Ogden, being made up of the Central Pacific part of the Southern, the Union Pacific, the Chicago & North Western, and the New York Central, four lines, it was beyond the power of any one of those four lines to control that competition.

Q. Well, would you divide the competitive power into four parts and attribute it to each of the sections to get fairly accurately the situation?

A. No; I do not think of it that way at all.

Q. Do you think the Union Pacific had greater power over that competition than the Central Pacific had?

A. I do not know; I don't think so.

Q. Do you think it had as much power as the Central Pacific Railroad?

A. I can not split fractions with you, and I can not measure in fractions the power of each of those lines; but I do say that, and I think there that I have the Supreme Court behind me again, 1579 the Central Pacific had absolutely no power in stifling this competition or in fixing rates from California to the east.

Q. I have not asked you to put it as accurately as in fractions, but I have asked you, and it would seem a fairly simple question, whether, in your opinion as a railroad man, experienced in these two roads, the Union Pacific Railroad had more power over this competition or less power than the Central Pacific.

A. I do not think there is any difference. As long as the line is made up of a number of components, I do not see that any one of the component lines has any more or less power than the other in controlling the rates or the competition.

Q. Since 1883 the Central Pacific Railroad has had a ready outlet eastward over the Denver & Rio Grande, or the Rio Grande Western, with eastern connections to New York, has it not?

A. My recollection is that the D. & R. G. entered transcontinental business about that time, in 1883 sometime.

Q. The Central Pacific Railroad Company could, at any time from 1883 onward, have conducted a transcontinental business without 1580 out the assistance of the Union Pacific, could it not?

A. As a matter of fact, it did do business with the D. & R. G. from the time it was opened.

Q. Save this inlet as far as San Francisco Bay, which the Union Pacific had by way of Portland and by boat to San Francisco, the Union Pacific, up to 1905, anyway, was absolutely dependent upon the Central Pacific Railroad to do a transcontinental freight business, was it not?

A. With those exceptions, yes. There were no ways by which it could get into California except those two ways you have mentioned.

Q. Taking these relative parts of the two railroads, the Central and the Union, into consideration, it would still leave it as your considerate, final opinion that the Central Pacific Railroad Company was in better position than the Union Pacific Railroad to exert an influence over the transcontinental competition?

A. Yes.

Q. And you are content that that last answer should be taken as the standard of your accuracy in the forming and expression of your opinion?

A. No; I would not say that you could base your opinion

1581 as of my good judgment on one answer out of the multitude that I have given you to your various questions. I have meant that all of my answers should be accurate, but I would not like to say that out of perhaps two or three hundred answers I have made you you should take one and measure the accuracy of all by the accuracy of one out of the two or three hundred.

(Whereupon a recess was taken until two o'clock p. m.)

1582 AFTER RECESS.

JULIUS KRUTTSCHNITT, the witness under examination when recess was taken, resumed the stand and testified further as follows:

Cross-examination (continued) by Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. Since 1883 the Central Pacific Railroad Company or the Southern Pacific Company after it took up the operation, has routed through freight in through cars through Ogden over the Denver & io Grande, Missouri Pacific and eastern connections, all the way the Atlantic coast, has it not?

A. I think so.

Q. And has received through cars over those routes westbound?

A. Yes.

Q. And has operated under joint through rates on that traffic?

A. As I have told you, I am not familiar with the rate arrangements, but I have always assumed, as the officer in charge of the actual physical handling of the traffic and the interchange between the lines, that there must be satisfactory rate arrangements, else the freight would not move that way. I can give ositive evidence only as to the interchange of freight. It was unestionably the case that there was an interchange, and there is ow, between those lines and the Central Pacific at Ogden.

Q. And during all that period the Central Pacific Railroad, in ase of any hesitation as to rates on the part of the Union Pacific ailroad, has always been in a position to present as argument the ossibility of using the Missouri Pacific and its connections, if the nion Pacific would not join in a rate satisfactory to the Central acific?

A. You mean to ask whether the Central Pacific would use the nion and the Missouri Pacific for trading purposes, one against he other, for urging or pushing up divisions?

Q. Whether they were in a position to do so. I am not asking hether they ever did have occasion to exercise that power, but that hey did have that power.

A. Well, of course, with a junction point on several connections, hey could trade with them as to the best divisions that they could et.

Q. With those connections eastward from Ogden they were really in a better position to trade with the Union Pacific on fixing of rates than the Union Pacific was in a position to rade with the Central Pacific?

A. No; I do not see that. I do not see why that should be so. I o not believe it was so. I do not just catch your idea.

Q. I mean this: Suppose that the Central Pacific Railroad was onvinced that a given rate should be put through, or a given service hould be put through; if they met with opposition from the Union acific in what seemed to the Central Pacific the right course, the entral Pacific always had the other eastward line to fall back on and o use as an argument with the Union Pacific, whereas the Union Paific, if it thought a given rate should be put in, which the Central acific did not approve of, the Union Pacific was not in a position to nforce its argument by any showing that it could accomplish the through service in any other way except over the Central Pacific tracks?

A. No. From 1883 it was not in a position to claim that if the Central Pacific did not make proper arrangements with it for the handling of traffic, it would send it over another rail line; but it had the strong arm of the Government and the law behind it to 1585 compel the Central Pacific to make satisfactory arrangements.

The officers of the Central Pacific were in danger of prison penalties if they did not cooperate freely with the Union Pacific and make of it a through line, just as much as if it had been in common ownership.

Q. Just what do you mean by that?

A. I mean that the Pacific railroad act, which was always present to the officers of the Central Pacific, forbid them from putting an obstruction in the way of the freest kind of movement of traffic between the Union and the Central Pacific; so that, whatever their wishes may have been, and whatever their power, if unrestrained by this law, may have been, they could not exercise it without the danger of getting in jail.

Q. That is, you refer to the requirements of the Pacific railroad acts, that the Union and the Central must be operated as one through line, so far as the public was concerned?

A. So far as the Government and the public was concerned, and especially if the Central Pacific offered objections or put obstructions in the way of the free movement of freight—I am not a lawyer 1586 but it seems to me that they would have violated that act.

Q. You did not mean to convey the idea that the Pacific railroad acts, prior to the passage of the Hepburn Act, compelled the Central Pacific to agree to a rate dictated by the Union Pacific, do you?

A. Well, that is a question. If the Central Pacific did anything to obstruct the free movement of traffic, I should say that, in my opinion the act would have been violated. I do not suppose that that would go, or that you would construe my answer, as going to the absurdity of saying that the Union Pacific would name any unreasonable rate it chose and the Central Pacific would be compelled to observe it. I suppose that recourse could have been had to the courts, or to some tribunal, to settle the matter. Possibly in that case, however, the law would have acted on the Union Pacific and punished them for being unreasonable, because it applied to both lines.

Q. So far as you know, those requirements of the Pacific railroad acts relative to the Central Pacific and the Union Pacific are peculiar so far as the railroads of this country are concerned?

1587 A. No; they are not peculiar. There is an identical provision inserted in the charter of the California & Oregon.

Q. With reference to what?

A. With reference to the connections with the Oregon & California. The through line to Portland via Central Pacific was to be operated in the same way. The language, as I remember, is identical.

Q. From San Francisco to Portland?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know of any other such provisions?

A. No. There may be others, but I do not know of any.

Q. You spoke in your direct examination of the possible control over rates that the Southern Pacific at one time had. Do you remember the testimony to which I refer?

A. Yes.

Q. Of what period did you mean to speak?

A. Without specifying it by years, I had in mind the period prior to the time when the Interstate Commerce Commission, first, and the State commissions, afterwards, exercised the close supervision over rates that they are exercising to-day and have been exercising with increasing diligence for the past eight or ten years, say. It has not all come at once, but it has come gradually, until for the last few years the control has been absolute.

Q. You did not have in mind to define any period by any particular change in legislation, but rather a gradual growth as the commissions have exercised the authorities that the legislatures have given them. Am I right?

A. I had in mind the gradual increase in the authority and increase in the closeness of the supervision by commissions. As I remember it, when the interstate commerce law was first passed, it was not very rigidly enforced, and there was considerable liberty still left to the railroads; and that liberty has been gradually circumscribed until they have none at the present time, and have not had for a number of years.

Q. Speaking of the latter period, and of the earlier period, would it be safe to say that the earlier period continued up to ten years ago?

A. From the very nature of the case, the control of the railroads over the ability to make rates was gradually being weakened all the time. I can not fix the exact period in years when that control had been taken away completely from them; but certainly they have not enjoyed that liberty or ability to make their own rates for quite a number of years, now.

1589

Q. The control of the Southern Pacific over rates lasted at least up to the period of the Union Pacific merger, did it not?

A. Up to 1901?

Q. 1901.

A. No; I should doubt that very much.

Q. You bear in mind that the Interstate Commerce Commis act was passed in 1887?

A. I think so.

Q. And you say that it was some years after that before the rail roads began to feel the restraint upon their rates that that commis sion exercised?

A. Yes; I said that, substantially.

Q. How many years do you have in mind?

A. Well, you want me to say definitely, and I have told you twi that it is indefinite in my mind. It is very much like one man choi ing another, by gradually taking away his breath. If you shou ask me when, actually, did the moment occur when this man lo control of his breath and did not have any more, I could not te you; I do not know. I could tell you that at a certain poi 1590 he had been choked, and that the choking began, I though at a certain time; but when he lost consciousness or when h was "done up" I could not tell you. It is exactly the same way wi the railroads. I know that they have no control over their rat now. I know when the Interstate Commerce Commission act w passed, in 1887, the commission did not have the authority at th time immediately to exercise the absolute control that they exerci now; but their increments of power were given from year to ye Their reports would continually be asking for more power and mo power and more power, and some years it would be granted and so years it would be deferred and not granted. But there did come time when they had absolute control. It is a matter of history; do not know just when that year was, but I know it is quite a lo while since the roads have had the power to control their own rat

Q. To make the analogy perfectly clear, you mean by the ma who was choked, the railroads; and by the man who was doing th choking, the Interstate Commerce Commission?

A. That is what I had in mind; yes.

Q. The power which the Southern Pacific Company has lost ov the control of the California rates has been that only which th 1591 Interstate Commerce Commission has taken away from it?

A. Why, no. Let me think a moment. I think Utah alon of all of the States crossed by the Southern Pacific, is the on State which has not a railroad commission. There are railroad com missions in all the other States crossed by the Southern Pacific, t which they are more or less subject, or to which they are subject ab solutely as to intrastate traffic; and they are, of course, subject to th Interstate Commerce Commission on all other traffic.

Q. My question was, obviously, too indefinite. I had reference interstate rates. On them the Interstate Commerce Commission the only thing which has reduced the control of the Southern Pacific Company over California interstate rates?

A. Yes; except that the States are all the time attempting, indirectly, to control interstate rates. Every once in a while they get jerked up in court and straightened out; but before that is done they exercise more or less control.

Q. On page 1522 you were asked the question:

"Q. And the reproduction of the facilities is, in your opin-1592 ion, necessary for efficient management and operation of the lines of the Southern Pacific system which would remain after the Central Pacific lines were taken away?

"A. Substantially those sums would have to be spent to get the facilities for the Southern Pacific Company if it were robbed of the Central."

Am I right in understanding you to refer there to the situation in which the Southern Pacific Company will be placed if the Supreme Court of the United States should decide that it was contrary to the Sherman Act for the Southern Pacific Company to retain control of the Central and should direct the Southern Pacific Company to dispose of its holdings in the Central?

A. My answer was given on the supposition that if such a decree were rendered by the Supreme Court it would be that we must sell the stock of the Central Pacific, which would convey the entire property, and that the detrimental results which would follow to the Southern Pacific Company were those which I enumerated; and among those results would be the deprivation of the use of those common terminals; and the first thing the Southern Pacific would have to do would be to endeavor to reproduce those terminals at junction points. I do not think they could reproduce them 1593 for less than the sums given, because I explained that the sums named by me were the sums reached by a corps of engineers appointed, I should say roughly, about five years ago to determine the reproduction cost of all of those properties. Those data were being required all the time in contentions with communities, with counties and States, and perhaps with the Federal Government, and we wanted to have the information. It was carefully worked out, and I believe it to be accurate.

Q. The robbery to which you refer was one to be accomplished by the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States, as I understand it.

A. Perhaps I should not have used that term. It slipped out rather unconsciously, but what I had in mind was that this whole litigation seemed to me to be so absolutely unnecessary and to have sprung so evidently from the mind of the Attorney General long after the unmerger decision was rendered, as a means to carry ou most easily to himself the decree of the court in the unmerger ca and the separation of the properties seemed to me to be so monstrou considering the way they have grown, that I used the word "robbed"

Perhaps I should not, out of respect to the gentlemen here a 1594 out of respect to the court, and with this explanation perha
I ought to withdraw the term.

Q. It expresses, at the time you used it, your attitude of mind t ward the proceedings taken by the Government's officers?

A. Well, if you want me to be frank——

Q. I certainly do.

A. It did, and I can seldom think about these proceedings witho a good deal of heat and exasperation. The Attorney General nev dreamed of bringing this suit at the time of the decision of the Su preme Court, and it never appeared, as a suggestion even, as a mea of carrying out the decree until forty days after the decree was re dered.

Q. Do you happen to remember how much time elapsed after t decree in the Union Pacific merger case, the final decree, had be rendered and carried out before these present proceedings were b gun?

A. Yes; I remember it reasonably well. The merger decision w rendered on the 2nd or 3rd of December, 1912. As soon as it w rendered the Union Pacific people took up with the Attorney Ge eral a means of carrying out the decree and of selling their South Pacific stock. They proposed one method of disposing of t 1595 which the Attorney General refused to approve or, rath
the Attorney General first made a proposition which the Un Pacific declined to consider. They made a counter-proposition wh the Attorney General declined to consider, and they took the matt to the court to get their ruling on it, and they declined to approve i

Now, that decision of the court was rendered in the early part January of 1913, perhaps the 8th or 9th of January; and up to th time the Attorney General, who had been visited by the South Pacific stockholders' protective committee, had never suggested th selling of the Central Pacific stock.

On the 10th or 11th of January, or two days after this decis of the Supreme Court, and following a visit by the Union Paci committee to Washington, it was first announced that a new plan w to be sprung, and that new plan was to make the Southern Pac sell the Central Pacific stock for an equal number of shares of t Southern Pacific held by the Union Pacific.

In other words, the problem was to dispose of $126,000,000 wo of stock, and here was a short cut, by disposing of $85,000,000 stock in one block. That was done regardless of the feelings the Southern Pacific stockholders or their willingness to do it, 1596 and immediately after that the Southern Pacific subcommittee—because the Southern Pacific was actually divorced on the 13th day of January, and my first official act was to go down to Washington, following the visit of the stockholders' protective committee, and protest to the Attorney General against threatening or against exacting that the Southern Pacific should part with the Central Pacific stock; and it was then that I protested against this injustice of making us pay the penalty in a litigation that had been lost by the Union Pacific, and it was then that I received his assurance that he knew he was putting us in a position of duress, but in compensation for that, he would exercise power on the Union Pacific to make them pay a good price, and to make them relieve this trade of most of its disagreeable consequences, such as loss of the line to Portland and the loss of terminals, and so forth.

That must have been subsequent to the 13th of January, or as I say, forty days after the decision of the Supreme Court; yet the Supreme Court had said nothing about requiring us to sell the stock, and nobody else had said anything about it. The Attorney General apparently conceived this as a good way of helping the Union 1597 Pacific to sell this big block of stock.

Q. Apparently I did not make my question clear, and therefore I will divide it.

Do you remember when it was that the Union Pacific finally disposed of its Southern Pacific holdings, pursuant to the final decree in the merger case?

A. I would have to think over that. I can not be very accurate about it, but I can be reasonably so. My recollection is that the final plan for disposing of the Southern Pacific stock by the Union Pacific was approved in the early summer of 1913, perhaps in the month of May or thereabouts.

Q. And do you bear in mind that it was some nine months after that was a closed matter before this present suit was begun?

A. It was quite a long while. I do not remember just when, but it was quite a long while.

Q. Has this heat and indignation of which you have spoken been present in your mind at times when you were considering the matter of the evidence to be presented in this case?

A. No; I do not think I have shown any heat beyond, as I say, my concession as to the use of the term "robbed", at 1598 any time in this investigation, or at any time, as you say, thinking over the evidence I was going to give in this case.

Q. As you reflected upon the action of the Attorney General, you realized, of course, did you not, that if the holding of the Central Pacific Railroad Company by the Southern Pacific Company did in fact offend against the provisions of the Sherman Anti-trust Act that it might be a part of his sworn duty to present the matter to the proper court?

A. I do not think the Attorney General knew the conditions when he determined on this. If he had, I do not think he ever would have done it.

Q. So far for what you have said. Now, won't you just kindly answer the question which I will ask to have read, and in answering it bear in mind that perhaps inadvertently you have used rather serious language concerning the judicial and executive departments of the Government.

(The question was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

The WITNESS. I would answer, certainly, if he considered it part of his sworn duty, it was his duty to present it.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. The Attorney General who exerted this compulsion was 1599 Mr. Wickersham?

A. Yes.

Q. And you hardly lay that up against his successor now, Mr. Justice McReynolds, do you?

A. Well, I would say—as I have said; I was going to be very frank with you—the only reason Mr. McReynolds brought the suit was that he found it practically prepared when he came into office, and he just let the matter drift along, probably saying to himself, "Why, this is none of my funeral; the previous administration went into this and I will let it go along; if these people are not guilty the courts will find so, and if these people are guilty the courts will find so equally well." I have no feeling whatever against Mr. McReynolds about it. My only feeling was due to the fact that it was evident to me, and it was evident to any man who followed what was being done by the Union Pacific committee, the Southern Pacific committee, and the Attorney General, after the rendition of the Union Pacific decree, that this idea never entered the head of Attorney General Wickersham until it was necessary to use it as a means of helping the Union Pacific to dispose of a very large block of 1600 stock. That is my frank opinion, formed after being in these negotiations for months.

Q. Did Attorney General Wickersham inform you that the Supreme Court, or some members of it, in the course of the argument had inquired as to whether or not the holding of the Central Pacific by the Southern Pacific was not in violation of the Sherman Act?

A. You ask if he informed me of that?

Q. Yes.

A. No; he did not; because I knew, and our attorneys were present t the time the Supreme Court judge, on the argument of the case, ade that remark; but he did not make it in just the way that you
o. It may have been at some other time, but this whole thing seemed o have started in the argument of the case before the Supreme Court hen one justice said: "If the Union Pacific bought this Southern acific simply to get the Central, why not let them have the Central art alone and prohibit them from having the rest?" And one of is associates very pertinently remarked: "That is all right, but what ould the Southern Pacific stockholders say to that proposition?"

Now, it occurred that way, and it occurred in the presence of 601 our counsel and was so reported to me after it occurred.

Q. Up to that time you had heard no suggestion from Mr.
Vickersham of the disposal of the Central Pacific Railroad by the outhern Pacific Company?

A. None whatever. The decree was rendered early in December, nd the first time that either I or the Southern Pacific protective ommittee learned of this was about the 10th or 11th of January. I m certain I am not out more than one or two days, because of ourse when we heard of that we hurried to Washington to make our bjections and to protest, and I could not do that until the 13th of anuary, because I had not been appointed to my present position at at time.

Q. Did Mr. Wickersham inform you that, in his opinion, the hold-ng of the Central Pacific by the Southern Pacific was contrary to he Sherman Act?

A. As nearly as I remember his exact language, it was that he had oncluded that we could not hold it, and that if we did not trade it f to the Union Pacific, he would immediately institute suit and ake us do it.

Q. He said he had concluded that the Southern Pacific Company ould not hold the Central Pacific Railroad?

A. That was the thought conveyed—the idea conveyed.

602 Q. And the context indicated that what he meant was that he had concluded that it was contrary to the Sherman Act?

A. Naturally; because he said he would immediately enter suit to ake us do it, if we did not do it in negotiation with the Union Pa-ific.

Q. As the matter appeared to you, as the head of the committee of he Southern Pacific Company to negotiate on this subject, it seemed o you that if the Southern Pacific Company was to dispose of the entral Pacific Railroad, the most promising opportunity, in the nterest of the Southern Pacific Company, was to dispose of it to the Jnion Pacific Railroad Company?

A. Because Mr. Wickersham said that he would make it the mo opportune occasion to get rid of it. He admitted the justness of o protest, and said that he would offset it, as far as he could, by coerci the Union Pacific to grant the most favorable terms.

Q. That is, he indicated to you that he would endeavor not to ha the performance of his duty to cause this unmerger if it was co trary to the Sherman Act, to operate in such a way as to put you an unfair trading position with the Union Pacific Railroad Co
pany?

1603 A. Well, at that time it was not his duty; it was simp his opinion. It had not been tried out by the courts; it ha never been passed on by the courts, and what he said was substa tially this: "Under threat to put you into court immediately a compel you to sell the stock of this company, you must acquiesc my position that you part with it."

I used the term "duress" when I spoke to him. I said, "We a in a position of duress. We are not free agents here," and he s at once, "I appreciate that, and as far as possible I will help in pu ting the Union Pacific under duress," which he had the power to d because he had the right to say how they should dispose of th $126,000,000 of Southern Pacific stock.

Q. In answering you have chosen to state what his duty was you conceived it rather than as he may have conceived it. What say to you is that what you have characterized as duress is his i forming you in advance that he had reached the conclusion that h ought to bring proceedings to compel the Southern Pacific Compa to dispose of the Central Pacific Railroad Company and give y the opportunity before he instituted those proceedings to mak disposal of it without litigation. That is it, is it not?

1604 A. Yes. I used the term "duress" in speaking to him, a he accepted the correctness of the language by using it o himself at once, saying "I appreciate that I put you in a positi of duress, but I shall put the other people in the same position order to make them give you favorable terms."

Q. In selecting that language, which you did in your direct e amination, to convey your idea, do you think that you were fa fair to a Government official who is not a party to this suit, is longer in office, and who perhaps was actuated by proper moti and thought that he was doing his duty?

A. So was I.

Q. You think you were entirely fair to him in the assertions y made yesterday, do you?

A. I have already said to you that perhaps I should not have u the word "robbery". I think it never does any particular good display any temper or heat. It slipped out rather inadverte with no disrespect to Mr. Wickersham, whom I know quite well and esteem highly; but when you spoke of Mr. Wickersham's idea of his sworn duty I had my ideas of my—not sworn duty, but my 1605 duty, which is just as binding on me as if it had been sworn, and it is my opinion against Mr. Wickersham's opinion, and there is no disrespect whatever, as far as I can see, after what I have said about Mr. Wickersham in what I have testified to here.

Q. To avoid any misunderstanding, it was not your intention, in any language that you used, to indicate that Mr. Wickersham's conduct was in any degree improper?

A. Well, now, you are getting down to cut things pretty fine. If you should ask me whether it is proper for a high Government official to use his power and to simply use his opinion that has not been passed on by a court to coerce a party who is not engaged in a litigation to do something that he is unwilling to do—I do not want to use any offensive term, but I do not think he did just what he should have done; and I do not know of anything in his oath of office that would require him to do that. I appreciate thoroughly that his oath of office might require him to enter a suit, but I do not admit that his oath of office justified him in taking a position to compel a corporation to cut itself in two, to separate a part of its property, and perhaps the most important part, that was the parent stem of the whole company, simply to comply with an idea or an opinion 1606 of his.

Q. Did you deem it more proper that he should proceed to file the suit without giving you warning and an opportunity to dispose of the property without litigation?

A. That was his option. He used the means that he thought would most surely bring about the end that he was seeking; and it has been shown that his selection of his weapons was done with judgment. He succeeded.

Q. Again I will ask you whether, in your judgment, it would have been more seemly if he should have filed the suit without first informing you and giving the Southern Pacific Company an opportunity to part with the stock without litigation?

Mr. HERRIN: We object to the continuation of this discussion of the witness's opinion as to the duties of the Attorney General. It does not seem to be elucidating any question in the case, and it is immaterial.

Mr. MCCLENNEN. It might have been unnecessary to go into it if the witness had not voluntarily projected into the case his criticism of the Government officials, which seems to me, although not representing Mr. Wickersham, to require, as a mere matter of com-1607 mon decency, the spreading upon the record of as accurate a statement as may be of Mr. Wickersham's position.

Mr. HERRIN. The ground seems to be covered entirely.

The WITNESS. I have tried to explain to you in half a dozen dif ferent ways that I meant no particular disrespect to Mr. Wickersham but had, perhaps, used a little too forcible language in expressing my opinion as to what had been done.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. But when I asked you if you intended it as a criticism of the propriety of Mr. Wickersham's conduct I understood you not to be willing to go so far as to say that you did not.

A. Did not what?

Q. Did not intend it as a criticism of the propriety of Mr. Wicker sham's conduct.

A. Well, there comes in a quibble on language, as to just what you mean by "propriety" and just what I have in my mind as the meaning of "propriety".

I said to Mr. Wickersham's face, and I have repeated it here on the stand half a dozen times, that I thought his position in forcing 1608 us into a position of duress was very harsh and unjust, and I do not think he could be offended by reading that in the record, when I had said it to his face. I said it without the slightest disrespect. He accepted it just in the way in which I said it. He showed no offense at it; and I have said very little more here, except as I say, the inadvertent use of a word that might be considered offensive, which I have told you two or three times I would retract.

Q. Who were the committee of the Union Pacific Railroad that negotiated with you in the matter of this contract of February 1913?

A. Mr. Lovett, chairman, and Mr. Vanderlip, and Mortimer Schiff.

Q. Did the two committees meet the Attorney General jointly at any time?

A. Twice, I think, they met him jointly.

Q. Did the Attorney General, in his discussion of the terms of the contract of February, 1913, go with you into any question other than whether the contract was of such a nature as to accomplish the unmerging of the combination between the Central and the Southern?

A. I do not remember anything much that he said, except 1609 this: that prior to the making of this agreement of February 1913, there had been numberless meetings—I might almost say that these committees were constantly together; we would meet in the morning and adjourn for luncheon, and meet after luncheon and work until five or six o'clock, and we would meet at a club some where at perhaps eight or nine o'clock at night and work anywhere up to eleven o'clock or one o'clock; and in between times the Union Pacific people would visit the Attorney General. We visited him alone several times. The Southern Pacific protective committee, which was entirely separate from ours and had nothing to do with the directory but represented a certain proportion of stock, had been to Washington.

As a result, this agreement was drawn up, and my recollection is that we took it down there substantially as it is printed in this book; it was submitted to him and he looked over such parts as he wanted to see, and expressed himself as satisfied.

Q. And this last was all the part which you took in the negotiation of that agreement or its terms?

A. No. Prior to that I told you of a visit where I had pro-1610 tested against the coercion of the Southern Pacific and putting us in a position of duress. That was at one of the meetings where we went alone.

Q. This prior protest of yours had reference to the general question of whether you should be informed that if you did not dispose voluntarily of that stock, a suit would be brought for the unmerger? Is that it?

A. I have said a number of times, or tried to say, what happened at his, what I might call "the protest meeting". I went down there immediately after my appointment as chairman, with our subcommittee. The stockholders' protective committee had been down to protest against this action as to Central Pacific stock; and it was at the meeting where I went with our Southern Pacific subcommittee that this discussion about duress took place. Then, after that, my recollection is that when he expressed his determination to bring his suit unless we parted with the Central Pacific stock, we went down there once with the Union Pacific committee, and he went over the map, pointing out this line to Portland, saying that he thought that line should be conceded to the Southern Pacific, or that they should be allowed to retain it and——

Q. You mean from Tehama?

1611 A. From Tehama to the State line. And I think the question of joint terminals was taken up, to which he offered no objection. In other words, he at that meeting indicated the extent to which he would mitigate the consequences to the Southern Pacific Company, or the extent to which he would exercise duress on the Union Pacific. After that we negotiated this contract, and the next joint conference we had with him was to submit this and to receive his approval of it.

Q. He took no part in the question of the amount that the Union Pacific Company should pay for the stock?

A. I think not; because that had been tentatively agreed to as soon as we learned of his determination to have the stock sold, or to compel it in a suit.

Q. He took no particular part in the question of whether or not the Union Pacific should be given the use of the Benicia cut-off?

A. No; that was an afterthought. I do not think the Union Pacific themselves, in the beginning, appreciated the importance of it; but when they did, they were very strenuous in insisting that they should get it.

Q. He took no part in the question of the joint use of terminals, the consideration of those provisions, did he?

1612 A. I just told you that at this conference we did discuss on a map showing the different properties, the position we would be in if we did not get the Tehama State line road, and he said then that the Southern Pacific should be allowed to hold that. I think at the same meeting the question of joint terminals was considered, and to that he offered no objection. I think we also stated that there might be other parts of the composite system which either one side or the other might want to retain rights on, or obtain rights on, from the others. Possibly the Dumbarton line was considered. I think it was, because we wanted rights on that, and the Union Pacific people demurred, at first, to letting us have them.

Q. The suggestion as to the joint use of terminals, the use by the Southern Pacific of the Central Pacific's line from Tehama to the Oregon State line, the use by the Union Pacific of the Benicia cut-off and the use to which you have referred of the Dumbarton cut-off and so forth, were matters which were suggested to him by one of the other of the committees, to ascertain whether he would consent to a contract for a disposal which included those provisions?

A. I do not know what the other committee suggested to him. I have tried to tell you as closely as I could what 1613 happened at the meetings that we had with him with our sub-committee. As to what happened at the meetings with the Union Pacific committee—the Union Pacific committee saw him on a number of occasions, and I do not know what suggestions they made.

Q. As to these various provisions to which I have referred, the suggestions did not come from him, but, on the contrary, they were submitted to him to see whether he would approve of them or consent to them; is not that true?

A. I do not know.

Q. So far as your committee is concerned, that was the course which those matters took, was it not?

A. I think I have testified to that two or three times, but I will testify to it again, as to our committee. I can not, however, tell what the Union Pacific committee suggested to him, or what they said at their sole meetings with him.

Q. I have not asked you that; I have asked you whether, with respect to those various terms, the Attorney General suggested those terms to your committee, or whether, so far as the negotiations of your committee with the Attorney General were concerned, they were submitted to him by the committee to see whether he would sanction a dissolution which included those terms. Is it not the latter?

A. My recollection of it is that when our subcommittee went there to protest that we pointed out to him on the map, very much as I have pointed out here on the map, what would result from a sale of the Central Pacific stock; and we pointed out the loss of the terminals, the loss of the Tehama State line road, the Dumbarton Point road, and everything else that we could think of. It was after that that we got his answer that he appreciated the position in which he had put us, and that he would also exercise pressure on the other side to make them give fair terms. No doubt, as a consequence of that visit to him by us, when we went there jointly he said to them what he did say, that he would exact the retention of the Tehama State line road by the Southern Pacific, and that the Southern Pacific be a party to the use of the Dumbarton cut-off and the joint use of the terminals.

Q. The failure of the contract to receive the approval of the California State Railway Commission was due to the fact that that commission would not approve of the Southern Pacific Company giving to the Union Pacific Company rights over the Benicia cut-off while excluding other railroads from the use of that cut-off?

Mr. BLAIR. We object to that question on the ground that the decision of the Railroad Commission of California is in writing and is the best evidence of the grounds upon which they refused their approval of the contract in question.

Mr. HERRIN. It is entirely incompetent to ask the witness what ground they acted on when the grounds upon which they acted are made of record.

The WITNESS. Shall I answer?

Mr. BLAIR. Yes; subject to our objection.

(By request of the witness the reporter repeated the question as follows:)

"Q. The failure of the contract to receive the approval of the California State Railway Commission was due to the fact that that commission would not approve of the Southern Pacific Company giving to the Union Pacific Company rights over the Benicia cut-off while excluding other railroads from the use of that cut-off?"

The WITNESS. Those were two of the reasons; but the reasons w very voluminous, as I remember. It is a pamphlet of probably fift or twenty pages.

1616 By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. Did you know of the efforts made on behalf of Southern Pacific Company to secure the approval of that commissi

A. I suppose that they did. I do not know exactly what eff they used, but this agreement was sent out here to counsel, an think counsel appeared before the commission, and they can prob say about that better than I can as to just what was done; bu know that the matter was presented to the commission and th agreement asked, and it was refused.

Q. Do you know of statements made to the commission on beh of the Southern Pacific Company to the effect that this dissolu
and this arrangement would be beneficial to the people of Califor

Mr. BLAIR. Counsel objects to that on the ground, first, that i incompetent and irrelevant to any issue in this case; second, on ground that the entire testimony before the commission was take writing, and that the testimony is the best evidence; and on the ther ground that the witness was not present at the time and ha personal knowledge.

1617 (By request of the witness the reporter repeated the pen question, as follows:)

"Q. Do you know of statements made to the commission on be of the Southern Pacific Company to the effect that this dissolu
and this arrangement would be beneficial to the people of Califor

The WITNESS. I had so many things to keep me busy at that that I did not read the opinion or the testimony before the com sion, and I simply got my information at the time from counsel, would tell me what had been done.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. Did you, as the chief executive officer of the Southern P Company, know that it was being represented to the California road Commission that this dissolution would be beneficial to people of California?

A. I did not. I did not know what counsel used in argument it was not necessary that I should know.

Q. Did you know that it was represented to that commission it would tend to increase the competition if this dissolution place?

A. I did not.

Q. On learning of the intention of the Attorney Ge

1618 to institute proceedings for the dissolution of the holdi

the Central Pacific by the Southern Pacific, you took counsel on the question, did you not?

A. Certainly.

Q. And received the opinion of Mr. John G. Johnson, of Philadelphia?

A. We did.

Q. And were advised by Mr. Johnson that it was probable that such proceedings by the Attorney General would be successful?

Mr. BLAIR. Counsel objects to this as obviously incompetent and improper testimony, to seek to obtain, as evidence, the advice of counsel given to his client.

The WITNESS. Am I to answer?

Mr. BLAIR. Yes; we have nothing to conceal.

(The question was repeated by the reporter as follows:)

"Q. And were advised by Mr. Johnson that it was probable that such proceedings by the Attorney General would be successful?"

The WITNESS. No; it is untrue.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. Were you informed that the California Railroad Com-
619 mission was advised that Mr. Johnson had given such advice?

A. I do not know.

Q. You do not know whether you were informed of that or not?

A. I do not know. I was not present when counsel appeared before the California commission, and I do not know what they said. I have not read the testimony; I have not read it up to the present time, because it was not necessary that I should.

Q. Did you personally have anything to do with employing Mr. Johnson for his opinion?

A. I did.

Q. And you were personally the recipient of the opinion which he gave?

A. I was.

Q. Did you communicate that opinion in any way to Mr. Herrin?

A. I did.

Q. And did you communicate it to Mr. Sproule?

A. Possibly. I do not remember. Sproule was on in New York several times, but I do not know whether he was there when we had this opinion and discussed it or not.

620 Q. Did you communicate the opinion to Mr. Herrin before the proceedings before the California Railroad Commission?

A. Mr. Herrin was in New York when Mr. Johnson gave me his opinion.

Q. Was he present when the opinion was given?

A. Mr. Johnson gave it orally, and then afterwards gave me a written opinion substantially the same as his oral one, but not identical. Mr. Herrin was present when the oral opinion was given, but I do not know whether he has ever seen the written opinion.

Q. Was that before the hearings before the California Railroad Commission?

A. I think they were.

Q. And it was before you had executed the contract with the Union Pacific Railroad Company?

A. Yes.

Q. May I call your attention to defendants' Exhibit 7? Why just east and west of Auburn, on the line between Roseville and Ogden, is it marked in blue, the legend indicating that blue is new construction since July 2, 1890?

A. Oh, those two little blue dots on the main line?

Q. Yes.

1621 A. That is double track. There are some pieces of double track built around Auburn and opened quite recently. It is marked that way for this reason: The second track was not built alongside of the first, but in order to reduce grades both east and west of Auburn the new low grade line leaves the old line and is sometimes as much as three to four miles off; therefore that is treated as a separate road. Then it comes back near Auburn and runs near the old line for a while, and then diverges again.

Q. Strictly speaking, there should be both red and blue there?

A. Well, no; perhaps the blue, more accurately, could have been put alongside the red, but the scale is so small that it would have been difficult to indicate it, and that is the reason.

Q. There is no question but what, ever since 1869, there has been a through track there?

A. Certainly, a through track; and in double tracking we used the old track on the heavy grade as the westbound track, and the new track was built for an eastbound track on a lesser grade, and sometimes, as I say, the topography of the country required the new 1622 line to be built as much as three or four miles away from the old one.

Q. The line from Roseville to Redding was opened, do you recall about 1872?

A. Roseville to Redding? I have the date here somewhere. That appears on one of these other maps. I could look it up for you, but it will take some little time. This is simply the construction and 1890. If that was opened in those days it would appear on what you have marked Exhibit 42, and I have it somewhere on these maps, but I would have to run over them to pick it out.

Q. It so appears on Exhibit 42, at page 973. When the line was lvanced from Marysville north, was it advanced with a view to e ultimate construction of a through line to Portland, or merely as feeder to the main line of the Central Pacific?

A. That is long before my connection with any part of the com-ny. In 1876 I was not in the railroad service, and I really do not ow what the impelling motive at that time was.

Q. What is the earliest date when you have any valuable knowl-ge of that part of California?

A. When I came to California in 1895, and in going over 23 these lines, I naturally acquired more or less information as to the time they were built, or about how long they had been in istence; but as to the time you question me, 1876, that was two ars before I entered the railroad service, which was in 1878.

Q. When you came here in 1895, what was the character of the untry and the extent of the population between Marysville and the lifornia north line?

A. I really did not bother myself much about the population in ere. The road at that time was built through to Portland, and etty much the same towns were in existence at that time as are in istence now. I suppose some few towns have been laid out since, t there is no very material change. There has been, of course, a eatly increased population and settlement in the twenty years that ve elapsed.

Q. What was the local traffic from that north line of California own to Marysville? Did it amount to much, or didn't it?

A. Yes; the local traffic on that line, or, rather, the products of that country, were grain, wine, fruit, and some hay.

24 Q. Was the country, so far as you could judge from what you saw in 1895, from your railroad knowledge, such as to war-nt a feeder for the Central Pacific through that country?

A. It was; it was a country of almost unparalleled richness. It is e upper Sacramento Valley, one of the finest tracts of land in the orld.

Q. Is it true that with the exception of that line, no line of rail-ad was built or acquired between 1872 and 1901 for the Central acific Railroad Company?

A. I will have to refer back to these maps 1 to 6 to understand at. We have got limits on these maps every five years, and on is small map "Construction since 1890"; but your limits come two ars after the first map, the lower limit, and your upper limit comes ne year after this map, Exhibit 7, was made; so that without sitting own and carefully comparing maps of those different periods I n not answer that question. But Exhibit No. 42 will show that; shows the date of the building of all the Central Pacific branches, does it not? If you will let me look at Exhibit 42, perhaps that shows it—it ought to.

I find that the line from Redding to Delta was built in 1884 and from Delta to the Oregon line in 1887.

1625 Q. Now, my inquiry was whether, with the exception of that line, there was any line built for or acquired by the Central Pacific Railroad between 1872 and 1901.

A. My answer is yes; the line from Redding to Delta was built in 1884, and from Delta to the State line in 1887.

Q. I expected that, if you wil note, in my question. My inquiry was as to any other line.

A. You excepted the line to Redding.

Q. Well, if you so understood it. Now, the question is, With the exception of that line from Roseville to the northern boundary of California, through Marysville, Tehama, and Redding, was any line built for or acquired by the Central Pacific Railroad Company between 1872 and 1901?

A. Well, from the examination I made of Exhibit 42 in the brief time I have had I should say no.

Q. After the Union Pacific Railroad Company acquired control of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, were all the new lines that were built or acquired, which were contiguous to the Central Pacific Railroad Company, acquired by the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. Not immediately.

Q. Which ones were not?

1626 A. Well, in 1912 the Central Pacific acquired lines that were built in the names of other corporations; that is, the two ends of the line, between Eugene and Weed, the Fernley and Lassen line, the Chico to Sterling City line, the Nevada and California line, and the Sacramento Southern.

Q. Those lines had all been built in the names of separate corporations?

A. Yes.

Q. They were neither the Central Pacific nor the Southern Pacific Railroad Company's?

A. No; independent.

Q. If the Southern Pacific were required to give up the control of the Central Pacific Railroad, would there be any of the lines of railroad owned by the Central Pacific Railway Company which would be isolated from the main lines of that company?

A. If by "giving up control" you mean if they were ordered to sell the stock of the Central Pacific Railway, yes; a part of what is known as the Oregon Eastern, from Eugene southward, would be cut off from the Central Pacific lines.

Q. That is, Eugene to Oak Ridge?

A. Yes.

1627 Q. Would there be any other?

A. I don't think so.

Q. The line from Weed to Kirk and the line from Eugene to Oak Ridge were constructed under a plan eventually to connect Oak Ridge with Kirk?

A. Yes.

Q. So as to make a through line from Weed to Eugene that way?

A. It was made to improve the through line from San Francisco to Portland by substituting for the existing line between Eugene and Weed a new line with easier grades and less curvature.

Q. The distance by the intended route from Kirk to Oak Ridge is about how far?

A. You mean the gap between Kirk and Oak Ridge?

Q. Yes; but measured not as the crow flies, but as a railroad goes.

A. You mean the uncompleted gap?

Q. The uncompleted gap.

A. I think, in round numbers, 100 miles; perhaps it is 101 or something like that. It is about 100 miles.

1628 Q. Is that through a country giving promise of contributing considerable freight?

A. From Kirk to Oak Ridge, no. The only freight that is promised is some stock and a good deal of lumber; it is a very heavily timbered country.

Q. The value of that connection would be chiefly to complete the through line?

A. Yes. The principal local traffic on that line is between Weed and the Klamath Lakes country. That Klamath Lakes country is a very rich country and it is developing very rapidly.

Q. What is the character of the country from Kirk to Oak Ridge with reference to ease of construction?

A. From Kirk northward to Odell it is not very difficult and not very expensive, but from Odell to Oak Ridge it is excessively expensive. That is the climb over the mountains.

Q. Have estimates been made of the expense of the completion of that line?

A. Yes.

Q. And what is the probable expense of completing from Kirk through to Oak Ridge?

A. About twelve millions.

1629 Q. Was there any intention of connecting this road which runs northwesterly to Westwood Junction with any other line to the north, west, or east?

A. You mean to build north, west, or east from Westwo Junction?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes; I testified yesterday that that line from Fernley up to We wood Junction is on the location and forms part of a projected l on the east side of the Sierra Nevada Range, its northern termi being about the junction with No. 14, somewhere near Klamath Fa

Q. About what distance?

A. Klamath Falls is right near the circle with 14 in it, just no of the Oregon State line.

Q. A matter of about 150 miles?

A. I do not remember, but the distance to Klamath Falls is a li greater than from Westwood Junction to Fernley. The construc part is 130 miles, and I suppose that the other part would be 150 160, the uncompleted part.

Q. Has that been surveyed and estimated?

A. Yes.

Q. What is the probable expense of making that c

1630 nection?

A. That I do not remember. It is not an active prob with us, and I don't remember.

Q. My attention has just been called to the scale on this m
Is the distance from Kirk to Oak Ridge as high as you estimate it

A. Yes. Do not forget that between Kirk and Oak Ridge you notice a lot of little zigzags. They are just the development o the mountains, and increase the distance much greater than the tance you would measure by the eye between those points.

Q. What is the extent now in miles, approximately, of the nar gauge part of the line from Hazen, Nevada, to Mojave?

A. There are about 137 miles still narrow gauge on the line fr
Hazen to Mojave.

Q. Is the track of a character adapted to relaying wide g there—rails, I mean?

A. No; the ties are too short, the rails are too light, and the cu are too sharp.

Q. Have any estimates been made of the expense of making standard gauge?

1631 A. Yes.

Q. And approximately what is that?

A. I can not remember. We have hundreds of projects and veys that we have made and filed away, and I can not remembe but the cost is very great, and, with the present traffic, it would pay, so it has simply been laid aside.

In order that you may understand where the heavy expense c in, proceeding from Owens, which is the southern end of the na gauge part, and running northerly to somewhere near the Nevada State line, the alignment is reasonably good, the grades quite fair, and the line could be relaid as a broad-gauge track by putting in new ties and heavier rails and ballasting; but from the Nevada State line over to Tonopah Junction there is a summit there higher even than the Central Pacific's summit. It is the highest point on the Southern Pacific lines; it is seven thousand and some two or three hundred feet. The grades are excessively steep. They can be negotiated by very light narrow-gauge trains, but the curves are so sharp that it would be utterly impracticable for a broad gauge, and the entire line would have to be rebuilt at a very heavy cost.

Q. If the Southern Pacific Company were to be deprived 1632 of the Central Pacific Railroad, it would isolate all its Oregon lines from the balance of the system, would it not?

A. It would.

Q. It would also isolate certain branch lines between Sacramento and Goshen, would it not?

A. It would.

Q. Would it isolate any others?

A. It would not actually isolate any others by cutting connections, but the means of getting from one part of the system to the other, with such traffic as we have nowadays, would be almost equivalent to isolation. In other words, the extra distances and the extra expense imposed by the inability to use parts of the Central Pacific would be so great that the Southern Pacific would have to build other lines.

I pointed out yesterday, to get its San Joaquin Valley business into San Jose, if deprived of the Central Pacific lines, would require it to send that business northward to Port Costa, then into Oakland, and then south by the South Pacific coast road into San Jose, an additional distance over the Central Pacific line via Niles of sixty-three miles.

Then, again, in sending its business from Tehama southward, 1633 if it were deprived of the right to use the tracks from Davis into Sacramento and thence down through Stockton and Lathrop to the San Joaquin Valley, it would have to go the round-about way via Benicia, crossing the straits there, then to Port Costa, then down to Tracy and the west-side line. It could not reach the east-side line of the San Joaquin Valley at all, where all the large towns are.

Q. About what is the distance from Alcalde to the coast line of the Southern Pacific?

A. Well, I can not give you that offhand. This map does not show, but there is a range of mountains in between, which is the reason it has never been built. It means heavy grade and expensive construction, and it is over a God-forsaken country, where there is no traffic at all; pretty much a desert.

Q. A country that God has forsaken permanently, so that it is not developable at all?

A. Well, you can not tell what He means to do hereafter. A good deal of that desert country, of course, has been made extremely valuable and profitable by the discovery of oil, but that country has been pretty thoroughly explored and they have found nothing there at all.

Q. What is the condition of the country from Tres Pinos 1634 to Alcalde?

A. Well, that was the original projected line of the Southern Pacific as against the coast line, but they never built from Tres Pinos to Alcalde because there are mountains and grades in there, and it is a very bad country, a very unproductive country.

Q. The lines of the Atchison north of Bakersfield are isolated from the rest of their system by about seventy miles, are they not?

A. Yes; that seventy miles of our track they use between Bakersfield and Mojave under a trackage agreement.

Q. That is, they operate their own trains over your track?

A. Yes.

Q. The rational arrangement, if the Central Pacific and the Southern Pacific were separated, would be to make some similar trackage agreement from Tehama to the north boundary of California?

A. Well, it might.

Q. The natural course between those points that you have mentioned shortly ago in your testimony; that is, between the San Joaquin Valley and San Jose, is what?

1635 A. If the separation were made actually all kinds of shifts would be made by both companies, no doubt, to reduce in every possible way the hardships of separation, but no trackage arrangements and no kinds of joint arrangements could possibly replace, in efficiency and in economy, the management or arrangements that have prevailed ever since the beginning of these roads, being built as one and the same concern. That is, you could not tear them apart without causing them a great deal of unnecessary additional expense, and without causing a great deal of additional friction in the interchange of business.

Q. The natural arrangements as to the use of terminals at the junction points would provide for their joint use by the two railroads, would they not?

A. But the commission has declined to allow that.

Q. Not with respect to the Central Pacific and the Southern Pacific yet, I think.

A. Yes; their language was substantially that we could not give trackage arrangements to one line, or to give joint use of terminals without throwing them open to all others.

Q. That is, you mean the California commission?

A. Yes, and they have jurisdiction, as I understand.

1636 Q. Well, are there any terminals at the junctions between the Southern Pacific and the Central Pacific that are physically accessible to any other railroad?

A. Why, substantially all of them would be.

Q. For instance, what other railroad touches the junction point at Fresno?

A. The Atchison.

Q. Does it now make joint use of the terminal?

A. No.

Q. It has a separate terminal of its own?

A. It has, the Atchison; and then there are some local electric roads recently built there.

Q. Is the situation at Fresno such that the Atchison would have occasion to use more terminal facilities than it has?

A. I expect the Atchison would be simply delighted to have our terminals thrown open to them.

Q. How about Sacramento?

A. For Sacramento there is the Western Pacific that would have access to them. Then there are two electric lines that run in there, and the Atchison is projecting a line in there.

1637 Q. Where is the Atchison projecting that line from?

A. From Stockton.

Q. Is the Atchison doing much transcontinental freight business with Sacramento at present?

A. I don't know. I do not suppose they are doing as much as they would like, else they would not want to build in there.

Q. You do not know whether they get any over your rails or not from Sacramento—transcontinental business?

A. I can not tell you. They can if they want to. We have arrangements with them at all of our points by which they can get freight.

Q. What are the passenger terminals for the Atchison in San Francisco?

A. The Atchison have a room in the State Ferry Building on the water front. They bring their passengers from Port Richmond by ferry and deliver them in the State building.

Q. That terminal is owned by the State?

A. By the State of California.

Q. And is the entire terminal where the Southern Pacific and the Central Pacific passengers come into San Francisco also owned by the State?

1638 A. Yes; that entire building. In that building there is the Santa Fe, the Northwestern Pacific, the Western Pacific, and the Southern Pacific lines. All of them are in that building. T space is divided up amongst them, but the building is owned by State, and its policing and jurisdiction are under the State. T railroads simply pay a rental for the right to land there and to l their passengers there. The Southern Pacific, however, for its p sengers from the south, from its coast line, and for the Central Pac line over the hills at Niles and thence over the Dumbarton Brid has a passenger terminal of its own in the city of San Francisco

Third and Townsend Streets that is owned by the Southern Pacific

Q. Mr. Blair was going to ask you later what those terminals San Francisco amount to in money. Has that information been tained yet?

A. You mean what we paid for them?

Q. No——

Mr. BLAIR. You remember when your examination left off yes day you were to secure the value of the terminal facilities in the n of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company in San Francisco,
Mr. McClennen asked you whether you have the figures.

1639 The WITNESS. Yes. Of course that is a little different qu tion from this. He asked about passenger facilities alone.

Mr. BLAIR. Yes.

The WITNESS. This is passenger and freight. That is, all terminal real estate, property, and improvements owned by Southern Pacific Company in the city of San Francisco amount $64,727,000.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. Is that a valuation made up under the same conditions that have described with reference to your other terminal valuations?

A. Yes; and furnished by our valuation engineer; the same who furnished the values I gave yesterday.

Q. How does the Western Pacific deliver its freight in San Fr cisco.

A. It brings it over by a barge, puts the cars on a barge and bri them over to this side.

Q. And does it have yardage for them in San Francisco?

A. Yes; they bought considerable terminal property. To w extent they have improved it I don't know. I have n 1640 been down there, but I know they have some kind of fre terminal there.

Q. Now, the same question with reference to the Atchison.

A. The Atchison bring their cars over the same way—by barg and they have made pretty considerable expenditures in San Fr cisco. They have quite a large yard on the water front—about foot of Third and Fourth Streets.

Q. Do any of the railroads have industrial tracks in San Francisco—in and about San Francisco?

A. Yes. I know we have got a lot. The Atchison has got some. I do not know what the Western Pacific has. The State also owns a few.

Q. Does the Atchison deliver over your industrial tracks to some extent in San Francisco?

A. My recollection is that there is an arrangement by which they have access to them everywhere. We have some joint tracks with them. In other words, in territory where our improvements encroached on what they thought were their rights and where they intended to build and where they encroached on what we thought was our territory we have built joint spurs, each road contributing and each road using.

1641 Q. Are there any other railroads coming in that make any use of those tracks?

A. On all of the tracks built after a certain date, under the new charter of San Francisco, the tracks can be used. As to the tracks built before that, if we grant the use to one road under this commission's order, we would have to grant it to all.

Q. There is no other railroad coming in at the present time, is there, except those that we have mentioned—the Southern, the Central, the Atchison, and the Western?

A. No; I do not think I have heard of any more projected in.

Q. You have referred to the misfortunes of the Western Pacific Railway, and in connection with what might happen if there was a dissolution between the Central and the Southern. You do not mean, do you, to convey the idea that the Central Pacific Railroad would be left, for operating purposes, in any such condition as the Western Pacific always has been?

A. What I meant to convey was this: If this lopping off of particular branches and tangential offshoots, as they have been called, was successful in the case of the Central Pacific and Southern Pacific, I do not know just where it would stop; and if the 1642 Government chose to institute proceedings against other lines in the country, they would have a whole lot of lean through lines, a lot of independent tangential offshoots.

Q. You were aware of the fact that the Central Pacific Railroad was constructed with Government assistance to become part of a through line of railroad across the country, were you not?

A. Yes; I know the Government lent it its credit, and they had to pay woefully for it. Still, what you say is a fact. However the assistance was given and however onerous the terms, it was built to form a through line with the Union Pacific.

Q. The Southern Pacific Railroad also availed itself of Gover ment subsidies under the Atlantic & Pacific Railroad act and th
Texas & Pacific Railroad act, did it not?

A. I do not know. The Southern Pacific has a considerable amou of land to which it has laid claim, and much of which, after giving i the Government is trying to take away.

Q. Mr. Kruttschnitt, you feel that the Government of the Unite States is misbehaving a good deal, do you not?

1643 Mr. BLAIR. I object to that as calling upon the witness express opinions upon matters that have absolutely nothi whatever to do with this suit, and also as inviting the witness criticize and be frank, and afterwards counsel finds fault with hi for criticizing the Government and charges him with lese majeste.

Mr. MCCLENNEN. I do not know that I know fully what that la thing is as applied to this case, but the question was invited by th volunteering of the criticism by the witness as to the effort of th Government to take away land from the Southern Pacific.

The WITNESS. That was merely the mentioning of a fact. Th was not an opinion; that was simply a fact.

(By request of counsel for the petitioner, the reporter repeated th pending question.)

The WITNESS. I do not know. I am not much of a lawyer and I do not want to commit contempt of court.

Mr. BLAIR. I think you can properly decline to answer that que tion, if you want to.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. The projection of the Southern Pacific Railroad southwar from San Francisco was to meet, first, with the Atlantic 1644 Pacific line, and, second, to meet with the Texas & Pacific lin was it not?

Mr. BLAIR. Counsel for defendants objects on the general groun that these matters occurred in 1872 and the witness has stated that h went into the railroad business in 1878, and that such answers as h gives would be based on information open to anybody.

Mr. MCCLENNEN. The questions are put to ascertain, if possible from what source the witness derived the idea that the Southern Pacific Railroad was a tangential offshoot and to see whether in reaching that idea he had knowledge of the early development of th railroad.

(By request of counsel for petitioner, the reporter repeated the pending question, as follows:)

"Q. The projection of the Southern Pacific Railroad southward from San Francisco was to meet, first, with the Atlantic & Pacific line, and, second, to meet with the Texas & Pacific line, was it not?"

The WITNESS. I do not know what their motives for starting it were; but I would say that my characterization of the Southern Pacific line as a tangential offshoot was simply to agree with you and not differ in words and language.

1645 By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. Do you not recall that it was Mr. Blair who inoculated you with the idea of a tangential offshoot?

A. No; I used the term with respect to the Central Pacific. You disagreed with me and asked me if I did not think it was more of a trunk line. I immediately accepted your view, and said I would hereafter speak of it as a trunk line and of the Southern Pacific as a tangential offshoot.

Q. Well, if I should assert that the two lines were both trunk lines, would you then accept my real view rather than the one that you understood me to have?

A. I do not see that the language affects the matter one way or the other. I will agree to anything you want, as to that.

Q. The Southern Pacific Railroad does not bear the relationship primarily of a feeder to the Central Pacific Railroad, does it?

A. The Southern Pacific?

Q. Yes.

A. I would say from the way the lines were built that it did, because the Central Pacific built it.

Q. Does the Central Pacific Railroad bear the relation 1646 of a feeder, primarily, to the Southern Pacific Railroad?

A. Well, now, if we can agree on the exact meaning of "primarily"—perhaps I should say that I ought to understand just what you mean by "primarily" before undertaking to answer that.

Q. What I mean is to distinguish between such a line, for instance, as that from Westwood down to the Central Pacific Railroad, which apparently has no present object except to furnish traffic to the Central Pacific Railroad and take traffic for local delivery from the Central Pacific Railroad, and a railroad the chief object of which is to do a long-haul business, which it receives locally and perhaps delivers locally or perhaps delivers to another railroad to deliver locally. Do I make my distinction clear to you?

A. I think so.

Q. Having that distinction in mind, you would not characterize the Southern Pacific Railroad as primarily a feeder to the Central Pacific Railroad, would you?

A. Knowing as I do the way the system grew up, I think I should primarily say that. Here was a main line built from Sacramento, 1647 San Jose, and Oakland to Ogden, and almost coincident with its opening we find tentacles being thrown out north and south, part of them in the name of the Central Pacific and part i the name of the Southern Pacific Railroad. Those were primari feeders to that line. What else could they be? The freight was brought on to that line, feeding it, and thence went east.

Q. It was with that sort of a question in mind that I asked y some time ago whether you did not know that those lines were pr jected southerly not primarily as feeders to the Central Pacific b as part of a system which it was intended should run to the easte part of the country.

A. Of course that antedates my coming to California; but understand, and the records show it, that a great many of the Sou ern Pacific lines around San Francisco Bay were built by independe parties and were bought by the Southern Pacific, certainly not run and connect with the Atlantic & Pacific and Texas & Paci but for the purpose of collecting freight as feeders. Assuming th what you say is true, that they were intended to go down and m these lines, I do not know at what date that policy was formulat in the minds of the owners.

Q. From the time the Southern Pacific Railroad started 1648 from Goshen there was not a year of pause before the ti when there was a through line to New Orleans, was there?

A. I do not think so.

Q. Were you aware of the fact that the building of the first secti south from Goshen—twenty miles or so—was done for the speci purpose of securing the Government subsidy?

A. No.

Q. Which required a certain amount of building per year?

A. No; I do not know that.

Q. In respect to transcontinental business, has the Central Paci Railroad Company ever, through its officials, competed against t
Southern Pacific Railroad Company, in practice?

A. It could not. They were one and the same thing. The offic of the Central Pacific were the officers of the Southern Paci Money from the same pockets built both.

Q. Do you bear in mind in making this last answer your earli answer that you were ignorant of those matters which were pri to 1878?

A. I do not mean to have my answer considered as meaning th
I do not know anything that occurred prior to 1878. I do know, a every man in the Southern Pacific Company knows, that the 1649 two roads were one and the same thing, only for the co venience of the owners there were different corporate nam used. That was impressed on me when I came here in 1895, and t impression has grown and strengthened over since.

Mr. McCLENNEN. The last part of the answer, beginning "I know, and every man in the Southern Pacific Company knows", and so forth, petitioner moves to strike out, as not responsive, hearsay, and an expression of opinion volunteered by the witness.

By Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. The result of the holding of a single control over the Central Pacific Railroad and the Southern Pacific Railroad at the same time has been absolutely to suppress and prevent any competition between those companies, has it not?

A. I say there is an absolute contradiction in that language. I can not conceive how one part of a company can compete with the other.

Q. So that the result which I have just stated has followed, has it not?

A. If your question is whether one part of the Southern Pacific property or system competed with the other, I would say no.

1650 Q. That it has not?

A. That it has not.

Q. If the two railroads were under separate control, they would, in the nature of things, with their connections, compete strongly on transcontinental business, would they not?

A. If the Central Pacific Railroad and the Southern Pacific Railroad were under separate control, with their connections, they would form competitive lines, certainly.

Q. They would compete strongly?

A. Certainly; just as they are doing now. That is exactly the case now. The Central Pacific and its connections is competing strongly with the Southern Pacific Railroad and its connections; but the Central Pacific Railroad by itself can not compete with the Southern Pacific Railroad by itself, because they are one and the same thing.

Q. You mean that the connections are competing, but that the Central Pacific and the Southern Pacific are not competing?

A. No; I mean that that part of the Southern Pacific known as the Central Pacific, in connection with lines east thereof, is com-1651 petitive with that part of the Southern Pacific known as the S. P. R. R. and its connections east thereof.

Q. You are familiar with the use of the term "competitive" or "competing" as signifying the effort to obtain business as against another, are you not?

A. I suppose that is a fair definition of it; yes.

Q. As between the Central Pacific and the Southern Pacific, there is at present no such effort with respect to transcontinental business put forth by either one of those companies, is there?

A. I have just said that there is the most active competition between the Ogden line, of which the Central Pacific is a part, and the Sunset line, of which the Southern Pacific Railroad is a part.

Q. I understood you to say that. Now, will you not attend to my question, which I think is simple, and please answer it. I will ask to have the question read.

(The question was repeated by the reporter as follows:)

"Q. As between the Central Pacific and the Southern Pacific there is at present no such effort with respect to transcontinental business put forth by either one of those companies, is there?"

1652 The WITNESS. I would say again, as between the Central Pacific in itself and the Southern Pacific Railroad in itself, it is inconceivable to my mind that there should be competition, because they are one and the same concern.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. You really mean that you do assent to my question, do you not?

A. I can not answer it any differently. I should like to meet your views, but I am afraid it might be costly to me just to accept your language. I want to use such language as will express exactly what I believe about it.

Q. Let me start again and see if I can not make my question a little more free from any possibility of doubt. The Central Pacific Railroad itself, or its officials, or those in control of its operations, does not to-day try to get transcontinental business against the Southern Pacific Railroad, its officials, or those in control of its operations, does it?

A. The Central Pacific Railroad does not exist. The Central Pacific Railway does. The officers of the Central Pacific Railway do not operate it, and make no effort to get traffic. It is nothing but an organization. The Southern Pacific Company is operating the Central Pacific Railway. There is certain freight which the Southern Pacific Company can not get to go by the Sunset Route. There is some which it can not get to go by the Central Pacific. There is some which may go either way. What would naturally go by the Southern Pacific is solicited that way; what naturally would go by the Central is solicited that way. As to what is in between, it tries to get the shipper to adopt that movement which will yield the Southern Pacific the maximum revenue.

Q. Which means that it tries, as to that indeterminate volume, to get it to go through El Paso and Galveston or New Orleans.

A. Whichever way gives it the best revenue.

Q. Well, that is the way, is it not, on all transcontinental business that gives it the best revenue?

A. Ordinarily, yes; the longest haul.

Q. In the ordinary course of things, if the Central Pacific Railroad and the Southern Pacific Railroad were manned by different sets of officials and independently controlled, each one of those railroads would be striving to get for its railroad, as against the other, 1654 all of the transcontinental business that it could, would it not?

A. Well, what does "striving" mean? What would you define that to be?

Q. I will leave you at large, and let your answer be taken in any way that you wish "striving" to be understood.

Mr. BLAIR. Counsel for defendants object, on the ground that it is hardly fair for a lawyer to put a question to a witness and then not tell the witness what his question is intended to mean.

(By request, the reporter repeated the pending question as above recorded.)

The WITNESS. I would say that in striving to get business, the two roads must use certain means to obtain the end that they are seeking. The only way they can get business is through differences in rates, in service or in solicitation. I testified on my direct examination that there can be no difference in rates at the present time because the roads do not fix them. For business such as you refer to from California east, they are fixed by the Interstate Commerce Commission; so that the roads have absolutely no control over the rates. Therefore, we may dismiss that. As to service, I have, 1655 on my direct examination, shown that the Central Pacific, under the ownership and management of the Southern Pacific, can not afford to let the condition of its property or the character of its service retrograde in the least; because if they do, the condition would become exactly the same as if the Central Pacific were independent and did the same things. The traffic would be lost to its principal competitor, which is the Atchison Company. Therefore I can not conceive of any stronger effort being made by the Central Pacific divorced, and the Central Pacific with the Southern Pacific, than is being made now.

As to solicitation, the Central Pacific route is represented in the field by seven solicitors, from seven or eight different lines that profit by the freight going that way at the present time; and I can not see how the number of solicitors would be increased if the road were divorced.

Q. Now, my dear sir, you are a man of a high degree of intelligence, and I am led by that to ask you whether you intended to answer my last question. Did you?

A. I did.

Q. Now, I will ask to have it read, and to have you answer it again and see if you can not answer it more fully and directly.

1656 (The question referred to was read by the reporter as fo lows:)

"Q. In the ordinary course of things, if the Central Pacific Rai road and the Southern Pacific Railroad were manned by different se of officials and independently controlled, each one of those railroa would be striving to get for its railroad as against the other, all of th transcontinental business that it could, would it not?"

The WITNESS. I believe that my answer fully answers your que tion, as I understand it.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. Would the plain word "yes" be an inaccurate answer to m question?

A. My dear sir—permit me to use the term that you employed—you are a lawyer and you know thoroughly well that there are hu dreds of questions that can not be intelligently answered by yes o no; and the question you put to me can not be answered in that wa

Q. You mean by that, that you do not know whether, in the ord nary course, if these two railroads were separately manned and sep rately controlled, each would be striving, through its official 1657 as against the other, to get all the transcontinental busine that it could?

A. The answer I have already made is the only intelligent answ
I can make to your question. I am sorry I can not answer it wi yes or no.

Q. Could you answer this last one that I have put?

A. It is the same question, couched in a little different language.

Q. Let me have it read again and see if, after it is read, you ca answer it any more directly.

(The question was repeated by the reporter, as follows:)

"Q. You mean by that that you do not know whether, in the ord nary course, if these two railroads were separately manned and sep rately controlled, each would be striving through its officials, against the other, to get all the transcontinental business that could?"

The WITNESS. I do not see that either a yes or no answer wou give my opinion on the matter, which, I understand, after all, is wh
I am here for. I can not answer it with a mere yes or no.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. At the present time the Southern Pacific Company are 1658 to get all of the transcontinental freight that can reasonably b induced that way to move via the Sunset Route, does it not?

A. It offers two lines to the shipper and tries to get him to use th line which will be most profitable to the Southern Pacific.

Q. And that is the Sunset Route, is it not?

A. Yes.

Q. The Atchison Railroad apparently endeavors to get the California shippers to send their transcontinental freight by its route, does it not?

A. I suppose it does.

Q. And if the Central Pacific Railroad were separately manned and controlled you would expect it to do the same, would you not?

A. Yes.

Q. You have spoken in your direct examination of the dividends received by the Southern Pacific Company from the Central Pacific. Has it received, since the institution of the present suit, twenty-six per cent on the capital stock of the Central Pacific Railway Company?

A. What you allude to is no doubt this: The regular dividend of the Central Pacific is six per cent. The surplus over its dividends naturally goes to the credit of its profit and loss account, where it belongs, of course, to the stockholders of the Central Pacific Railway Company. Those stockholders, or that stockholder, is the Southern Pacific Company. The Central Pacific Railway had in its profit and loss account somewhat over, I think, twenty-two or twenty-three per cent——

Q. Do you mean per cent there?

A. No. Thank you. I mean twenty-two or twenty-three million dollars. About a year ago, I think, a dividend of seventeen or seventeen and a half per cent was declared. In other words, the Southern Pacific Company simply put into its treasury money which belonged to it, and which, for the time being, was in the treasury of the Central Pacific Railway Company—a mere bookkeeping transaction.

Q. What do you mean by "a mere bookkeeping transaction" in that connection?

A. I mean that the Southern Pacific Company owns every share of stock of the Central Pacific Railway Company, all of the property of that company, all of its earnings; everything it has got belongs to the stockholders, or the stockholder, which is the S. P. Co. This surplus can either be left in the name of the Central Pacific Railway Company, or it can be taken by the owner, by the declaration of a dividend, which is what was done.

Q. The effect was to reduce the surplus of the Central Pacific Railway Company from $21,000,000 or $22,000,000 down to about $2,000,000, or something like that, was it not?

A. No. I think it left about $6,000,000 or $6,500,000 in the profit-and-loss account.

Q. You spoke of seventeen per cent. Was not the amount seventeen million dollars odd, on a capital stock—common stock—of about $68,000,000?

A. Yes; I think I did use those figures inadvertently. The dividend was evidently twenty per cent on the Central Pacific stock that involved the payment of $17,000,000.

Q. That was additional to the regular six per cent dividend?

A. Yes.

Q. About what was the date of this extra dividend?

A. That is of record. I do not remember. I will have it hunted up and give it to you, if you want it.

Q. I shall be obliged if you will do that. You first had to do with the upkeep and maintenance of the Central Pacific Railroad in 1895; am I right?

1661

A. Yes; when I came to California.

Q. Was the upkeep and maintenance of that railroad up to 1901 rather limited?

A. Do you mean to ask whether it was kept in bad condition?

Q. First, I will ask you was the condition of it as it existed in 1901 materially improved up to 1901?

A. Yes; materially.

Q. What were the improvements that took place during that period?

A. The improvements were simply in the maintenance of a better running surface on the track of the Central Pacific. By "surface" we mean eliminating little wavy irregularities in grade of the track and irregularities in alignment; but at all times it was carefully kept up and safely operated.

Q. Prior to 1901, was it deficient in equipment, both passenger and freight?

A. Prior to 1901?

Q. Yes.

A. No; it was fairly well equipped.

Q. Was it short of locomotives?

1662

A. I can not tell you that, because we used the locomotives and the equipment absolutely interchangeably. It was run from one line to the other, just as we do at the present time. We did not pay much attention to the assignment of locomotives or cars, either passenger or freight, to one corporation or another. We had them and put them in the name of any corporation, sometimes in the name of the Southern Pacific Company, and use them indiscriminately.

Q. Was a great deal of the mileage system laid on rails that were too light for the traffic being conducted over them, being generally from 60 to 62 pounds down?

A. Not down. Perhaps some of the branches had lighter rail than 62 pounds. As I remember it, the prevailing rail on both the Union and Central Pacific at that time was 60 to 62 pounds, with some 90 on the heavy grades.

Q. Were the properties maintained in as good and safe condition as such shortage of equipment and lightness of rail as there were permitted?

A. The properties were maintained in safe condition and safely operated. I do not recall any trouble we have ever had on the Central Pacific that would be traceable to improperly maintained track.

1663 Q. Was the condition over the whole Southern Pacific system from 1895 to 1901 substantially the same?

A. From 1895 to 1901?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes; the conditions, as I have said before, over the Central Pacific line and over the Sunset line, were substantially the same; they were both kept in very good order.

Q. Is this a correct statement:

"Prior to 1901 the Southern Pacific was deficient in equipment, both passenger and freight; were short of locomotives; a great deal of the mileage of the system was laid on rails that were too light for the traffic being conducted over them, being generally from 60 to 62 pounds down. The properties were maintained in a good and safe condition as such shortage of equipment and lightness of rail permitted."

A. That is fairly correct; yes.

Q. Well, it is perfectly correct, isn't it?

A. Yes; I would not make any exception to that. I think it is correct.

Q. You recognize that as substantially what you stated in your testimony in the Union Pacific merger case?

A. I don't remember what I testified; if it is in there 1664 I testified to it, and it is correct; and it is also in accordance with my understanding at the present time.

Q. When did you reach that understanding?

A. What; that the properties had been maintained and were short of improvements that required the expenditure of capital?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, I knew that from the time I came over here in 1895 up to the time, you might say, of the settlement of the Central Pacific's debt to the Government. We did not know at that time what was going to become of our properties, and whether we would be bankrupted by the loss of this Central Pacific line. We did not know what terms the Government was going to exact, and we were chroncally hard up for money until the settlement was reached.

Q. The Union Pacific Railroad was, in 1901, in much better condition than the Central Pacific Railroad, was it not?

Mr. BLAIR. Are you referring simply to the year 1901?

Mr. MCCLENNEN. Just read the question.

(The question was read as above recorded.)

The WITNESS. The Union Pacific had been through with its 1665 trouble with the Government for several years, and it was in a position to get money to make improvements, and those improvements were well advanced, or perhaps nearly finished in 1901.
The Central Pacific was several years after the Union Pacific in getting its debts to the Government settled up, and by about the time that had happened, and the credit of the Southern Pacific system was improved, Mr. Huntington died; but before his death substantially all of the improvements made on the Central Pacific, which amounted to a reconstruction of over 300 miles between Ogden and Reno, and the addition of a great deal of new equipment, and the building of the Lucin cut-off, all the plans for those improvements had been formulated and worked up, and were only awaiting the improvement of the company's credit through the settlement of its trouble with the Government to put them into effect.

Mr. Huntington died in 1900, and there was a period of a year or eighteen months when there was practically no head to the property.
Mr. Harriman then bought a majority of the stock, or a large part of the stock, of the Southern Pacific, which practically gave him control, and as soon as he got control these plans were brought up by his instructions and submitted to him, and he ordered them 1666 in effect at once, and the building was started, and then the building was done, and the Central Pacific was delivered over in such condition that Mr. Harriman told me himself that it was in better condition than the Union Pacific.

Mr. MCCLENNEN. The petitioner moves to strike out the answer as not responsive, as hearsay and a statement of opinion, and a somewhat more general treatise than the question called for.

Please read the question, and I will ask to have it answered.

(The question was repeated as above recorded.)

The WITNESS. The Union Pacific in 1901 was in better condition than the Central?

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. Yes.

A. Yes; because it had been reconstructed.

Q. When did the reconstruction of the Union Pacific begin?

A. Oh, some time prior to 1901. It was pretty well finished in 1901.

Q. It was as early as 1897 or 1898 that that reconstruction began?

1667 A. I do not know. Mr. Harriman bought the Southern Pacific in 1901, and one of the first things he did was to ask me to go to New York. Oh, no; he sent his chief engineer of the Union Pacific and the president of the Union Pacific over to San Francisco to look at these plans, and I suppose they made him a report on them, which was evidently favorable, because it was followed by instructions from him to go to New York with the plans. They were explained to him, approved at once, and construction was started.

Q. What classes of traffic are there between California and east of the Missouri River that can be moved as well through Ogden as through El Paso, if any?

A. Well, as to details of moving traffic and the effect of origin and destination, I do not feel myself competent to give definite information. That is a matter that is handled by the traffic department that I am unfamiliar with.

Q. Do you have in mind nothing that could not be moved through Ogden as readily as through El Paso?

A. I have never given the matter that you speak about any particular study, and I don't think I am competent to answer it.

1668 Q. Well, then, you do not chance to know of any at present, in your present state of mind?

A. No.

Q. Is the Ogden route, as Mr. Blair defined it in his questions, competitive with the Sunset-Gulf route as far south as San Diego on transcontinental traffic?

A. I do not know. San Diego, you know, is not on our line; it is on the Atchison line. I do not suppose we get much show on San Diego business on any of our routes.

Q. Are the two routes competitive as far south as Los Angeles?

A. The Ogden route and the Sunset?

Q. Yes.

A. I should say very little.

Q. With such inferior knowledge as you say you have on this department, where would you draw the line of a substantially competitive area in southern California, or the southern part of California?

A. I am afraid you are asking me another of those questions of the choking man. I can not exactly put a limit. I know at Los Angeles, for instance, that our strong line to southern California for southern California business is our Rock Island connection through El

1669 Paso, and that line is our strong line for competing with Atchison.

Q. On southern California business?

A. On southern California business. Now, if we found it nec sary—and our traffic people have found it necessary—to arrange through lines with the Rock Island, it was because of the fact, e dently, that they could not get that stuff to move over the Ogd route.

Q. Could you say whether or not Tehachapi Pass is approximat the division line?

A. I could not.

Q. Can you say how far north in California and Oregon the t routes are competitive on transcontinental business; that is, t
Ogden and the El Paso routes?

A. No; I could not set a limit.

Q. It certainly runs farther north than San Francisco, doesn't i

A. On some commodities; yes. We get some things from Oreg that do go over the Sunset Route.

Q. And you do not happen to know any of those that could not moved over the Ogden route?

A. No; I simply know, from general information, about th 1670 moving of traffic that we do get hops from Oregon to New Yo via the Sunset Route. As to the attractions of that route, do not know what they are, whether they are climatic or otherwis but it is certainly preferred by shippers, because they ship that wa
They have the say as to which way the stuff shall go, and they say th stuff shall go that way.

Q. You know, do you not, that you have a very attractive solici ing organization in the Southern Pacific Company?

A. I am glad to know that. I hope we have. That is all that i left to us now—to work on the public, to be sweet to the shipper, t see if we can coax him our way.

Q. There used to be a good many other means, did there not?

A. I have heard so; I do not know.

Q. In the territories tributary to the Southern Pacific rails an the Atchison rails south of Tehachapi there have been arrangement made at times, have there not, to divide the traffic as between the tw roads?

A. I don't think so.

Q. So that the Atchison should have approximately fifty per cen and the Southern Pacific fifty per cent?

A. There could not have been that arrangement, because there 1671 were some others to come in, and there would be nothing le for them. I know of no arrangements for dividing the traffi

Q. Have you ever heard of any such arrangements with reference to the citrus fruit traffic?

A. I have not.

Q. There are not very many others to come in south of Tehachapi, are there?

A. We have been fighting the Atchison for years to put up our percentage, so I do not see how there could have been any fixed; and we have been extending our electric lines, particularly in southern California, to get what we conceive was a better slice of the citrus fruit traffic, but in addition to us there is the San Pedro, Los Angeles & Salt Lake that has to have a piece. They want some.

Q. I had reference not to the whole citrus fruit traffic, but that tributary to the rails of the Southern Pacific or the Atchison. That would not change your answer, I take it?

A. No; I do not know of any such arrangement.

Q. Soon after Mr. Blair presented to you the question of divergent stems and tangential offshoots, you referred to several railroads 1672 that were possessed of those attributes. The first you mentioned was the Gould system, at page 1494. Those are all cases, are they not, where the double line has resulted from the building out and acquisition of branches, feeders, stems, or tangential offshoots?

A. I do not know how they grew, but years ago, when I was in Texas, the Texas & Pacific, the Iron Mountain, the Missouri Pacific, and the Denver & Rio Grande were all considered Gould properties, and the St. Louis Southwestern also; and they are referred to generally to-day as Gould properties, and they all appear on this map that I got from a folder case in a hotel—one of the folders of the Missouri Pacific, marked Missouri Pacific-Iron Mountain, and all the lines are marked equally heavy. Of course, at the present time they have also got the Western Pacific marked on it.

Q. And this answer would apply equally, would it, to these various other stem lines?

A. No; I would not say that at all. You asked me specifically as to the Gould lines.

Q. Well, now, as to these others that you mentioned. Was the development of them such as I have mentioned—these feeders and branches?

1673 A. No; the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul, they have a very important line from Chicago to Omaha, and their other line is also a main and very important line from Chicago through Milwaukee, La Crosse, the Dakotas, and Montana to Puget Sound points. That line they have just recently completed.

Q. Those two lines of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul are, to your mind, competitive, are they?

A. Those two lines?

Q. Yes.

A. No; not one part of the St. Paul with the other; but you could build up in connection with a line to Omaha several competitive lines to Puget Sound.

Q. Do you chance to know, in the case of that railroad or any of those that you have mentioned, the amount of competitive tonnage that they carry as compared with their local and noncompetitive business?

A. No; I do not.

Q. You spoke of one of the competitive lines, that of the Union Pacific to San Pedro and thence by boat to San Francisco?

A. Yes.

Q. When did that line go into operation?

1674 A. In 1905, I think.

Q. Do you know anything about the amount of San Francisco transcontinental tonnage carried over that line?

A. I do not.

Q. Did you know during the period of your connection with the Union Pacific?

A. No.

Q. Is it a large matter?

A. I suppose it could be large or small, just as they chose. I don't know just what it is. I mentioned it because it is a much shorter line from New York to San Francisco than the Sunset, very much shorter; it is 720 miles shorter.

Q. The Western Pacific has never succeeded in controlling a very large amount of the transcontinental traffic of California, has it?

A. No.

Q. The Western Pacific and the Southern Pacific have some agreement as to division on freight delivered by the Southern Pacific to the Western Pacific, and vice versa?

A. That is a traffic matter which I am not familiar with; but I do know that with the Western Pacific, as with the Atchison, we 1675 have thrown open our local points freely to them on divisions. I do not know what the divisions are, but on divisions that they have accepted as satisfactory and it has put them, as it has the Atchison, into all local points of the Southern Pacific. It is in pursuance of our policy of having our lines used to the maximum extent.

Q. The division agreement, do you happen to know, between the Western and the Southern is a fifty per cent division of the rates west of the Missouri River, irrespective of the extent of the haul made by the Southern Pacific?

A. I have no idea what the division is. I assume it is satisfactory because shortly after I was made chairman there were complaints that reached me from the Gould offices, complaints of discrimiand unjust treatment of the Western Pacific, and that we were unwilling to let them take local freights from our lines; and when I looked into the details and sent them to the Gould people, it shut them up completely and showed them that the complaints were groundless.

Q. Water competition suffers a considerable disadvantage when the origin or destination of the freight is on the interior, requiring transshipment, does it not?

A. Water transportation is at a disadvantage?

1676 Q. Yes.

A. Yes, some; just in the way in which you name.

Q. The isolated branches of the Southern Pacific or those which would be isolated if the Central were taken from the Southern Pacific, between Fresno and Sacramento, are all short lines, are they not?

A. Yes.

Q. Does the Central Pacific maintain terminals at Ogden?

A. The terminals at Ogden, excepting the shops, which are the sole property of the Central Pacific, are owned by the Ogden Union & Terminal Railway Company, fifty per cent of the stock of which is owned by the Central Pacific and fifty per cent by the Union Pacific.

Q. That amounts to really a joint ownership and operation of those terminals by the Central Pacific, does it not?

A. As I remember it, they are operated—I think they have tried it all sorts of ways—but I think at the present time there is a terminal superintendent that operates them.

Q. When the Southern Pacific and Union Pacific were unmerged it did not have any effect upon the rates, did it?

A. When the Union and Southern were unmerged?

1677 Q. Yes.

A. I don't think so; I don't see how it could, because the through rates are made by the commission, and the Union Pacific was the only line that was interested in the through rates. The other rates were local rates in California with which they had nothing to do.

Q. It did not change the methods of doing business, did it?

A. No.

Q. In the same way, the merging of the Southern Pacific and the Union Pacific in 1901 did not change the methods of doing business?

A. It did not change the methods of doing business in the operating department; but I can not say whether there were any changes in the rates. Yes, I do recall one operating change that they made; they closed the Roseville gateway as tight as they could, and all Oregon freight went via Granger up to Portland.

Q. That is, all that did not go Sunset?

A. Well, of course, what went Sunset was almost negligible.

Q. But there was no closure of the gateway from Oreg

1678 so far as the Sunset was concerned?

A. No.

Q. The closing of that gateway had the effect of practically pr venting any Oregon freight from traveling from Roseville to Ogd if destined east?

A. That is right; it prevented any freight destined east from usi the Southern Pacific lines from Portland to Ogden.

Q. Were there changes in the operating officials in 1901?

A. Yes; a good many.

Q. Did it reduce the number—do you know?

A. Yes; a good many at a good many points; added some and to off others. There were a great many employees at joint statio particularly in the east, that were taken off. Then Mr. Harrim who required help in administering such a large property, appoint two new officers as his assistants. He took one Southern Pacific m and made him head of the traffic over all of the roads, and he to another one and made him head of operation, construction, and mai tenance over all the properties. He took another Southern Paci man and made him head of the treasury department, and he to another Southern Pacific man and made him head of his legal d partment.

1679 Q. Did this have the effect of cutting down expenses of o eration a good deal?

A. Some; yes; but there was some increase through the creation new offices, but that increase was wiped out many times over throu the increased efficiency of working the properties.

Q. On page 1510, in speaking of increase of expenses of operati if the Southern were divided from the Central, you referred to t fact that the Central Pacific Railroad gets its oil fuel from w near the Southern Pacific lines and that the Southern Pacific g its ties and lumber from near the lines of the Central Pacific. Wo those facts increase operating expenses if the two lines were divid

A. Why, yes; as I testified on my direct testimony. That is j what I did testify to—that it would increase the operating expe largely.

Q. And it would increase the operating revenue of the other r correspondingly, would it not?

A. If the other road got the business; but there is no guara that it would. If the Central Pacific were made independent sold to the Union, which seems to be the desire of the Gov 1680 ment, the Central Pacific might buy its fuel over east and the Southern Pacific might not get a dollar of revenue for carrying it.

Q. In expressing your opinion as to the desire of the Government, which was not, to be sure, asked just then, whom do you mean now by "the Government?"

A. I associate this whole matter, you understand, with Mr. Wickersham's original threat to me that if we did not sell, then he would sue; and now the Government is carrying out his threat. We did not sell, it is true, through no fault of ours, and here we are in the midst of a lawsuit to make us sell.

Q. What individuals of the Government do you now refer to as having this desire?

A. Oh, I think of the Government as a great big fellow with a great big stick, without any particular man in view.

Mr. ORR. But the stick administration has been changed—the man with the big stick.

The WITNESS. I don't know that, except that it seems to me that the stick is larger than it used to be, and used more frequently than it used to be.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. And again, this free expression of your opinion as 1681 to the desire of the Government is consistent with your conceptions of accuracy, is it?

A. I think what I said about the Government and the big stick and the frequency of its use is quite accurate. I wish to disclaim any idea of lese majeste, though, defining by that the offense of not having a very high respect for the Government. I think that is the translation of it.

Q. Do you desire to be understood as indicating that you think the officials of the Government instituting and pressing this present prosecution are doing it in cooperaton with the Union Pacific and its officials?

A. Why, no; I especially said I had no idea of committing lese majeste.

Q. The Southern Pacific Railroad and the Central Pacific Railroad, operated separately, would, in view of the different ownerships of the terminals, each be in a good position to negotiate with the other on terms of joint use, would they not?

A. Certainly any roads running into the same point and desiring to use the same properties are in a position to negotiate, but the use of those properties to each party could never be as efficient, and 1682 the properties could not be as low in cost of operation as when the properties are united and built as though two sets of lines have been built up.

Q. In reply to Mr. Blair you stated some figures as to the loss to the Central Pacific Railway Company if the European loan were called.

Mr. BLAIR. I beg pardon; I said loss to the Southern Pacific Company as the guarantor of the loan.

The WITNESS. Yes; the Southern Pacific Company.

By Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. Did you mean that those figures were made up on the supposition that if the railroads were separated the Southern Pacific Company as guarantor would meet the obligation to the exoneration of the principal on the obligation of the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. We know that under the agreement it could be called at once and we are certain that it would be called, and as guarantors we certainly would have to make good.

Q. I only asked you if in stating those figures you stated them on the assumption that the Southern Pacific Company would be the one that would pay that loan, and not the Central Pacific Railroad 1683 Company. Were the figures made up on that assumption?

A. On that assumption, which I consider a certainty.

Q. Do you mean to convey the impression that the Central Pacific Railroad properties and franchises are not worth the amount of their bonded debt?

A. I do not know. I didn't say that. I said nothing about it. What I did say was what I repeated in an answer here. Can you not let me get you a copy of the agreement? That would be better than my quotation from it.

Mr. BLAIR. We intend to offer it.

The WITNESS. I have not read it very recently, but I am giving you my recollection of what penalties will accrue to the Southern Pacific if the agreement is forfeited.

By Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. What I am calling attention to is certain figures that you gave and I am trying to find out simply whether those figures were based on the assumption that the Southern Pacific met the loan under the guarantee and did not get reimbursement from the principal debtor, the Central Pacific Railroad Company. Now, is that the assumption that you made?

A. That is the assumption that I made.

Q. Now, when you made that assumption did you assume that the Central Pacific Railroad properties and franchises were not of value sufficient to meet their bonded indebtedness?

1684

A. I do not know. I did not think about that. My attention ways has been fixed on what obligations or what duties would devolve upon the Southern Pacific Company if this agreement were broken. Of course, the first thing we have got to do is to pay the penalty, and then look around to see how we can get reimbursed.

Q. That is, unless you could get the principal debtor to pay the principal first?

A. I say, unless we could get reimbursed sometime.

Q. That loan was floated in 1911?

A. Yes.

Q. And was floated on its face?

A. Yes.

Q. At what was it floated?

A. You can figure backward. I asked the comptroller to figure for me what the money cost us, taking into account the discount and commissions and expenses, and he told me 5.2 per cent. Now, that was an easier way for me to get the information than to ask 1685 him what was the discount and what was the commission and what were our expenses. I probably would never have remembered about that, but I do remember the one figure of 5.2.

Q. The 5.2 estimated rate is made upon the basis of the bonds having been floated at some discount, which is to be cared for by distribution over the period of the currency of the bonds, is it not?

A. Yes.

Q. And the figure of loss that you gave was based upon the assumption that the new loan would be floated when interest rates were higher, so that the discount would be greater?

A. No; that is part of it. You quote me wrongly there. My first statement was that if the bonds were called to-day, 1915, and had to be paid—I do not care whether the Central Pacific pays them or the Southern Pacific, but I am assuming that the Southern Pacific primarily would have to pay them because they are the ones to whom the managers of the loan would look. If the bonds were called within four years after issue, and this discount and commission and expenses had to be taken up in four years instead of in thirty-1686 five, the money for the four years already elapsed would cost us 8.2, or three per cent more. I then stated if the money to pay those bonds at their face value had to be raised to-day at current rates, the new loan, I do not think, could be gotten at better rates than about 6.2. In other words, there would be about one per cent, certainly three-quarters of one per cent, higher than we have got on the loan arranged for now.

Q. And if this requirement to meet the loan should come at a period when interest rates were low again, it would remove a substantial part of the loss which you have figured?

A. Yes; but those lucky things never happen. They generally happen the other way; they come when money is higher.

Q. You have spoken of the similarity of equipment used in Texas to that used over the Central Pacific Railroad in the eighties or early nineties; that would be the normal thing to expect where a railroad was operating its own line and a series of leased lines, would it not?

A. Yes; when the same concern owned all of those lines it was natural to expect that there would be identity of design and equipment and rails and so on.

Q. The lines east of Lafayette or Vermillionville were 1687 never published as leased lines of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, were they?

A. The lines east of Vermillionville? No; I think not.

Q. You have spoken of the Central Pacific Railroad and the Union Pacific Railroad as operated as one line. By that you meant, did you not, that they have had joint rates and have operated through cars and through trains, both freight and passenger?

A. No; I meant much more than that. We have arrangements with a good many lines for through rates, through cars and passengers, but I stated that with no line was our cooperation as close with the Union Pacific, ever since I have known anything about it, and I understand that our treatment of them, after I went to California, was in no wise different from what it was before.

Q. Well, in what other ways than in arranging for through rates, through cars and through trains and through billings have you cooperated?

A. Well, in this way: Your connection may suggest a new train or a through car; you may say that you see no necessity for a new train or no necessity for a through car, and you do not care about hauling it. Indeed, that you have balanced expected increased revenues with expected increased expenses, and that 1688 you think it will not pay, and you don't propose to do. When propositions from the Union Pacific have come, we have not taken that position.

Q. Now, is there any other respect in which the line has been operated as a through line?

A. Well, after making through rates, hauling of the through trains that they want you to haul, hauling all the through cars that they ask you to haul, cooperating with them in getting business as we have done, I don't see how much more you can do, unless you turn over the management of the road to them.

Q. I think you misunderstood the question. I did not ask you what more you could do, but is there any more that you do do?

A. Then I will say no; I do not see how we could do any more.

Q. The effort of the Central Pacific Railroad Company or those in charge of the Central Pacific Railroad, at all times between 1883 and 1901, was to induce such traffic as possible to travel not over the Union Pacific but over the Sunset line? I refer to freight traffic.

A. Yes; but after getting whatever was possible over 1689 the Sunset Route, there was a good deal left to go over the Union Pacific or the Central or other lines as they came into California, and the influence of the Central Pacific has always been to have the balance of the freight go in connection with the Union.

Q. But it has been the systematic effort of the Central Pacific to divert as much to the Sunset line as possible, has it not?

A. Where we have seen an opportunity of making the service of the Sunset line appear more attractive to the shipper than the other we have done it; but there is a large amount of freight that we can not by any possibility get to go over the Sunset line. I have always known it, the public knows it, and that we help the Union Pacific to get for their line.

Q. And that discrimination was practically continuous from 1883 up to 1901, was it not?

Mr. BLAIR. Counsel objects to the use of the word "discrimination" as involving a statement of fact not based on anything that the witness has said.

The WITNESS. Ido not think, in doing what we did, we went 1690 any further than was contemplated by the law that chartered the two lines. There were other lines, plenty of them, soliciting freight. We never threw any obstructions in their way. The Milwaukee could get it from Omaha; the Denver & Rio Grande always had solicitors in San Francisco soliciting freight their way; if they could get it, well and good.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. You mean that you did not refuse to haul it or purposely delay or put physical obstructions in the way of it?

A. Certainly not.

Q. But the effort was always the other way? The effort of your company was to get it via the Sunset Route?

A. Unless we knew in the first place that there was no earthly reason for attempting it.

Q. And that was irrespective of whether it originated on the Southern Pacific tracks or the Central Pacific tracks?

A. We have always treated the two concerns as one, as they actually are.

Q. If the line from San Francisco to Omaha were operated as a through line, the natural effort of all officers on all parts of that line would be to get as much traffic as possible to go that wa would it not?

1691 A. If it were operated as one line?

Q. Yes.

A. The trouble would be then, it seems to me, that if it wer divorced from the Central Pacific it would be a limb trimmed o from the trunk, or whichever way you choose to call it, and added a limb projecting out from the Union Pacific on the other side, an would be more objectionable even than the present arrangement.

Q. Well, "limb" is conventially used to characterize more later branches than those that project straight onward, is it not?

A. I don't know; it depends on the tree. I have seen vertic branches at Monterey, hundreds of them, growing right straight o from the tree.

Q. But going back again, the natural effort of any one continuo line is to get as much traffic to travel over that line as possible, it not?

A. I should think so; but what I meant to say is that if that li from San Francisco to Omaha were made one, joining the Centr Pacific and the Union Pacific, the Union Pacific would be in t position of having three lines, one to San Francisco, one to L Angeles, and one to Puget Sound, and they would be in absol control of the Pacific Coast business.

1692 They have two lines to each one of those places now, a the addition of the San Francisco-Ogden line and the Ogd
Omaha line would give them three routes to each one of th
Pacific coast terminals.

Q. Do you think that would put the Union Pacific in as absol control of the Pacific coast business as the Southern Pacific was 1899?

A. I do not think any possible conception of putting a road in c trol of traffic could begin to amount to what this proposed arra ment would be. It would make them absolute masters of the Pa coast.

Q. In what respect more masters of the Pacific coast than Southern Pacific was of California in 1899?

A. In 1899?

Q. Yes.

A. There were plenty of roads into California in 1899 that co dispute with the Southern Pacific for the carriage of freight.
this case that you suggest there would be three roads at each of these points, and all of these roads would be competitive with others, to certainly a much greater extent than this case of the C tral Pacific and the Union Pacific line with the Sunset

1693 should say it would be an absolutely monumental control of traffic.

Q. Are any of those many roads that you referred to as in a position to dispute, in 1899, now out of business in California?

A. No. We have gone over that a great many times, but I will go over it again.

In 1883 we said that the Atchison had reached California. In 1883 the O. R. & N. had reached Portland, and by means of its steamships, would compete for traffic. The Canadian Pacific at one time ran ships down the coast to San Francisco, competing for traffic. The Northern Pacific did. There were a good many ways you could get into San Francisco, in those days, independently of the Southern Pacific.

Q. Do you think of any more just now?

A. No. If I do, I will let you know. I do not think of any more just now.

Yes, I think of one more. There is the route around the Horn. There is the route around the Isthmus of Panama.

Q. The effort of the Central Pacific Railroad officials, or those operating that road, to get business via the Sunset route, went so far at times, did it not, as to bring the traffic destined from Ne-
1694 vada to New York and Boston back to Sacramento, down to El Paso and around to New Orleans, and thence to New York?

A. When you consider the roads were all as one, that was a very advantageous way to carry freight if the shipper did not object.

Q. And it was carried that way to a considerable extent?

A. I think some was carried that way.

Q. And the effort was made to carry it that way?

A. No doubt; to get the longest haul.

Q. When was this system of competitive examinations on the efficiency of maintenance and upkeep over sections put into operation?

A. I put it in operation in 1895, when I came to California. I had used the system on the lines east of El Paso for perhaps three or four years before that.

Q. Is the major part of the business of the Central Pacific Railroad its transcontinental business or its local business?

A. I would rather not answer that without reference to the books. I would say that I do not know.

Q. That is, the balance is not sufficiently prominent one way or the other so that you carry it in your mind?

1695 A. I never do carry those matters; I can not. If you really want to know, however, I will get the information and let you have it.

Q. Would your answer be the same with reference to the Southern Pacific line, the Sunset line?

A. The proportion of local and through business?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes; I will get that for you.

Mr. BLAIR. He asked you whether your answer would be the same—as to whether you knew or not.

The WITNESS. Yes. I do not know.

By Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. You do not know at present?

A. No.

Q. Did you mean to convey the idea by your answers that if there was a dissolution between the Southern Pacific and the Central Pacific the transcontinental rates would be increased?

A. No. I do not think I said that. I certainly did not mean to convey that impression, because the Interstate Commerce Commission fixes these rates, and I do not see how they could be increased.

1696 Q. Have you read the testimony given by the witnesses on behalf of the petitioner in this case?

A. The Government's witnesses?

Q. Yes.

A. Some; yes.

Q. But not all?

A. No.

Q. Was the effort which the officers of the Southern Pacific Company directed to be made to get the California Railroad Commission to approve the contract of February, 1913, a serious and enthusiastic one, or perfunctory?

A. I am afraid you will have to ask these gentlemen who made it. I do not know just how they behaved. I was not here.

Q. Was it your desire that that commission should approve the contract?

A. It certainly was. It was sent over here to counsel with the request that they present it before the commission and ask their approval. Just how they carried out their mission, I do not know. I assume that, as good counsel, they naturally used their best endeavors.

Mr. McCLENNEN. That is all.

1697 Redirect examination by Mr. BLAIR:

Q. I understood you to say, Mr. Kruttschnitt, that there are no terminal buildings or other terminal facilities in San Francisco standing in the name of or belonging to the Central Pacific Railway Company.

A. No; there are not.

Q. Does the Santa Fe have connections with the Western Pacific in central California? And if so, name some of the towns where it joins or meets the Western Pacific.

A. It meets them at Oakland, Stockton, and, I think, in Sacramento now, because I understand the Santa Fe has recently made some arrangements with an electric line to get into Sacramento, and that would put them in connection with the Western Pacific.

Q. What was the condition of the Union Pacific track in 1895 as compared with that of the Central Pacific?

A. They were about the same. The Union Pacific at that time, and the Central Pacific also, were laid almost entirely with 60 and 62 pound rails.

Mr. BLAIR. That is all.

(Whereupon at 6.15 o'clock p. m. an adjournment was taken until to-morrow, Friday, March 12, 1915, at 11 a. m.)

1698 TWENTIETH DAY.

ROOM 921, FLOOD BUILDING,
San Francisco, Cal., Friday, March 12, 1915.

The hearing was resumed, pursuant to adjournment, at 11 o'clock a. m., before Frank R. Hanna, special examiner.

Present on behalf of the United States: James W. Orr, Esq., Edward F. McClennen, Esq., and Edward E. Gann, Esq., special assistants to the Attorney General.

Present on behalf of the defendants: W. F. Herrin, Esq., J. P. Blair, Esq., P. F. Dunne, Esq., Garret McEnerney, Esq., and E. J. Foulds, Esq., for the Southern Pacific Company.

1699 ROBERT NEWTON LYNCH was called as a witness on behalf of the defendants, and having been duly sworn testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Where do you reside?

A. San Francisco.

Q. What is your occupation?

A. Vice president and manager of the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce; also vice president and manager of the California Development Board.

Q. What is the California Development Board?

A. The California Development Board is a State-wide institution that has as its representatives official appointees of the various supervisors of the State and affiliates more or less directly with all of the chambers of commerce of the State in common matters of State-wide interest.

Q. What matters, generally, do they concern themselves with?

A. The main point of emphasis in the development board i 1700 agricultural development and all the things that go with it the raising of the efficiency of the various chambers of commerce in the State, and attempting to gather together all the commercial interests of the State in common purposes for the benefit o the State.

Q. Does that board have representation in practically every count of the State?

A. Yes; some thirty-two counties, I think, have official representa tion on the board, and those counties that have not representatio generally affiliate sympathetically in the work.

Q. What is the chamber of commerce that you speak of?

A. The Chamber of Commerce of San Francisco has a membershi of nearly 3,000 merchants and shippers, retail merchants and whol salers, manufacturers, and banks. It is comprehensive of all of th commercial interests of San Francisco.

Q. In a general way, what is the purpose of that organization?

A. The purpose is to foster and advance the commerce of San Fra cisco, to facilitate the doing of business. It has various departmen which look after those interests, and look after the interests o 1701 the harbor, through a marine department.

Q. Does it concern itself with transportation questions?

A. The question of transportation is one of the most vital matte with the chamber of commerce, one of the most vital with which deals, and it has a well-qualified transportation department, wi experts to deal with transportation questions.

Q. What are your duties as manager of the chamber of commerc

A. As manager and one of the directors of the chamber, I have t executive oversight of the activities of the chamber and direct t various departments under the board of directors.

Q. Did you ever have occasion to consider the proposed separati of the lines of the Central Pacific Railway Company from the oth lines making up the Southern Pacific system?

A. The organization made a very exhaustive and thorough stu of that question and took a position upon it.

Q. When was that?

A. About the beginning of 1914, February or March.

Q. When was your attention first called to that subject?

A. Attention was first called through a decision of t 1702 railroad commission, which objected to certain relations b tween the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific lines. T railroad commission advised the public, and we took notice of it, th such a separation would possibly cause an increase in rates; and brought the subject acutely to our attention as a matter of very grave interest.

Q. You understood, did you, in a general way, that the California Railroad Commission had made a decision as to such proposed separation?

A. Yes; that decision was available to us and advised of the danger of the raise in rates because of a double management and possible interference with service.

Mr. McCLENNEN. The last part of the answer, beginning with "and advised of the danger", and so forth, the petitioner moves to strike out as not responsive, hearsay evidence of the decision, and a statement of an immaterial opinion.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Now, it was some time after the decision before you took thorough action in the matter, was it? What was the next action of your board? Did they consider the matter?

A. We learned that there was an intention on the part of the 1703 Government to begin suit to dissolve the Central and Southern Pacific lines. On the getting of that information we went to every source of information that we could get to find the facts in the case and what our interests were.

Q. What investigation did you make yourself of the matter?

Mr. McCLENNEN. This is objected to as immaterial, incompetent, and irrelevant.

The WITNESS. We inquired of the railroad commission; we also inquired of the Southern Pacific Company the facts in the case, and we gathered all of the data together and estimated it.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Who were "we"? You spoke of "we".

A. The chamber of commerce.

Q. And what individuals are included?

A. The official board of directors directed me as manager to get this information.

Q. How many directors have you?

A. Twenty-one.

Q. Then did you have meetings and discussions on the subject?

A. Yes.

1704 Q. Did you discuss this matter with other individuals than those mentioned?

A. Yes; we took the matter up with the various chambers of commerce in the State, and we took up the matter with our own traffic experts.

Q. Did the chamber of commerce take official action in any form?

Mr. McCLENNEN. That is objected to as immaterial, incompetent, and irrelevant, and a thing that should be proved by the records of the chamber of commerce, not by oral testimony, if it would be proved at all.

The WITNESS. The chamber of commerce passed a resolution upon the subject, stating its position in connection with this matter.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Have you a copy of that resolution?

A. Yes [handing paper to counsel].

Q. Was the resolution, a copy of which you present here, adopted by the chamber of commerce?

A. It was adopted by the chamber of commerce and signed by its president; it is a matter of record of the chamber.

Q. How was it adopted; by what vote? You say the 1705 chamber of commerce. Was it by the directors or by general meeting of all the members?

A. The directors of the chamber take action on behalf of the members.

Q. Then this was a vote of the directors?

A. The board of directors of the chamber.

Mr. HERRIN. I offer this resolution in evidence.

The WITNESS. All our members were advised of our action, and no dissent was made.

Mr. McCLENNEN. This latter part of the answer petitioner moves to strike out as not responsive to the question.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Do you remember the date of adoption of that resolution?

A. No; it may be on the resolution itself.

Q. I do not think it appears on the copy you present.

A. It was, as near as I can remember, in February of 1914.

Mr. McCLENNEN. The petitioner objects to the introduction of this resolution on the ground that it is immaterial, incompetent, and irrelevant; purports to express an opinion upon a question of 1706 law, based upon what evidence does not appear, and as containing a narrative of facts which must of necessity be hearsay, and a part of which are already shown to be inaccurate by the evidence introduced by the defendants' witnesses in this case, and as containing facts that disclose that the information and large parts of the phraseology must have been furnished by the Southern Pacific Company or its counsel, either directly or indirectly.

(The resolution was received in evidence and marked "Defendants' Exhibit (Lynch) No. 22, March 12, 1915", and will be found in the volume of defendants' exhibits.)

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Was this adopted by unanimous vote?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you have any dissent in your organization on the subject?

A. No.

Q. To sum it up, you seem to be opposed to the separation of these lines?

A. Yes.

Mr. MCCLENNEN. That last is objected to as calling for an opinion of the witness on immaterial matter.

1707 By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. In this investigation and discussion—which was general, was it not?

A. Yes.

Q. (Continuing.) And a matter of public interest, was it not?

A. Very great public interest.

Q. Did you discuss the matter with your members generally?

A. Yes.

Q. And did you discuss the matter with any other organizations, or the officials of any other like organizations?

A. Yes.

Q. What organizations do you have reference to?

A. We took the matter up with the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce and the Sacramento Chamber of Commerce and the San Jose Chamber of Commerce, and similar organizations throughout the State.

Q. What response, if any, did they make to your application?

Mr. MCCLENNEN. This is objected to as immaterial, in-1708 competent and irrelevant, and calling for hearsay and an opinion of persons not submitted here for cross-examination, on a matter that is not a proper subject for opinion evidence, and as a manifest attempt to get before the court matter that can have no legal bearing, by bringing in the opinions of persons that the counsel for the Government has no opportunity to cross-examine to find to what extent their opinions have been actuated by their interest in the Southern Pacific Company and those persons associated with it.

Mr. HERRIN. I will withdraw that question, and restate the question in this way, as counsel objects to showing what action was taken; and I appreciate the point that he has no opportunity to cross-examine. I will put the question in this form:

With all the persons with whom you discussed the matter, or had communication with, did you find any dissent, or was there any dissent expressed to you from the view and position which was taken by your organization, the chamber of commerce?

Mr. McCLENNEN. The petitioner renews the same objections stated to the withdrawn question.

The WITNESS. None whatever.

1709 By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Now, Mr. Lynch, I will ask you if, in your examination of this matter, you made a special effort to determine in what respects, if any, this proposed separation of lines could be of advantage to your clients—that is, the members of this chamber of commerce—and also in what respects, if any, it would be to the disadvantage or prejudice of those people? Did you consider those matters? Did you make an effort to find out in what respects it would be of advantage or disadvantage?

Mr. McCLENNEN. Petitioner objects to this question as too general in form, calling for an opinion, for matter which is immaterial, incompetent, and irrelevant, from a person not shown to be an expert upon the questions of transportation and the questions of law involved.

The WITNESS. As exhaustively as possible. The chamber had the matter under consideration for several months, and every possible point from any source was considered, both personally and by the board of directors.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. The membership of this chamber was made up of many individuals and firms who are large shippers of freight and 1710 passengers?

A. Yes.

Q. Large patrons of these transcontinental lines and other railroads?

A. A very large percentage of our membership is concerned with firms of that character.

Q. It was considered by those people, those individuals?

A. Yes.

Q. What points, if any, did you find that would result to the advantage of these shippers or of the public by this proposed separation of the Central Pacific from the Southern Pacific?

Mr. McCLENNEN. That is objected to as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, and calling for an opinion by the witness not shown to be an expert on the subject, and on a matter not a proper subject for opinion evidence.

The WITNESS. We found no advantage to the shippers whatever that was not counterbalanced by much greater disadvantage.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Did you find disadvantages by the proposed separation?

1711 Mr. MCCLENNEN. The same objection.

The WITNESS. We found many disadvantages that appealed to us very strongly, and which dictated our continuous policy in opposition.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. You may state, Mr. Lynch, in a general way the disadvantages that you found that would result from the separation of the Central Pacific lines from the Southern Pacific.

Mr. MCCLENNEN. The same objections as stated to the last two questions.

The WITNESS. The San Francisco Chamber of Commerce is vitally interested in the creation of a distributive area from San Francisco over the entire western territory.

We found the disadvantage that, if these roads were divided, it would cause an awkward situation in service, and it would be very disadvantageous; that it would probably cause a raise in rates, and that it would interfere with through schedules that exist under the present arrangement.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. The rates you speak of are local rates, rates local to the coast; or are they transcontinental rates?

Mr. MCCLENNEN. The same objection.

1712 The WITNESS. Rates, mainly, from the coast. We are interested, of course, in the lowest distributive rates that we can get, and with the plain warning of the railroad commission that rates would be raised proportionately to the cost of the service, it seemed clear to us that any double cost of operation would inevitably cause a raising of the rates.

Mr. MCCLENNEN. The answer of the witness, beginning with "the plain warning of the railroad commission", and so forth, petitioner moves to strike out as irresponsive and an inaccurate statement of the opinion of the commission, and an attempt to put in hearsay evidence of what that decision was, and as containing a statement of an opinion which is immaterial on a matter on which the witness is not qualified to express an opinion.

Mr. HERRIN. You may take the witness.

Cross-examination by Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. How long have you been a vice president of the chamber of commerce?

A. Something over two years.

Q. How many vice presidents are there?

1713 A. Three.

Q. Is the position of vice president a salaried position o volunteer position?

A. The position of vice president in the chamber is an elective p tion, and as such is not salaried.

Q. Does it carry with it any specific duties?

A. The vice presidents—I might say I also am manager, and—

Q. I wanted to keep the two things separate. Let us deal with vice presidents first.

A. Very well. As vice president of the chamber I have the du of presiding at meetings and taking over the duties of president his absence. It is an executive office.

Q. You said there were how many vice presidents?

A. Three.

Q. How long have you been manager of the San Francisco Ch ber of Commerce?

A. Something over two years.

Q. And is that a salaried position?

A. It is.

1714 Q. Is it a position which consumes all the time of the cumbent?

A. Yes.

Q. That is, it is an occupation in itself?

A. It is an occupation in itself, in connection with the devel ment board.

Q. And prior to two years ago, what was your relation to chamber of commerce?

A. Prior to that I was vice president and manager of the devel ment board for some four or five years, and the chamber of c merce had the same relation to the development board that the ot chambers of the State.

Q. That is, this California Development Board you have spo of?

A. Yes.

Q. Is the California Development Board, of itself, any part of chamber of commerce?

A. No; it is a separate organization having, as a great many its members, similar membership in the chamber of commerce.

Q. Does membership in the chamber of commerce, as such, c membership in the development board?

A. No.

1715 Q. What are the duties of the vice president of the devel ment board?

A. The duty of the vice president of the development board is to take over the duties of the president of the board. It is an executive office, without salary.

Q. That is, the duties of presiding at meetings and——

A. The duties of presiding at meetings and membership on its executive committee.

Q. How many vice presidents are there in the development board?

A. One.

Q. What are the duties of manager of that board?

A. To manage the various activities of the board, conduct its office, and to carry out the policies of the executive committee.

Q. Is that a paid position?

A. It is.

Q. Is that an occupation in itself?

A. Yes.

Q. You said you had held that position for five years before being in the chamber of commerce?

A. Perhaps three years; five years altogether.

1716 Q. I beg your pardon. Three years before?

A. Yes.

Q. During the first three years were you a member of the chamber of commerce?

A. Yes.

Q. How long had you been a member of the chamber of commerce?

A. Almost the entire time; probably two years of the time.

Q. During the last five years have you had any other occupation than those stated?

A. No; except that at the beginning of the time I was pastor of a church and occasionally spoke. During these five years my entire occupation and salary have been derived from these positions.

Q. Prior to the five years, what was your occupation?

A. I was the executive officer of the North of Bay Counties Association, which is the combination of the various chambers of commerce in the five counties immediately north of San Francisco Bay; and also secretary of the Pentaluma Chamber of Commerce.

Q. How long had you occupied those positions?

1717 A. Three or four years previous.

Q. And were those your sole occupations?

A. No. Coincident with those positions I was pastor of a church.

Q. And prior to that period, what was your occupation?

A. I was a student.

Q. And your present age is what?

A. Thirty-nine.

Q. Was the resolution, defendants' Exhibit No. 22, drafted by an individual or a committee [handing paper to the witness]?

A. I do not recall.

Q. You recall nothing on that subject?

A. No. This resolution was one of many actions taken by t chamber. It, by verbal vote of the board of directors, took a positi against this question and instructed me to get further informatio and this resolution is issued as one of the attitudes or actions of t chamber consistent with its general policy.

Q. Were you present at the meeting of the board of directors which this resolution was adopted?

A. Yes.

1718 Q. Was it brought to that meeting in final form?

A. I do not remember.

Q. You have no recollection on that subject at all?

A. No. I could recall from the records of the chamber, possib

Q. Have you any recollection as to whether there were any amen ments suggested at the meeting of the directors to the resolution th was first proposed at that meeting?

A. I do not recall any.

Q. What is the first that you recall of hearing this resolution re or reading it yourself, in the form in which it now exists?

A. I have no recollection. It is over a year ago. I just recall th as the general attitude of the chamber on the subject.

Q. Did you present this resolution?

A. I think not.

Q. Don't you know?

A. No.

Q. You do not know whether you did or not?

A. I am almost certain that I did not.

1719 Q. Were you presiding at the meeting at which it was p sented?

A. No.

Q. Did you speak at the meeting upon the resolution?

A. I think not.

Q. Don't you know?

A. I do not absolutely know; but as to matters considered by board, as a rule, I attempt, as far as possible, not to influence general action on the question; being the manager of the chambe take the instructions of the chamber itself upon these questions.

Q. How many directors were present at the meeting at which resolution was adopted?

A. I do not remember; but I could get the information readily.

Q. Do you bear in mind anything, approximately, about the nu ber?

A. No; I did not refresh my mind on that subject at all. I just happened to have this resolution from our records that I brought with me.

Q. How many directors are there of the chamber of commerce?

A. Twenty-one.

1720 Q. For what periods of time are they elected?

A. For one year.

Q. They are all elected at a stated annual meeting?

A. Yes.

Q. You have no recollection whatever of whether there were five, ten, fifteen, or twenty directors present?

A. There must have been a majority; there must have been a quorum.

Q. That is, there must have been at least eleven directors present?

A. Yes.

Q. Beyond that, so far as your recollection goes, you can not assist us as to the number that were present?

A. Not at the time when this particular resolution was adopted.

Q. Can you remember the name of any one of the directors present?

A. Not from my memory.

Q. You do not now recall a single one of the directors present?

A. The fact that our president signed it makes me almost 1721 certain that Mr. Michaels, the president of the chamber at that time, was present.

Q. Beyond that, can you assist at all as to the persons who were present?

A. No, sir.

Q. And you have no independent recollection of Mr. Michaels being present?

A. No.

Q. You simply judge of that by seeing his signature in typewriting on the resolution?

A. That is it. I am almost certain of it, because Mr. Michaels was president of the chamber and was handling the matter very definitely.

Q. Can you give me the names of any of the twenty-one gentlemen who were directors of the chamber of commerce at the time this resolution was passed?

A. Yes.

Q. Will you do so, as fully as you can?

A. Mr. C. F. Michaels, president; Mr. R. I. Bentley, Mr. Joseph Sloss, and myself, as vice presidents and directors; Mr. F. J. Coster,

Mr. M. H. Esberg, Mr. George C. Boardman; if I were given su ficient time I could recall all of them, I think.

1722 Q. Take all the time that you need. From your position manager and vice president I should hope that, with reas able delay, you might be able to remember a few of them.

A. There has been an election since then, in which the directo were changed, and I was trying to give you the names of those th were present at the time about which you are inquiring.

Q. Yes; I just wanted those who were present at that time.

A. Yes. R. H. Swayne, Constant Meese, E. R. Dimond, P
Carroll, B. F. Schlesinger, and W. N. Moore. Do you wish me take time to remember all of them?

Q. If you can, I should like it.

A. Mr. B. Sinsheimer, R. Vollmer, Seward McNear, and J.
Fagan. Those are all that I recall just at the moment. It may that during the testimony others who were members of the boa at that time may come to me.

Q. When, in the year, does the annual meeting of the chamber the election of directors occur?

A. In January.

1723 Q. Then this resolution was passed some time soon af
January?

A. Yes.

Q. And that would be some time soon after January of 1913?

A. 1914, as I recall.

Q. 1914?

A. Yes.

Q. Were there any lawyers upon the board of directors?

A. We have an attorney for the chamber, Mr. Allen Wright, w always sits with the board of directors, and is our legal adviser.
also had, and have, a traffic attorney, Mr. Seth Mann, who is the torney for the traffic department of the chamber.

Q. Did either of those gentlemen render any written opinion up the legality of the holding of the Central Pacific Railroad by Southern Pacific Company?

A. Not that I know of.

Q. Were they requested to make an investigation of the le questions involved?

A. No; the point at issue with us was our commercial——

Q. Bear in mind all I have asked you; just confine yourself that.

1724 Mr. BLAIR. I think the witness has a right to finish sentence in order to show the reason why a legal opinion not asked.

Mr. McCLENNEN. I have made my suggestion, and you have heard the suggestion of counsel for the defendants. I will pause a moment for you to exercise your judgment as to what you shall do and then I will continue.

The WITNESS (continuing). The one point at issue with us was the commercial disadvantages that might arise out of what was threatened. We were not passing upon the questions of law.

Mr. McCLENNEN. Petitioner moves to strike out the last part as not responsive.

By Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. You took no legal advice on the subject at all, on the question of the legality of the holding?

A. Our attorney was in consultation with us constantly on the subject, and rendered it from his viewpoint.

Q. Did he investigate the subject?

A. Yes.

Q. Was he requested by the directors to investigate the subject?

1725 A. It was part of his duty to be in very intimate touch with it.

Q. Was he requested, so far as you know, by the directors, to make an investigation?

A. You mean by specific resolution?

Q. I do not care whether by specific resolution, general resolution, or otherwise; I simply indicate to you an inquiry as to whether he was asked to make a serious investigation of possibly a complicated question of law, and render an official opinion upon it such as he would care to stand by on his reputation as an attorney. Was he requested to make such an investigation?

A. I do not know whether it was done in that form. As attorney for the traffic bureau, he was in touch with the transportation committee of the chamber, reporting to the board of directors, and this matter was a live issue in the chamber and was being constantly considered.

Q. Did you hear him deliver any opinion as to the legality of the holding of the Central Pacific Railroad Company by the Southern Pacific Company?

A. I consulted him regarding the matter.

Q. Did you hear him deliver any opinion on that subject?

1726 A. He was of the opinion that——

Q. First, I asked you whether you heard him deliver any opinion; simply that.

A. Yes.

Q. He did?

A. Yes.

Q. How long a time did it take him to deliver the opinion which you heard him deliver?

A. The opinion I heard him deliver——

Q. I merely asked you as to the time—the length of time. If you will favor me with that first I would like it.

A. Any opinion that I heard him deliver was delivered as the result of constant consideration of the question, which had been before us for some time.

Q. I suppose you did not attend upon him constantly during his consideration of the question, did you?

A. No.

Q. So that you are merely stating your supposition or hope as to the extent of his consideration of the subject, are you?

A. Yes.

1727 Q. Now, I will come back to the question. How long a time did it take him to deliver the opinion which you heard him deliver on that legal proposition?

A. I may have misunderstood the question. The opinion I heard him deliver was in regard to our interest in the matter.

Q. I have not asked you about that; I have asked you simply how long it took him to deliver the opinion.

A. I could not tell.

Q. A matter of a few minutes, or some hours?

Mr. HERRIN. I think there is a difference between the witness and counsel. As I understand it, Mr. McClennen wants to know how many minutes it took him to talk his opinion out, not how long he was considering it.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. I mean how long in your presence he occupied in stating his opinion on this question of the legality or otherwise of the holding of the Central Pacific Railroad by the Southern Pacific Company; not any question of commercial expediency, but a simple proposition of law. How long did it take him to deliver his opinion on that subject, so far as you heard him deliver it?

1728 A. I do not recall any categorical decision he made as to the legality of the question. I misunderstood your question. As I say, I presume whatever was involved in his consideration of the legal nature—we were not seeking an opinion from him on the legality of the whole matter, but as to the practical issue in the matter and what our interests were.

Q. Was any independent legal opinion obtained by you on the question of the legality of the holding of the Central Pacific Railroad Company by the Southern Pacific Company?

A. I think not.

Q. Was any legal opinion obtained by any of you from any of the counsel or attorneys for the Southern Pacific Company?

A. No; except such data as we asked the Southern Pacific Company to furnish us, and there was a great deal of material extant upon that general subject.

Q. At the time of the passing of this resolution you voted in favor of it yourself, did you not?

A. Yes.

Q. Were you aware at the time that the Attorney General of the United States had expressed the opinion that the holding of the Central Pacific Railroad by the Southern Pacific Company was in violation of law?

1729 A. Yes.

Q. Had you, in the course of your very careful investigation into these matters, read the testimony that was introduced before the California Railroad Commission when they were considering the question of approving the contract of February, 1913, between the Union Pacific Railroad Company and the Southern Pacific Company?

A. Only in a casual way.

Q. Had you read it through casually?

A. Yes.

Q. Had you read that part in which Mr. Sproule, the president——

A. I beg your pardon; I did not read that testimony; I read the decision itself.

Q. Not the testimony?

A. No.

Q. Had you become aware, before this resolution was passed, that Mr. Sproule, the president of the Southern Pacific Company, had stated to the California Railroad Commission that Mr. John G. Johnson, of Philadelphia, as counsel for the Southern Pacific Company, had advised them that a suit by the Attorney General 1730 to cause the Southern Pacific Company to give up the Central Pacific Railroad Company would probably prevail?

Mr. HERRIN. That is objected to as assuming a fact which does not appear in the testimony, and, on the contrary, I think the opposite appears.

(The question was read as above recorded.)

The WITNESS. No.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. In view of the objection, and perhaps to refresh your recollection, I ask you whether you read or otherwise heard the fact stated in the testimony of Mr. Sproule before the California Railroad Commission, which is quoted on pages 399 to 401 of the record in the present case and which reads:

"Q. Now, with respect to the position of the Attorney General, did the Southern Pacific directors or executive committee take the opinion of outside counsel on any of these questions?

"A. They called in as an independent counsel Mr. Johnson; I forget his initials.

"Q. Johnson of Philadelphia?

"A. Johnson of Philadelphia.

"Mr. McCUTCHEN. John G. Johnson?

1731 "A. John G. Johnson, of Philadelphia, and submitted the matter to him.

"Mr. HERRIN. They submitted first the question as to whether the Southern Pacific could take its own stock?

"A. First whether it could take its own stock, and his opinion confirmed the opinion of our Kentucky counsel, Judge Humphrey that we could not take our own stock, directly or indirectly. The second point upon which he was asked to advise the executive committee was whether there was reasonable ground for the Attorney General's position and as to what would be the probable result of action by the Government as outlined by the Attorney General, and his conclusion was that it was impossible that the Southern Pacific could retain the Central Pacific.

"Q. He thought there was enough question about it to justify our going on with this trade?"

Were you, before this resolution to which you have testified was passed, advised that Mr. Sproule had so stated to the California Railroad Commission?

A. No; except that in the general information of our office we understood that at one time there was some agreement whereby

1732 the Union Pacific was to take over some portion of the Central Pacific by agreement of the various officers. Our organization was not interested in the legal points that you have mentioned but we were interested in questions of fact upon which the Attorney General might have made his decision that it was against the law. We felt here, independent of the railroad, that there might be questions of fact from the western viewpoint which the Attorney General might not have taken into consideration, and our attitude upon the proposition was to try to get to the attention of the Attorney General all questions of fact and thrash them out. We felt, in the beginning of this suit, that the Attorney General was acting in behalf of the public, and we felt we were clients of the United States Government in this matter and that this suit was probably brought the interest of the public and the shippers and people whom the railroads might be conceived to be exploiting. We were very much concerned to prevent, so far as we could gather them, not in any legal form, but to gather them and present to the Attorney General before suit was brought, any material that we could gather that might influence the Government in its decision as to whether this was against the law; but we entered not at all upon the techni-

1733 cally legal questions involved; that was left ultimately to the Attorney General at the beginning of the suit.

Q. And you had no views as to what the legal situation was?

A. Yes; I had personally. I do not recall what the attorney of the traffic bureau may have had upon that subject.

Q. Did you remember, when you voted for this resolution, these words in it, "Nor is there, in our opinion, any sufficient legal reason requiring that such suit be brought," or did they escape your attention?

A. That phrase, so far as I had any contact with it, was based upon the fact that we felt that the facts underlying the legal question might be at fault. We had no opinion—at least I had no opinion personally—as to the technical legality of the proposition.

Q. So that you did considerately express this legal opinion that is contained in this resolution? It was not an oversight, your voting and going on record as to what your legal opinion was?

A. So far as we knew the facts of the case, I think that was a question of opinion.

1734 Q. Did you study law at all, in your student days, or in connection with your preparation for the ministry?

A. Yes.

Q. At what school did you study?

A. I did not study law at any school, but I made some preliminary studies in early years, which did not add anything to my present legal knowledge.

Q. How many of these gentlemen upon the board of directors are dependent upon the good offices of the Southern Pacific Company to get prompt handling of freight and conveniences in connection with their shipping?

A. Do you mean how many are shippers?

Q. I do not think by amplifying the question I would make it any clearer. I will have it read as I put it, if you will deal with it in that form.

(The question was read as above recorded.)

The WITNESS. I think the majority of them are shippers of freight.

By Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. Of this list of gentlemen that you have given us, were the any that were any more active than others in this matter of inves gation and consideration and resolving?

1735 A. The president and the chairman of the executive co mittee, most naturally, have taken up many of the detai more than most of the directors, but all of the directors attend t sessions, which are held weekly, and participate in all the discussio and decisions.

Q. Who was the chairman of the executive committee?

A. M. H. Esberg.

Q. Who was the one who secured from the Southern Pacific th facts which you say were furnished you by the Southern Paci Company?

A. Myself and Mr. Michaels and Mr. Esberg.

Q. Were they the only ones?

A. I just remember to have come in contact with those three g tlemen, with some officers of the Southern Pacific.

Q. From what gentlemen connected with the Southern Pacific you get your facts?

A. Mr. Sproule.

Q. From Mr. Sproule exclusively.

A. All of the facts secured here, I think, were from Mr. Spro While I was east on this matter Mr. Shoup furnished material wh we requested.

Mr. HERRIN. What Shoup was that?

1736 The WITNESS. Paul Shoup.

By Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. What position did Paul Shoup occupy in connection with Southern Pacific Company?

A. I do not know. I think he is president of the Pacific Elec Company in Los Angeles.

Mr. HERRIN. In Los Angeles; yes.

By Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. Is he an attorney?

A. Not that I know of.

Q. Now, from what persons connected with the Southern Pa Company or otherwise was this information obtained appearing this resolution, "The ownership of the Central Pacific Railr Company by the Southern Pacific Company does not in any s constitute a combination in restraint of trade"?

A. I do not know that that was furnished by the Southern Pa Company.

Q. Do you know who was the source of information upon that question, for the statement that appears here?

A. No.

Q. Do you know who furnished this information, "On the 1737 contrary, the lines of railroad owned by the Central Pacific Railroad Company and the lines of railroad owned by the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, all of which are, and have been since 1885, leased to and operated by the Southern Pacific Company, were built and extended practically as one system of railroads and by one ownership and control"?

Who furnished that information; do you remember?

A. No; I do not remember, any further than that the general history of the Central Pacific and the Southern Pacific matters were contained in various statements that were made, and were matters of easy confirmation on the part of old residents of the State.

Q. Did you happen to see the proposed answer in this case to be filed for the Southern Pacific Company before those words of this resolution were drafted?

A. Do you mean did I personally see them?

Q. Yes.

A. No; I have never read the answer.

Q. You have never taken occasion to compare that sentence in the answer?

A. No.

Mr. HERRIN. The answer was drawn long afterwards.

1738 Mr. MCCLENNEN. I do not know just when the answer was drawn, so I said "proposed answer".

Mr. HERRIN. I can assure you that the answer was not drawn until after you brought your suit.

Mr. MCCLENNEN. I did not know but some advance sheets had been given out.

Mr. HERRIN. No; we did not know what sort of allegation you might make until you drafted the petition.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. I should have asked, instead, whether you permitted the attorneys for the Southern Pacific Company the use of this extract from your resolution so that they could draw their answer.

A. We had no contact with the attorneys for the Southern Pacific at any time. This resolution was a matter of public record.

Q. Do you know from what sources you got this information appearing in the resolution?—

"The Central Pacific Railroad, the main line of which is from Ogden to San Francisco, was the original nucleus of this system of railroads."

A. That was a matter of common knowledge to all Cal 1739 ifornians.

Q. You do not remember just where you got it, whether yo got it from the Central Pacific Company or not?

A. No; I did not draw this resolution.

Q. Have you any further recollection, now, as to who did prese this resolution?

A. No. I could secure information on those points from ou records, if desired.

Q. Do you know from what source these various dates of openin and completion of various lines were obtained for this resolution?

A. No; further than the fact that we secured from this railroa and from all the sources of information that we could upon the sub ject the data which was doubtless a matter of such records.

Q. Have you any recollection from what source you got that?

A. My strong impression is that dates of that kind were secure from data that was asked from the railroad as to the history of th development of their lines.

Q. Did you do the asking—you personally, I mean?

A. You mean as to that information?

1740 Q. Yes.

A. I frequently did ask for information upon the subje and made definite requests.

Q. Did you personally get this information from the Southe Pacific Company?

A. I can not synchronize it with this particular phrase, but I g information of a similar nature from the railroad company.

Q. The various dates of opening of the various lines which a given with some precision here, even to months at times, runnin back over a period of something like thirty years or more; have yo any recollection of whether those dates were furnished to you pe sonally by the Southern Pacific Company?

A. They furnished much information of that character. I do n recall those particular dates at the moment.

Q. They were furnished to you?

A. Yes; for the board of directors.

Q. Did you furnish those dates to the board of directors?

A. Yes.

Q. Does that fact assist you at all in determining wh
1741 drafted the resolution?

A. No.

Q. Then occurs this phrase:

"The capital stock of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company w at all times held in substantially the same ownership and control a the stock of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, and as soon a any section of the Southern Pacific Railroad was opened for operation it was leased to and operated by the Central Pacific Railroad Company as lessee."

Do you remember from what source you got that information?

A. No; unless it was from the records which were furnished by the company.

Q. Did the company furnish you this information that the stock in the two companies was at all times in substantially the same ownership?

A. Information of that character was furnished to us by the company.

Q. Did they furnish you with information that in 1885, at the time the lease was made, substantially the only stockholders in the Southern Pacific Company and the Southern Pacific Railroad Com-1742 pany were Mr. Huntington, Mr. Stanford, Mr. Crocker, and Mrs. Hopkins?

A. No; those names did not occur in any information that I remember receiving from the company. The general facts of the history of the matter were furnished to us upon request, and were made, with all the other information that we could get, the basis of the resolution.

Q. Did they inform you that at the same time there were some 2,600 stockholders in the Central Pacific Railroad Company?

A. I had no information on that subject, that I remember.

Q. Did they inform you that at that time large quantities of the stock of the Central Pacific Railroad Company had been sold to British and European investors?

A. I do not remember of any such information being furnished.

Q. This resolution was voted upon by you in total ignorance of the fact that during a long period of time there had been a large number of stockholders in the Central Pacific Railroad who were not stockholders in the Southern Pacific Railroad, was it not?

A. This resolution was voted upon by me upon the idea of 1743 getting the matters for decision before the Attorney General and bringing out the facts, whatever they were; realizing that our economic interests, distributive interests, were very seriously threatened.

Q. You wanted to get the facts before the Attorney General very accurately, did you not?

A. Yes.

Q. You intended that the Attorney General should understand by this resolution that he had your assurance, the assurance of the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce, that the stock holdings in the two companies had at all times been substantially the same, did you not?

A. Whatever we stated in the matter was for the purpose of bringing the matter up to his attention and, as far as our information went, that was the impression.

Q. And you were wholly ignorant of the fact of this large number of stockholders in the Central Pacific Company who were not stockholders in the Southern Pacific Railroad Company or the Southern Pacific Company?

A. Yes; we did not have the accurate information in regard to the stock holdings in those matters. We were under the general information and belief that the holdings were practically coincident.

1744 Q. Who told you that?

A. That was our general understanding.

Q. You got it from somebody telling you, did you not? Or did you proceed to pass a resolution and send it to the Attorney General of the United States just on some general understanding, without knowing anything, by specific inquiry, as to the specific fact?

A. We were not laying any great stress to the Attorney General or attempting to be, to the Attorney General, the source of accurate information, except as to our general interests and to bring up these general questions, representing, as we did, the shippers, merchants, and manufacturers, and those whose interests were very vitally involved. We wanted the matter to be very thoroughly discussed and brought out.

Q. Did you realize, when you participated in this resolution, that you were practically informing the Attorney General of what might be an important fact, namely, the common ownership during all times of the stock in the Central Pacific Railroad and the Southern Pacific Railroad?

A. We were bringing that point to issue in his mind, certainly.

1745 Q. And making that assertion?

A. As far as our information and belief went, we presumed it was.

Q. Leaving aside for the moment your belief, can you give me a single person who ever gave you any such information?

A. No; I do not remember getting it, as far as I am personally concerned, from any individual. It was a matter of common knowledge or common understanding; that was all.

Q. It was a matter of common understanding?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you take occasion to look into the reports filed with the California Railroad Commission which showed the number of stockholders in these companies?

A. No.

Q. Was it a matter of common information that those reports showed that the Central Pacific Railroad had 2,600 stockholders in 1885?

A. I did not know it.

Q. Was it common information that those reports showed that the Southern Pacific Company and the Southern Pacific Railroad Company had but a handful of stockholders in 1885?

1746 A. No.

Q. Do you know who created this atmosphere of general information as to the common ownership of stock in the two companies?

A. No; unless it was derived from the general history of the affairs of the companies.

Q. You were one of the most efficient collectors of facts for this board of directors in dealing with this problem, were you not?

A. I had occasion, in the course of my duties, to get any information which might come; but the board of directors itself is composed of men of very wide experience and very intimate knowledge of conditions in California and throughout the coast, and the one point of emphasis which we had at all times, however loosely we may have drawn any resolution as to questions of law—we recognized that this suit was threatening, very seriously, the vital interests of California, and we were concerned to develop those questions.

Q. What I am trying to get at is this: While one might see how you might pass a resolution expressing the desires of your body as to what should be done about this suit, what I am trying to 1747 get at is how you found it consistent with the dignity of your position to vote in favor of a resolution that should spread before the Attorney General's eyes so many definite statements of fact, without having any more information than you now are able to give me, as to the sources of these facts, which you were expressly going to present to the Attorney General for him to base a serious judgment upon as to whether he should proceed; you knowing, of course, that his proceeding must depend upon his understanding of what the facts were.

A. This resolution was drawn with our understanding of certain facts; but more so, our understanding of our interests involved, and we undertook to present those to the Attorney General, not in the form of this resolution, but in the form of a delegation of our board of directors and others interested, who directly went to Washington and submitted themselves to the Attorney General to present our case, at which time we did not undertake to argue questions of law with him, but to give him the attitude of such people as we represented upon this important matter, and we were not impertinently trying to instruct him as to the law involved in the matter.

Q. You wanted to give him the benefit of your knowledge 1748 of the facts?

A. Our knowledge of any facts out here, from the fact that the matter seemed to very seriously threaten the commercial interests of the Pacific coast.

Q. On this very important fact as to whether the stock of the two companies had always been owned by the same people, just what did you personally do to justify yourself in informing the Attorney General that that was the fact?

A. We did not undertake to inform him on that subject.

Q. Did you not mean that in your resolution, where you said, in your statement of facts:

"The capital stock of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company was at all times held in substantially the same ownership and control as the stock of the Central Pacific Railroad Company"?

A. We presented that to him as our information and belief, for just what it was worth.

Q. And where did you get the information?

A. I do not know as we had any accurate information as to the exact situation; at least I did not have it. It may have been in the possession of some of the others.

Q. Why did you present it as information to the Attorney 1749 General?

A. Because that was our best information and belief upon that subject.

Q. What information did you have?

A. We drew that doubtless from such matters as were furnished us from various sources that we investigated.

Q. Can you give me any assistance as to the source of that piece of information?

A. I am quite sure that the history of the road and the ownership was furnished to us by the companies involved.

Q. You are quite sure that that statement emanated from the Southern Pacific Company, are you not?

A. Not absolutely sure; but doubtless it did.

Q. You are sort of kind of sure, are you not?

A. I would not care to answer it just in that form. I was supplied, for our office, with a large amount of material in regard to the history of these matters. We believed that that was the case when we presented the matter; but the vital question with us was not that question, but was entirely apart from the ownership. While, of course, that was a matter of general discussion in the press, we had a great deal of material in the press upon the matter, and I 1750 am not so sure but a good deal of this was derived from a very complete statement which I just vaguely recall was made in the press. These matters were discussed very widely and were made a matter of special editorials and statements in the press, and discussions of various kinds.

Q. Oh! You mean that you wanted the Attorney General to make up his mind on this question with an exact knowledge of the views of the local situation, and so you gained these things from the local newspapers and put them in the form of a resolution; is that it?

A. No. We were attempting to give to the Attorney General the attitude of the commercial interests of the Pacific coast in that matter, and we naturally confined ourselves to those matters when we appeared before the Attorney General.

Q. Do you chance to remember whether, in the mass of material furnished you to which you have referred, by the Southern Pacific Company, you found a resolution that read about like this one, defendants' Exhibit 22?

A. No.

Q. You do not remember one way or the other?

A. No; I do not remember of any such thing. I am quite 1751 certain that no resolution was given to us by the Southern Pacific Company.

Q. You do not know, from your knowledge of the facts, but what every word of the text of this resolution was prepared in the office of the Southern Pacific Company?

A. From my knowledge of our own organization, I would say that would not be true. The Chamber of Commerce of San Francisco has no such relations with the Southern Pacific as would suggest such a procedure.

Q. Are there any gentlemen connected with the chamber of commerce who are connected in any way with the Southern Pacific Company?

A. No.

Q. None whatever?

A. None whatever. You said members or directors?

Mr. HERRIN. He is talking about members.

The WITNESS. I beg your pardon. The Southern Pacific Company is a member of the chamber of commerce, in common with all the other companies. I thought you said "directors".

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. No; I was referring to members.

A. All the transportation companies, I think, are mem-1752 bers, and the steamship companies. We represent, broadly, the general interests of San Francisco.

Q. Do you remember whether Mr. Coster took any part in this investigation?

A. Mr. Coster, as I remember, was quite alive to all the developments of the case.

Q. And collaborated with you in gathering information upon the subject?

A. He was present at all the meetings at which the matter was discussed, or at least many of the meetings at which the matter was discussed.

Q. And visited some of the meetings of the other boards or bodies of a public nature, with you?

A. I do not recall that he did. Most of it was done by correspondence.

Q. Conducted by you?

A. Generally by myself; yes.

Q. And do you know whether Mr. Coster is in any way connected with Thomas A. Graham, assistant freight traffic manager of the Southern Pacific Company?

A. No.

Q. Do you know of their being interested in the same 1753 business?

A. No. Mr. Coster is president of the California Barrel Company.

Q. Do you know whether Thomas A. Graham has any interest in the California Barrel Company?

A. I never knew that he had.

Q. Do you know whether there is any relationship between those two gentlemen?

A. No.

Q. Do you know whether Thomas A. Graham furnished any information in this matter?

A. I do not recall any.

Q. Did Mr. Coster furnish any?

A. I do not recall.

Q. Did you send out any telegrams on this matter?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you send a telegram to the Attorney General?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you send telegrams to the other bodies?

A. Yes.

Q. At whose expense?

A. At the expense of the chamber of commerce.

1754 Q. Without reimbursement?

A. Absolutely.

Q. Absolutely?

A. Yes.

Q. Who were the members of the committee that went to Washington?

A. Mr. R. H. Swayne, Mr. M. H. Esberg, and myself, together with Mr. Fremont Older, who is the editor of the San Francisco Bulletin. I do not recall the others who went. We were met there by Mr. Teal, of Portland, and Mr. Kinney, president of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce.

Q. Which chamber of commerce paid the expenses of that trip?

A. The various directors paid their own expenses. The Chamber of Commerce of San Francisco paid my expenses.

Q. Did you lay this resolution before the Attorney General at the time of that visit?

A. I think not. I think we stated our general position. We were there to confer with him in regard to the matter.

Q. Did you give him any of the facts set forth in this resolution?

A. I think not. He may have had this probably before 1755 him by correspondence, but when we went to Washington we went purely to confer with him as citizens and shippers.

Q. How strong is the probability that he had this before him by correspondence before you went there?

A. May I look at the resolution just a moment?

(Counsel handed the resolution to the witness.)

The WITNESS. He very probably had this before him; and, as I recall, this resolution was passed at a very early stage of our investigations, and at a time when there was a great deal of pressure on the question, and we were anxious to raise the issues that were involved in the matter.

As we went into the question, we confined ourselves entirely to a statement of western conditions. We wanted the Attorney General to have the benefit of the atmosphere of the West and the interests of the public at large in the West as far as we were able to convey it to him.

We based our action most largely upon the Railroad Commission itself, its decision; and the vital part of our resolution was, of course, the resolution itself, the last paragraph.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. With this last statement before you, when should you 1756 say that the resolution was passed?

A. I should say in February of 1914. It may have been earlier. I have not the exact date.

Q. Did you go to Washington before the suit was started?

A. Yes.

Q. About what time should you say that you went to Washington?

A. I think it was at the end of February, or early in March of 1914.

Q. If I inform you of the fact that this suit was filed in court on February 11, 1914, will that assist you in stating the time when this resolution was passed?

A. It was doubtless much before that, if that were the case. I was in Washington at the time when the suit was brought. In fact, we presented such matters as we had to the Attorney General the day before the suit was brought. Immediately on hearing our case, the suit was brought in Salt Lake. The dates I do not have in mind. It was just my best impression, that I was east at the end of February.

Q. Was it your attitude, having in view the atmosphere to which you have referred here about, that you wanted to have the 1757 Southern Pacific Company retain the Central Pacific Railroad Company, even if it was contrary to law?

A. No.

Q. Was this question of the attitude of the chamber of commerce submitted to any meeting of the members of the chamber of commerce?

A. I do not recall at the moment. Our members were fully informed at all times as to our attitude. We issued a statement, as I recollect—a complete statement—to our members of the action of the chamber. The matter was reported very completely in the press, and no protest of any kind that I recall from any of our members was made. It was all done with the knowledge and consent of our membership.

Q. Have you ever taken any instructions in argumentation, Mr. Lynch?

A. No.

Q. Could you not state pretty positively that this matter was not taken up at any meeting of the members of the chamber of commerce?

A. No; I can not state that. I have just a very vague impression that it may possibly have gone out as a matter of referendum. Sometimes we do that on questions, if there is any doubt on any 1758 question in the chamber. If there is no division of opinion, no protests, we frequently submit questions to the chamber; and there being no debate upon this, no protests or differences of opinion among the membership of the chamber, it may be that no definite referendum went out. I do recall a statement which was made to our membership of the exact situation, and in going to Washington as a member of the committee it was well known in San Francisco what the object of our visit was.

Q. You say that the chamber maintains and then maintained a transportation department?

A. It does.

Q. Who was at the head of that department?

A. Now or then?

Q. Then.

A. W. R. Wheeler was the traffic manager and Seth Mann was the attorney.

Q. How long had W. R. Wheeler been the traffic manager?

A. During the entire existence of the chamber—that is, two or three years—and previous to that as a traffic organization which existed, composed of shippers and others in San Francisco or shippers in San Francisco.

1759 Q. Has this chamber of commerce existed only three years?

A. The chamber of commerce was the result of an amalgamation, some three or four years ago, between the merchants' association and the merchants' exchange and the chamber of commerce and the traffic bureau, a traffic bureau which existed as a semi-independent organization. They were all put together to represent all of the interests of the city.

Q. Mr. Wheeler had occupied that position with the chamber and an analogous position with one of these other bodies?

A. For some years, yes.

Q. And was familiar with transportation matters?

A. Yes.

Q. He, personally, was rather favorable to the expediency of an unmerger of these railroads?

A. You are asking me a question on that?

Q. Yes.

A. I do not know what his original position was previously. You mean the Union Pacific——

Q. No, I mean with reference to this matter.

A. I do not know as to that.

1760 Q. In the course of looking up the atmosphere of this community, did you make any inquiries of Mr. Wheeler as to his views upon the question?

A. My recollection is that Mr. Wheeler was absent from the city at the time, and Mr. Mann was consulted upon the question.

Q. How long was Mr. Wheeler absent?

A. I do not remember. I just recall that Mr. Wheeler was not, at that time, just at this particular time, present in the city, and Mr. Mann was the one with whom the matter was discussed.

Q. Where was Mr. Wheeler when you were waiting upon the Attorney General, which appears to have been about February 10, 1914?

A. I do not know. He may have returned to San Francisco.

Q. Do you happen to remember whether he was in Washington at that time?

A. No; he was not.

Q. This investigation into this subject, leading up to this resolution, had been going on over a period of how many months?

1761 A. Possibly two or three months, as far as I was concerned. The traffic department had, of course, knowledge of the general situation, and our directors had general knowledge of the situation.

Q. And was Mr. Wheeler absent all of those three months?

A. I do not recall.

Q. Do you recall whether when passing upon this transportation problem, rate problem, and so forth, you took the precaution to inquire of the head of your transportation department what his views were?

A. The matter was handled as an executive matter from the board of directors.

Q. I am not quite sure whether you mean yes or no to my question by that answer.

A. I do not recall that we consulted Mr. Wheeler in the matter.

Q. And you never got far enough into this question of the probable effect upon transportation facilities yourself to ask the opinion of Mr. Wheeler?

A. No; I do not remember talking to Mr. Wheeler about this question. I think that was due to his absence from the city. As I 1762 recall it, the board took action upon this question and telegraphed to Mr. Wheeler—that is my recollection—in Washington, stating its decision in the matter, and possibly asking him to influence the question.

Q. This atmosphere in San Francisco was dependent in part upon the idea that the separation would cause an increase in rates, was it not?

A. That was a part of our apprehension.

Q. And apart from such language as occurs, if any, in the printed opinion of the California Railroad Commission, who was it that told you that it was going to cause an increase in rates?

A. I think our sole information on that point was derived from the railroad commission and from the fact that the principle of regulation seems to be well established that a larger cost in operation, a larger cost in investment, would be the principle upon which rates would be raised or lowered.

Q. Did you make any investigation to see to what extent the separate operation of the Santa Fe into San Francisco had tended toward the increase of rates?

A. No; that did not occur to us as being analogous. The increase in rates that would follow in this case appeared to us to be very clear; that two roads, or a road having its terminals, if it were disrupted and other terminals had to be created, a larger cost would be involved for the same service.

Q. Did you make any investigation to see what the possibilities were of arranging for a joint use of the existing terminals by the two companies?

A. The decision of the railroad commission brought that out and seemed to lay down the principle that, under our State regulations, the joint use would open them up to all roads to use the terminals, and seemed to be objected to very strongly by the railroad commission.

Q. That is, the joint use by the railroads of the terminals was objected to by the railroad commission?

A. As I understand; as I recall that position. The railroad commission would not permit two roads to make a joint use of a terminal without opening the question up to all railroads coming into San Francisco.

Q. Did it seem to you that it would be disadvantageous to the shippers to open the terminals up to the use of all roads?

A. No; we did not consider that.

1764 Q. You did not consider that?

A. We did not consider that point further than that the joint use, opening up the terminals in that way, would not be desired by the two companies, or any two companies desiring to use the terminal.

Q. In your experience with commercial bodies, have you found that a few intelligent, energetic men, interested in a project, can frequently exert quite an influence upon the opinion of such a body?

A. That is not a general experience with the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce, because its board of directors is so representative, and attends the meetings so consistently, and are only excused upon definite leave of absence which is given to them. The average attendance of our twenty-one directors is somewhere near sixteen or seventeen of our directors, and matters are threshed out in a conference of our representative men, men representing widely divergent business.

Q. Then I understand your answer to be that your own experience has been the opposite?

A. In this organization.

Q. Your experience has been to the contrary?

1765 A. My experience has been to the contrary, though I quite understand that commercial organizations are sometimes differently conducted.

Q. When last before to-day was this matter called to your attention?

A. I have been reading the account of the proceedings, of course, before this. I have been following with some interest these matters. I was requested to be a witness here.

Q. You mean you have been reading the testimony day by day as it has been coming in here?

A. In a casual way; yes.

Q. Have you read the testimony that was put in on behalf of the Government?

A. No; I have just been following——

Mr. HERRIN. Do you mean in the newspapers?

The WITNESS. In the newspapers; yes. I mean the newspaper accounts of this immediate hearing.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. You meant just in the newspapers?

A. Yes. I have not been following——

1766 Q. It had not occurred to you that it was in the newspapers until Mr. Herrin spoke just now?

A. No; I have been reading the newspapers steadily—the only place I have had any opportunity of following the case.

Q. Did you get a pretty comprehensive idea, do you think, of what the testimony was in the newspapers?

A. No; very casual.

Q. When last before this morning was the matter of your knowledge, your conclusions, the sources of information that you had, the things that you did, called to your attention, or when last did it have your attention before testifying this morning?

A. The president of the Southern Pacific communicated with me, and I was asked to be a witness to the events that occurred in connection with the action of the chamber of commerce.

Q. And that communication came when?

A. Some two or three days ago.

Q. What did you do by way of refreshing your recollection on these subjects that I have just been talking about?

A. I consulted the president of the chamber at the present

1767 time and the chairman of the executive committee and the chairman of the transportation committee, speaking of the report, and I looked over the file of our matters, and I just happened to pick up this resolution, which I saw in the files, and brought it with me.

Q. Just as a matter of your own forethought in picking out this particular resolution?

A. Yes.

Q. When did you first learn that the Southern Pacific desired to introduce this resolution in evidence?

A. I had no knowledge that they wanted the resolution. I just happened to have it in my pocket, and it was asked for and I presented it.

Q. Did you bring any other paper?

A. Yes; I brought a statement which I made at the conclusion of the whole matter, for the information of our executive committee.

Q. You mean a narrative of the facts?

A. A statement of our position, which epitomized the reasons why our chamber of commerce took action upon the matter, as I have stated.

Q. Has that statement been published?

A. It was a statement for the information of our own 1768 executive committee, so far as I had it; and I also think I have a statement which we made to our members in that connection.

Q. Did you ever see any of the telegrams sent by any of the other boards of trade or chambers of commerce to the Attorney General relative to this suit?

A. I do not recall. I remember telegrams being sent.

Q. Do you remember whether you ever saw any of them?

A. No.

Q. Do you know who suggested the phraseology of them?

A. Very probably I did; that is to say, from the office, or Mr. Michaels, the president of the chamber.

Q. Did you get any information in connection with this matter from E. L. McCormick?

A. I have had personal conversations with Mr. McCormick on the subject. I do not remember any written.

Q. Is he a member of the chamber?

A. Not personally, I think. He may be.

Q. You know him as one of the vice presidents of the Southern Pacific?

A. Yes; and in all the information which we received from 1769 the Southern Pacific we recognized at all times the sources of the information and estimated it as from its source, our chamber not at all being connected or in any way influenced by the personal interests of the Southern Pacific. We were very much concerned with our own interests in the matter.

Q. You suggested to these other commercial bodies that they should send telegrams to the Attorney General?

A. As I recall, that was done from our office. We advised other organizations of our action and what we had done. Now, they may have copied our telegrams, but we suggested to them the situation.

Q. When did you first learn of the decision of the California Railroad Commission relative to the agreement of February, 1913, between the Southern Pacific and the Union Pacific Companies?

A. Do you mean personally? You mean my own information?

Q. Yes.

A. I do not recall exactly when; it was some time previous to this time.

Q. Was there a lapse of time between the coming out of that decision and your taking up this investigation or was that de-1770 cision the immediate cause of your taking up the investigation?

A. As I recall, this decision created quite a little comment amongst our members. It was a matter of knowledge of our traffic department.

Q. Did those investigations you made proceed right away on that decision?

A. No; our activity in the matter was due, so far as I can remember, to a published statement that the Attorney General was very seriously considering it. As I recall, there was six months given, six months' time, which was a matter of knowledge to us in the organization, after the failure of this Union Pacific-Central Pacific control and the failure to ratify the agreement. As I remember, there was at that time six months given to these roads to adjust themselves to the situation, and the matter became acute with us when that six months, I think, had expired, and it seemed imminent that the suit, such as was ultimately brought, was contemplated by the Government.

Q. Now that we have gone somewhat more at length into this, do you think that you could give us any assistance at all as to where this resolution came from, the text of it?

A. No; it came out of all the information that we had.

1771 Q. Well, somebody obviously drafted this resolution, put it into language?

A. Yes; and drafted it from such information as we had in our files.

Q. And you have no information whatever as to who drafted it?

A. No.

Q. Did the board of directors appoint any committee to draft the resolution?

A. I do not recall that they did.

Q. Did you ever draft any resolutions?

A. I do not recall drafting this resolution. It may have been possible.

Q. It may have been that you drafted this yourself?

A. Yes.

Q. And presented it?

A. There is a possibility; I do not recall it.

Q. Is there any way that you can think of by which you could determine who drafted the resolution?

A. Only so far as it might appear in our records. I will be glad to look up our records and see what happened.

Q. You think the drafting was a matter that was spread 1772 on the record?

A. It may or may not have been. The person who presented the resolution might give that much of a hint as to who drafted it.

Q. Do you remember whether or not there was any increase in rates after the dissolution between the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific?

A. No.

Q. Did you investigate that subject at all?

A. At that time? Let us see, what was the date of that?

Q. Well, the decision came down in December, 1912.

A. That occurred before my connection with the chamber. So far as I know, there is nothing on record in the chamber protesting against the dissolution of the Union and the Southern Pacific. The increase of rates in that connection would not appeal to us as analogous.

Q. What is the church of which you were pastor?

A. Baptist.

Q. I mean the particular church; not the denomination.

A. The Baptist Church of Petaluma.

Mr. McCLENNEN. That is all.

1773 Redirect examination by Mr. HERRIN:

Q. You spoke of the Union Pacific-Southern Pacific dissolution; do you know whether or not that was opposed or favored by the same men that took a decided stand in this matter that you testified to?

Mr. McCLENNEN. That is objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.

The WITNESS. So far as I know, the chamber took no official action upon the question. The sentiment was probably favoring the dissolution.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. The sentiment was favoring that dissolution?

A. So far as I know; yes.

Q. There was an undercurrent of criticism in the cross-examination implying that the Southern Pacific had something to do with this action. Will you state how far the Southern Pacific controls the action of the chamber of commerce, and generally what the relations of that body are to it?

Mr. McCLENNEN. Do you mean by that, action by direct vote or indirect?

Mr. HERRIN. In any way, any possible way in which the 1774 Southern Pacific can exercise control over the chamber of commerce.

The WITNESS. The attitude of the chamber of commerce toward the Southern Pacific Company has generally been shown in forms of antagonism. The transportation department, controlled by its board of directors, is very much interested in the adjustment of rates, and we have frequent occasion to bring suits against the Southern Pacific in order to secure lower rates, or better rates in comparison with other places; and while the chamber acts in cooperation with all interests, it represents the public interest, and in no sense does it represent any railroad interest. The chamber of commerce is influenced consciously only by what it conceives to be to the interest of the general public and the commercial and commerce interests of San Francisco.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. It has repeatedly taken a position against the Southern Pacific, has it not?

A. Yes; we have many suits before the State commission and before the Interstate Commerce Commission, both. The organization is generally thought of as representing shippers as against the 1775 interests of transportation companies. The organization, however, tries to take a fair and impartial position upon all questions. It only takes the shippers' interests when they represent the general interests of the community.

Q. You cooperate with the transportation companies as far as your interests are identical?

A. If our interests are identical, we cooperate heartily.

Q. But I suppose you rather represent the interests of the shipper than that of the railroad company, as such?

Mr. McCLENNEN. That question is objected to as leading, immaterial, and calling for an opinion.

The WITNESS. There is frequent complaint from the railroads that that is our attitude. We endeavor not to represent the private interests of individual shippers, but we do represent the interests of the membership in the chamber of commerce at large.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Don't you know that one of the grievances of the Southern Pacific is that your chamber of commerce is so often in antagonism to them?

Mr. McCLENNEN. This question is objected to because it sounds very much like testimony.

1776 The WITNESS. The chamber of commerce constantly finds itself compelled, in the interest of the public, to complain legally and otherwise against the interests of the Southern Pacific and of other companies.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. You spoke of Mr. Teal, of Portland; what was Mr. Teal?

A. Mr. Teal is attorney and traffic manager of the Portland Chamber of Commerce.

Q. And he met you in Washington?

A. Yes.

Q. What was he there for?

A. For the same purpose as we were.

Q. Did he align himself with you, or was he against you?

Mr. McCLENNEN. That is objected to as immaterial, incompetent, and irrelevant and too general.

The WITNESS. He was with us.

Recross-examination by Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. Did you, in your investigation of the atmosphere hereabout, notice any Union Pacific atmosphere?

A. I do not recall any such, so far as I understand your question.

1777 Q. What were the reasons why the individual members of the chamber of commerce seemed to you to favor the dissolution between the Southern Pacific and the Union Pacific?

A. So far as I could judge it was because the union of those two lines rather placed the control of affairs in the East, and we are very much concerned here, in our distributive propositions, to develop from the western standpoint, and we are very gratified to have a road dominated and interested from the standpoint of western conditions, when, if the roads were dominated, as they probably were under the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific union, entirely from the East, and united with other eastern roads, it would put a premium upon the distribution of goods from the East rather than the distribution from the West. So far as we know, these roads have been built from the west east, and with a more accurate knowledge of the distributive conditions and general development proportionate to the development of the territory throughout the West.

Q. You mean there was a fear that the Union Pacific would not understand the local conditions in California?

A. And that their interests would be, at some local points, antagonistic.

1778 Q. Were you aware that the Southern Pacific was a Kentucky corporation, having its chief executive officer resident in New York City?

A. I am aware of the fact that it has its corporate home in Kentucky. That is general knowledge, and as I understand it, all the operation and administration of the road is conducted from San Francisco.

Q. Do you know where its general counsel has his office?

A. No.

Q. Did you notice that the transportation interests of California suffered materially during the domination of the Union Pacific Railroad?

A. I have no accurate information on that subject.

Q. Did you ever observe anything indicating that?

A. The general fact that the road was administered from eastern points would seem to put the whole force of the development of this territory from the eastern angle instead of the western angle; and all of our hopes, manufacturing and otherwise, are based upon, or our desire is to be, the beginning of railroads and not the end of railroads. As long as it was controlled from the East we were more or less in danger of having eastern interests dominate the situation.

1779 From our standpoint, if we desire it to face from here east——

Q. Pardon me, but just what did you understand my question to be?

A. I would have to hear the question just exactly.

(The question was repeated by the reporter, as follows:)

"Q. Did you notice that the transportation interests of California suffered materially during the domination of the Union Pacific Railroad?" "Did you ever observe anything indicating that?"

The WITNESS. No.

By Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. Was your attention sufficiently called to transportation matters during this investigation into the California atmosphere so that you gained any information as to the extent, if any, to which the service to and from California, and in California, improved during the period when the Union Pacific Railroad was in control?

A. Just general knowledge and general impression on that question; but an analysis of the fundamental situation would certainly lead to a desire that in the development of this western territory it should be dominated, so far as possible, from this end 1780 and not from the other end.

Q. And your apprehension was that if this separation took place it might result in the Union Pacific's control all the way into San Francisco; is that it?

A. Well, our apprehension was that in the dissolution of those lines out here, if the main line were dominated entirely from the East, it would cause our interests to suffer, especially as it would tear apart the various branches that had been constructed and adapted to the distributive area with which we were concerned.

Q. And you were afraid that this dissolution would result in the dominance of the Union Pacific over what you call the main line?

A. That was the general idea; a general idea that had some influence.

Q. What do you refer to as the main line?

A. The line from Ogden to San Francisco, around by the way of Stockton, extending up to the Oregon line and down through the center of the State to some point. We could not see any advantage that would come to us in such a dissolution, and we could see some very grave disadvantages, with awkward service resulting, or expensive service.

1781 Mr. McCLENNEN. The petitioner moves to strike out the last part of the answer, beginning with "We could not see", as not responsive to the question or, indeed, an answer to any question, and as a statement volunteered by the witness.

(Whereupon a recess was taken until three o'clock p. m.)

1782 AFTER RECESS.

Mr. BLAIR. The defendants put in evidence, as defendants' Exhibit No. 23, the hereinafter mentioned certified copies of the reports of the Central Pacific Railroad Company and the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, filed with the Secretary of the Interior pursuant to section 20 of the act of July 1, 1862 (12 Stat., 489), incorporating the Union Pacific Railroad Company, and so forth, and section 2 of the act of June 25, 1868 (15 Stat., 79), relative to filing reports of railroad companies, to the extent only of such portions of said reports as are now particularly mentioned.

(The foregoing extracts from the reports of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company and the Central Pacific Railroad Company were received and thereupon marked as a whole "Defendants' Exhibit No. 23, March 12, 1915", and will be found in the volume of defendants' exhibits.)

1788 Mr. BLAIR. Defendants put in evidence an extract from a return filed by the Central Pacific Railroad Company with the California Commission of Transportation for the year ending December 31, 1877, being a statement of the roads belonging to other companies operated by the Central Pacific Railroad Company under lease or contract, giving name, description and length of each, said statement being set forth in the appendix to the biennial report of the Commission of Transportation of California for the years ending December 31, 1877 and 1878, at page 77 of the appendix.

Similar statement for the year ending December 31, 1878, found at page 317 of the appendix of the biennial report of the commission of transportation for the years ending December 31, 1877 and 1878.

The reports of the railroad commission for 1879 were not available, if any ever were issued.

Similar statement for the year ending December 31, 1880, set forth in the third annual report of the Board of Railroad Commissioners of the State of California for the year ending December 31, 1880, 1881, and 1882, on page 191.

Similar statement for the year ending December 31, 1881, found in the same report, on page 373.

1789 Similar statement for the year ending December 31, 1882, said statement being set forth in the appendix to the fifth annual report of the Board of Railroad Commissioners of the State of California for the year ending December 31, 1884, on page 67 thereof.

Similar statement for the year ending December 31, 1883, said statement being set forth in the appendix to the fifth annual report of the Board of Railroad Commissioners of the State of California for the year ending December 31, 1884, at page 232 of the appendix.

Similar statement for the year ending December 31, 1884, said statement being set forth in the appendix of the seventh annual report of the Board of Railroad Commissioners of the State of California for the year ending December 31, 1886, on page 69 of the appendix.

(The foregoing statements were received and thereupon marked, collectively, "Defendants' Exhibit No. 24, March 12, 1915", and will be found in the volume of defendants' exhibits.)

Mr. McCLENNEN. The petitioner puts in evidence the fact, and counsel for the defendants agree that such is the fact, that the reports of the Central Pacific Railroad Company to the California Railroad Commission state that the number of stockholders in the company for the following years are as follows:

1790

1877	89	1889	Number not shown.
1878	82	1890	1,703
1879	No report found.	1891	1,700
1880	411	1892	1,700
1881	1,340	1893	1,681
1882	1,880	1894	1,713
1883	2,198	1895	1,651
1884	2,600	1896	1,630
1885	2,237	1897	1,617
1886	1,916	1898	1,427
1887	1,826	1899	480
1888	1,796	1900	16

1791

Petitioner also puts in evidence, and counsel for the defendants agree that such is the fact, that these reports of the State in 1877 show that the number of stockholders resident in California is 62 and the par value of their holdings $43,256,300.

For 1878 the number of stockholders resident in California, 56; the par value of their holdings, $43,260,000.

For the year 1880 the number of stockholders resident in California, 46; and the par value of their holdings, $25,672,000.

For the year 1881 the number of stockholders resident in California, 48; and the par value of their holdings, $18,272,800.

And that the reports for the subsequent years do not state the number of stockholders who are resident in California or the par value of their holdings.

The petitioner puts in evidence the inventory of the estate of Charles Crocker, deceased, filed July 12, 1889, to the extent of all parts thereof containing any reference to the capital stock of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, namely, the item which reads as follows:

1792

Capital stock:

Central Pacific Railroad Co., viz:

17,599 shares, various numbers	527,970
34,049 shares at $30,		$1,021,470
16,450 shares, various numbers	493,500

Coupons unpaid on 17,599 shares paid Nov. 12, 1888.

Mr. HERRIN. You say you put that in from a report filed. Filed where?

Mr. MCCLENNEN. Filed with William A. Davies, clerk, by F. [illegible] Houghton, deputy clerk.

Mr. HERRIN. My point is that you are not reading from the original file. I want to know where you got it.

Mr. MCCLENNEN. The copy from which counsel for the petitioner is reading is a copy made from and compared with the inventory now on file in the office of the Crocker Estate Company, 525 Crocker Building, San Francisco.

Mr. HERRIN. Who was the custodian of that?

Mr. GANN. Charles E. Green, secretary of the Crocker Estate Company.

Mr. HERRIN. So Mr. Charles E. Green gives you the inventory which he says was filed with the clerk of the court?

1793 Mr. MCCLENNEN. That is the history of that.

Mr. HERRIN. And from the copy that he assures you was a copy of that original you make this copy which you have read?

Mr. MCCLENNEN. Yes.

Mr. HERRIN. All right. We will look that over and see if we want to add anything to it.

Mr. MCCLENNEN. The petitioner puts in evidence the certified copy of the decree of distribution of the estate of Leland Stanford, dated December 28, 1898, filed in the county recorder's office of San Francisco, Book 1802 of Deeds, page 219, to the extent that it shows that the shares of stock of the Central Pacific Railroad Company belonging to the estate which were distributed were 32,973 shares.

Mr. HERRIN. We will look that over and see what, if anything, we want to add.

Mr. MCCLENNEN. The petitioner notes on the record the fact that in October, 1914, the petitioner requested counsel for the Southern Pacific Company to produce the original transcontinental agreements of September 28 and November 8, 1883, of which printed copies have been put in as petitioner's exhibits 18 and 19, and 1794 that the originals have not been produced.

Mr. BLAIR. Counsel for defendants states that if there were any such originals they belonged to a time and a régime which has left no evidence of their existence at the present time, so far as he has been able to ascertain.

(Whereupon, at 4.30 o'clock p. m., an adjournment was taken until to-morrow, Saturday, March 13, 1915, at 11 o'clock a. m.)

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, PETITIONER,

v.

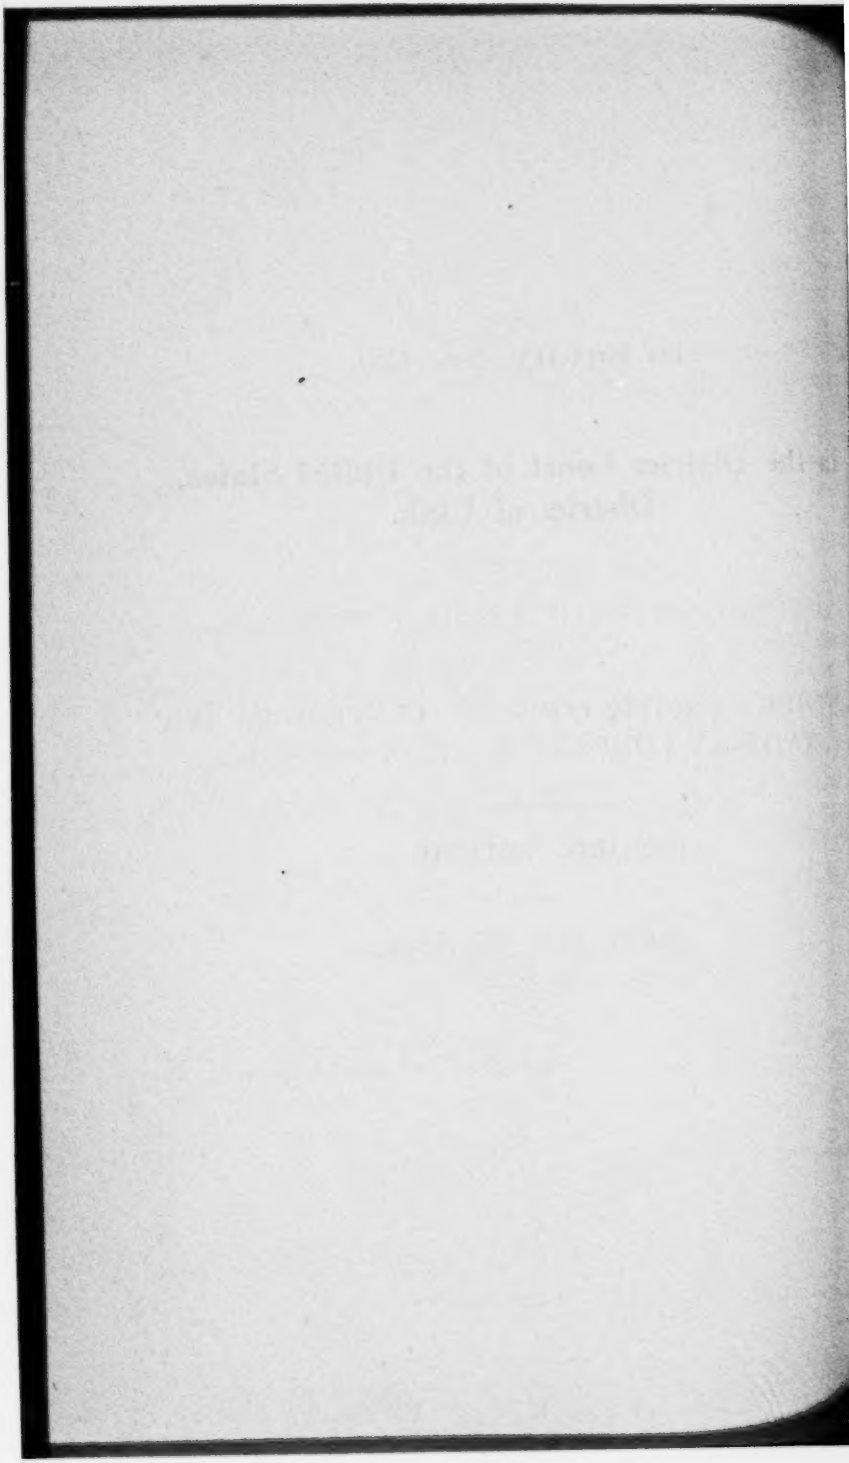
SOUTHERN PACIFIC COMPANY, CENTRAL PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY ET AL., DEFENDANTS.

RECORD—VOLUME 3.

DEFENDANTS' EVIDENCE.

Pages 873 to 1221, inclusive.

WASHINGTON : GOVERNMENT PRINTING OFFICE : 1915



1795 TWENTY-FIRST DAY.

ROOM 921, FLOOD BUILDING,
San Francisco, Cal., Saturday, March 13, 1915.

The hearing was resumed, pursuant to adjournment, at 11 o'clock a. m., before Frank R. Hanna, special examiner.

Present on behalf of the United States: James W. Orr, Esq., Edward F. McClennen, Esq., and Edward E. Gann, Esq., special assistants to the Attorney General.

Present on behalf of the defendants: W. F. Herrin, Esq., J. P. Blair, Esq., P. F. Dunne, Esq., Garret McEnerney, Esq., and E. J. Foulds, Esq., for the Southern Pacific Company.

1796 JOHN M. ESHLEMAN was called as a witness on behalf of the defendants, and, having been duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Where do you reside?

A. El Centro, California.

Q. How long have you lived in California?

A. Since 1896.

Q. What is your profession?

A. Attorney.

Q. How long have you been a practicing attorney in California?

A. I graduated from the university in 1892. It was either the next year or the following year, about 1893 or 1894; I can not remember offhand.

Q. When did you become a member of the California Railroad Commission?

A. January, 1911.

Q. How long did you hold that office?

A. Four years.

1797 Q. Were you chairman of the commission while you were on it?

A. I was president. That is the term used.

Q. That commission, as we all know, by the constitutional provisions, has very full and plenary power over rate questions and railroads generally?

A. It has been so charged.

Q. There is no doubt about it, is there?

A. I do not think so.

Q. You did not find any items of power which were taken from you particularly by the constitutional provisions?

A. I have not discovered any.

Q. During your incumbency of office as the president of the commission, was it active in the discharge of its duties?

A. It tried to be; yes; and I think it was.

Q. That is, the members devoted their entire time to the duties of their positions?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you have many contested cases?

A. Very many.

Q. Involving generally what questions, as to railroads?

1798 A. Involving primarily the rates. Also a great many matters of service.

Q. The commission has powers of controlling the service?

A. Yes.

Q. It was given power to fix the rates absolutely?

A. Yes.

Q. So that every phase of railroad operation would come within your purview in these cases that were heard before you?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall the matter of a contract between the Union Pacific Railroad Company and the Central Pacific Railway Company concerning a proposed sale of stock of the Central Pacific Railroad by the Southern Pacific Company, and making leases of certain of the lines in California, which were submitted to your commission for approval?

A. I do.

Q. Were you present at the hearing before the commission?

A. I was.

Q. You presided as president, did you?

A. I did.

Q. Did the subpœna served upon you requiring your attend-1799 ance in this case require the production of any papers?

A. It did not, to my recollection. I have not got the subpœna with me.

Mr. HERRIN. May we use copies of the opinions that were given in that case without producing the original record, Mr. McClennen? I have a printed copy.

The WITNESS. I have the volume in which the opinions are printed.

Mr. HERRIN. You may make a comparison if you want to, Mr. McClennen.

Mr. MCCLENNEN. Of course, I shall want to save some objections to the opinion.

Mr. HERRIN. Yes; but I was speaking of the use of these copies—

Mr. MCCLENNEN. These printed copies you have here may be deemed to have the same force as certified copies.

The WITNESS. I suppose you are probably aware that the courts under the law take judicial cognizance of the decisions of the railroad commission.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. I understand that is so with respect to the State courts.

1800 A. Yes.

Q. I hand you a printed volume of opinions and orders of the Railroad Commission of California, volume 2.

A. Would there be any objection to my using my own volume?

Q. Certainly not. And I ask you to refer us to the first opinion, main opinion or report, of the commission given in the case I have mentioned.

A. That is found, beginning on page 233 of the second volume of the opinions and orders of the railroad commission.

Mr. MCENERNEY. It is decision No. 477.

The WITNESS. Yes; then it is followed by a supplemental opinion on page 249, and there is a subsequent opinion on a modified application.

Mr. MCENERNEY. No. 504 is the third one, Mr. Eshleman, I think.

The WITNESS. At page 504?

Mr. MCENERNEY. No; decision No. 504.

Mr. HERRIN. Page 257.

The WITNESS. The main opinion is beginning on page 233. The supplemental opinion begins on page 248.

Mr. MCENERNEY. You will see it in your index here.

1801 By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. I will not go further than those two opinions at present.

A. Very well.

Q. Did you prepare the opinion in decision No. 477?

A. I did.

Q. Also in decision No. 478?

A. I did.

Mr. HERRIN. I offer that opinion in evidence, and ask to have it marked and copied in the exhibits.

What is the syllabus, Mr. Eshleman—a mere condensation?

The WITNESS. Yes. That is not a part of the opinion.

Mr. HERRIN. Then we will omit the syllabus, unless it is desired by counsel for the petitioner, and just copy the main report of the commission as an exhibit.

Mr. MCCLENNEN. Petitioner objects to the introduction of this opinion, as immaterial, incompetent, and irrelevant to any of the issues in the pending case.

(The opinion referred to was received and marked "Defendants' Exhibit (Eshleman) No. 25, March 13, 1915," and will be found in the volume of defendants' exhibits.)

1802 Mr. McCLENNEN. This offer is of decision No. 477 only?

Mr. HERRIN. Yes.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Of course the opinion speaks for itself and appears to deal with some of the traffic conditions that would be affected by the putting into operation of this agreement. I call attention to the clause in the opinion, near the top of page 240, reading:

"We do not believe it necessary to the determination of the questions that are now presented for us to present in detail the traffic conditions which we consider will be brought about if the rearrangement contemplated by this agreement is consummated."

I will ask you, Mr. Eshleman, if you gave special consideration to the traffic conditions that were involved in that agreement and reached any opinion upon those subjects?

Mr. McCLENNEN. This is objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.

The WITNESS. We did; particularly as regards traffic conditions affecting intrastate business.

By Mr. HERRIN:

1803 Q. I will ask you to state what effect the severance of these lines, as proposed by that agreement, would, in your opinion, have upon intrastate traffic?

Mr. McCLENNEN. The petitioner objects to this question on the ground that it is immaterial, incompetent, and irrelevant, calls for an opinion as to probabilities in a matter which is not material to the issues in this case, and as to which the witness is not qualified to express an opinion, and as calling for an opinion based upon facts which have not been shown in the present case and concerning which the petitioner, of necessity, has no opportunity to test the accuracy, by examination of the witnesses or otherwise from whom the facts were obtained upon which the opinion of the present witness is based.

Mr. HERRIN. I will state that the petitioner introduced in evidence the contract which was considered by the railroad commission in the opinion just introduced, and that contract, in connection with the opinion, makes clear the matters that were considered by the railroad commission, and I deem it unnecessary to take up time here to amplify those things which already appear from the record. I will ask for an answer to my question, and will ask to have it read.

1804 (The reporter repeated the pending question as follows:)

"Q. I will ask you to state what effect the severance of ese lines, as proposed by that agreement, would in your opinion ave upon intrastate traffic?"

The WITNESS. In my opinion it would have a dual effect: First, ne of convenience; second, one of price; that is, the rate.

In the particular case it was agreed by the parties before the com- ission that the granting of the application would not be used by hem as a means of increasing any of the rates that, after the sev- rance, applied upon traffic that at such time would go over two ines, that before the severance would only go over one line.

The commission was of the opinion, and I was then and am still, hat this severance ultimately would of necessity affect all rates that hereafter applied upon traffic over two lines.

The Interstate Commerce Commission and the California Railroad Commission, as well as most commissions, have recognized the fact hat a higher rate shall prevail for what is known as a joint movement over two lines than prevails for a similar movement
1805 over one line under like circumstances. That being the case, as to every movement in California that at the present time nd then was made over the one line, Southern Pacific controlled properties, there would be a right on the part of the owners when the ownership was divided to demand a higher return for the joint movement than was given for the single movement.

To illustrate that I have had taken from the tariffs—and these, of course, are subject to check, but they are taken from the tariffs— some illustrations of movements that would be required to be over Southern Pacific and Central Pacific after the divorce, that are now over only Southern Pacific controlled lines. If you desire, at this time, I will give those.

Mr. HERRIN. Yes; proceed.

Mr. MCCLENNEN. This question is objected to on the same grounds as the preceding one, and also as introducing into the record in- stances which are further immaterial to the present case.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Proceed, Mr. Eshleman.

1806 A. Lumber is probably the most important commodity han- dled by the Southern Pacific Company. According to their last annual report, copies of which I will be glad to submit, which I have from the files of the railroad commission, 18.34 per cent of their traffic is lumber. Most of this lumber originates on one line and is used upon the other line, if we have regard to the division between the Central Pacific and the Southern Pacific.

For instance, the rate from Weed to Colton is $6.50 per ton. That movement would be from Weed to Goshen Junction by way of the Central Pacific, thence from Goshen Junction to Colton by way of the Southern Pacific. The rate applying for the single movement over the Southern Pacific controlled line from Weed to Colton is $6.50; the local rate from Weed to Goshen Junction is $6.30, and the local rate from Goshen Junction to Colton is $5.00, making a combination of $11.30 per ton, or $4.80 increase, provided, when the roads were divided the public authority and control would permit the sum of the locals as the new rate to apply. I do not mean to intimate that that would be, because while, as I have already said, it is conceded by those who are engaged in regulating, including the 1807 Interstate Commerce Commission, that where rail movement is over two lines there should be the higher rate. It has never been conceded, except in rare instances, especially with regard to less than carload freight, that a joint movement shall have a rate which is equal to the sum of the locals. I did not mean to imply that the rate would be $11.30. I do mean to imply, however, that if we follow the precedents that have been established, and I think could be justified if these roads were divorced, the rate from Weed to Colton would be more than $6.50. It is my opinion that the Southern Pacific and the Central Pacific, for that joint movement, could justify a rate higher than $6.50, provided the $6.50 at the present time is a reasonable rate.

I have numerous instances, but I will only take a few, as I do not want to burden the record with many of these.

Take from Santa Cruz to Ione. It would be by Southern Pacific from Santa Cruz to San Jose, thence by Central Pacific from San Jose to Galt, then by Southern Pacific from Galt to Ione, a three-line movement. The rate from Santa Cruz to Ione over the Southern Pacific controlled line for the single movement is $2.65, the rate over the S. P. from Santa Cruz to San Jose is $1.20, and from San Jose to Galt it is $1.60, and from Galt to Ione $1.60, making a total, 1808 based on the sum of the locals, of $4.40, or $1.75 greater than the present single-line rate. Here again I do not mean to intimate that the commission could be forced to allow the sum of the locals. I am of the opinion, however, that it could be forced to allow more than the present rate of $2.65, provided the present rate of $2.65 is not unduly high.

On cement we have a like condition. Cement, of course, is manufactured at comparatively few places in the State, and the commodity rates apply from those places. From Davenport, where there is a cement factory, to Newman the present rate is $2.00. That movement is over the Southern Pacific from Davenport to San Jose, over the Central Pacific from San Jose to Tracy, and over the Southern Pacific from Tracy to Newman. The rate by this line, which is the line over which the rate now applies, is $2.00. The sum of the locals over the three-line movement would be $3.65. It may be noted that this could be routed from Davenport to Newman entirely over the lines of the S. P., by going to San Francisco and thence to Newman by Southern Pacific line, so it may be a case where there would not necessarily be any change, but the present rate only applies through Niles and is a three-line movement.

1809 Take the rate from Bay Point to Placerville, where it would be impossible to carry traffic, if the roads were divided, other than over two lines; the rate at present is $3.00 per ton. That traffic is carried by Southern Pacific from Bay Point to Sacramento, by Central Pacific from Sacramento to Brighton, and by Southern Pacific from Brighton to Placerville. The rate applying now over the Southern Pacific controlled lines is $3.00. The sum of the local rates that are in effect there on segments of these lines that I have designated amounts to $3.80, being an increase of 80 cents. I have various others similar.

Likewise coal; there are innumerable cases almost of all these commodities where, if a division is made, rates will have to apply for a joint movement over two independent lines which now only apply over one single controlled line, and in every one of those instances it is my opinion that unless there are some extraordinary conditions prevailing the roads could justify a higher rate for the joint movement than they can justify for the single movement.

Q. The instances you have given are merely types of illustrations of thousands of others that could be given?

1810 A. Merely illustrative. I think there are, perhaps, close to millions; they are almost innumerable, of course.

Oil, of course, is another commodity that is very important. That would, almost all of it, have to be moved over a two-line haul instead of a single as at present.

Cattle is another important industry that is similarly affected.

Q. Have you any reference to the oil rates?

Mr. McCLENNEN. Note to this question the same objection that has been made to the other questions relating to particular instances.

The WITNESS. The oil rate from Bakersfield to Merced is $2.30 per ton. Oil moved from Bakersfield to Merced would have to be moved over Southern Pacific lines from Bakersfield to Fresno, thence over the Central Pacific from Fresno to Merced, unless it was desired to move it up to the junction near Kerman, I think—I don't exactly remember the name. There is an alternative line, but you would have to have a three-line movement if you went that way. My understanding from the tariff is, and from operating conditions, that that traffic moves from Fresno to Merced. Such being the case, it would have to move Southern Pacific from Bakersfield to Fresno, thence via Central Pacific from Fresno to Merced.

1811 The rate applying at present over the Southern Pacific controlled lines is $2.30 per ton. The rate from Bakersfield to Fresno is $1.55, and from Fresno to Merced, $1.20, making $2.75 as the sum of the locals, which is 45 cents per ton in excess of the present rate.

Likewise from Bakersfield to Oakdale we have a three-line movement: Southern Pacific line, Bakersfield to Tracy; Central Pacific from Tracy to Stockton; and Southern Pacific from Stockton to Oakdale. The sum of the locals exceeds the rate that is now in effect by $1.30 per ton. That is illustrative of the condition.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Take Bakersfield to Chico; there is some considerable movement of oil between those points?

Mr. MCCLENNEN. The same objection as heretofore.

The WITNESS. Yes. Oil, of course, moves quite generally all over the State.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. Oil is in general use as fuel; that is, crude oil?

A. Yes.

Q. And it is moved from the fields—Bakersfield in one and Coalinga and other points—generally over the State?

1812 A. Yes; Bakersfield to Chico—the rate applying at present is $2.65. That would have to move Southern Pacific from Bakersfield to Marysville and C. P. from Marysville to Chico. The sum of the locals exceeds the rate now in application by 85 cents.

I should say that the testimony I am giving would have to be modified as to these movements after the lines were divided, if they were divided, that came into competition with another single-line movement over an independent road. For instance, if the Santa Fe had a single-line movement between two points involved, the fact that the Central Pacific and the Southern Pacific were under separate ownership—while that might justify a higher rate as a practical proposition—they would not, and there would be no danger under those circumstances.

Q. You gave some lumber rates, did you not?

A. Yes. There is another commodity that I intended to speak about, and that is ore; because of the fact that practically every bit of ore produced in the State would of necessity have to be hauled by two and almost in every case a three line movement.

Q. Do you wish to give any instances of ore?

1813 A. Well, of course, ore is well known. It is produced in the mountain counties ordinarily.

Q. What points of shipment do you get ore from?

A. Well, ore comes from up on the Sierra Railway, the mines up there, the Southern Mines they are called; and, of course, there are various places on the Central Pacific, the main line, and from points on the Placerville branch.

Q. Shipped to what point?

A. Usually to Selby for smelting. For instance, from Ione to Selby. Ione gets ore from the mines around Jackson, one of the most important mines in the State. That rate at present is $1.00. The rate from Ione to Galt over the S. P. is $1.00, from Galt to Tracy is $1.00, and from Tracy to Selby is $1.00, making a combination of locals—which, again, I do not wish to be understood as saying I think could be justified, but which it would be the tendency of the carriers to contend for—of $3.00, as against the $1.00 at present.

Q. There are other instances of ore rates that can be given for shipments from points in the mountains?

A. Yes.

Q. But the one given is illustrative?

A. It is illustrative of the general conditions.

1814 Q. You spoke of cases where a competing line like the Atchison could furnish an alternative routing, instancing, of course, that it would not make any difference what they might justify themselves in asking to receive; in the absence of competition, competition would control in that case?

A. Yes.

Q. Does that govern many of these cases?

A. Not many of the cases I have given. It would affect many cases in the San Joaquin Valley, but north of that it would not affect many. The Western Pacific would have a small effect in portions of the Sacramento Valley. The Southern Pacific has a good deal of exclusive territory in the State of California.

Q. You have given instances of lumber rates?

A. I have.

Q. That is a very large and important volume of traffic in California?

A. Yes; the largest single item of traffic, I think, the Southern Pacific has.

Q. Moving from points to the north to points in the interior of the State and south?

A. Principally from points in the north. Some is pro-

1815 duced at points on the Sierra Railway and delivered to both Southern Pacific and Santa Fe at Oakdale, but the amount is relatively inconsiderable.

Q. What you have stated illustrates the point you make concerning rates?

A. Yes.

Q. We might go on at great length giving details; but the illustrations you have given, I take it, are sufficient to show the principle involved.

Mr. McCLENNEN. If that be a question, it is objected to.

Mr. HERRIN. No; it is not a question. I was going to add to it.

Mr. McCLENNEN. If it is not a question, it is objected to——

The WITNESS (interposing). I will answer the question over objection.

Mr. McCLENNEN. If it is now understood to be a question, it is objected to as leading, containing several statements of facts not in the record, calling for an opinion and conclusion of the witness.

The WITNESS. My answer to that question is: These have 1816 been merely illustrations of a general condition that I know prevails from studying the tariffs and knowing the lines of these two carriers; that is, the lines that would be separately controlled, were the Southern Pacific required to sell the Central Pacific.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. As to the service which is now given by the Southern Pacific Company, operating all these lines, and that which could be given if the two companies operated the lines separately, what would you say?

Mr. McCLENNEN. The petitioner objects to this question as calling for matter immaterial and incompetent and irrelevant; for an opinion of the witness on a matter not of importance in this case, and for a statement of opinion as to future probabilities.

The WITNESS. My opinion is that it would very seriously interfere with the convenient operation of the lines of the Southern Pacific, as now operated. I know of no alternative method of operation that would give as good service as the Southern Pacific is now giving.

By way of illustration, the Owl, a well-known train to Los Angeles, could not run through Fresno unless it went around 1817 through Porterville. No through train to Los Angeles could go through the most populous portion of the San Joaquin Valley, namely, what is known as the east side, through Modesto, Merced, Turlock, and that line there. No through train could be operated to Oregon. There are various other minor details; for instance, the Oakdale branch, so called, which begins at Stockton and serves the Southern mines through Milton to Oakdale, and there joins on to the Central Pacific again at Merced. It would be, as you might say, up in the air, the Southern Pacific line adjoining a Central Pacific line on both ends. The same might be said for the Galt and Ione branch, and the Lodi and Valley Spring branch. I do not mean to be understood as saying that joint arrangements could not be made, but if joint arrangements are to be made it is hard for me to understand why there would be any advantage in tearing the lines apart.

Mr. McCLENNEN. The last part of the answer is objected to——

The WITNESS (interrupting). I do not mean to argue it, and I will cut it out if you desire, and will merely say that I do not mean to be understood as saying that joint arrangements could not be made.

1818 By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. In some instances joint arangements are made between different carriers, as for example, between the Southern Pacific and the Central Pacific for operating their respective trains over the Tehachapi Mountains; that is one instance?

A. Yes.

Q. But do you know any case in your experience where arrangements are made generally for the running of trains over all lines covered by a system such as there is in California, owned by two different companies, so as to throw them open to each as freely as if they were operated by one company?

A. I assume you desire to object to this.

Mr. McCLENNEN. No.

The WITNESS. I do not know of any such arrangements, and do not believe, from my knowledge of these lines, that such an arrangement could be successfully consummated to give the service that is now given.

Mr. McCLENNEN. The latter part of the answer, beginning with "and do not believe", the petitioner moves to strike out as not responsive, as an expression of opinion by the witness upon an-1819 other subject not material to the issues in the present case.

By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. With respect to freight trains, the movement of traffic between points on the Southern Pacific, such as the line from Davisville up to Tehama, and points on the Southern Pacific lines in the San Joaquin Valley and southern California, for example; that traffic now moves freely to the Central Pacific and thence to the Southern Pacific at Goshen by direct line, but the separation of these lines would force that traffic, unless there was some joint arrangement made, to move by what line?

A. It would have to move by what is known as the Roseville line, and thence, if you are referring to the Central Pacific, to get to Goshen, thence over to Sacramento, thence over to Stockton, thence over to Lathrop, and thence over to Merced, and then from Fresno to Goshen, and stop there.

Q. That is the way the traffic is moved now, but if you had to haul traffic, say, at Willows.

A. That is on the west side?

Q. That is on the west side.

A. Well, the west side line of the Sacramento Valley is an S. P. line, and it would require all joint movement for 1820 all traffic originating between Tehama and Sacramento.

Q. Do you have in mind how the Southern Pacific could move that over its own line, say from Willows or Woodland, to Bakersfield, or any other point on the Southern Pacific lines in the San Joaquin Valley?

A. They would have to take it back to Port Costa, and thence through Tracy, Newman, and what is known as the west side, if they moved it entirely over their own line. The Southern Pacific, of course, could not carry it beyond Goshen in any event.

Mr. HERRIN. I offer in evidence Supplemental Opinion No. 478, on this contract, which appears at page 248; decided February 24, 1911. That is the same day as the main case opinion, the main opinion?

The WITNESS. Yes; they were handed down together.

Mr. MCCLENNEN. The petitioner makes the same objections to the introduction of this decision as to defendants' Exhibit 25.

(The supplemental opinion referred to was received and marked "Defendants' Exhibit (Eshleman) No. 26, March 13, 1915," and will be found in the volume of defendants' exhibits.)

1821 By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. I overlooked asking you as to the terminals of these lines of road when separated, as to the conditions that would arise and the practicability of these different companies performing public service, with respect to these terminals.

Mr. MCCLENNEN. The same objections that have been made to an expression of an opinion by the witness, as heretofore.

The WITNESS. I do not pretend to know. I do not think anyone knows just what the ownership of those terminals is. I know, however, that there is very great confusion existing. It was in evidence—and I desire to distinguish between what was in evidence and what I know of my own knowledge—but it was in evidence in the case that as to some of the Oakland terminals, for instance, the fee was owned by one company and the franchise by another, and there were various conflicts of that sort; but I have no knowledge except that. I do know, however, that in some places the Southern Pacific is dominant and in others the Central Pacific, but I do not desire to go on record as stating anything except the general knowledge that these terminals are almost inextricably confused as to ownership.

1822 By Mr. HERRIN:

Q. What would be necessary, in case of the separation of the roads? Would each road provide its own terminals or otherwise?

A. It would be necessary for each road to provide its own terminals, or secure access to the terminals of the other road on whatever terms it could. It would have to have terminals.

Q. In what way would the public be interested in that matter?

A. Well, the public would be interested in getting access to the road over which it desired to route its freight, and as to industries located on lines of the Southern Pacific, for example, the people located on those lines would not have access to the Central Pacific lines, as a general proposition. The shipper, of course, can demand the routing of his freight, but it would substitute two sets of terminals where one now exists, or require the same use of those terminals jointly as we have now. In other words, whenever one road admits another to its facilities, it does so on which are the best terms to itself that it thinks it can exact and prevent the other fellow from building terminals of his own.

1823 Q. In the case of providing separate terminals throughout, how would that interest the public?

A. It would require duplicate investments to carry out the same business, and rates could be justified, on this basis, on a higher plane than could be justified if there were less property. I do not know how much effect it would have, but unquestionably it could be used in a rate case with some effect.

Q. Mr. Eshleman, when did you cease to be a member of the California Railroad Commission?

A. January 1, 1915.

Q. What was the occasion of your leaving that office?

A. I had to go to Sacramento as lieutenant governor.

Q. You were elected lieutenant governor?

A. Yes.

Q. And are now lieutenant governor of the State?

A. Yes.

Cross-examination by Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. In stating the powers of the California Railroad Commission, while you did not state it in terms, you had of course in all 1824 your answers a reference only to intrastate business?

A. Intrastate business, of course.

Q. You instanced the lumber traffic as amounting to eighteen per cent. Did you mean eighteen per cent of the whole freight business of the Southern Pacific Company or of the intrastate freight business of the Southern Pacific Company?

A. My answer is taken from the last annual report of this company, and it is the total freight originating on that road of all kinds.

Q. Then the eighteen per cent of lumber traffic to which you refer in that answer includes both the intrastate and the interstate?

A. Well, now; I am not quite sure. I can find it. Of course you know answers such as that are taken from the record, and my understanding was that that covered the entire lumber traffic, both State and interstate. If I am in error, by consulting the record I can determine. By referring to the record I find that the California business is 13.86 per cent, and the 18 is State and interstate as originally stated.

1825 Q. That is, then, to put it all together; of the whole freight traffic of the Southern Pacific Company, State and interstate, the whole lumber traffic is eighteen per cent, of which thirteen is intrastate and five is interstate?

A. Yes; that is what the report states. I do not pretend in this answer to go beyond the report of the Southern Pacific, which is on file with our commission and with the Interstate Commerce Commission. I merely gave that testimony as illustrative of the fact that is known independently, that this constitutes a large portion of their freight.

Q. Is that percentage in terms of tons carried or ton miles carried, or revenue?

A. That is in percentage of tons.

Q. How much of that thirteen per cent is carried merely from Oregon to milling point and destined to interstate shipment?

A. I do not know.

Q. Are there any figures in the reports that have been made to your commission that would give that division?

A. Not that I know of.

Q. You have general knowledge of the fact that that is done to a considerable extent?

1826 A. I know that such an arrangement is in effect; that is, that lumber is treated and then shipped to other points from the point at which it is treated.

Q. Have you any knowledge as to what part of the thirteen per cent originates on Central Pacific rails and is delivered on Southern Pacific, or vice versa?

A. I have not; but from my knowledge of the geography of the State I know that by far the greater portion of the lumber originates on Central Pacific points.

Q. The great bulk of the lumber originates where?

A. Well, of the lumber originating on either of these lines, the great bulk of that originates up toward the Oregon line and on the line of the Central Pacific across the Sierra Nevada Mountains, and a considerable portion comes into the Southern Pacific—this cut-off ine that I referred to—through the Sierra Railway of California at Oakdale. The greater proportion of lumber that is produced in California originates—now, this is my opinion; I am quite sure hat it is correct, however—originates on neither of these lines.

Q. On what lines does this greater proportion you speak of originate?

1827 A. It comes in by boat, and on the line of the Northwestern Pacific. That is my belief, from my knowledge of the geography of the State. I have been over all of these lines, and know the general locations, of course.

Q. Could you, in justice to yourself, approximate the percentage?

A. I could not. As to such traffic, however, of course, when it is turned over to one of these lines, if it required a joint movement over the two, the same arrangement I have already suggested would be necessary.

Q. That coming in by water, destined to Central Pacific points, would, in the nature of things, be delivered directly to Central Pacific rails?

A. Yes; it would go by way of Stockton, if it were going to Sacramento, instead of by way of Benicia.

Q. And that destined to Southern Pacific rails, conversely, would naturally be delivered originally——

A. When it is delivered at a point touched by both lines—of course, the only point touched by both lines is San Francisco—San Pedro, I believe, receives equally, if not a greater amount of lumber; but that is only a belief. I know it receives a great quantity of lumber, and that is only touched by the Southern Pacific.

1828 Q. It is not possible, is it, that much lumber is delivered into San Pedro destined to Central Pacific points?

A. No; I would say that it is not probable that much of that goes north of Goshen that is for intrastate consumption. However, I am of the opinion that on the Porterville line lumber would come from southern California that would require—well, that is the Southern Pacific line; that would be the Southern Pacific line; yes.

Q. Taking your knowledge of the whole situation into consideration, could you make a valuable estimate as to how much of the whole thirteen per cent passes from the Central Pacific lines to the Southern Pacific lines, or the reverse?

A. No; I could not. My only knowledge is that some of these towns I have mentioned are quite prominent and growing towns, and I know that quantities—I would not say great as compared with the whole bulk—but great quantities of lumber are used in points in the San Joaquin Valley to which I have referred.

Q. Most of the important points in that valley are touched by the Atchison rails, are they not?

A. Well, I suppose the majority of the population is reached by the Atchison rails.

1829 Q. Has the Atchison been carrying much lumber into those competitive points?

A. I have not their report here, but they, of course, carry lumber into those points.

Q. Has the divided-haul rate in those cases been the same as the Southern Pacific's rate?

A. They carry it entirely over their own lines to those points. The Atchison has a line to tidewater here and they go entirely over their own rails.

Q. Does the Atchison carry any lumber into those competitive points originating in northern California?

A. I do not think it is allowed to get much of that business; but I have very little knowledge on it. I am sure that by very far the major portion of the lumber originating on one line will be delivered by that line to its destination, because of the fact that a joint rate would have to be established, which, under the law, would have to give the Southern Pacific, from the point at which the lumber was turned over to it to the point of destination, its full local rate. The interstate law is similar. That is, if lumber originating at Weed were turned over to the Atchison at Stockton the full local 1830 rate to Stockton would have to be given the Southern Pacific, the law providing that where there is an equally advantageous rate entirely over the lines of the carrier in question it is entitled to its local rate.

Q. Has that been the division of rates between the Southern Pacific and the Atchison on freight originating in Southern Pacific territory and delivered to competitive points, intrastate and interstate?

A. By getting the tariffs it would be very easy to determine what joint rates are in effect. Between numerous points you refer to there are no joint rates, and therefore the movement would have to go, if it went by a joint line movement, on a combination of the locals, which, of course, would be much in excess. That, however, is a mere tariff matter. My general knowledge of the tariff leads me to answer that there are not many joint rates over the Southern Pacific and Atchison for lumber between the points that are entirely served by the Southern Pacific and can be served by the Southern Pacific.

Q. You spoke of the Atchison not being allowed to get much of that business—the context showing what you meant by "that." Does that same apply to freight generally originating on Southern Pacific rails?

1831 A. If I may be allowed to explain just what led me to make that answer, I think I can make it plain.

It has been recognized by the Interstate Commerce Commission and by the various commissions that a railroad shall not be short-hauled; that is, where a railroad has built a line between two points, that it shall not be required to turn traffic over at an intermediate point to another line and lose a lot of the haul; and when it does that, the road that takes the freight pays pretty liberally for the privilege. For instance, the division of the interstate rate west of the Missouri River is forty-six per cent of the entire rate. For instance, the Western Pacific from Ogden would get forty-six per cent. If the Western Pacific at Niles had some traffic for San Jose, which is seventeen miles away, I believe, the Southern Pacific would require it to give twenty-three per cent of the west of the Missouri River proportion; that is, it would have to give half of what it got out of the rate from the Missouri River point to Niles to the Southern Pacific for carrying it seventeen miles.

Q. That is, if I follow you, the rate from Omaha, as an example of a Missouri River point, to any point in California, is di-1832 vided fifty-four from Omaha to Ogden and forty-six from Ogden to California?

A. That is true; that is over the Western Pacific—well, I think it applies over all the roads; yes.

Q. Then, of this forty-six per cent, anything carried by the Western Pacific and delivered on Southern Pacific rails is divided twenty-three per cent——

A. No; it is divided in half.

Q. I mean the forty-six is divided in half?

A. Yes.

Q. So that the Southern Pacific gets twenty-three and the Western Pacific gets twenty-three per cent?

A. That is true.

Q. And the Union Pacific, or what not, to the east gets fifty-four?

A. Yes.

Q. And that is irrespective of the number of miles of haul of the Western Pacific?

A. Yes. The same applies to the other companies.

Q. That is, to put an extreme illustration: If the Southern Pacific hauled it one mile to Sacramento and delivered it to the Western Pacific for Ogden or Salt Lake, the Southern Pacific would 1833 get twenty-three and the Western Pacific twenty-three?

A. Unless there is some special rule covering the case. That is the general rule, and that was the explanation of my answer that it is not very often the case that much business that originates on a line that can lay it down at its destination goes off that line before it reaches its destination.

Q. That would apply in actual practice to the Atchison as to freight originating on Southern Pacific points in the same way?

A. Yes.

Q. The California commission has authority to control trackage rights to some extent between——

A. I am sure it has authority to control them to this extent, that voluntary agreements on the part of the carriers must receive the sanction of the commission. As to the forcing of the joint use of facilities, I am not quite decided as to what the courts would finally say.

Q. You mean as to whether the commission could, out of hand, compel one railroad to grant trackage rights to another?

A. As a matter of law, I am not prepared to state, it not having been litigated.

Q. It has the——

1834 A. It has the veto power, in other words. The affirmative power is conferred by the law. The law is broad enough to carry that power. In my opinion, of course, the presumption is that the power is there, although as a pure legal proposition, it has not been passed upon.

Q. It has the authority to establish joint rates and through routes?

A. Yes; but under the limitation I have already stated about the road being required to get its full local, that has an entire line over the route over which the joint rate applies.

Q. Have you any knowledge as to the comparison between the volume of the Southern Pacific Company's interstate business and its intrastate business?

A. I can not answer that question offhand. I could consult records and find out very readily. It is in the reports.

Q. In the same way, have you any knowledge of the comparison between the Central Pacific Railroad's interstate business and intrastate business, using Central Pacific Railroad to indicate those parts of the lines belonging to that company?

1835 A. I would have to give the same answer to that. I can very readily obtain the information, but I do not carry it in my memory.

Q. As a practical matter, if the division between the two companies was accomplished, it would not, in your opinion, effect an increase of rates between any points where there are competitive facilities?

A. Ordinarily, no; but a rate could be justified, as I have already testified, that would be higher; and if the company that now was competing felt that it was not getting enough, there probably would be an application to raise the rates by both. There have been such cases. I do not mean to be understood as saying that I think that would ordinarily occur. I do not think it would ordinarily occur.

Q. The difficulties which you have expressed your opinion as possible to occur in the matter of rates and service on the severance of these two lines are difficulties which, in a measure, would occur in case of almost every break-up of combined railroads?

A. I could not answer that in the affirmative without some reservations. I think that the way these roads have grown up to-1836 gether has brought about a condition that we do not find in the ordinary combination.

Q. There are a good many instances through the country of similar situations, are there not?

A. Well, I do not know of any of them that are being unmerged.

Q. The railroads through the country do not get unmerged very often according to your experience?

A. They do not, and if you desire an expression of opinion—and it may explain my attitude on this—my entire position and the position of the commission was assumed mainly on the theory that a regulated or Government-owned monopoly was better than any condition that could be brought about by competition in the case of railroads.

Q. You have anticipated what I had in my mind; that is, your opinion as to the injuries, if any, to be anticipated from the unmerging of these railroads is based upon your belief in the economic wisdom of regulated monopoly in railroads?

A. Yes. My belief is that regulation by Government authority is an alternative to regulation by competition and is only justified on the ground that competition does not do its duty.

1837 Q. And that you recognize, as a lawyer, to be addressed more to the legislative question of whether the Sherman Anti-trust Act should apply to railroads than to the judicial question when a case is presented that comes within the terms of the act?

A. It is directed to what I think ought to be perhaps; not what is.

Q. That is, what ought to be as a matter of legislative policy?

A. Yes. Take this particular case; either the public of California, in my opinion, would be inconvenienced by this severance or more money will have to be expended to enable two agencies to do that which one agency now does, with the necessary additional earnings on the necessary additional investment. But, as you say, that goes to the policy and not what the law demands.

Q. Do you identify this record as the official record of the proceedings of the commission on this application before the commission of which you are speaking?

A. I do. I know it is a part of it. I do not know whether it is all of it.

1838 Q. Just make sure, please, that it goes through the argument. I would like to make sure that it is the whole record.

A. This, I am sure, covers the main case. As you know, there is a telegram to Attorney General McReynolds, which was subsequent, but I do not think this covers that. I know it covers the main case, however.

Mr. McCLENNEN. That is all.

Redirect examination by Mr. HERRIN:

Q. The rule that you spoke of, which was enforced in favor of the company having a line to not short-haul it, was applied indiscriminately against one company or the other?

A. Yes. I think I said that.

Q. If the Southern Pacific Company should take a carload of freight from the Western Pacific at Sacramento to haul to Ogden, it would be treated just as if the movement was the other way?

A. Oh, yes. The only difference is that the company in possession of the terminals, of course, always has the advantage. That would necessitate, on the division of these lines, the company that found itself in any important place without terminals, building the 1839 terminals which, under traffic conditions, we all know could not be as advantageous to that line as the terminals that have been long located and upon which industries have grown up. But this applies among all the lines, this arrangement.

Recross-examination by Mr. McCLENNEN:

Q. This last remark of yours leads me to ask you this: You, of course, have in mind the decision that you have rendered with reference to the features of this contract between the Central, the Southern, and the Union, so far as you regarded it to come within your jurisdiction?

A. Yes.

Q. And one of the features that you dealt with, you are aware, was the fact that the Southern and Central-Union owned, were to have joint use of terminals by voluntary agreement, to which they had not yielded access to other carriers?

A. It was the exclusive use to which the commission objected.

Q. That was a program which the commission then had occasion to lay down for the first time under the powers of control which it conceived that it exercised in the State?

1840 A. That was, I know, the first important case, and I think the first case in which that question arose.

Q. Has the commission, so far as you know, ever had occasion to consider whether it would exact the same requirement as to letting other carriers into terminals jointly used by two railroads forced asunder by the law and not put asunder by voluntary agreement?

A. Of course I am not a member of the commission at the present time, and anything I might say I would want to be thoroughly understood as having no bearing upon the attitude of the commission.

Q. Let me make clear that I do not wish to exact a prediction from you of what the decision would be. I merely want to know whether any decision had been reached while you were a member of the commission, or has been reached, as far as you know, up to the present time, upon that subject; or whether that subject has been given consideration up to the present time.

A. It has been given thought. It has not been given any official consideration, to my knowledge.

In that particular case the commission was impressed with 1841 the fact that the condition you suggest did not exist. Our entire belief there was the belief that the Union Pacific, which was the offender, was much better off after the unmerging under the agreement than it was before. The Southern Pacific, which was the innocent party in that case—it has not always been innocent in everything—was the one which suffered the most.

In other words, as the commission said in those decisions—I think that was in the telegram to Attorney General McReynolds—that apparently there was a design to perpetuate the advantage of the merger, or of the control which the Supreme Court had condemned, and we could not see why there could not be real unmerging in the unmerging. My belief is that, just as I have said, those contracts were absolutely unfair to the Southern Pacific and served to perpetuate the very dominance of the Union Pacific which the Supreme Court had condemned.

I make that explanation, because in that case there was no condition of joint use of terminals between the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific. The joint use of terminals there would be between a line which the Government, or the parties in that case, were trying to make the Southern Pacific sell to the Union Pacific; and 1842 what we said there could not be taken as an indication of what I would now say if the case were between the Central Pacific and the Southern Pacific.

Mr. McCLENNEN. That is all.

Mr. HERRIN. That is all.

1843 Mr. McCLENNEN. The petitioner, without waiving the objections appearing in the record to the introduction of any evidence of the resolution of the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce or any of its actions, but which the petitioner still conceives to be inadmissible, but insisting on those objections, nevertheless, against the possibility of the petitioner being in error as to the relevancy of that action and for the purpose only of making clear the action of the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce in the matter of a severance between the Southern Pacific Company and the Central Pacific Railroad Company, puts in evidence the action taken by that chamber before the California Railroad Commission, as shown by the record of those proceedings, identified by the last witness, Mr. Eshleman; that is to say, the record on application No. 409, in the matter of the application of the Central Pacific Railway Company, Southern Pacific Railroad Company, and Southern Pacific Company for authorization to make a lease of a certain railroad, to make a sale of a certain railroad, to make a contract for the joint use and possession of a certain railroad, to make a contract for the running or trackage rights over a certain railroad, and to make 1844 a contract for the joint use of certain railroad terminals, so much of this record as relates to the action of the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce, namely, in the proceedings of February 24, 1913, at page 404 of this record, the following:

"Mr. MANN. If the commission please, Mr. William R. Wheeler, the traffic manager of the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce, would like to be heard here, on the views of the shippers he represents, very briefly.

"Commissioner ESHLEMAN. Then we will accord that privilege. We will take a recess for about five minutes.

"(Recess.)

"(After recess.)

"Commissioner ESHLEMAN. The commission will come to order. Mr. Wheeler, you may take the stand.

"WILLIAM R. WHEELER, a witness called in behalf of San Francisco Chamber of Commerce, being duly sworn, testified as follows:

"Direct examination:

"The WITNESS. If the commission please, I wish to merely point out in connection with the attitude of the San Francisco 1845 Chamber of Commerce the strategic position which the line of the Southern Pacific Railroad between Sacramento and San Francisco via Benicia occupies. The resolution of the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce is directed against a sentence which appears the second paragraph, page 13, of the proposed agreement, which reads: 'No additional companies shall be admitted to use the property except upon the written consent of both the Pacific Company and the Central Company.' It is the veto power of the lessee company contained in that sentence that is objected to. We do not think it is to the best interest of San Francisco that that veto power should exist in the hands of the lessee company. Now, with your permission—I will be as brief as possible—I want to point out why we take that position. Here is this line which, you might say, so far as the Southern Pacific's interests are concerned with relation to strictly transcontinental traffic, becomes a stub line after this agreement becomes effective. This route occupies the shortest most direct route between San Francisco and Sacramento that exists to-day, and for that matter in all probability that will ever exist. There are, I am informed, engineering difficulties with regard to building. The extension, even of the Sacramento Southern, across the marshes 1846 will be a very expensive proposition. And after coming through there they have to find a way along the water front or through the mountains which surround Mt. Diablo to get over to San Francisco. Now, let us look for one moment at the trend of railroad building to-day. I will overlook—say nothing of the Rock Island, with its line out to Denver; not emphasize that; nor the Burlington also, with its line to Denver and some 200 miles further east to a station called Baldwin, Colorado; that is, through the Colorado Southern. I speak of the controlling company—the Colorado Southern. The Burlington has another line that runs here to Gurnsey, Wyoming. Now, recently the Moffatt line has taken on new life, and they propose to extend this line, which is now some 200 miles westerly from Denver, on to Salt Lake. They are financing it, as I understand, with a view to tunneling through the mountains and making this line to Salt Lake. It is of particular interest at this time to San Francisco to note that the Northwestern—that is, the Chicago Northwestern—has built out some 1,250 miles westerly from Chicago to the western part of Wyoming; in fact, it is not very far from the meridian of Ogden now to a point called Landa. It is not reasonable to assume that that line, or, in fact, these other lines 1847 which are making these extensions, are going to be content to stop where they are. They will be seeking entrance to San Francisco in the near future very likely. Now, more important still to San Francisco than all of that, and because of the fact that this covers a ground not already covered, even approximately, by other roads, is a proposition which is now alive—building a road from Winnemucca northeasterly to Boise, with the intention of extending same on to Butte, Montana.

"Mr. MANN. What is the name of that road?

"A. That road is known as the Winnemucca Northern; it gives to San Francisco a direct substantially bee line in connection with the Great Northern over its Great Falls cut-off with the Northern Pacific, and with the Chicago, Milwaukee & Puget Sound, the three northern transcontinental roads; it will also give us, when completed, a direct line to the ore-bearing field and into the great wheat-bearing field. We all know California is becoming less and less of a wheat-growing country, and we have to bring our bread from abroad, or from outside the State, and it gives opportunity for reaching up into this country to bring wheat on a bee line down here. At Winnemucca it has the advantage of a connection with two roads, the Western Pacific and the Central Pacific, both of 1848 which roads converge at Winnemucca. Now, the interest San Francisco has in having this road left open here is that any of these roads may have the opportunity of using the shortest possible direct route at the will of the owning company and not at the will of the lessee company. It is not to be expected that the Union Pacific, with its Central Pacific route, would give its assent to the Northwestern, after it came through the Sierras, using this cut-off into San Francisco; it would not be reasonable they would expect to want to give up the advantages they have to a competitor. And that is the position that San Francisco takes with regard to this situation, that the veto power contained in that clause is inimical to our best interest. Dwelling upon this Winnemucca Northern road for a minute, it places San Francisco in position to compete with Portland, Seattle, and Salt Lake, and even St. Paul, for the trade of Montana and Idaho, which it is very difficult to get any business from at all to-day for San Francisco. With this direct line, the shorter and quicker the service is the better it will be for our city.

"Q. Thus you take a stand against the veto power in the Central Pacific Railroad for the use of the line Oakland to Sacramento. Is that right?

1849 "A. That is exactly right.

"Q. Now, then, with respect to the terminal situation and the use of the industrials.

"A. Inasmuch as Judge Lovett, in his testimony the other day places those in the same category in so far as the veto power is concerned, as I understood him, why, our objections apply with equal force. There is one thing more I want to say before I leave the stand and that is the advantages of additional roads with regard to competition. It is a popular fallacy, I think, that because there is not a rate war, because there is not a cutting of rates, general demoralization of rates, following the advent of a new road into a territory that, therefore, there is no competition. There is competition in the service, and that is what we desire. There is also competition in this respect, that if we have two roads who have a voice in the rate question, you stand 100 per cent, or double, the chance of gaining tariff concessions that you do if there is only one road to deal with; if there are three roads, you stand three times the chance of getting your concessions; or if four, four times, and so on; in other words, you do not find—are not as apt to find—three men of one mind 1850 as you are two men of one mind, and so on as the number grows. We have already had an example of that here in San Francisco. There was a proposition something more than a year ago to advance rates between San Francisco and Stockton, make a very material advance, on the part of the railroads, and the fact that it required the assent of three roads instead of two was the only thing that prevented that advance going into effect at that time; we were successful in convincing one of the roads that it was unfair to us to raise those rates and they declined to join in the advance. That is all I have to say.

"Cross-examination:

"Mr. COTTON. Mr. Wheeler, did you file a copy with the commission of your resolution adopted February 18, 1913?

"A. No; I left a copy with Judge Lovett.

"Q. I was wondering; you referred to it as if you had filed it.

"A. I would be very glad to read the resolution into the record if you like.

"Commissioner ESHLEMAN. Very well, you may.

"A. 'Resolution of the executive committee of the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce, adopted February 18, 1913.

1851 "'Resolved, That so far as we are at present advised, we approve of the terms of the proposed agreement dated February 8, 1913, between the Union Pacific Railroad Company and the Southern Pacific Company et al., relating to leases, sales, trackage rights, and joint use of terminals, which terms are to be submitted to the California Railroad Commission for consent and approval, and are referred to in subdivision 2 of section 8 on page 32 of said proposed agreement, with the exception of the clause found on page 18 of Exhibit B, which reads:

"'"No additional companies shall be admitted to use the property except by the written consent of both the Pacific Company and the Central Company * * *" and

"'Resolved, That the manager and attorney of the traffic bureau are hereby authorized to express the attitude of the chamber in this regard before the California Railroad Commission, at the hearing to be held February 19, 1913, or any adjournments thereof.

"'And be it further resolved, That a copy of this resolution be immediately transmitted to the chairman of the executive committee of the Union Pacific Railroad Company.'

"The reason for that was that we were invited into this 1852 case by a series of telegrams which I think it might be just as well to put into the record here too, with your permission Mr. Chairman.

"Commissioner ESHLEMAN. You might state the substance.

"A. Well, the substance is this: This is a telegram from one of the officials of the Union Pacific Railroad, Gerrit Fort, under date of January 6th, addressed to in my official capacity, and urging our cooperation in bringing about the ratification of this lease—this proposed contract. To that we replied under date of February 7th, 'Yours sixth. While I heartily approve of separation of Central Pacific from Southern Pacific and the establishment of Central's managerial and operating headquarters in San Francisco, you will appreciate that I will not be in position to lend intelligent assistance until after I am advised of the details concerning "Certain trackage and running rights" in this State.' To that we received this reply, 'Thanks for your message. It is intended that the Central Pacific shall acquire trackage rights over the Southern Pacific between Sacramento and Oakland via Benicia, thus preserving double track transcontinental line between San Francisco and the Mis-1853 souri River, and that the Southern Pacific shall acquire trackage rights over the Central Pacific line north of Tehama, thus preserving the continuity of its present line between Oregon and eastern points and California.'

"Commissioner ESHLEMAN. Any further questions, Mr. Cotton?

"Mr. COTTON. You think it is not reasonable to expect that the line controlling the route from Ogden to Oakland should admit a new tenant—a competing tenant? Is that your notion?

"A. I don't think it is likely to do so.

"Q. And that would be the case, no matter who might be the owner of that line?

"A. Well, so long as the tenant has the veto power.

"Q. Well, or as long as the Southern Pacific alone had the veto power, provided it retains the line to Ogden?

"A. Yes.

"Q. And you think there might be some advantages in the separation of the Central and the Southern?

"A. If it is a genuine separation, and we have four roads instead of three.

"Mr. COTTON. That is all."

1854 Mr. HERRIN. That is offered solely to show the action of the chamber of commerce at the time mentioned, is it?

Mr. McCLENNEN. Solely for that purpose, in view of the testimony which we believe to be objectionable, which you have put in upon that subject.

Mr. HERRIN. What I mean is: You do not offer that as the testimony of Mr. Wheeler here as an expert witness, or anything of that sort?

Mr. McCLENNEN. Oh, I do not offer it as independent evidence of the things stated in it, but simply as evidence of the statement made on behalf of the chamber of commerce in those proceedings.

(Whereupon, at one o'clock p. m., an adjournment was taken until Thursday, April 15, 1915, at eleven o'clock a. m., at 165 Broadway, New York City.)

1855 TWENTY-SECOND DAY.

ROOM 2506, 165 BROADWAY,
New York City, April 15, 1915.

The hearing was resumed, pursuant to adjournment, at 11 o'clock a. m., before Frank R. Hanna, special examiner.

Present on behalf of the United States: James W. Orr, Esq.; Edward F. McClennen, Esq.; and Edward E. Gann, Esq., special assistants to the Attorney General.

Present on behalf of the defendants: W. F. Herrin, Esq., and J. P. Blair, Esq., for the Southern Pacific Company.

1856 WILLIAM MACALLISTER, Jr., was called as a witness on behalf of the defendants, and, having been duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. BLAIR:

Q. What is your occupation?

A. Clerk in the Central Trust Company.

Q. You were asked to bring with you the original indenture made by the Central Pacific Railroad Company to the Central Trust Company of New York to secure a certain mortgage, generally known as the first refunding four per cent mortgage. Have you produced it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. This indenture was duly executed and delivered?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were the bonds described in this indenture issued in accordance with its terms?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are they now outstanding?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. BLAIR. Counsel for the defendants put in evidence a 1857 printed copy of the indenture referred to by the witness, being an indenture of the Central Pacific Railway Company to the Central Trust Company of New York, dated August 1, 1899; and it is stipulated between counsel that this copy shall be received in lieu of the original and have the same effect as the original.

(The document referred to was received and marked "Defendants' Exhibit (Macallister) No. 27, April 15, 1915", and will be found in the volume of defendants' exhibits.)

CHARLES C. MARSHALL was called as a witness on behalf of the defendants, and, having been duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. BLAIR:

Q. What is your occupation, Mr. Marshall?

A. I am a clerk in the corporation trust department of the United States Trust Company.

Q. The United States Trust Company was the trustee of a certain indenture made by the Central Pacific Railway Company to the United States Trust Company of New York to secure a certain issue of three and a half per cent mortgage bonds dated August 1, 1899?

A. It was; yes, sir.

1858 Q. You were asked to produce the original indenture. Have you done so?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you hand it over for exhibition to counsel?

A. Yes. Here it is.

Q. Was this indenture duly executed and delivered?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were the bonds therein described issued in accordance with its terms?

A. They were.

Q. Can you tell us now how many of those bonds are at present outstanding?

A. $10,658,500, par value.

Q. How were the remainder of those bonds described in the original indenture retired?

A. Through sale of securities that were held by us as collateral under that indenture, from the sales of lands, and also through a sinking fund provision in the indenture providing for $25,000 annually.

Mr. BLAIR. Counsel for the defendants puts in evidence a 1859 copy of the indenture referred to by the witness, namely, the indenture of the Central Pacific Railway Company to the United States Trust Company of New York, dated August 1, 1899; and it is stipulated that said copy may be offered in lieu of the original, and to have the same effect as the original.

(The document referred to was received and marked "Defendants' Exhibit (Marshall) No. 28, April 15, 1915", and will be found in the volume of defendants' exhibits.)

By Mr. BLAIR:

Q. Was the United States Trust Company the trustee of an indenture made by the Central Pacific Railway Company, the Southern Pacific Company, and the United States Trust Company of New York to secure an issue of bonds dated March 1, 1911?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is that the issue of bonds known as the European loan?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were asked to produce the original of that indenture. Will you produce it for exhibition to counsel?

A. Yes, sir. Here it is.

Q. Was this indenture duly executed and delivered?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were the bonds described therein issued?

1860 A. Yes.

Q. And are now outstanding?

A. And are now outstanding.

Mr. BLAIR. The defendants put in evidence a copy of the indenture just referred to by the witness, namely, an indenture between the Central Pacific Railway Company, the Southern Pacific Company, and the United States Trust Company of New York as trustee, bearing date of March 1, 1911; and it is stipulated that the copy may be received in evidence in lieu of the original and to have the same effect as the original.

(The document referred to was received and marked "Defendants' Exhibit (Marshall) No. 29, April 15, 1915", and will be found in the volume of defendants' exhibits.)

By Mr. BLAIR:

Q. Was the collateral referred to in this indenture delivered to the United States Trust Company?

A. Yes, sir; and is now held by it.

Mr. ORR. That is two hundred and fifty million?

Mr. BLAIR. Two hundred and fifty million francs; fifty million dollars.

1861 Cross-examination by Mr. MCCLENNEN:

Q. Are any of the bonds, the $10,658,500 that you say are outstanding under Exhibit 28, registered bonds?

A. A few of them, I think; something like fifty thousand. I think fifty-one thousand to be exact. We do not keep the ledger. We are the registrar of the bonds. The company is the transfer agent, but from our register, where we cancelled the old certificates and issued the new, as I remember it, about fifty thousand of them are fully registered certificates.

Q. That is fifty thousand dollars or fifty thousand bonds?

A. Fifty thousand dollars par value.

Q. Have you any knowledge of where or by whom that issue of bonds is held?

A. I have not the remotest idea. They are widely distributed.

Mr. McCLENNEN. That is all.

Mr. BLAIR. Counsel for the defendants puts in evidence the agreement between the United States of America, the Central Pa-
1862 cific Railroad and Messrs. Speyer & Company, of date February 1, 1899, being the agreement known as the settlement agreement between the United States and the Central Pacific Railroad Company; and it is stipulated that, in lieu of the original, the copy of said agreement, Exhibit A of the answer, or the copy found in the record of the Union Pacific merger suit, volume 8, page 3790, and following, may be copied into the exhibits, to have the same effect as if the original had been produced in evidence.

(The agreement was received and marked "Defendants' Exhibit No. 30, April 15, 1915", and will be found in the volume of defendants' exhibits.)

ANDREW K. VAN DEVENTER was called as a witness on behalf of the defendants, and, having been duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. BLAIR:

Q. What is your present position?

A. Treasurer of the Southern Pacific Company.

Q. What position did you hold in 1898 and 1899?

A. I was chief clerk of the Southern Pacific Company's office at that time.

1863 Q. The treasurer's office?

A. The assistant treasurer's office.

Q. Of the Southern Pacific Company?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know whether the issue of bonds of one hundred million dollars of the Central Pacific Railway Company, known as the company's first refunding mortgage bonds, dated August 1, 1899, was guaranteed by any company; and if so, by what company?

Mr. McCLENNEN. This question is objected to as not material and as calling for the contents of a written instrument.

The WITNESS. They were guaranteed by the Southern Pacific Company.

By Mr. BLAIR:

Q. Can you produce the form of guaranty?

A. I can.

Q. What is the document which you have produced?

A. That is the Central Pacific Railway Company's four per cent bond.

Q. Is this the form of one of the issues of bonds actually outstanding?

1864 A. It is; yes, sir.

Q. I call your attention to the form of guarantee endorsed and ask you if that is the form on the bonds outstanding.

A. It is.

Mr. BLAIR. Is there any objection to reading this into the record instead of offering the entire bond?

Mr. MCCLENNEN. I do not see any objection.

Mr. BLAIR. In lieu of offering the bond referred to it is agreed that the stipulation thereon endorsed may be read into the record, and it is as follows:

"For value received the Southern Pacific Company hereby guarantees unconditionally the punctual payment of the principal and interest of the within bond at the time and in the manner therein specified and covenants in default of payment of any part thereof by the obligor to pay the said principal and interest of the within bond as the same shall become due upon demand of the holder hereof.

"In witness whereof the said Southern Pacific Company has caused its corporate seal to be hereto affixed and this instrument to be signed by its president or one of its vice presidents this 1865 first day of August one thousand eight hundred and ninety-nine.

"SOUTHERN PACIFIC COMPANY,
"By VAUGHN M. COYNE,
"Vice President."

Mr. MCCLENNEN. Note that this stipulation is made reserving the objections the petitioner makes that the guaranty referred to is not one which is called for by the provisions of the agreement with the United States, defendants' Exhibit No. 30, and is immaterial to this case.

By Mr. BLAIR:
